LIBRARY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS
AT URBANA-CHAMPAIGN
070.5
ED
v. 55
no. 5-51
incompl.

NEWSPAPER

v. 55 nos 1-4, 6-13, 15, 18-26, [illegible], 30, 31, 32, 34-35, 38-41, 44-45, 47, 48, 49-50, 52

THIS ISSUE—TWO SECTIONS: SPACE BUYERS' SURVEY, STATE OF TENNESSEE
UNCERTAINTY OVERAWES EUROPEAN JOURNALISM

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second-class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the Act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor]

Vol. 55. No. 5 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

THE DAILY NEWS
First in Chicago★

For many years —and today— measured by all authoritative yearly statistics of daily newspaper circulation and advertising THE DAILY NEWS IS FIRST IN CHICAGO.*

The advertising leadership of The Daily News in Chicago is confirmed and emphasized by the official figures for May, 1922 (supplied by the Advertising Record Co., an independent audit service maintained by all Chicago newspapers), which show—

(1) That THE DAILY NEWS in May not only maintained its lead over all OTHER Chicago daily newspapers in the total volume of display advertising printed, but—

(2) That THE DAILY NEWS accomplished the far more difficult feat of beating its OWN high record for the highest volume of business ever carried by any Chicago daily newspaper for the month of May by 69,869 lines!

Here are the Advertising Record Companies' figures showing the total volume of display advertising printed in each of the six daily and two Sunday newspapers of Chicago, for the month of May, 1922:

		Comparison
The Daily News	1,294,221 lines	1,294,221 lines
The Daily Tribune	997,794 "	997,794 "
The Daily Herald-Examiner	358,217 "
The American	713,878 "
The Post	385,948 "
The Journal	339,260 "
The Sunday Tribune	620,167 "
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	357,726 "
The Daily News' leadership over the next highest score, The Daily Tribune		296,427 lines

THE DAILY NEWS—First in Chicago

7th Reason WHY the INTERTYPE IS "The Better Machine"

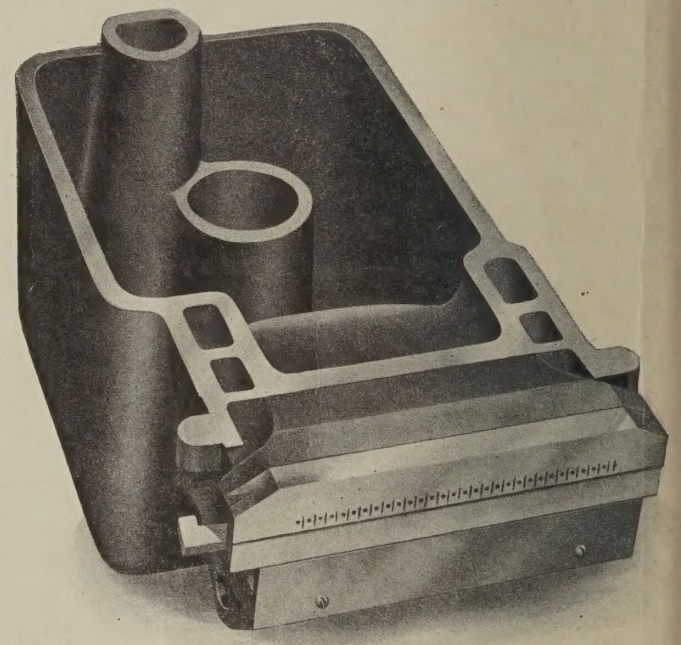
This is the seventh of a series of practical talks on Intertype features. More will follow. Watch for them.

Better Slugs—More Slugs



When developing composing machines of wide range, Intertype designers have never lost sight of dependable operation. They could at any time produce machines of marvelous versatility—machines that would do all kinds of exhibition "stunts"—but until such machines can be made to work continuously, under ordinary operating conditions, they are never offered to the trade by the Intertype Corporation.

Intertype Model D-s. m., with a range from 5-point up to full width 36-point bold and 60-point bold condensed, setting slugs up to 42 ems wide, without assembling and distributing complications, is the leading exponent of practical—PROFITABLE—non-distribution.

The construction details described below are among the thirty major improvements and simplifications which make the Intertype DEPENDABLE. These and other features appearing in this series maintain the truth of our slogan: "The BETTER Machine."

Left—Intertype Improved Screw-Bearing Knife Block.
Right*—*Large Crucible and Universal Mouthpiece.
Send for illustrated leaflets about these and other Intertype Improvements.

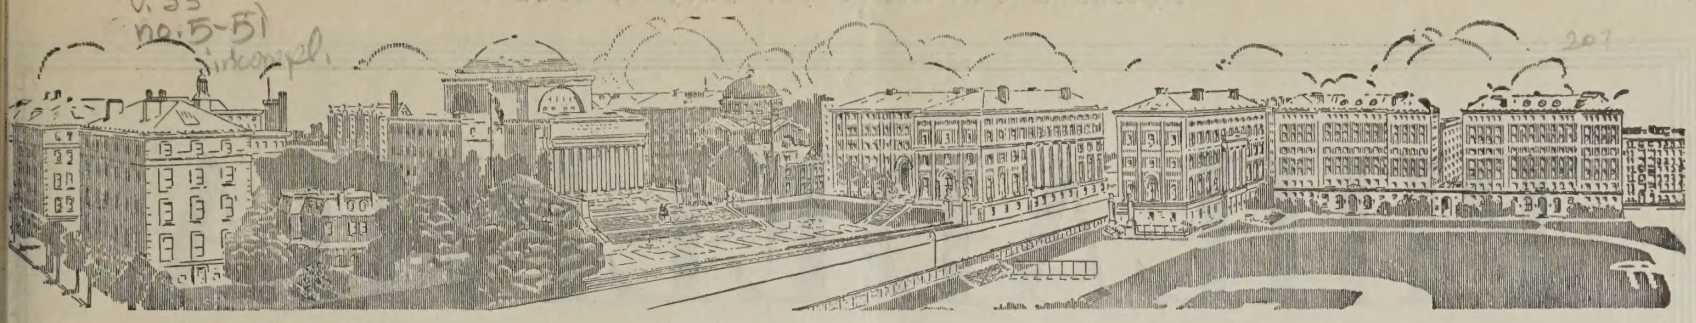
Screw-Bearing Knife Block

Full floating knife is so supported that it cannot gouge the slugs or trim unequally and thus cause buckling of the column.
Movable knife banks firmly at each end, instead of in the center only. Insures parallel slugs.
Contains about one-third as many parts as other universal knife blocks.
All point settings from 5- to 36-point. Odd or bastard settings easily provided for without interfering with standard settings.
Two adjusting stops provide for instant changes from one setting to another without looking at dial.
When new knife is put in it is only necessary to adjust to parallel; size adjustment is made by means of the dial.

Improved Metal Pot

Holds about one-third more metal than other pots. This helps to insure uniformity of temperature and saves time for the operator.
An auxiliary gas burner is provided, which reaches up through back of pot and heats metal in and around well. Makes for uniform temperature, helps prevent cracking of pot from expansion, and reduces time required for "heating up."
Four vents are provided for escape of fumes from pot and mouthpiece burners.
Mouthpiece fits over lip of crucible, not into it.
Driving taper wedge does not strain casting.
One standard mouthpiece for all kinds of work, including head-letter.

Sensitive Gas Governor



No mercury required.
Governor actuated by heat in crucible only, not by heat under mouthpiece.
Simple construction; quick action; sensitive to temperature variations.
Adaptable to all conditions by convenient adjusting screw.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

General Offices, 807 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

550 Rand-McNally Building, Chicago
303 Glaslyn Building, Memphis
560-A Howard Street, San Francisco
Canadian Agents, Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.
British Branch, Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, Kings Cross, London, WC1

070.5
ED
v.55
no.5-51
Newsp

Columbia University Bestows Its Highest Journalistic Honor On

MORNING EDITION.
The World
NEW YORK.

Morning
352,852

Evening
300,740

Sunday
609,290

A. B. C.
Annual Audit
1921

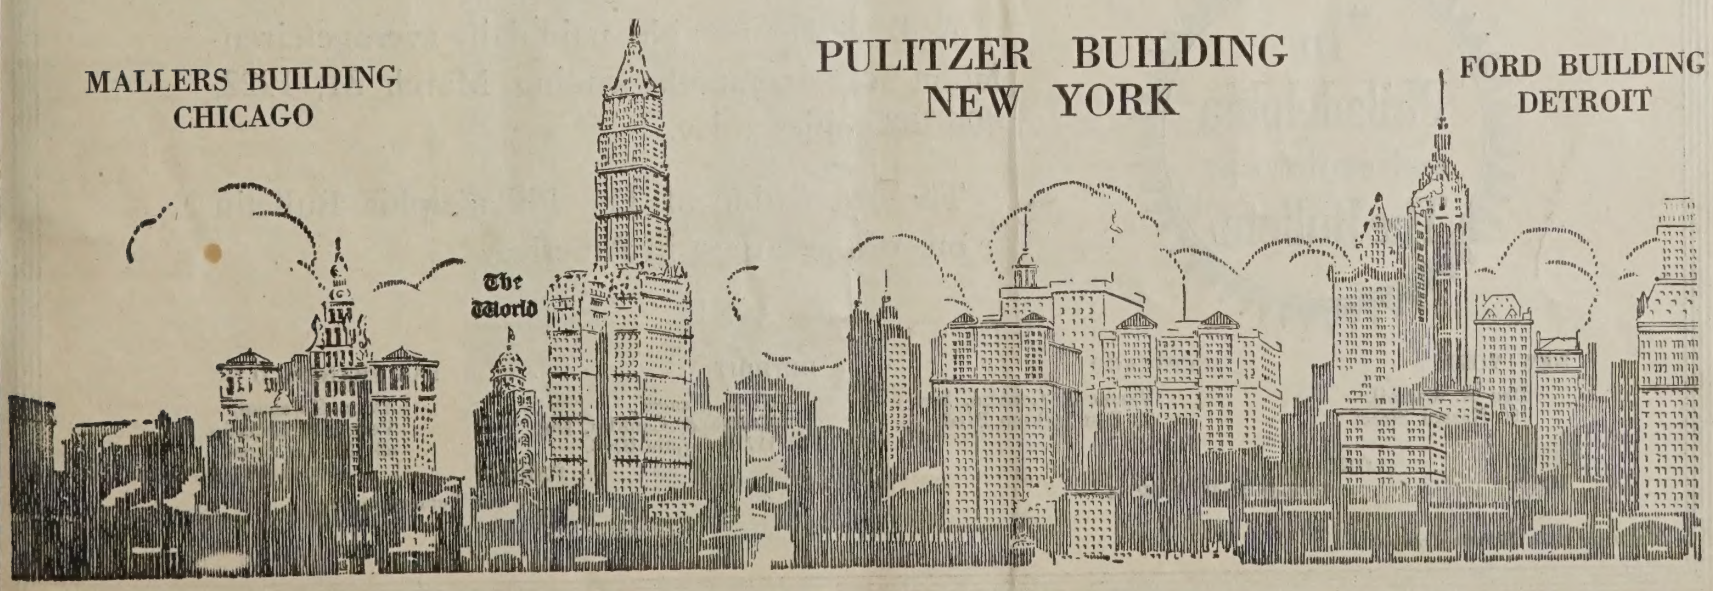
A DISTINGUISHED JURY, representing the faculty of the School of Journalism of Columbia University, has just awarded the Journalistic Gold Medal "for the most disinterested and meritorious Public Service rendered by any American newspaper during the year," to THE WORLD. The Jury's award was based upon the series of articles published by THE WORLD exposing the sinister and un-American activities of the Ku Klux Klan—an enterprise that attracted the most profound attention from the entire press of the country

At the same time, an award of $500 was voted by the School of Journalism for the "best cartoon of 1921," to Rollin Kirby, of the WORLD staff, for his masterly conception, "On the Road to Moscow."

Three other universities, Wisconsin, Illinois and Syracuse, have, within the past two years, nominated THE WORLD "First in Public Service" by vote of the student bodies of their schools of journalism.

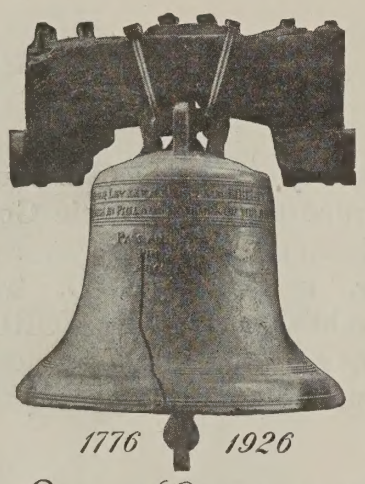
This consistent recognition of THE WORLD as a powerful factor in interpreting the trend of public opinion is of the utmost importance to the advertiser who would have his publicity partake of that indefinable influence which makes for public confidence.

Send for "The Book of Graphs"



A compact and informative survey of the advertising situation in Greater New York. It gives the advertiser a birdseye view of America's richest market, and enables him to appraise newspaper values at their true worth.

Member of National Newspapers Incorporated



MALLERS BUILDING
CHICAGO

PULITZER BUILDING
NEW YORK

FORD BUILDING
DETROIT

PHILADELPHIA
The World's Fair City

Sesqui Centennial
Philadelphia

Philadelphia, the birthplace of Liberty, the home of the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall, has been chosen by the nation for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the independence of the United States.

The sales possibilities of the Philadelphia market will draw the attention of national advertisers during the next four years, particularly in view of the large sums which will be spent in preparing the Exposition for the visits of people from all over the world.

Philadelphia's newspaper—The Bulletin—is read regularly by those who will be spending the money involved in this work.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Bulletin

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

A. B. C. Report: Net paid daily average circulation for six months ending March 31, 1922, 496,708 copies a day.

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
681 Market Street

LONDON
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
5 rue Lamartine (9).

(Copyright 1922, Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 6,200

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday preceding the date of publication—by the Editor and Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Branch Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 55 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1922 No. 5

UNCERTAINTY OVERAWES EUROPEAN JOURNALISM

Battle Against Economic Odds Has Reached the Individual and Some of the Best Known Writers Have Been Forced to Take Outside Jobs—Unionization of Brains Is Becoming General

By ROBERT BARRY

WAR has left a nasty scar on the newspaper world of Europe. Publishers have been struggling upward against the economic odds which imposed such serious burdens upon them. Editors and writers, forced to met high living costs on depreciated money values, have been hard put at times.

One of the most striking experiences among the press of the Continent is to find, in Paris, for example, two of the most prominent writers on international politics—their names well known here in the United States—obliged to have three or four "outside connections" in order to maintain themselves and their respective families at proper standards. They are men whose signed articles on the front pages of their papers mean much in circulation. They have virtually a free hand in writing. They are the associates and advisers of statesmen. Yet, they are forced, of necessity, to write under nom de plumes in weekly political reviews and for other publications to meet the discrepancy between salaries and expenses.

Editors and writers are organized far more extensively than in the United States. In England, they have forced the publishers to agree to a minimum wage, which, it is contended, has been little short of the actual salvation of hundreds of men holding subordinate editorial posts in Fleet street. It is not much of a wage, as salaries go in the principal cities of America, but it was won after hard struggle.

Germany affords another interesting sidelight on the "unionization of brains." Quite recently the editors put forward demands for an increased wage. On the committee named to confer with the publishers were men in the highest editorial councils of the Government organ—Vorwaerts—and the principal support of the Pan-German party. The latter association is the more startling of the two, as the paper expounds political theories extremely reactionary, the Pan-Germans are the ultra-conservatives, they are opposed to strikes of all kinds. Yet, one of the paper's editors was a party to a strike threat. The matter was compromised through a mediatory agency of the Government. The editors received a substantial part of what they demanded.

The Georman newspapers are having an abundance of troubles. Their production costs have mounted to staggering heights. Their newsprint has been advanced in price probably 100 times. That does not mean 100 per cent increase. Naturally, the fall of the mark's purchasing value has been a large factor in that. Cuts in news service have been almost the inevitable result. The price of the papers to subscribers has suffered only nominal advancement, and higher advertising rates have fallen far short of only nominal advancement and higher adproviding the revenue essential to maintenance of the German press on its prewar basis.

One of the most unfortunate results of the imperative cuts in costs of obtaining news has been to make the average Berlin, Liepsic, Munich or Hamburg paper almost exclusively domestic, if not actually local. The Wolf Agency, which now is said to receive financial aid from the Democratic government as it did once from the imperial régime, is doing its best against the handicaps imposed on it. Frequently that best is covering Germany. But, hotel bills, telegraph tolls and living expenses of special correspondents, at Genoa and such places where matters of great importance to the destinies of the German people, become staggering sums when translated into terms of marks.

As one of the primary functions of the London and Paris bureaus of American newspapers is to scan carefully the daily press of those capitals, some idea of the task confronting the supposedly underworked correspondents is gained from the fact there are in Paris around thirty and in London close to twenty papers which must be read every day. That, too, in countries where they have much to learn of the American axiom of "putting the kick in the lead." Talk to some of the Americans in London and they'll tell you they must wade through long editorials and exhaustive political dispatches down to the very last line in search of news statements and opinions which would be the meat of the story they sought.

Naturally, all of those thirty odd dailies in Paris are not of the highest importance, but it is hard to forecast when one may have a political development of real significance in that ofttimes comic opera-appearing mill of French politics. Some of the papers are organs, pure and simple. They are financed for political ends. When those ends have been served it happens frequently the papers change hands, going to some other ambitious or vindictive gentleman of the Chamber with a wish to gratify, an axe to grind.

When consideration is given to the necessities which force the two internationally known political authorities to seek additional employment, some notion is obtained of the conditions under which the sub-editors and other writers are obliged to fight it out. They are, for the most part, a sober, serious group, who trudge up the torturous stairs in the venerable Maisson de Journalists in Rue Louis le Grand. There they have small clubrooms where they meet at noon-time for a lunch which is served to them at a figure far below any in the neighboring cafes.

They are not shabby. Most of them are middle-aged. They are intelligent in countenance and studious in manner. They carry their well-worn portfolios and many of them do their writing in those clubrooms. It would be interesting to learn how many odd jobs of piece-writing the average holds in order to make ends meet and to maintain the appearance demanded of a journalist.

The leading papers of Paris have splendid publishing plants. Senator DuPuy's Petit Parisian has about as fine a structure as is to be found anywhere. Stuck off on some side street, invariably unlighted at night, it lacks all of the exterior attributes of the magnificent plant inside. The homes of Le Matin and Petit Journal have more pretentious outward appearances, besides having the advantage in location.

Anyone who has strolled through Fleet street knows better than to look for imposing palaces as the homes of the London dailies of world-wide fame. 'Twere better to explore what might seem to be some dark alleyway to find tucked away a group of buildings, housing some great publishing institution. As well might be expected, there is no losing sight of the News of the World, published by Lord Riddell. There are enough signs across the front of its buildings to make even a veteran circus billposter envious of the Riddell art. That plant, incidentally, is one of the wonder shops of the world. A circulation, well along toward the 3,000,000 mark, is handled every week-end, and replating for the various editions goes merrily along until late Saturday afternoon.

American newspaper men in London—those representing papers in this country—are discouraged sometimes, and a few of the younger generation often rebellious, at the difference in treatment of newspaper men by public officials. The American rules are not in operation. Access to officials is a wholly different thing when compared with the rule which prevails in Washington. And, more often than not, when an interview is sought from some prominent man on a topic it would be useful for his Government to have him discuss for American consumption, the hopeful young correspondent is likely to discover that distinguished citizen is in the habit of receiving so and so many pounds for interviews. Custom is something which not even the persistence of American reporters can batter down, yet great strides have been made in England toward more liberal treatment of the press, greater privileges at the fountains of news and more cordial relationships between public men and the "pressmen."

One of the questions always agitating American correspondents in London is that of gallery privileges in the House of Commons. A year or two ago there was an agitation in Washington for reprisals against English correspondents because of the treatment accorded Americans in London. The agitation has been active in Berlin for a long time. It is going on there at the moment. It is selfish and foolish, in Washington as in Berlin.

Difficulties in the House of Commons are physical. They would appear to be insurmountable. There is but one visitors' gallery. That seats hardly more than 150 persons. It is at one end of the rectangular chamber. The press gallery is at the opposite end. There are about 75 press seats or desks. Those places were allotted a score or more years ago. Some of the original holders have passed into newspaper history and the seats have gone to their successors in title. For example, two or three of the leading London dailies have no seats in their own names. Their Parliamentary correspond-

(Continued on Page 6)

Mr. Barry is chief of the Washington Bureau of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and was formerly correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER at the national capital. He recently returned from a tour of Europe where he made a special study of economic conditions. This is the second of a series of articles that he will contribute to EDITOR AND PUBLISHER on newspaper and advertising conditions in various countries of Europe. Another will appear at an early date.

NAVY RADIO MUST BE SPEEDED TO WIN FAR-EAST BUSINESS

Present Service While Cheaper, Is Little Used for Press Messages Because of Longer Delays Than on Regular Cable and Wireless Routes

By JOHN R. MORRIS

Far Eastern Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

TOKYO, June 9.—The United States Navy Radio for the last few weeks has been offering for news dispatches from America to Japan a service which represents an improvement over the service four or five months ago. Some messages from San Francisco addressed to Tokyo are coming through in approximately 24 hours now, carried by Navy Radio as far as Guam or Manila and relayed from those points by submarine cable to Japan. The Navy service is still much slower, however, than that furnished by either the Radio Corporation of America (all-wireless) or the Commercial Cable Company (all-cable), both of which are operating between the United States and the Far East. A United Press dispatch by Radio Corporation of America from San Francisco was received today in Tokyo a few minutes less than twelve hours after it was filed.

All routes of news communication between the United States and Japan are slow, but the service the Navy Radio gives is the slowest of them all. Its one virtue—and that can easily be overestimated—is the fact that it saves in cable tolls approximately 6 cents a word in comparison with the next cheapest rate obtainable. The word-rate from New York to Tokyo by Navy Radio (and over the land wires and submarine cables which it supplements) is 24 cents; by Radio Corporation of America the rate is 30 cents. The rate by cable is 38 cents.

The 24-cent rate does not always work out in practice. The difficulty of obtaining a satisfactory service by Navy Radio for messages en route to Japan has been increased during the last few months by the congestion of the Japanese government-controlled cable between Guam and Japan, known as the Bonin cable. This line has long been taxed to the limit and recently the demands made upon it have been far greater than it could stand. To overcome this, it is possible only to route messages to Manila (by Navy Radio), thence via Shanghai to Nagasaki by cable, and by land telegraph to Tokyo. This routing, however, incurs cable and telegraph charges amounting to 53.8 sen (a fraction less than 27 cents) as opposed to 24 sen (12 cents), the rate over the Bonin cable from Guam to Tokyo. Only the Kokusai, the leading Japanese news agency, saves money through such routing and it only because it picks up Associated Press news without charge from the United States Navy Radio at Guam or Manila.

The Associated Press news, between 6,000 and 8,000 words monthly, is given Kokusai under a special arrangement and distributed as Kokusai Associated Press to vernacular and foreign-language newspapers in this country. Kokusai Direct messages, dispatches from Kokusai correspondents in the United States, are transmitted by Radio Corporation and the Commercial Cable Company.

The Nippon Dempo Tsushin Sha (Japansese Telegraph News Agency) distributes between 6,000 and 10,000 words of United Press news in Japan monthly as the "United Press Service," but this organization is no longer attempting to use the Navy Radio. The last time a United Press message from America was sent by radio to Guam was some time before the Washington Conference met. Congestion at that time forced the Nippon Dempo Tsushin Sha to distribute their dispatches between the Radio Corporation and Commercial Cable Company, and these routes have been employed ever since. The Tokyo manager of the distributors of United Press recently expressed the opinion that the Navy Radio might under extraordinary circumstances prove a desirable route but the arrangement for relaying the messages on the island of Guam makes the occasional use of this service impractical. The radio and cable stations are on opposite sides of the island, eleven miles apart, and the monthly messenger charge of $60 is made if one or 100 messages are relayed in the course of a month.

The Trans-Pacific News Service, the special American service of the Japan Advertiser to which the Tokyo Jiji Shimpo subscribes, has dropped the Navy Radio route altogether and for the past three months has been sending its dispatches, which are filed in New York, by Radio Corporation exclusively. The Trans-Pacific News Service carries between 9,000 and 10,000 words monthly.

Exclusive services maintained by the vernacular newspapers other than the Jiji Shimpo come first by one route, then by another, but only a very small proportion of these messages are ever filed by Navy Radio.

Dispatches from the Far East to American newspapers are sent entirely by all-wireless or all-cable routes.

The service the Navy Radio gives Hawaii and the Philippines unquestionably is enough to justify its continuation and furnish good reason for the recent extension of Congressional authorization for the purpose. The relay at Guam, and the time consumed in getting messages from that point to Tokyo, makes the route less practical for newspapers and agencies operating in Japan. The mere fact that the Associated Press is using it to send 6,000 or 8,000 words here a month is enough to make maintenance of the service worth while, but until some means of speeding the necessary relay is found the Navy Radio will be unable to fill satisfactorily the need which led to authorizing its use for news messages to the Orient.

The opportunity to co-operate with the Japanese Government for direct transmission by wireless from San Francisco to Iwaki was lost through failure of the United States Government to act in this connection last February. The possibility that the Japanese officials will ever again be as easily approached on this subject seems now quite negligible.

In Tokyo the belief that improvement in the present facilities must come with increased competition between private companies and their better operating equipment is becoming more firmly fixed. The Navy Radio will serve its purpose best by maintaining the quickest possible service in the time which must pass before the change referred to comes about, and by supplying America's Pacific possessions with news from America. The amount of news it is able to send to China and Japan is much smaller because of the difficulties encountered after dispatches are handed over by the Navy for cable relay. If the delays which arise thus could be eliminated, it goes without saying a quick service by Navy Radio would be eagerly patronized.

To Arbitrate Printers Wage Scale

William Tracey, of the Pennsylvania state department of labor, has been selected as arbitrator in the differences between the Scranton, Pa., publishers and printers. They are asking a $3 a week increase. The present scale on Scranton newspapers is $42 days and $44 nights. W. J. Pattison, of the Republican, and John Schadt, a job plant owner, represent the publishers, while M. J. Calpin, former sheriff, and Richard Hosie, a printer, are the union's representatives on the board.

Wrigley Heads Chicago Bureau I. N. S.

Luther Huston, manager of the Chicago bureau of the International News Service, has been transferred to the New York office and has been succeeded at Chicago by Tom Wrigley, manager of the Kansas City bureau. J. P. Kilgallen, of the staff of the Chicago bureau, has been sent to Kansas City as the manager of the bureau, and John Spivak has been transferred to the New York office from Chicago.

Deseret News 72 Years Old

The seventy-second anniversary of the Deseret News was celebrated June 22. A 72-pound cake, made by a local baking company, was cut by E. S. Woodruff, general manager of the paper. There were sports and games for all.

UNCERTAINTY OVERAWES EUROPEAN JOURNALISM

(Continued from page 5)

ents occupy places once held by papers obtained through purchase.

On special days, there is a demand for seats in the "distinguished strangers" gallery out of all proportion to the space. The nobility, the diplomatic corps, and members of families all are to be considered, yet the Foreign Office whenever possible holds a row of seats for the Americans. And, it must be kept in mind the Australians and Canadians, who have a higher call for accommodations, must seek seats in like manner.

There are over 700 members of the House of Commons and there are seats for just about half of them, counting even those long rows in the balcony where part of the overflow is provided for on great occasions. The answer, the only answer, is that the British Government and the British publishers, eager to do everything possible to extend privileges and courtesies to the American correspondents, are confronted with no less a task than tearing down the revered House of Commons and erecting a new one. That is not likely to happen next week. Until that is done it will not be possible for the Americans or Germans or French to have press gallery status and correspondents in Washington or Berlin who advocate barring of British correspondents as an act of retaliation are talking pure, narrow-minded nonsense.

Although the press gallery in the Reichstag chamber does not accommodate as many correspondents as "Jim" Preston can put into the Senate or House gallery when occasion demands, other facilities provided for the correspondents are many, many times superior to those connected with the Congressional galleries. There is a seemingly endless string of private offices, phone booths, reading rooms, etc., eac., in the Reichstag building.

It may not always be possible for the Germans to provide for as many British and Americans who seek admission to the chamber on special days, but the Berlin situation is not comparable with that of the House of Commons. An inspection of those press galleries, as well as those in Paris and Rome, leaves no other impression than that the Standing Committee of Washington Correspondents reflected credit on itself and the whole corps by refusing to bar Wilmott Lewis, Sir A. Maurice Low and others in retaliation for conditions in the House of Commons over which they had no control.

STEELE UNITES PAPER MAKERS OF EUROPE

All Scandinavian Paper Will Be Sold in U. S. by Corporation Headed by Former Canadian Export Co. Manager

Dispatches from Stockholm this week stated that the sale and distribution in the United States of newsprint from Swedish, Norwegian and Finnish mills for American newspapers will be taken over by a newly formed corporation headed by G. F. Steele, formerly manager of the Canadian Export Paper Company. All Scandinavian mills will join the new sales organization, it is said.

This step had been expected by American publishers and others in close touch with the newsprint market and, it is thought, presages changes in the price of the foreign product that will reduce competition on price with North American paper.

Mr. Steele, who has spent several months in European paper circles, returned to New York this week.

Mr. Steele has been in the vision of newspaper publishers for the past seven or eight years, first as the secretary of the old News Print Manufacturers Association and later as manager of the Canadian Export Paper Company.

During his connection with the News Print Manufacturers Association, proceedings were instituted against that body, several leading paper makers who belonged to it and Mr. Steele, charging illegal combination to increase the price of newsprint. The defendants filed pleas of nolo contendere, and the cases never came to trial. The association was dissolved and Mr. Steele was not connected with its successor, the present Newsprint Service Bureau, which conducts a statistical and information service.

Mr. Steele next appeared as the organizer and manager of the Canadian Export Paper Company, which handled the export tonnage of five large Canadian mills. He was in charge of its affairs during the period of paper control in Canada and during the following era when Canadian prices to American papers kept pace upward with those of American mills until the slump of 1921 found the Canadian Export Company's mills with more stock on hand than could be sold at their current contract prices. Two of the mills withdrew from the company, which was then reorganized. Mr. Steele resigned as manager and shortly afterward went to Europe, where his work has been conducted quietly and without publicity until now, among the Scandinavian manufacturers.

Newsprint Mill Reorganized

The Three Rivers Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd., is being re-organized and will become the St. Lawrence Pulp and Paper Company, Ltd. A new mill with a capacity of 150 tons of newsprint will be erected by the new company and is expected to be in operation by the end of the year. Stockholders in the old company will receive an equal number of shares in the new company. The capitalization of the St. Lawrence Company will consist of $1,000,000 eight per cent cumulative, participating, preferred shares and 40,000 shares of common stock of no par value. Subsequently it is planned to issue $3,000,000 of first mortgage gold bonds secured by the properties of the company.

Household Edition Popular

Mrs. Jessie Knotts, editor of the new "Household Edition" of the Chicago Evening American, tells of receiving many inquiries concerning the new experiment in journalism from all parts of the country from people apparently much interested in this feature. In the "Household Edition" business news which would not interest women, is eliminated and two special pages containing news for women exclusively are substituted.

NEW FEATURE GROUP ORGANIZED LIKE A. P.

Fifty-three Member Papers and 100 "Allocated" Newspapers on List as North American Newspaper Alliance Is Formed—George E. Miller Is President—Incorporation Papers and By-Laws

THE North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc., was formally organized at a meeting held in New York June 23 and will shortly be functioning as a mutual organization of newspaper publishers in the larger cities of the United States and Canada for acquiring and distributing to its members important news features not handled by press associations.

The Alliance will handle both written news and pictorial news features but will not concern itself with departmental and routine features. That is, it will not maintain a staff of feature writers, artists or news photographers, leaving this field in the hands of the feature services which already supply them. The Alliance will confine itself entirely to unusually important news features whether written or pictorial. "If General Grant were alive and his Memoirs about to be sold not having previously been printed in any form then the Alliance would make its bid for the exclusive rights to it," said an officer of the association in explanation of the Alliance's scope.

GEORGE E. MILLER
President

The officers are George E. Miller, Detroit News, president; Maj. Loring Pickering, San Francisco Bulletin, first vice-president; Ralph E. Stout, Kansas City Star, second vice-president, and Ralph Pulitzer, secretary and treasurer. On the executive committee of 5 are Ralph Pulitzer, E. A. Grozier, the Boston Post, Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin, Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun, and Joseph E. Atkinson, Toronto Star.

The board of directors consists of 15 members selected regionally. On the original board of directors are:

Eastern Division, E. A. Grozier, Boston Post; Robert McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin, and Ralph Pulitzer, The World.

Western Division: Harry Chandler, Los Angeles Times; Edgar B. Piper, Portland Oregonian, and Loring Pickering, San Francisco Bulletin.

Southern Division: Clark Howell, Jr., Atlanta Constitution; Arthur Krock, Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and D. D. Moore, New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Central Division: Hilton U. Brown, Indianapolis News; George E. Miller, Detroit News, and Ralph E. Stout, Kansas City Star.

Canadian Division: Joseph E. Atkinson, Toronto Star.

Members at Large: Victor F. Lawson, Chicago Daily News, and Paul Patterson, Baltimore Sun.

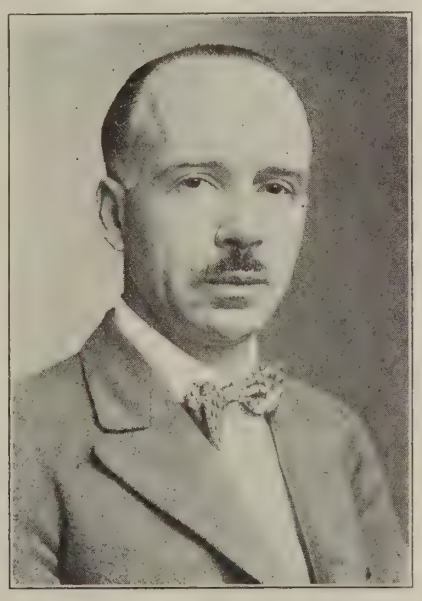
The directing head of the Alliance has not as yet been selected nor have any contracts been made for features. These will of necessity be for less than a year's duration for the by-laws of the Alliance provide that none shall be made to last beyond July 1, 1923.

The Alliance starts in with a cash capital of $500 and 5,000 shares of common stock with a par value of $5 each. These will be sold to member papers on the basis of one share of stock for each 5,000 net paid daily subscribers to the member paper. The stock will not pay dividends.

The contract, certificate of incorporation and by-laws of the association follow:

CONTRACT

Agreement, dated the day of 192 , by and between NORTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPER ALLIANCE, INC., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of New York and having its principal office in the City of New York, State of New York, hereinafter referred to as the newspaper alliance, as party of the first part, and of the City of , State of , proprietor and publisher of the newspaper called the , hereinafter referred to as the "publisher," party of the second part;



WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Newspaper Alliance has been organized to acquire and arrange for the creation of features suitable for publication in such daily newspapers as shall be stockholders, and to sell the right to publish such features in territory not allocated by the corporation to stockholders; and

WHEREAS, the publisher is or is about to become a stockholder and is the publisher of a daily newspaper;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and of the undertakings and agreements hereinafter set forth, the parties hereto by these presents do agree as follows:

I.—The publisher hereby agrees to buy and to pay for, on the basis hereinafter provided, all newspaper features acquired by or created for or on behalf of the Newspaper Alliance and duly tendered to the publisher. The Newspaper Alliance agrees to use its best efforts and to devote itself to procuring and arranging for the creation of newspaper features best adapted in the judgment of its officers to add to the prestige and circulation of its stockholders. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the publisher from publishing features other than those tendered by the Newspaper Alliance.

LORING PICKERING
1st Vice-President

II.—The publisher hereby agrees to pay such proportion of the total of the expenses of operating and running the Newspaper Alliance (including the cost of features, whether or not published by the publisher) as the number of shares of stock owned by the publisher bears to the total number of shares outstanding at the time any assessment for expenses is made.

III.—The Newspaper Alliance by its board of directors or executive committee shall have and are hereby given the right to assess the publisher from time to time for the expenses of operating and running the Newspaper Alliance in excess of receipts from sales (including provision for a reasonable working capital and surplus) upon the basis and subject to the limitations herein set forth. Any such assessment having been made shall be a debt due to the Newspaper Alliance payable upon demand. The total of all assessments for the first year of this contract shall not exceed $300,000. If this contract be continued beyond one year, as hereinafter provided, the amount of subsequent assessments shall be fixed from time to time by resolution of the board of directors, subject to such limitation, if any, as the shareholders may prescribe.

IV.—It is agreed that identical contracts to this shall be entered into with other publishers of daily newspapers who shall be stockholders of the Newspaper Alliance; provided, however, that no similar contract shall be given or awarded to the proprietor or publisher of any newspaper published in the territory hereby awarded to the publisher, namely . . . .

Subject to the foregoing limitation, contracts may be awarded solely in the discretion of the directors or executive committee of Newspaper Alliance.

Every publisher (including the publisher, party of the second part hereto), who shall be awarded a contract, shall purchase at the time such contract is awarded and thereafter hold during the term of the contract, subject to adjustment as herein provided, one share of stock for each 5,000 of net paid daily average circulation established upon the basis adopted by the directors of the Newspaper Alliance. Such basis may change from time to time, but shall always be the same for all stockholders. If a stockholder publishes both a morning and an evening paper in the same city, they shall together be deemed one newspaper and the number of shares of stock of the Newspaper Alliance to which a publisher shall be entitled, and which such publisher agrees to purchase, shall be increased by adding to the net paid daily average circulation of the morning or evening paper, whichever shall be the larger, 25 per cent of the net paid daily average circulation of the smaller. Features furnished to a stockholder publishing both a morning and evening paper may be published in either paper at the option of the stockholder. Increases or decreases in the number of shares shall be adjusted by the purchase of additional shares or the resale to the Newspaper Alliance of excess shares, as the case may be, annually on April 1st, in accordance with the then net paid daily average circulation of each publisher, upon the basis then effective. Nothing in this contract shall be construed as preventing the Newspaper Alliance selling, or the publisher purchasing, features offered the Newspaper Alliance and acceptable to the publisher, but not adapted in the judgment of Newspaper Alliance for distribution to all holders of similar contracts. Expenses incurred in such purchases may not be the basis of any assessment against stockholders.

RALPH E. STOUT
2nd Vice-President

V.—The Newspaper Alliance hereby sells and the publisher hereby purchases upon the basis above set forth shares of stock in the Newspaper Alliance at the par value thereof, payment for which is hereby acknowledged.

VI.—Upon the determination or cancellation of this agreement for any cause, whatsoever, the Publisher agrees to sell and the Newspaper Alliance shall have the option for a period of one year thereafter to buy, at the par value thereof, the shares of stock of the Newspaper Alliance then held by the publisher, and notice of this right of repurchase shall be printed or stamped upon all certificates of stock.

RALPH PULITZER
Secretary-Treasurer

VII.—The Newspaper Alliance shall have the right to terminate this contract at its option if (1) the publisher shall cease for any reason to be a stockholder of the Newspaper Alliance; or (2) if the publisher ceases to publish its newspaper in the City of ; or (3) if the publisher shall fail to promptly and fully perform and fulfill the undertakings on his or its part herein contained.

VIII.—In the event that the Newspaper Alliance shall terminate this agreement for any cause above specified, the publisher shall not thereby be relieved from the obligation herein set forth to pay its proportion of the expenses of the Newspaper Alliance unless and until the Newspaper Alliance shall procure upon the basis herein set forth another newspaper proprietor for the territory herein allocated to the publisher. The Newspaper Alliance, having just cause as aforesaid, shall give notice of the termination of the contract, but shall continue to tender features to the publisher until another newspaper proprietor shall be procured for the publisher's territory, but only if all moneys due or becoming due for any cause shall be paid by the publisher upon demand.

IX.—Save as above provided, this contract shall continue until July 1st, 1923. Prior to that date Newspaper Alliance shall make no contract for features which may not be terminated on or prior thereto. The Publisher may terminate this contract on July 1st, 1923, by giving notice in writing to the Newspaper Alliance on or prior to June 1st, 1923. Such notice having been given, no further liability hereunder shall accrue as against the publisher. Newspaper Alliance may terminate this contract on July 1st, 1923, by a vote of 75 per cent in amount of the stockholders then holding contracts similar to this, who shall, at the time of any special meeting called for the purpose of considering the termination thereof vote to discontinue the acquisition or creation of features and terminate this and all other similar contracts then in force. Unless this contract be terminated on July 1st, 1923, as above provided, it shall continue thereafter until notice in writing of the termination thereof shall be given by one of the parties hereto to the other in the manner hereinafter specified, to wit:

(a) In the event that the publisher desires to terminate this contract he may do so for any reason whatsoever, by serving personally or by registered mail upon Newspaper Alliance a written notice setting forth that the publisher has elected to terminate this contract on a day certain not less than twelve months from the date of serving the notice. Upon the date of termination so specified in the notice this contract shall thereupon end, except that the Publisher shall continue to be liable for the pro rata cost of features contracted for by the Newspaper Alliance prior to the date of termination specified in the notice, upon the basis herein set forth, as though this contract were still effective, until either such contracts for features shall expire, or another newspaper proprietor shall be allotted a contract for the territory herein specified.

(b) In the event that Newspaper Alliance desires to terminate this agreement it may do so for any reason, whatsoever, by serving personally or by registered mail upon the publisher a written notice setting forth that Newspaper Alliance has elected to terminate this contract on a day certain not less than three months from the date of serving the notice. Upon the date of termination so specified in the notice, this contract shall thereupon end and no further liability shall accrue hereunder as against the publisher. Nothing herein contained shall be construed or held to limit the reasons or causes for terminating the contract by either party to such reasons or causes as are herein elsewhere specified for terminating this contract.

X.—True copies of the certificate of incorporation and by-laws of the Newspaper Alliance are hereto annexed, and are hereby made a part of this contract; it being also understood and agreed that any amendments to said certificate of incorporation or to the by-laws shall likewise be and become a part of this contract.

VICTOR F. LAWSON
Member-at-Large

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hitherto have caused these presents to be duly executed as of the day and year first above written.

NORTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPER ALLIANCE, INC.,

By.....

.....

By.....

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION

We, the undersigned, being all persons of full age and at least two-thirds being citizens of the United States and one or more being residents of the State of New York, do hereby make, sign, acknowledge and file this certificate of incorporation as follows:

FIRST.—The name of the proposed corporation is:

"NORTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPER ALLIANCE, INC."

SECOND.—The purposes for which it is to be formed are to acquire and arrange for the creation of features suitable for publication in daily newspapers and to distribute the same to such publishers of newspapers as shall be stockholders of the corporation, for publication in their respective newspapers, and also to sell the right to publish such features in territory not allocated by the corporation to stockholders.

The corporation shall have power to conduct its business in other states and in foreign countries, and to have one or more offices out of this state, and to hold, purchase, mortgage and convey real and personal property out of this state; and in carrying on its business, or for the purpose of attaining or furthering any of its objects or purposes, to do any and all other necessary or convenient things and exercise any and all other powers now or hereafter authorized by law.

The stockholders may amend, enlarge, alter or rescind any and all of the rights, powers, privileges or restrictions in this certificate of incorporation granted and contained, conferred or imposed, in any manner and to any extent, by a certificate of amendment made, executed, authorized and filed in any manner now or hereafter permitted or authorized by the laws of the State of New York.

THIRD.—The amount of its capital stock shall be $25,000, all of which shall be common stock.

FOURTH.—The number of shares of which the capital stock shall consist shall be 5,000 of the par value of $5.00 each, and the amount of capital with which said Corporation will begin business is $500.

FIFTH.—The principal business office of the corporation is to be located in the Borough of Manhattan, City, County and State of New York.

SIXTH.—Its duration shall be perpetual.

SEVENTH.—The number of its directors shall be fifteen.

EIGHTH.—The names and post-office addresses of the directors for the first year are as follows:

Names and Post Office Addresses.

Joseph E. Atkinson, Toronto, Canada.
Hilton U. Brown, Indianapolis, Ind.
Harry Chandler, Los Angeles, Cal.
Edwin A. Grozier, Boston, Mass.
Clark Howell, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.
Arthur Krock, Louisville, Ky.
Victor F. Lawson, Chicago, Ill.
George E. Miller, Detroit, Mich.
Daniel D. Moore, New Orleans, La.
Paul Patterson, Baltimore, Md.
Loring Pickering, San Francisco, Cal.
Edgar B. Piper, Portland, Ore.
Ralph Pulitzer, New York, N. Y.
E. Lansing Ray, St. Louis, Mo.
Ralph E. Stout, Kansas City, Mo.

NINTH.—The names and post office addresses of the subscribers to this certificate, and a statement of the number of shares of stock which each agrees to take in the corporation are as follows:

Names	Post Office Addresses	No. of Shares
Ralph Pulitzer	New York	One
Loring Pickering	San Francisco	One
George E. Miller	Detroit	One

TENTH.—The directors of the corporation need not be stockholders. The board of directors may appoint an executive committee from among their number, which committee, to the extent provided in the by-laws of the corporation, shall have and may exercise all of the powers of the board of directors in the management of the business of the corporation during the intervals between meetings of the board of directors so far as may be permitted by law.

ELEVENTH.—The directors may from time to time offer for sale at the par value thereof any or all of the stock of the corporation now or hereafter authorized either to publishers of newspapers already stockholders or to publishers of newspapers in a territory not already allocated to a stockholder and within such limitations and upon such terms and conditions as shall be set forth in the by-laws, and without offering the same to all the stockholders then of record.

TWELFTH.—The stockholders shall be limited as herein provided, to individual or corporations owning and publishing newspapers. In the event that a share or shares of stock of the corporation shall come into the possession or ownership, by operation of law or otherwise, of another than the publisher or owner of a newspaper, such other shall not be entitled to the distribution on any basis of the newspaper features, the acquisition and distribution of which to newspaper publishers is the object or purpose of this corporation, and such shares shall be subject to purchase and acquisition by the corporation as though proposed or offered for transfer, as herein provided.

THIRTEENTH.—Stock of the corporation shall be transferable only upon the books of the corporation and subject to the following restrictions, which shall be printed in the certificates:

(a) If a stockholder shall be indebted to the Corporation, the directors may refuse to consent to a transfer of his stock until such indebtedness is paid;

(b) Save as hereinafter provided, no share of stock in the corporation shall at any time be transferred to any person not publishing a newspaper in the same city as the stockholder whose shares are offered for transfer so long as the corporation is willing to purchase said share at the par value thereof. In order to ascertain whether the corporation is willing to purchase any such share, the person, whether a shareholder of the corporation or not, proposing to transfer the same, hereinafter called the "retiring shareholder," shall give notice in writing to the corporation at its principal office that he desires to transfer the same. The corporation shall within the space of 30 days after such notice give notice to the retiring shareholder that it desires to purchase such share and the retiring shareholder shall be bound, as such time within 15 days thereafter as the corporation shall appoint and at the principal office of the corporation, upon payment of the par value thereof, to transfer such share to the corporation. If in any case the retiring shareholder after becoming bound as aforesaid, makes default in transferring such share, the corporation shall thereupon cause its own name to be entered upon the stock register as the holder of such share and shall set apart and hold the purchase money in trust for the retiring shareholder, his executors, administrators or assigns. The receipt of the corporation for the purchase money shall thereupon be sent to the retiring shareholder and after the name of the corporation has been entered in the stock register in exercise of the aforesaid power, the validity of the proceeding shall not be questioned by any person and the corporation shall be deemed and taken to be the owner of the said share;

(c) Subject to the foregoing and so far as may be permitted by law, the corporation may prescribe additional rules, regulations and limitations for the transfer of shares in its by-laws.

FOURTEENTH.—Shares of stock shall be the absolute property of the holder thereof provided only that in the manner and upon the terms set forth in the charter and in the by-laws the corporation may use and apply its surplus earnings or accumulated profits to the purchase and acquisition of its own capital stock.

FIFTEENTH.—The directors shall be elected 3 from each of 4 districts to be designated respectively, Eastern, Southern, Central and Western, and 3 Directors at large. Each district shall contain such territory as shall be alloted to it by the by-laws. As soon as practicable the directors named in the certificate of Incorporation shall divide themselves into three classes, each of which shall consist of 5 directors, one from each district and one at large. The first class shall hold office for one year and until the next annual election; the second class for two years and until the second annual election; and the third class for three years and until the third annual election, and thereafter directors shall be elected at each annual meeting upon the basis of district representation and at large, as above set forth, and each director so elected shall hold his office for the term of 3 years and until another director is chosen and qualified in his stead.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF we have made, signed and lodged this Certificate in duplicate this 3rd day of May, 1922.

GEO. E. MILLER
RALPH PULITZER
LORING PICKERING

NOTE: The foregoing Certificate of Incorporation was filed in the office of the Secretary of State of New York June 13th, 1922, and in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York, State of New York, on the same day.

BY-LAWS of
NORTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPER ALLIANCE, INC.

ARTICLE I.

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

SECTION 1. The annual meeting of the stockholders of this corporation shall be held at the office of the corporation in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the Monday preceding the fourth Thursday in April of each year, at twelve o'clock noon, for the election of Directors and such other business as may properly come before said meeting. Notice of the time, place and object of such meeting shall be given in the manner required by law, and by serving personally or by mailing, at least thirty days previous to such meeting, postage prepaid, a copy of such notice, addressed to each stockholder of record at his address, as the same appears on the books of the corporation.

SECTION 2. Special meetings of stockholders, other than those regulated by statute, may be called at any time by a majority of the directors or by the executive committee. It shall also be the duty of the President to call such meetings whenever requested in writing, so to do, by ten per cent in number of the holders of the issued and outstanding capital stock. A notice of every special meeting, stating the time, place and object thereof, shall be given by mailing, postage prepaid, at least fifteen (15) days before such meeting, a copy of such notice addressed to each stockholder of record at his address as the same appears on the books of the corporation.

SECTION 3. Except as otherwise prescribed by statute, at all meetings of stockholders there shall be present, either in person or by proxy, stockholders owning a majority in amount of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation in order to constitute a quorum.

SECTION 4. At all meetings of stockholders, only such persons shall be entitled to vote in person and by proxy who appear as stockholders upon the transfer books of the corporation for 10 days immediately preceding such meeting.

SECTION 5. At the annual meeting of stockholders the following shall be the order of business, viz:

1. Calling the roll.
2. Proof of proper notice of meeting.
3. Report of president.
4. Report of treasurer.
5. Report of secretary.
6. Report of committees.
7. Election of directors.
8. Miscellaneous business.

SECTION 6. At all meetings of stockholders all questions, except the question of an amendment to the by-laws, and the election of Directors and Inspectors of election, and all such other questions, the manner of deciding which is specially regulated by statute, shall be determined by a majority viva voce vote of the stockholders present in person or by proxy, except that a vote shall be by ballot when required by statute or by any stockholder present in person or by proxy. Each ballet shall state the name of the stockholder voting and the number of shares owned by him, and in addition, if such ballot be cast by a proxy, it shall also state the name of such proxy.

ARTICLE II.

DIRECTORS.

SECTION 1. The directors shall be elected 3 from each of 4 districts to be designated, respectively, Eastern, Southern, Central and Western, and 3 directors at large, one of whom shall represent the Dominion of Canada. Each district shall contain such territory as shall be allotted to it by the by-laws. As soon as practicable the directors named in the certificate of incorporation shall divide themselves into three classes, each of which shall consist of 5 directors, one from each district and one at large. The first class shall hold office for one year and until the next annual election; the second class for two years and until the second annual election; and the third class for three years and until the third annual election; and thereafter directors shall be elected at each annual meeitng upon the basis of district representation and at large, as above set forth, and each director so elected shall hold his office for the term of 3 years and until another director is chosen and qualified in his stead. The territory constituting the four districts from which directors shall be elected, as above provided, shall be composed as follows:

Eastern District: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia.

Southern District: West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Western District: Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Oklahoma, North Dakota, and South Dakota.

Central District: Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio.

SECTION 2. Vacancies in the board of directors, occuring during the year, shall be filled for the unexpired term by a majority vote of the remaining directors (whether or not sufficient in number to constitute a quorum) at any special meeting called for that purpose or at any regular meeting of the board. In filling vacancies so occurring district representation shall be maintained.

SECTION 3. The board of directors may adopt such rules and regulations for the conduct of their meetings and management of the affairs of the corporation as they may deem proper, not inconsistent with the laws of the State of New York or these by-laws.

PAUL PATTERSON
Member-at-Large

SECTION 4. Regular meetings of the board of directors shall be held at such hour and place as the directors may by resolution specify on the Saturday preceding the fourth Thursday of April or on the day immediately succeeding the adjournment of the annual meeting of the stockholders, and on the Tuesday preceding the first Wednesday of October. If any one of said days be a legal holiday, then the meeting shall be held on the next succeeding day not a legal holiday.

SECTION 5. Special meetings of the board of directors shall be held whenever called by the president or by not less than three of the directors for the time being in office.

SECTION 6. Directors may hold their meetings, have an office and keep books of the company, except as otherwise may be provided by law, at the office of the company, in the City of New York, or at such other place or place as the board from time to time by resolution may determine.

SECTION 7. No notice shall be required for any regular meeting of the board. Fifteen days notice of each special meeting of the board shall be given by mailing the same to each director, which notice shall specify the time place and purpose of the meeting.

SECTION 8. Seven directors shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but if at any meeting of the board there be less than a quorum present a majority of those present may adjourn the meeting from time to time.

ARTICLE III.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

SECTION 1. The board of directors, by an affirmative vote of a majority of the whole board, may appoint from among their number an executive committee of three or more of whom a majority shall constitute a quorum. Whenever the board of directors is not in session such committee shall have and may exercise any and all powers of the board of directors, including the power to cause the seal of the corporation to be affixed to all papers that may require it. The term of office of each member of said committee shall continue until the expiration of his term as director and until his successor shall be elected.

ARTICLE IV.

OFFICERS.

SECTION 1. The board of directors, immediately after the annual meeting, shall choose one of their number by a majority vote to be president, and they shall also appoint a vice president, secretary and treasurer. Each of such officers shall serve for the term of one year, and until his successor is chosen or appointed. The directors or executive committee may appoint or employ such other officers, representatives and employees and with such duties as they may deem advisable.

(Continued on page 20)

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Wide World Photo

Adolph S. Ochs, M. A. It is by no means rare for American Universities to grant degrees for knowledge for work in the Arts, Science, or Statesmanship, but rarely do our great Universities confer Master of Arts as an honorary degree. It is, therefore, worthy of special note that Yale University this year called Mr. Ochs to New Haven to give him this degree, not, as we remarked before, for any specific knowledge in a given subject, but because he is the maker of a great newspaper. We believe this is the first time constructive work of this kind has been so highly honored. The man at his right is Major Julius Ochs Adler, also of the New York Times.

Nix, there was no fire, just a convention of the insurance advertising men and the photographer "sneaked" up on this group and here is the result. Left to right (below), C. I. Hitchcock, editor of the Insurance Field, Louisville; Clarence Axman, editor of the Eastern Underwriter; E. L. Sullivan, Advertising Manager Home Insurance Company; C. S. S. Miller, Advertising Manager North British and Mercantile Insurance Company, and C. M. Cartwright, editor National Underwriter, Chicago.

Photo by P. & A.

They stand on the edge of the world's greatest political volcano, but nobody seems downhearted. Roger Ames Burr, former Chicago newspaper man, with Mrs. Burr, their 13-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son, have just arrived in Riga, the first American family to traverse Russia from the Pacific to the Baltic. A welcome committee of two newspaper men greeted Burr and his family at Riga. We have James Howe, of the Associated Press, at the extreme left, and Otis Peabody Swift, formerly of the New York Evening World and now of the Chicago Tribune Foreign Service, extreme right.

Daughter graduated with distinction and father's overjoyed. The remark was unnecessary, the picture below speaks for itself. We have Dr. Edwin F. Gay, editor of the New York Evening Post, who delivered the commencement address at Radcliffe this year, and with him Miss Margaret Randolph Gay, member of the graduating class.

Photo by Keystone

HEARST N. Y. STATE INVASION TOPIC AT ASSOCIATED DAILIES SESSION

Publishers in Nine Cities Report Propositions for New Sunday Editions by "W. R.," Who Seeks 5,000,000 Circulation for Sunday American, It Is Stated

By JOHN F. REDMOND

Special Correspondent of EDITOR & PUBLISHER

CATSKILL, N. Y., June 26.—One of William R. Hearst's chief executives was quoted, at the semi-annual meeting of the New York Associated Dailies held here today, as stating that the real reason for Mr. Hearst's entering the up-state field is to build up a five million circulation for his Sunday American magazine and other special sections. Besides Rochester, where a new Hearst Sunday newspaper started this week, prospositions to local publishers to publish Sunday editions and circulate them in conjunction with the Hearst Sunday American, have been made in Syracuse, Utica, Jamestown, Geneva, Poughkeepsie, Newburgh, Middletown, Olean and Elmira, according to reports made to the association by members.

A. R. KESSINGER
President N. Y. Associated Dailies

Syracuse is to be the next point of operation, from all indications. If no local publisher will enter into the proposition of Mr. Hearst on a co-operative basis, in all probability he will go ahead independently with his own plant in that city, as he has done in Rochester.

The Hearst executive at the meeting was also quoted as saying that Mr. Hearst intends making the Rochester American a daily paper as soon as possible. He is certain that the 5,000,000 circulation mark can be reached, and perhaps 10,000,000 throughout the country, through co-operative distribution with the country press. However, nothing definite was mentioned in the way of plans outside of what is actually known in New York State.

The same process is also being discussed with reference to obtaining wider circulation for the Saturday special sections of the New York Evening Journal. The master mind in the plan is said to be Arthur Brisbane.

The association passed a resolution to the effect that all members will write to their Representatives and Senators in Washington voicing their endorsement of the Kelly Bill, which proposes to reduce the zone postal rates on second-class mail.

Rapid growth of the chain store movement was reported from practically all cities represented in the association, principally grocery stores and shoe stores. In most places, however, they are not advertisers to any great extent. In such cases, though, publishers reported that the new competition awakened local merchants to the necessity of becoming more active and that by this means the chain stores have been real developers of new advertisers. The steady expansion of the Atlantic & Pacific grocery stores was particularly commented on, but to date this firm does not advertise.

Members reported that the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, which has been endeavoring to place advertising direct and collect the 15 per cent commission usually allowed advertising agencies, has begun to place its advertising through Critchfield & Co., Chicago, in cases where the commission is refused. Very few publishers reported having done business with the Firestone Company direct. Many of those declining continue to carry the business without interruption.

Several of the members expressed a desire to form combinations with other members in employing an advertising specialist to go out into their cities and territories and talk advertising—not sell any particular paper, but go among the business people and educate them in how to use paid space in local papers. Reports were that some years ago this practice was followed by some of the members with very good results. It was stated that the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association is considering employing several such specialists for local papers, but so far nothing has been done about it. Capt. C. K. Walbridge of the Saratoga Springs Saratogian and Sun, expressed a desire to get into touch with some competent and well recommended advertising man to discuss the matter with the view of making a possible group arrangement with other Associated Dailies members.

In the discussion of the installation of classified systems now being offered by certain firms the opinion seemed to be that they are too expensive for smaller papers. The systems are fine, it was stated by several of the users, and while some new business had been created, and in some cases circulation somewhat enlarged, the expense is considerably more than the revenue derived.

The practice of some publishers in giving outside specialty men commissions ranging from 50 per cent to 90 per cent on "stunt" advertising they handle was vigorously disapproved. The maximum figure considered proper is 50 per cent.

Picture pages, purchased in mat form, are very handy things, according to a number of publishers using them. They very often serve as good "filler" and are especially useful in catching early mail editions. Rotogravure picture sections do not pay small papers, was the general verdict.

A growing tendency to allow route boys cash commissions for obtaining new subscribers was evident from the discussion on this subject. Commissions granted range all the way from 25 cents to 50 cents per new order for three months or more.

No member reported having gone back to "returns." A number of them stated, however, that they have hard fights on their hands with larger city papers, coming into their territories, which do allow returns and make things decidedly unpleasant. One member who said he did not consider the practice as allowing "returns," said he was able to increase the circulation of his newspaper nearly 200 per day by going around to dealers and agents in a car at the close of each day with left-over papers and leaving with them a few extra copies over their regular order. The idea is to encourage the dealers to sell the extra copies. If they do not these extras are taken back the following morning and are very useful to the newspaper as file copies. The result has been that the dealers return comparatively few of the extras. They actually sell them and soon increase their regular orders. This member emphasized, however, that copies regularly ordered are not returnable—only the extras.

A tendency to check more carefully billing on all advertisements was reported in the discussion on this subject.

The average salaries paid reporters, as stated by members, is $13.25 for "cubs" and $36 for full-fledged reporters. In individual figures they ranged from $12 to $45.

Quite a number of members, it developed, continue to guarantee circulation in advertising contracts. Very few reported ever having been called upon to rebate for shortage. Most play safe by guaranteeing a figure well below their A. B. C. reports. One publisher, who had been forced to pay a rebate, has appropriately revised his contract to the effect that advertisers demanding shortage rebates shall pay extra for any circulation in excess of the guaranteed figure. He reported a marked disinclination to demand guarantees on such a condition.

Lack of standards was noted in the reports on how members measure advertisements. There were about as many who figure "cut-off rule to cut off rule" as those who measure from "type to type." The desire of the advertiser seemed to be about the only element entering into the method used.

Prices of dry mats now range from 16 cents foreign to 18 cents for the American product. The latter, the Wood Flong, is liked by many because of its greater shrinkage. Very satisfactory results, however, were reported with the German and English mats, the newest of the latter being the Dixon mat, made in Liverpool and sold at present for approximately 16 cents, including import duty and all costs of delivery to publishers' office. The German "Flexideal" and another foreign mat, the "Premier," are also obtainable at 16 cents.

It is probable that the association will adopt a standard of practice for advertiser service, as the result of the constantly increasing demands made on members for co-operation by advertisers. Some publishers charge for all service and others give it in limitless quantity. The greatest service demands come from smaller advertisers, according to reports presented. It was the opinion of some members that a code of service would be impossible to live up to in small towns, where so much depends on competitive conditions. These felt that if such a code were adopted it would require getting all competitors to agree to it also or nothing could be done.

The advisability of adopting a standard editorial department style sheet of capitalization and punctuation was discussed, but did not meet with much favor. Most of those expressing an opinion felt that a newspaper's individuality is one of its most valuable assets.

Wireless telephone receiving outfits are of no value to newspapers as a means of gathering news, in the minds of association members, a number of whom have tried them. The general opinion was that newspapers have gone "radio crazy" and are getting little or no results from the space they are giving each day to programs and radio mechanical departments.

The Newburgh News, however, was one paper that didn't agree with the majority opinion. Frederick H. Keefe, its business manager, said he had been able to build up considerable good will and advertising for his paper through a radio broadcasting station which the News operates itself. It gives a regular daily program of three periods each. Its musical program is operated in conjunction with the local talking machine dealers. Each make of talking machine record has a day on the program—one day is Victor Day, another is Columbia Day, another is Brunswick Day, etc. Announcement is made of the program each day in the News. Other parts of the News program is put on likewise with little or no cost to the paper. Features include talks to women by well known speakers, social entertainment, bed time stories, etc. No trouble at all is experienced in getting local talent gratis, according to Mr. Keefe. His station is the only one between Newark, N. J., and Schenectady, N. Y., and the fame of the News has been spread for hundreds of miles around. Complimentary letters are received daily from as far away as Watertown, N. Y., New York City and distant parts of Long Island from radio enthusiasts who pick up the News program, although no effort is ever made to reach that distance. About a quarter of a daily page of local advertising has been developed for the News, and Mr. Keefe considers it well worth while. His station is not used for news gathering.

While direct radio advertising is prohibited by the Government in licenses for broadcasting stations, Mr. Keefe said advertising in indirect publicity is becoming evident. For instance lectures by the Colgate Company on care of the teeth and concerts by the Colgate band are among the newest features of daily radio programs. He pointed out, too, that the American Telephone & Telegraph Company is erecting the most powerful station in the country in New York City, which is to be leased on occasion and possibly will develop some more new indirect advertising features.

The joint legal rate committee of the Associated Dailies, the State Press Association and the State Publishers Association, of which Frederick H. Keefe of the Newburgh News is secretary, reported that it intends introducing again, at the next session of the Legislature, the Brundage Bill, which has the approval of Governor Miller, to amend the civil practice, the legislative law, publishers officers law and surrogate's court act. in relation to the fees of printers, as follows: (matter in italics is new; matter in brackets is old law to be omitted):

Section 1. Section fifteen hundred and fifty-one of the civil practice act is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 1551. FEES OF PRINTERS. Except as otherwise specially prescribed by law, the proprietor of a newspaper is entitled for publishing summons, notice, order or other advertisement, required by law to be published, [other than the session laws, for each inch of agate twenty-nine ems to the line, to seventy-five cents for the first insertion and fifty cents for each subsequent insertion. In counties containing

REPORT HEARST OWNS ALBANY PAPER "PREMATURE," SAYS CONNERS

NEWSPAPER and political circles of New York State were agitated Wednesday morning by a statement given out at the political headquarters of William R. Hearst in New York City that he had purchased the Albany Times-Union, for many years owned and edited by former Governor Martin H. Glynn. The report was generally scouted by politicians and was denied by New York attorneys for Mr. Glynn, who is in Ireland with Mrs. Glynn, and it was finally stated by William J. Conners, proprietor of the Buffalo Courier and Enquirer, Mr. Hearst's political manager, that the report "may have been premature," but that the transfer would take place eventually.

First announcements had it that the deal was concluded before Mr. Hearst sailed for Europe a month ago, but that no publicity had been given at the time. No purchase price was made public. No changes of any moment have taken place in the policy or the staff of the Times-Union in that period, EDITOR & PUBLISHER learns, and the story is generally ignored as idle political gossip in Albany.

As Mr. Hearst can put his New York City papers into Albany within three hours after publication and has a large market for them there, and as the Times-Union has been one of the newspapers supporting his boom for the gubernatorial nomination, politicians can see little reason for its purchase as a part of Mr. Hearst's projected New York State chain.

CRIME A SMALL PART OF DAILY NEWS PROF. ADAMS TELLS NEW YORKERS

Only a Little Over 4 Per Cent of June Space in Three New York Dailies; Less in Country Press—Blossom New Press Association President

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

CATSKILL, N. Y., June 28—Critics of the American newspapers who decry "the vast amount of crime news that is being printed daily," blaming it for bad moral conditions in the country, do not know what they are talking about, according to Prof. Bristow Adams of the New York State College of Agriculture in addressing the annual convention of the New York State Press Association Wednesday. In the course of outlining the amount of farm news carried by newspapers of New York State, Prof. Adams developed statistics on New York City newspapers, and state cities of the second and third class as showing that the amount of space given to crime news as compared with other classifications of news, stands seventh in volume in a list of 13 groups. The news groups exceeding it in volume of space are: Business and finance, sports, foreign, education, Government and politics, and labor.

In three New York City papers—Times, World and Tribune—whose use of space was analyzed by Prof. Adams, crime news printed during the month ending June 24, in which the Ward case and other criminal cases were at their highest peak of interest, an average of only a little over four per cent of total reading matter was devoted to news of all kinds of crime combined. Away from New York City the amount of crime news diminished to almost nothing, Prof. Adams' figures showed.

Professor Adams presented a tabulation which is reproduced on this page, showing the result of his analysis covering 13 groups of news classification magazine and feature sections of Sunday papers are not included in the tabulation):

PERCENTAGE OF SUBJECT MATTER IN DAILY NEWSPAPERS OF NEW YORK STATE

Paper	Business and Finance	Sports	Foreign	Educational	Gov't and Politics	Labor	Crime	Deaths and Disasters	Courts	Liquor	Society	Miscellaneous	Agricultural
N. Y. City—
Times	27	15	13	10	9¼	7	5	4½	3¼	2½	2¼	1¼	1
Tribune	30	20	8	7	9	8	3	3	2	1¼	3½	3	2¼
World	28	21½	7	7	5	10	5½	3½	1¼	2¼	0¼	7	1¼
Cities of Second Class—
Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo	7¾	27		4¼	18½	6¼	7¾	3½	4¼	2¾	1¼	8¼	3	5½
Cities of third class	18	16½	15	11	8	5	1¾	3¾	0½	1½	8	2	9

He gave the following explanation:

"The figures are in percentages, in relation to all text, exclusive of advertising. Education includes all church matters, as spiritual education; death and disaster includes obituaries, and everything is counted in the place where it belongs, including editorials, cartoons, and even comic strips, where they could be classified.

"The figures represent a month, the most recent month, up to and including Saturday, June 24; though not all papers are included. During one week the papers of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday were taken, and during the alternating week, the papers of Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Sunday papers were excluded, because their magazine sections, illustrated supplements, comic sheets and the like, are likely to upset the proportions of the general 'run of the news.' They are, through special articles and critiques, largely matters of opinion rather than records of facts.

"During the month taken, because of commencements and the like, educational news may show a higher average than for the year round, but for the period given the figures are comparable as to the various types of papers. It should also be realized that in this period the Ward case, the coal strike outrages, and foreign questions momentous in Ireland, China, and Germany have been to the fore."

Prof. Adams attributed the belief that crime news is predominating in the newspapers to the general reader's state of mind which runs to the human nature side of news rather than to other kinds of matter. He said he, himself, was greatly surprised to find the result he did.

As to farm news, Prof. Adams said the newspapers are giving a nearly 100 per cent adequate service to their readers. He suggested that perhaps a little less of the technical side be given and more about the personal and social angles of farm life in the newspaper's own locality be printed. He said, too, that farmers need to be educated to read in the news that is of most interest to them as their life has come to combine all social and business interests.

Officers of the press association were elected as follows: President, Peter A. Blossom, Brockport Republic; vice-presidents, John W. Baker, Ithaca Journal-News; M. V. Atwood, Groton Journal-Courier; Henri M. Hall, Jamestown Journal; E. M. Perkins, Leroy Gazette-News; Thomas J. Blain, Port Chester Item; secretary-treasurer, Elias Vair, Waterloo News.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the Empire State School of Printing, which has just been established in Ithaca by the New York State Publishers' Association.

Arthur Brisbane and Herbert J. Kaufman were the speakers at the annual banquet held Wednesday evening.

Speaking on "More and Better Advertising," John F. Rolfe of the Corning Evening Leader said the greatest fault with the country paper, whether it be a daily or a weekly, is that it neglects selling its own field, letting outside "stunt" promoters sell all sorts of sign and novelty advertising to local merchants when that advertising should be in the local paper. He said the country publisher who really wants to make a success of his business must put himself in the state of mind to see that every person in the community has something to advertise and convince him of it. "Every person you meet in the streets of your home town is a potential advertiser," said Mr. Rolfe. "Just try, in your mind, to fit an ad on each one. You will soon be convinced of it yourself. Then you can convince the prospect. It will work more often than it will fail. Approach the advertiser, too, in a way that will make him see that you are doing him a service in opening the way for him to create new business, rather and have him look upon the matter as doing you a favor by placing advertising with your paper. This practice has worked splendidly in Corning and it will work just as well for any other publisher who has confidence in his own paper."

The aims and purposes of the new Empire State School of Printing, at Ithaca, which has just been started by the New York State Publishers' Association, were explained by Ross W. Kellogg, its director. He asked the support of the publishers of weekly papers of the state in the way of sending pupils there to be educated in the printing trades. He said the school was neither a linotype school nor a training school for strikebreakers, as has apparently been taken for granted by some publishers. "The school has been started to provide a general printing education," Mr. Kellogg said. "It provides an elementary and graduating course in the fundamentals of printing—at the case, the study of typography, press work and linotype work—and no pupil can take the linotype course until he has been thoroughly grounded in the stages of the trade leading up to machine composition. The course covers a period of six months, in which time by intensive instruction and practical work under the direction of the most expert printing teachers obtainable, we feel we can turn out young men and women who are at least the equal of apprentices who have spent two years in the printing office alone.

Mr. Kellogg said he believes the Empire State School is the only institution of its kind in the United States which aims to give all around printing education. The Carnegie Institute of Technology and the United Typothetæ Schools train printers more for executive positions, while other schools teach only machine composition, he said. The members of the New York State Publishers' Association have pledged financial support to the school to the extent of $10,000 for its first year. Tuition fees are $25 per month, and $10 during the last three months, in the linotype course, for the use of the machines. The capacity of the school is 26 pupils. It has just started with five. Applications for enrollment are now receivable.

Wallace Odell of the Tarrytown Daily News, retiring president, acted as chairman of the meeting, with Elias Vair of the Waterloo News, secretary.

Other speakers on the program were Edward Percy Howard of the Publishers' Autocaster Company, New York, on "Building a Country Newspaper"; R. T. Patten of the Skowhegan (Me.) Independent-Reporter, on "Ways and Means in a Country Weekly and Job Printing Office"; E. R. Eastman, of the Dairymen's League News on "The Farmer and His Newspaper"; James Wright Brown, of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, on "The Newspaper Industry."

A personal sidelight of the convention was the renewing of many old acquaintanceships by A. W. Fell, now principal owner of the Hudson Republican, who recently returned to the journalistic field in his native state after many years' absence. Mr. Fell and E. M. Perkins of the Leroy Gazette-News thus met for the first time in twenty-nine years. When they last saw one another Mr. Fell was an instructor in an academy in the vicinity of Leroy, Perkins was a youngster learning the printing business and Mrs. Perkins was one of Mr. Fell's pupils.

The executive committee was elected as follows: Chairman, F. A. Merriam, Mount Vernon Argus; Fay C. Parsons, Cortland Democrat; Frank L. Rogers, Gloversville Leader-Republican; Thomas H. Alvord, Livonia Gazette, and the presidents of district associations, ex-officio.

Resolutions were adopted commending the Kelly Bill for reduction of second-class postal charges and the work toward the same end by the American Publishers' Conference. It was also resolved that the association communicate with photo-engravers throughout the state with a view of locating shops with reasonable price scales.

JERSEY WANTS SCHOOL FOR JOURNALISTS

Press Association at Annual Meeting Plans September Conference at Rutgers—Bristor of Passaic Is President

E. A. BRISTOR

Establishment of a school of journalism at Rutgers' College, New Brunswick, it is hoped, will follow a conference devoted entirely to newspaper problems on that campus in September, plans for which were reported to the New Jersey Press Association at its 66th annual meeting at Pocono Manor Inn, Pocono Summit, Pa., recently, by a committee of the association. Fifty-seven members have indicated that they will attend or be represented in the conference and it is likely that more than 100 will go to the New Brunswick conference.

Officers elected for the coming year were: President, E. A. Bristor, Passaic Daily Herald; vice-president, John E. Clarey, Madison Eagle; secretary, John W. Clift, Summit Herald; treasurer, W. B. R. Mason, Bound Brook Chronicle; executive committee, William B. Bryant, Paterson Press-Guardian; Edmund H. Carpenter, Woodbury Democrat; Eugene W. Farrell, Newark Evening News; R. E. Lent, Passaic Evening News; J. W. Naylor, Allentown Messenger; and F. A. Robertson, Washington Star.

Friday evening group conferences were held, one for dailies conducted by William B. Bryant of Paterson, and one for weeklies conducted by President John W. Naylor of Allentown. Round table discussions were the plan at the evening session.

Friday morning the annual meeting of the association was held, with over 140 members of the association and their families present. Secretary John W. Clift reported a net gain in membership during the year of 24, making the association's roster 185, the largest in its history. An interesting paper on advertising rates and business methods on a weekly newspaper was read by F. A. Robertson of the Washington Star, an outstanding weekly paper of the state.

Cost systems and income tax accounting were discussed by Edmund A. Walker, and following a conference of weekly papers, a co-operative plan was adopted which will give the weeklies the benefit of a standard cost and income tax system to be introduced and supervised by Mr. Walker in the offices of co-operating papers. These papers, on a standard basis, will be able to compare costs with papers of similar circulations and conditions, as is now done by the large dailies of the state.

Other matters discussed were the building for newspapers at the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial in 1926, a national co-operative country press association for the solicitation of national advertising and the Kelly postal rate bill now before Congress.

Sunday evening the annual religious service of the association was held with Rev. Dr. John Handley of Ocean City, chaplain, delivering the sermon, and special music by the three representatives of the Mergenthaler Linotype Company who were present—Messrs. Gruman, Parks and Manifold.

Hon. Arthur N. Pierson of Westfield, dean of the New Jersey Assembly, addressed the annual banquet of the association Saturday evening on the $40,000,000 road bond issue to be voted on next November. The other speaker was Rev. William T. Boult of Bound Brook, whose subject was "The Press and the Men Who Make It."

MORE EFFICIENT RETAIL ADVERTISING PACIFIC COAST CLUB'S AIM

Better Business Bureaus and Store Managers' Sessions Centers on 19th Convention at San Diego—T. M. R. Keane of Spokane Next President

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SAN DIEGO, Cal., June 29.—Two outstanding features of the program of the 19th annual convention of the Pacific Coast Advertising Clubs Association held here this week have been the value of the better business bureaus to merchants and patrons alike and the necessity of making retail advertising an economically efficient service in the field of distribution.

The new president is Thomas M. R. Keane, advertising and sales manager of Culbertson's store, Spokane.

Other officers are: Regional vice-presidents, John Connell, Tacoma; Frank Beckman, Spokane; W. S. Kirkpatrick, Portland; Lon Cleveland, Modesto; and Bert Butterworth, Los Angeles. Secretary, Kenneth W. Hood, Tacoma.

The next convention goes to Spokane. Pacific Coast Association now includes 18 clubs with 3,115 members.

The convention opened with an inspirational meeting Sunday afternoon at the open-air Organ Pavilion, the main address being that of President Von Kleinsmid of the University of Southern California on "Dynamic Forces of the New Day." He declared the present-day multiplicity of organizations imbued with the spirit of co-operation must result in a better understanding among all classes and concentration of effort toward the good of all.

General sessions opened Monday morning at the Municipal Auditorium in Balboa Park, with about 400 present. President Morse of the San Diego Club extended welcome to the visitors. Rollin C. Ayres of San Francisco, president of the Coast Association, was in the chair.

Specially interesting was a talk by Franklin Bell, in charge of advertising for "Sun Maid" raisins, who told the story of the five-cent raisin package which had solved the problem confronting growers who had surplus stocks. A campaign was inaugurated to popularize raisin bread and cake, but this did not meet the necessities of the case and the idea of placing small packages of raisins on the market as a confection was conceived and carried out with wonderful success. Expense of advertising was small and yet saved growers from severe losses.

Co-operative marketing, making possible large expenditures for advertising as a means of solving the problem of disposal of increased products of factory and soil on the Pacific Coast was discussed by Don Francisco of Lord & Thomas, Los Angeles.

San Diego's plan of advertising the community's attractions to the world was a subject of much interest, as explained by O. W. Cotton and Carl H. Heilbron, active workers in the local organization. The follow-up letter system was explained by T. G. Armstrong, office manager.

Irvin Engler, publicity manager of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, detailed the publicity campaign incidental to the "Days of Forty-nine" celebration just held.

C. H. Woolley, vice-president of Sunset Magazine, spoke on "Sidelights of Community Advertising."

A paper on "Selling Communities to the Public," by Dwight W. Jennings, Los Angeles, was awarded a trophy offered by the Women's Advertising Club of that city for the best talk on this line. Carl H. Brockhagen, advertising manager of the Oakland Post-Enquirer, received a cup for the best three-minute talk on the value of the advertising club to the community.

Alexander F. Bowers, assistant advertising manager of the Los Angeles Times, urged hearty co-operation between newspaper advertising departments and better business bureaus as essential for best results in cleaning up the evil of misrepresentation on the part of some advertisers. He declared that most newspapers throughout the country now use extreme care regarding the character of advertising allowed in their columns.

A novel feature was presented by Elliott M. Epsteen of San Francisco, who demonstrated the jury system followed by his better business bureau in trying a merchant charged with false advertising and showing him the advantages of using only truthful publicity in the conduct of his business.

F. P. Tibbetts, better business bureau manager of the Portland Ad Club, explained the shopping service carried on by his bureau under which a number of paid operatives visit all lines of stores and make careful observation of services rendered and class of goods sold as compared with advertisements. The merchants who contribute to the expenses of the bureau are furnished copies of these confidential reports.

In the retail advertisers' section, with Lulu E. Eckels, advertising manager of Hamburger's, Los Angeles, as chairman, Kate Brew Vaughn, director of the household economics department of the Los Angeles Express, discussed women's sentimental interest in merchandising, bringing out the fact that the human side of marketing appeals to women buyers and that they are more apt to patronize stores where friendly sympathetic interest is shown in their problems.

W. H. Strong, advertising manager of Marston's, San Diego, urged study of the principles of psychology for advertisement writers and merchants, thus enabling them to place themselves in the mental attitude of buyers.

Plans were discussed for the formation of an Association of Pacific Coast Retail Advertisers to standardize methods and policy and economize in marketing standard articles through advertising.

In the convention parade the Hamilton Trophy went to Fresno for the best display characteristic of the communities competing.

Major William T. Morgan of the International Correspondence Schools in discussing the subject of making salespeople think in advertising terms, urged that store managers and advertising writers consult the sales force relative to the text of advertisements and accept constructive criticism.

Various better business bureaus told of work performed in squelching fraudulent promotion and stock advertising in their cities.

Exhibits by clubs and printers of the Coast are said to be the largest ever gathered for a convention of this kind, occupying approximately 20,000 square feet.

OPEN SHOP IN LANSING?

Both Papers Threaten Lockout July 1 Unless Printers Meet Terms

LANSING, Mich., June 28.—Composing rooms of both local daily newspapers, the State Journal and the Lansing Capital News, will become "open shops" after July 1 unless ultimatums of the publishers to the union men in their employ are withdrawn or their terms softened before that time. Preparations are now being made by the managements of both papers to put on non-union printers Saturday morning, when the proposed lock-out is scheduled to take effect.

The decision of the publishers came last week when, after the final date for the signing of the annual contract, June 21, the union refused to consider the terms offered. Charles N. Halsted, president of the State Journal Company, at that time posted a notice to the effect that no further negotiations would be attempted with the unions, and a similar statement was issued by Bert N. Garstin, president of the Lansing Capital News Company, to his printers. Both publishers immediately went to Chicago in search of non-union printers. They returned early this week with the word that they would be able to change their plants to an independent basis without trouble.

The rock on which publishers and unions split was a proposed lengthening of the working day from seven and a half hours, the present day basis, to eight hours. One proposal offered an eight-hour day and approximately a 15 per cent reduction in wages in definite contract form and the other offered an eight-hour day and a continuance of the present wage scale on a temporary basis without a specific contract. The union refused both offers and served notice that unless better terms were given them they would strike.

The union men affected by the lockout include the foremen of both papers' composing rooms, about 30 linotype operators, and over a score of make-up men, ad-men, proof-readers, etc. The pressmen and stereotypers will not be affected, it is thought.

GUS OEHM GOES TO BERLIN

Will Be Staff Correspondent of United Press

Gus Oehm, accompanied by Mrs. Oehm, sailed on the La Touraine for Havre recently to go to London and thence to Berlin to act as staff correspondent for the United Press.

Mr. Oehm began newspaper work in 1916 as political reporter to the St. Louis Republic. In 1917 he became managing editor of the Harrisburg (Ill.) Daily Register and was also graduated from the University of St. Louis with the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of journalism. Soon he joined the United Press Association's Chicago bureau staff and has been with the U. P. in New York for nearly 5 years with the exception of a year and a half spent in the army, during which he went overseas.

TRADE NEWS BY RADIO

Dept. of Commerce Will Broadcast to Boston and Baltimore Meetings

Tests of the feasibility of sending foreign trade news by radiophone will be made by the Department of Commerce, July 11 and 12, and the practice will be made permanent if the tests are successful.

On those dates two gatherings of business men will be held at Boston and Baltimore; the exposition of the New England Shoe and Leather Association at Boston and import and export exposition at Baltimore. Arrangements have been made by the Commerce Department with the Navy for use of the Arlington radio station to send to the meetings the latest cabled news of foreign markets and trade opportunties received by the bureau of foreign commerce by the Department. The time of broadcasting the news will be 8 P. M. Eastern Standard time on the two days; the station Arlington (NAA) and the wave length 2,650 meters.

Engineers a Bike Day

Under the auspices of the Chicago Evening American July 1 will be "Bike Day" in Chicago. The newspaper has published several articles urging men, women and boys to "get out their old bicycles and get in the contest." Prizes are to be given by a number of bicycle concerns and the Chicago Evening American is to present the winner with a silver cup. The rewards will be decided on meritorious riding and decorated bicycles. Fred St. Onge, famous bike rider, will set the pace for the others.

MAIL RATE CUT OFF FOR SIX MONTHS

House Committee Defers Action on Kelly Bill to Give Joint Postal Board Chance to Report Before December 1

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.—Action on the Kelly amendment to the revenue act, providing for repeal of the last two increases in second class postal rates has been postponed for six months by the House Committee on Postoffices and Postroads. Decision to forego consideration of the proposal, which is sponsored by the American Publishers Conference and the publishing industry in general was reached at a meeting of the committee Tuesday.

The main objection to consideration of the measure at this time by the committee was the excuse that it would be unjust to the Joint Postal Commission composed of five members of the House and five members of the Senate, to consider any part of the postal rate question before the commission made its report. The House Committee, however, approved a resolution offered by Mr. Kelly author of the rate reduction amendment calling for a report of the Joint Commission by December 1 next, which makes it obligatory upon the Commission to speed up weighings of various classes of mails. Five members of the House Postal Committee are members of the Joint Commission and the decision of the committee to delay action was due to the influence of those members.

The Joint Commission has on hand an appropriation of $125,000 with which to conduct its inquiries into the postal rate situation and, it is understood, House and Senate leaders have served notice on the members that it will be the last appropriation granted for the purpose of making the investigation, as the commission already has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars without apparent results. The six months allowed the commission to make the investigation is considered by the publishers as ample time to make a thorough inquiry into second class rates and convince Congressmen of the contentions of the publishers that existing levies are wholly discriminatory. The publishers told the House committeemen that reports thus far filed by the commission were "very indefinite," and unless special instructions were given the commission doubtless would take a year or two to complete the report.

There was a distinct impression that both Republican and Democratic leaders in Congress are fearful of having the postal rate question injected as a campaign issue, particularly as there is a tendency on the part of hitherto partisan newspapers to get away from supporting any parties.

The postponement of the proposed legislative relief is a distinct disappointment to the entire publishing industry according to A. C. Pearson, national chairman of the American Publishers Conference. Mr. Pearson announced the conference will continue its headquarters in Washington and keep up the fight until there is an equitable readjustment of the postal charges on second-class matter.

Writing Special Song

Ted Snyder, song composer, came to Chicago recently and immediately started work to compose a special Chicago Evening American soldiers' bonus song which will be completed in time to be sung on Saturday. The newspaper announces it is nearing achievement of its aim of securing 1,000 000 signatures on the bonus petitions by June 15.

Paper Entertains Newsies

A hundred carriers and newsboys of the Ogden (Utah) Standard-Examiner spent a day last week at Lagoon, a summer resort, the guests of the newspaper. Charles J. La Fleur, district circulation manager, had them in charge.

EDITORS WANT PRINTING COURSE AT PENNSLYVANIA STATE COLLEGE

Seek This as Relief for Shortage of Compositors at Joint Convention Held in Harrisburg—J. G. Zook President of Editorial Association, and J. B. Spatz Heads Weeklies

Condemnation of the cold-blooded murder of non-union workers in the Illinois coal fields was embodied in a resolution passed at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association and the Association of Pennsylvania Weekly Newspapers during their joint session at Harrisburg, June 19 and 20. The resolution furthermore called upon national and state authorities to mete out the full punishment of the law and to exterminate the Russian type of workers whose rioting has made a battleground of the mid-western state.

Other resolutions support the Sesquicentennial Celebration planned for 1925 at Philadelphia, the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie canal and other waterway projects, the legislation in Pennsylvania affecting newspaper publishers, and sympathy for Alexander P. Moore, Pittsburgh publisher and husband of the late Lillian Russell Moore.

The joint session passed a resolution urging the inclusion of a course in practical printing at Pennsylvania State College as a means of helping relieve the serious shortage of hand type setters and linotype operators. This proposition was made to the trustees of the college last Fall by the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Editorial Association and at that time the trustees felt that such a course of study could not be offered by the college because of its limited facilities and meagre support.

John G. Zook, of the Lititz Express, was elected president of the association for the ensuing year; H. L. Johnston, Altoona Mirror, 1st vice-president; H. V. Page, Philadelphia Legal Intelligencer, 2nd vice-president; J. F. Biddle, Huntingdon Daily News, 3rd vice-president; M. S. Schock, Selinsgrove Times, secretary-treasurer; D. M. Cresswell, State College, assistant secretary-treasurer. Executive committee: J. H. Zerbey, Pottsville Republican; C. N. Andrews, Easton Free Press; W. L. Taylor, York Dispatch; Paul Eyerly, Bloomsburg Press; J. S. Knepper, Carnegie Signal-Item; George J. Campbell, Pittsburgh Law Journal; Lea Lasher, Lebanon.

Strong addresses were delivered by Courtland Smith, of New York, right-hand man to Will H. Hays in his motion picture dictatorship, who spoke of the remarkable inventions which he predicted would revolutionize newspaper composition through use of the radio; Jarvis A. Wood, of N. W. Ayer & Son, who urged the importance of building up an advertising campaign for success in business, and President Thomas, of the State College.

At the banquet a message of encouragement and good wishes was read from President Harding, and from Arthur Brisbane. A radio program was arranged later through J. H. Zerbey, of Pottsville.

The entire session of June 23, Friday, was given over to an exchange of views and it was admitted by the publishers that there has never been a more successful convention from this standpoint in that a round-table discussion offered very opportunity for a practical exchange among the publishers.

Mrs. Julia Hazard, of the Swarthmore News, and Estelle Thomas Steele, of the Mechanicsburg Journal, presented the woman journalists' ideas of their service to the profession.

Messages of condolence were sent the relative of Harry Slep, one of the oldest newspaper men in the country, who died several weeks ago at his Altoona home.

Weekly Association Meeting

Meeting in separate convention the second day, June 20, after holding the first day's session with the Pennsylvania Editorial Association, the Pennsylvania Weeklies elected officers and listened to several short addresses by their members.

John B. Spatz, of the Boyertown Democrat, was elected president of the association; John B. Knepper, Carnegie Signal-Item, vice-president; Howard Reynolds, Quarryville Sun, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee: Charles Meredith, Quakertown Free Press; Charles M. Coles, Lykens Standard; D. S. Fry, Newport News; Walter L. Sanborn, Lansdale Reporter; G. Ross Eshleman, Lancaster Law Review.

At the opening session of the convention held Friday morning, the association heard addresses by C. N. Andrews, of the Easton Free Press, president of the State Editorial Association; C. M. Coles, Lykens Standard, president of the Weekly Association; W. L. Taylor, York Dispatch, president of the Associated Dailies of Pennsylvania, and others. One of the keenest of the talks was that of H. W. Page, of the Philadelphia Legal Intelligencer, who spoke on "Newspaper Laws," and interpreted the manner in which the courts look at various phases of the law as it is applied to the profession.

THE COUNTRY EDITOR—

I hesitate to estimate his service to the preservation of national sanity and good temper. It thrills me every time I reflect on these several generations of splendid men who, with a bit of humor tucked away in their souls and a deathless devotion to something they loved, cherished their ideals in secret and drew on them to refresh their faith in a lifetime of quiet service to their communities.—Cyril Arthur Player.

Paul P. Aller, executive secretary of the Central Pennsylvania Typothetæ, spoke to the weeklies in their separate session, as did C. M. Bomberger, of the Jeanette News Dispatch, who spoke on "Making 'em Buy!"

E. J. Stackpole, of the Harrisburg Telegraph, former president of the Associated Dailies of Pennsylvania when they were first organized, spoke on the need of a realization among young newspapermen of their responsibility to the community and the influence of their papers on the community in which they live.

John B. Spotz, Boyertown Democrat, spoke on the future of the country weekly newspaper and declared his belief that the country weekly is only just coming into its own and that the next decade will see it even more firmly entrenched.

Newspaper publishers attending the convention at Harrisburg were:

Altoona Mirror, Harry P. Johnston; Allentown Call, C. J. Smith; Berwick Enterprise, R. E. Eyerly; Bloomsburg Morning Press, P. R. Eyerly; Bloomsburg Morning Press, C. T. M. Vanderslice; Belleville Times, C. E. Allison; Brookville American, Dan T. Balmer, Paul Steele and George Mehrter; Boyertown Democrat, Charles B. Spatz; Brookville Republican, Karl R. Bierly; Carnegie Signal Item, John B. Knepper; Duncannon Record, R. M. Barton; Easton Free Press, C. N. Andrews; Easton Express, J. F. Stakhouse; Ephrata Review, Arthur M. Yeager; Herndon News, Harry E. Zeigler; Huntingdon Daily News, Joseph F. Biddle; Harrisburg Telegraph, E. J. Stackpole; Hanover Record-Herold, M. W. Naill; Jeannette News Dispatch, C. M. Bomberger; Lock Haven Times, Lea R. I. Lesher; Lititz Express, John G. Zook; Lebanon Daily News, A. B. Schropp and John Schropp; Lykens Standard, Charles M. Coles; Lansdale Reporter, Walter L. Sanborn; Lock Haven Express, Frank D. O'Reilly; Lancaster Examiner-New Era, J. R. Gilbert; Lewistown Gazette, Lewis D. Beall; Mifflingburg Telegraph, C. A. Kness; Meyerdale Republican, W. L. Livingood; Mechanicsburg Journal, E. L. Steel; Juniata Tribune, J. C. Mitchell; Newport News, George R. Fry; New Cumberland Call, Raymond W. Roth; Norristown Times, Joseph J. McGinley; Pottsville Republican, J. H. Zerbey and J. H. Zerbey, Jr.; Pottstown News, W. L. Binder; Philadelphia Evening Ledger, George Nox McCain; Daily Law Bulletin, Pittsburgh, George J. Campbell; Quakertown Free Press, Charles M. Meredith; Ridgway Record, Charles B. McCabe, H. A. Thompson and John B. Hamilton; Quarryville Sun, Howard Reynolds; Selinsgrove Times, M. S. Schock; Shippensburg News, J. C. Fleming; Shippensburg Chronicle, Charles L. Rummel; Swarthmore News, Mrs. Julia R. Hazard; York Dispatch, W. L. Taylor; Connoquenessing Valley News, John E. Kocher; Lancaster Law Review, George Ross Eshleman.

Agencies and Business Representatives Atlantic and Pacific Photos, Inc., Charles L. Mathieu and S. H. Wharton; Mergenthaler Linotype Company, Philadelphia, Charles C. Boyer; Mergenthaler Linotype Company, New York, Charles P. Gurnett; Gose Printing Press Company, Harvey D. Bell; The Fourth Estate, E. P. O'Donnell.

WITH HARDING TO MARION

Three Cars Take White House Men to Home-Coming Fete

Eleven newspaper men, eight of whom followed President Harding during the 1920 campaign, accompanied the President when he left Washington Saturday to motor to Marion for the home-coming celebration which awaits him there next week.

The reporters traveled in three automobiles and will stop with the Presidential party at Gettysburg, Pa., over Sunday to witness the Fourth Brigade of Marines rehearse the third day's operations of the Battle of Gettysburg. The newspapermen accompanying the President are: Herbert W. Walker, United Press; George R. Holmes, International News Service; Clinton Coffin, Associated Press; Harry N. Price, Washington Post; Robert Ginter, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times; Samuel W. Bell, Philadelphia Public Ledger; Samuel T. Williamson, New York Times; Ralph Collins, New York Herald; Glenn I. Tucker, New York World; Wallace B. MacNamee, Universal Service and Boyden Sparkes, New York Tribune.

NOW INDIANAPOLIS TIMES

New Managing Editor and Business Manager Announced

The name of the Indiana Daily Times, which was recently purchased for the Scripps-MacRae Newspaper Enterprises by Roy Howard, was changed to the Indianapolis Times June 26, and the typographical appearance was made to conform to that of the Cleveland Press.

Mr. Howard, chairman of the board of the Scripps-McRae interests, the same day that these changes were made announced that Blaine McGraf, formerly make-up editor of the Times, has succeeded Harold Fightner as managing editor. Oscar C. Johnson, business manager of the Covington (Ky.) Post, Kentucky edition of the Cincinnati Post, was also appointed business manager of the Times, taking up his new duties that day. No announcement was made as to Mr. Fightner's future connection. No other changes in the editorial, advertising or circulation departments were announced.

Two Birthdays in Brooklyn

The joint anniversary of the births of Herbert F. Gunnison, vice-president and publisher of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, and of Arthur M. Howe, editor of the Eagle, was observed by an informal gathering of the staff Wednesday afternoon. Every department was represented. Edwin G. Martin, business manager, speaking for the staff, presented Mr. Gunnison with some additions to his library. Harris M. Crist, managing editor, presided. Mr. Howe, who was on his vacation, was presented with a sportsman's wrist watch by Hamilton Ormsbee, dean of the editorial staff. The gift was entrusted to Mrs. Howe until her husband's return from Canada, and on behalf of the Eagle employees, flowers were presented to Mrs. Howe by Cleveland Rodgers, associate editor.

SELECT LIST DAILIES MEET IN CLEVELAND

Greig of Plain Dealer Tells Ohio Daily Men Their Merchandise Is Circulation, Classified Advertising, and Display Advertising

"A newspaper, like the department store, has merchandise to sell and must advertise it to find a market." This was the slogan of an address delivered June 27 by Carlise N. Greig, publicity manager of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, in addressing members of the Ohio Select League of Newspapers, at the Hollenden Hotel, Cleveland.

"Use your own columns," said Mr. Greig. "You have three classes of merchandise to dispose of—circulation, classified advertising and display advertising. To obtain results you must advertise these. The small town papers must follow the example of the city big city dailies, if they expect to succeed."

Mr. Greig's paper was "The Value of the Small Town Paper as Supplementary to the Big City Paper in National Advertising Campaigns." In it he pointed out that the big city papers are always willing to extend a helping hand to their country neighbors.

Fred Bush, publisher of the Athens (Ohio) Messenger, was among the speakers, and A. H. Madigan, of the N. W. Gates Company, Cleveland, was toastmaster during a luncheon to the visiting publishers.

The League is composed of 50 Ohio newspapers exclusive of those in the large cities, and represent a circulation approximately of 3,000,000. E. C. Jewett, manager of the New York League's office, and James Ward, in charge of the Chicago branch, reported advertising prospects brighter than they have been for several years.

The meeting was held in Cleveland that the publishers might get into close touch with the owners and publishers of the big city dailies and representatives of advertising agencies. Representatives of about all the big agencies covered by the selected list attended the luncheon, as did managers of the advertising departments of the big Cleveland retail stores. Representatives of industrial firms also were present and Cleveland newspapers were well represented.

The next bi-monthly conference will be held in Columbus, August 14.

McPARLAND'S MARGIN 4,534

Official I. T. U. Tabulation Gives Him 28,752 Ballots for President

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—John McParland of New York was re-elected president of the International Typographical Union by a majority of 4,533 over Walter W. Barrett of Chicago, his only opponent, the official vote tabulation announced here Tuesday showed. McParland received 28,752 votes to his opponent's 24,219.

Other officers elected were: Charles P. Howard, Detroit, first vice-president; William R. Trotter, Vancouver, B. C., second vice-president, and John W. Hays, Minneapolis, secretary-treasurer.

Thomas McCaffery, Colorado Springs; Seth R. Brown, Los Angeles, and Malcolm A. Knock, Boston, were chosen trustees for the Union Printers Home, and Joe M. Johnson, of Washington, D. C., was re-elected agent for the home.

George W. Howard of Winnipeg, Man., was elected delegate to the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada. David W. Baird of New York was re-elected to the board of auditors. Frank Morrison, Chicago; Max S. Hayes, Cleveland; A. A. Cough, Des Moines; William Young, Philadelphia, and T. A. McCullough, Omaha, were elected delegates to the American Federation of Labor.

Universal Opens Irish Bureau

The Universal Service recently opened a bureau in Dublin, Ireland.

HIGHAM CALLS FOR ESPRIT DE CORPS AMONG ADVERTISING MEN

In Talk Before Newspaper Executives at Milwaukee, He Also Took a Fling at Condescension Toward Business Office Which He Charges Characterizes Editorial Officers

JUNE was a busy month for Sir Charles F. Higham, M. P., for, in addition to getting the O. K. of the A. A. C. W. convention at Milwaukee on the invitation he presented on behalf of London in 1924, he has addressed no less than 33 gatherings of newspaper and advertising men and women since May 31, when he commenced operations. Every address was in keeping with the reputation that the advertising knight has made, but his hearers, some of whom have been present for every speech, agree that his best and most typical effort was the extempore address to the National Association of Newspaper Executives at Milwaukee. His talk last week to the motion picture men also receives special mention.

Sir Charles was all set for an afternoon in the country when he was informed that the newspaper executives expected to hear his views on "Tact and Tactics." His convention work had already included three sermons, the week's program loomed ahead, but he needed little persuasion from his American associate, William H. Rankin, when he learned that the unscheduled "date" was with newspaper men.

Editorial men will find more tactics than tact in some of Sir Charles's remarks on the relations between upstairs and down in newspaper offices, but his main point was a plea for closer cooperation and less jealousy among all advertising men. His address, which follows, started according to the keynote:

"I am known in England as a newspaper advertising agent. I use magazines very little The magazines in England are not like your magazines here—they are very much in the secondary field. But when I started in England some fifteen years ago, the bulk of big advertising was done on the billboards and what we call plates, on railway stations and in prominent positions throughout England. They are metal slides and today there is still considerable money spent in that form of advertising.

"I came to the conclusion from my American experience that the newspaper was the most economical way of selling goods if you used it properly, that is, if you didn't merely buy space through an agent and think to do him out of as much of his commission as you could and use as little brains as possible in this white space which you had purchased.

"The principal reason why I advocated the use of newspapers to advertise goods, whether retail or national commodities, in preference to any other form of medium, was because I felt that a man pays for his newspaper, he has bought it and when he has bought it he wants to get something out of it. Then when he reads the advertising, he reads it in a medium that for that moment at least belongs to him. I felt, as he had bought the newspaper and had live news to read, that you could put live advertising next to it and that you would get results.

"In Great Britain, advertising in newspapers is getting less expensive every day in results, while it is getting higher in price. The London Daily Mail charges seven guineas, or roughly $35, an inch. We don't buy space by the line in England. We buy it by the inch or column or section of a column. For that money you get 1,600,000 circulation guaranteed net paid. The English newspaper carries an enormous amount of advertising. The Daily Mail charges $4,400 a page for the front page to reach 1,600,000 people and you can't get a front page in that paper until next December.

"The reason the front page of the Daily Mail pays so well in England is that it is the Saturday Evening Post of Great Britain. It is used largely to educate the shopkeepers of England to believe that if you take a certain amount of space in newspapers, goods must move off the shelves.

"Therefore you can take a commodity in England today and set your advertising appropriation based on the area the size of New York State and a population of 50,000,000 people. You can spend on it that amount of money which you would take out of a national appropriation in the United States for New York's quota and you can reach all the people of England.

"For $100,000 you can do everything that is possible in advertising in Great Britain through the newspapers, and you can stock the dealer with enough goods before the advertising begins, to justify the expenditure before you start spending the money. In no other form of advertising in Great Britain can you do that thing.

"The modern newspaper to me is the greatest influence in the world. After we are 21 years of age, or out of the colleges and universities and schools, there is little or no education. We are living in a very rapid world. We have little time to read. We do now in a day what our ancestors took a month's time or two months to do. We have little time to gain knowledge. All the information that we get, all the news and all the views that are worth reading are in the newspapers of your country and mine.

"What I am anxious to see is that day when neither in editorial nor in advertising columns will there be anything that is unworthy and that makes a man a little ashamed to be a newspaper man, whether in the business department or the editorial department, or the advertising manager of a newspaper, or an advertising agent.

"How are we going to do it? By tact and tactics. What is tact? Tact is dealing with a situation in such a way that you will get your point over without giving offense, that you will be able to change the methods or manner of your publications without hurting public feeling or the advertisers.

"Tactics—that is your job. I am not here to tell American newspaper men or any other men or women in this country any way at all they ought to run their businesses. I have quite enough troubles at home and so have all of us. It ill becomes any American to come to our country and tell us how to run it, and it ill becomes our men and women, particularly women interested in politics, to come to your country and lecture you.

"You represent the public opinion of the United States through the business offices of your newspapers; advertising does more to educate the people of your country and mine than all the editorials and all the views that were ever written in any newspaper. When we take an American magazine in England, we wonder when the day is coming when papers like the Saturday Evening Post will equal in their editorial columns the remarkable skill and art work of their advertising pages. We feel that your advertising is going so far ahead of your editorial end that it is absolutely necessary, or will be, to take the brains of advertising and put them in the editorial chair.

"We in our country, as possibly you in yours, are sometimes astonished at the attitude of editors when they look upon the business office and advertising department and the advertiser with a certain amount of what we call swank. They say 'We are the holy of holies, this door is our door; we want no business stories in here, we are preaching news and views, but not of advertising.'

"Advertising is unworthy of entering the great brain of the editor who gets a salary three times that of the advertising manager. He with his skill in your country and mine hasn't found out yet that the reason he gets that splendid salary from the publisher or proprietor of the newspaper is due to one thing, and one thing only—advertising, nothing more.

"He has got to realize, speaking as one who never believed that today advertising is so bad or advertising skill so inefficient, that it needs a pat to make it pay; he has got to realize that when he gets a piece of news in his office, he will have to forget that it is about a trade-marked commodity and treat it on its merits as news. We have yet to get in our newspaper offices of Great Britain an entry at all into the editorial room. These men very often don't come to luncheons or dinners where advertising men are. It makes us smile, because we know if we stopped our activities, or you stopped yours, all the editors would be applying for a job to write down the notes of advertising men using some other media. They would get no salaries, have no position, no prestige. Why, then, should we be treated in this way? How can you get respect, not that you necessarily want it, because you know that this man hasn't grown big enough in the editorial office to appreciate the great genius of the advertising office? In the meantime, what are you going to do with your own profession?

"This is my message: you newspaper men and magazine men, having heard an Englishman say the newspaper is the dominant medium, must not, if you adopt that thought, or if that is already your thought, as I believe it is, drag down or find fault with that advertiser who used another medium. First of all I say this: let us, whatever we do, get advertising. Let us continue to create advertising, no matter where it goes, so long as it isn't being debased. Let us not do it in the form of criticism, but constructively show the advertiser where he is wrong, not by running down the medium which he is using, but by offering him in simple, clear statements of facts, with tact and tactics, the medium he ought to use.

"If you find a man using the magazines and you are on a newspaper, don't say: 'Why do you continue to use those thirteen pages in the Saturday Evening Post, when you know it is no earthly good to you?' when you know that your great journal could do this, that and the other, because if you criticize the man spending money in the Saturday Evening Post, you criticize the man spending money in advertising. Every time you criticize the action of an advertiser without giving him a constructive reason for changing his program and leaving out any envy toward the medium which he is using, you are hurting the calling to which you belong.

"I know I am preaching to the converted. I know there isn't a man in the room who ever finds fault with his neighbor. I know there isn't a newspaper man sitting here, that ever, if he is on the Chicago Tribune, criticizes an advertisement in the Daily News. I know that if the Milwaukee Journal man is here today and an advertiser goes into another paper in Milwaukee, he always thanks the advertiser for spending his money there. I know that is your attitude; therefore, I hope I am forgiven if I try to find one person who is erring and going at the wrong party. I do feel this and I practice what I preach. If an advertising agent in England gets a new advertisement account, I am glad. Why? Because I have created more advertising. If all of the advertising agents in America could stand together to create more advertising, all of them would make more profits, because every time you attack you weaken.

"If every newspaper representative in the United States and in my country preached newspaper advertising rather than the advertising in his own paper particularly, you would have more newspaper advertising. What you need in my country and in yours is closer cooperation, closer good-will, less envy and jealousy, less advertising agents pointing at one another and saying: 'I know why Bill Jones does that, and I know why Tom Brown does this; he does it to help his pocket.'

"I heard men say this morning in the convention, although they didn't know I heard it, that one of the reasons they didn't like Mackintosh was that his office helps build up the business with which he is connected. Thank God, it does. If Mackintosh being president builds that business 500 blocks long and 500 blocks wide, thank God it is so. Don't condemn a man because he benefits himself in his business playing his game for advertising, provided all the time he lives up to the business he is engaged in, is honorable toward it, makes it a better business by his atmosphere toward it by the words he says. Don't ever say that again, please.

"I say it to my fellows in Great Britain—don't find fault with a man who helps to build something through the prestige you give him. You can't find an advertiser in America whose business won't be benefited by his being president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. It is a fine position, it puts him at the top of his great fraternity, it is bound to make him bigger and richer. Thank goodness you can choose men to do that thing. Have pride in your calling, stop all this nonsense and drivel about this and that and the other, picking to pieces, and finding fault.

"Today I hold in my hand a letter addressed to your president from W. S. Crawford, who is my keenest rival, whose business today in England is growing faster than mine; in that letter he says: 'I ask you to let Charley Higham take my place at your convention, because he is the best advertising man in Europe.' That is from my rival. I say the same thing of Bill Crawford and today in England we have got it to this, that advertising agents have gotten together, and even if we don't like each other personally, we fight the cause of advertising agents against direct buying. We insist newspapers shall not sell their space except through us. We have a pledge we are all living up to, or trying to. We love our business. We are not yet ready to have a halo put on our heads, and I am the last man in the world to claim mine. It would ill become me, thinking the thoughts I think, if when I get a chance to talk to you, I don't plead a little as I am pleading now, when I ask you chaps to see to it that all this little criticism of men in their aggrandizement, their pushing upward, is ended.

"You can help a fellow to get on by putting a friendly hand on his shoulder and saying 'Yes, I am pleased, glad to find you with the Milwaukee Journal. You gave me a hard fight when I was in Minneapolis and Washington, but I am glad one of my kind has been promoted. I will help you. I will speak well of you.'

"If you do that with tact and tactics, you won't ever be ashamed to be the business representative of American journalism, and you may find that odd funny-thinking man who lives behind a door that says 'Editorial' will be more than glad in the future to shake you by the hand."

E. HEZ SWEM, PASTOR, KNOWS AD VALUE OF HIS UNUSUAL NAME

REV. E. HEZ SWEM, of the Centennial Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., believes in advertising. His name alone is sufficiently arresting and he is well aware of this fact and never uses his initials in any other combination. In the Sunday notices published in all the daily papers locally, E. Hez Swem smites the eye and traps the most sophisticated into a second glance. "Must be a typographical error," decides the stranger, meeting the catchy monnicker for the first time. But as it appears unchanged, Sunday after Sunday, from sheer curiosity he finally decides to go and investigate the personality behind the seeming pun. That E. Hez Swem should be a Baptist minister seems like stretching the long arm of co-incidence hopelessly out of joint. There are many strangers within his gates in consequence.

But timeliness of topic is another bait successfully used by Pastor Swem. The very week that Bryan addressed the fundamentalists of the Baptist Church in convention at Indianapolis, Mr. Swem carried an ad, all through the week, under the Special Notices of the Classified ads as follows:

> Those who like Baptist doctrines can hear them from Pastor E. Hez Swem. Subject Sunday morning June 18: "Why Baptists Are Called Baptists." Cool house; free chairs. Centennial Bapt. Ch. 7th & Eye n.e.

He stipulated that if possible the ad should appear on the same page where any follow-up story of the convention might appear. As a result the church notice was carried on the same page that carried the story of the convention headed "Baptists Stirred by Bryan Speech."

BOK SPRINGS ANOTHER IDEA

Former Editor Proposes Great Victory Hall for Philadelphia

The idea of a Victory Hall for Philadelphia, containing a convention hall with a seating capacity of 6,000, an opera house for 3,500 people, a municipal theatre to accommodate about 2,000, and an auditorium to hold about 1,000 people was laid before the County Commissioners by Edward W. Bok. The cost of the building not to exceed $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 and to be completed by January 1, 1926.

"I have been in the show business two years," said Mr. Bok, in an explanation of the idea of the structure to the County Commissioners. "Philadelphia needs an auditorium seating 1,000, for conventions. There is a second need for an auditorium for 2,000. That would be the municipal theatre.

"Then comes a hall for large concerts and operas, seating 3,500. Next there must be a convention hall of 6,000 capacity. If such is built, a citizen I know will contribute the finest organ than can be made for it.

"The whole building, if properly planned, can be made self-sustaining and will not be a constant drain on the public purse."

Manchester Union Has Sunday Edition

The Manchester (N. H.) Sunday Union made its initial appearance June 18, consisting of 60 pages, including a rotogravure section and colored comic supplement. The selling price is seven cents. The style of makeup is different from that previously used by the Union and new type is used.

"Herb" Roth Married

Herbert Roth, cartoonist for the New York World, and Miss Mildred Resmeyer were married July 1 and left for a six weeks' trip to California. Mr. Roth was formerly on the editorial staff of the San Francisco Bulletin.

CONCRETE TALKS AT GENERAL SESSIONS A. A. C. W. CONVENTION NEED

Advertising Men Won't Travel Long Distances to Hear Speeches Like Those at Weekly Meetings—Outlook of Association is Broadening, Educational Platform Evidences

By BERTRAND L. CHAPMAN
New York World

THOSE who planned the 18th Annual Convention of the A. A. C. of W. evidently had it in mind that most of us are working closer to our jobs this year than for some time past.

There were but two general meetings devoted to inspirational and general talks—fewer than heretofore. Even these were not well attended.

B. L. CHAPMAN

On the other hand, the departments were, practically all of them, huge successes. The newspaper men had sessions covering agency relations, merchandising, local advertising and classified advertising, all of which drew good houses.

The sessions of the direct mail men, of the local advertisers, of the advertising agencies and business papers were also as full of meat as usual.

The demand is clearly for conventions that are a combination of direct, concrete helpfulness and diversion. I prophesy that the conventions at Atlantic City and in London will both be well attended if good departmental programs are announced well in advance of convention time.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the general sessions can be more carefully planned, that the speakers must be more compelling and their subjects of more concrete interest, to insure representative audiences. Otherwise only delegates or those who feel impelled by duty can be counted upon to attend. Advertising men do not travel long distances to hear the same type of general talks that are delivered every week at their home advertising club luncheons.

The Milwaukee Convention in all its sessions emphasized the fact that we are living, in the United States as in all the world, in an atmosphere of "change"—that advertising is no more free from this than any other part of the business, social or political structure.

This was reflected in the suggestion of the chairman of one of the most important groups, that the name of the association might reasonably be broadened by substituting the word Marketing for Advertising. In other words, it seems every day to become more evident to everyone that advertising is not in, of and by itself, a distinct science or art, but A PART—the most important component, if you will—OF SELLING.

The platform "for better business," adopted by the Educational Conference, J. A. Hall, Director, presiding, is indicative of the broadening outlook of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World Conventions. It follows:

Our belief in the Truth-in-Advertising movement, backed by honesty in every department of marketing, grows stronger daily.

Having an abiding faith in the principles of our forefathers and in the soundness of our great resources, we assert our faith also in the future great prosperity of the home-loving people of all nations.

In the name of Better Business, we pledge ourselves to foster a spirit of confidence and cheerfulness.

In the name of Better Business, we promise a deeper courtesy, a greater willingness to serve.

We believe that home-building is the cornerstone of prosperity. We must, therefore, stand shoulder to shoulder in the development of the community spirit. We must realize that we most truly help ourselves when we help our neighbors.

Let us compete in service. This is the truest co-operation. Let us but emulate, not envy. Let us build up, not tear down. Let us take pride in our calling. Let us be boosters.

We are convinced that simple sincerity in approaching the public and scrupulous honesty in all dealings with the middleman will make business better tomorrow.

Therefore, all of these forces here represented unite in urging their associates and the business world generally to pledge themselves to further concentrate their efforts on truth in advertising and all branches of marketing, courtesy, cheerfulness, service, co-operation, mutual aid, elimination of petty jealousies and knocking, and to do all within their power for a Better Understanding of Better Advertising, Backed up by Better Selling and Marketing in general, for Better Business.

COLLEGE CHAMPIONSHIP OFFER REPEATED

Birmingham News Will Again Reward 5 With $500 a Year to Get High Education Within the State of Alabama

The Birmingham News is meeting with an instant response to its second offer of five free scholarships to the leading colleges of Alabama. Instituted last year, the scholarship plan of the News is proving one of its most successful ventures in its general educational program.

At present there are four young men and a girl in the colleges of the state under the patronage of the News and the applications for the scholarship this year so far total 40, though the applicants have until July 15 to file their papers.

This plan provides for a course of not more than 4 years at either the University of Alabama, the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, the Alabama Technical College, Howard College, or Birmingham Southern College.

Each winner of a scholarship is allowed $500 a year.

When the scholarship plan was instituted last year there were 400 applications. The rules require that the scholarships are open to graduates of accredited Alabama high schools. Applications must give the school record, state the college preferred and must be accompanied by letters from the principal of the high school, the city or the county superintendent of schools and two private citizens, one of whom must not be teacher. The letters have to vouch for the mental qualifications of the applicant, his or her ability to profit by a college education, deportment and character qualifications and finally a full inability to pay for a college course.

These letters are handled by the scholarship editor of the News, and forwarded to the various colleges. The method of awarding the scholarship is left up to the head of each educational institution. Last year faculty boards were appointed by their respective presidents to pass on the applications are received, and it worked successfully.

This year the applicant must choose one college. Last year an applicant was permitted to apply to as many of the institutions as he choose. This resulted in one instance of an application being given first choice by two colleges and second by a third. Complications arose and so the News has limited the applicants this year to a single college.

As an example of how the plan is working and what worthy material is obtained is shown in the case of George Saxon, who last year was the choice of the three colleges. He chose Howard College, the smallest of the three, and the end of his first year finds him president of his class, one of the three marshals and a successful athlete. He is now taking a special course in salesmanship for a few weeks and will spend the Summer selling books before returning to college in the Fall.

The comments the News has received from all over the state and the interest shown in the plan by leading educators encouraged the paper to offer the scholarships this year and it is considered likely that it will be continued annually hereafter.

EDITORS MEET AT MYRTLE BEACH

South Carolina Press Association Has 47th Annual Convention

The South Carolina Press Association held its 47th annual convention June 21, 22, and 23 at Myrtle Beach. The following officers were all re-elected: Hubert G. Osteen, the Sumter Item, president; J. Rion McKissick, the Greenville Piedmont, and O. K. Williams, the Rock Hill Record, vice-presidents; Harold C. Booker, Columbia, secretary; August Kohn, Columbia, treasurer, and Frank C. Withers, the Columbia State; B. H. Peace, the Greenville News; R. M. Hitt, Bamberg; A. B. Jordan, the Dillon Herald, and L. Wigfall Cheatham, the Edgefield Chronicle, executive committee.

The party left the train at Marion, where a reception and refreshments awaited them at the public library and from there went by automobiles to the beach. During the sessions of the meeting the following papers were read:

"The Place and Mission of the Country Newspaper," W. W. Ball, editor, the Columbia State.
"Is It Profitable to Have a Traveling Staff?" J. Edwin Brunson, managing editor, the Greenville News.
"Press Agent Publicity: What Should Newspapers Do About It?" Charles O. Hearon, editor, the Spartanburg Herald.
"Production at a Profit: Means and Methods," O. K. Williams, the Rock Hill Record.
"Labor Problems in a Printing Office," C. C. Muller, superintendent of job printing, The State Publishing Company.
"The State Press and Farm Extension Service," Dr. W. W. Long, director, extension work, Clemson College.
"A Business Organization and Co-operation in the Printing Trades," A. B. Jordan, the Dillon Herald.

SHOR NOW WITH KING FEATURES

Was Managing Editor of Boston American and Philadelphia Times

George G. Shor has joined the general management of King Features Syndicate. He is a graduate of Brown University, class of 1906, and his first newspaper experience was gained as a member of the staff of the Providence Journal. From 1910 to 1912 he acted as managing editor of the Boston American. Until the end of 1914 he was managing editor of the Philadelphia Times.

GEORGE G. SHOR

Directly after the declaration of war, on May 12, 1917, to be exact, Mr. Shor enlisted, and shortly afterwards was in France, where he served during the duration of the war as personnel adjutant of the First American Field Army from its organization until it was disbanded.

Paris Luncheons All Summer

The popularity of the weekly luncheons of the Anglo-American Press Association in Paris has caused the organization to decide to continue the luncheons during the summer, according to word reaching members of the Washington newspaper corps. American newspaper men visiting Paris are invited to the luncheons without waiting for invitations from the friends. At the affairs, which are held every Wednesday at 1 p. m. at the restaurant Vignon, Boulevard de la Madeleine, each man pays for his own luncheon.

FIGARO TELLS PARIS ABOUT AMERICA

Weekly Section in French Devoted to News of American People and Domestic and Foreign Affairs

By G. LANGELAAN,
Paris Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

PARIS, June 16.—The greater the number of diplomatic conferences, the more has it become apparent how little the countries whose representatives have taken part in them know of one another. To make the United States better known to the French public, and, therefore better understood, the Figaro, Paris daily newspaper, now devotes a section every Thursday to America and American activities.

This section is filled with contributions by Frenchmen who have traveled in the United States or have lived there a number of years. No better idea of the scope and diversity of this section can be given than by a summary of the "Figaro in the United States," which appeared in the issue of June 15.

Marquis Robert de Flers, literary editor of the Figaro, devotes a short article to Walter Berry, president of the American Chamber of Commerce in France, whose friendship for France is so well known and so highly appreciated by all Frenchmen. Then we find an article on the law voted by Congress for the consolidation of Allied debts, very ably explaining the American viewpoint. This is followed by an article on the Russian-American Industrial Corporation.

Next comes an article on American buyers in Germany and the numerous actions pending for the cancellation of contracts.

In lighter vein is a short article on the "jeune fille américaine." While the writer, a French lady, admires, she is yet afraid of the liberty the young American girl enjoys.

Short paragraphs follow on a possible visit of Sarah Bernhardt to the States, the transportation in America of fruit and vegetables by air, and the summary of a New York Times editorial on clumsy German propaganda in America.

In more serious mood is the report of a lecture by Prince Poniatowski on his return from a recent visit to the United States. "Office Buildings"—the title is in English—explains to the Frenchman the mysteries and wonders of the inside of a skyscraper. Articles on maritime competition, New York as an art center, and the American Library in Paris, complete the section.

What is interesting about this effort to make the United States better known to the Frenchman is that the mistake has not been made of getting Americans to explain their country. An American, of course, sees his country with American eyes, whereas the Frenchmen who contribute these excellent articles to the Figaro present all that is interesting as a Frenchman sees it.

In this American section there is no fulsome flattery, and controversial topics are not rigorously avoided. It represents a healthy attempt to make the United States better known to the Frenchman. Perhaps this interesting experiment may prompt some American newspaper to return the compliment and devote a weekly page to France and the French.

Crescent-News Broadcasts

The Defiance (Ohio) Crescent-News in co-operation with Karl A. Duerk is installing a radio broadcasting station, WCAQ and when the station is in operation the paper will provide daily programs. Mr. Duerk will conduct a radio column in the Crescent-News.

Drops Mid-Week Roto

The Boston Herald has discontinued its mid-week rotogravure section until the Fall. The Sunday roto section continues.

ADVERTISER MAKES MILLION DOLLAR DEMAND BY CONCENTRATION

One-Time Insignificant Proprietary Is Transformed Into Daily Tonic for Millions of Britishers by Advertising Policy Focussed on Net Sale Newspapers

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT

(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ONE of the outstanding successes of British advertising today is that of Kruschen Salts, a proprietary combining in its preparation six salines of tonic, aperient and diuretic properties. It dates back to about 1870 but for some thirty years possessed only a local reputation in and around Manchester, where it was originated by a druggist named Griffiths Hughes.

Its position to-day as probably the biggest thing among proprietary salines is due to the acumen of an advertising man who saw in it possibilities that permitted a universal appeal. It had previously been advertised for some years and had enjoyed some measure of success, but it did not bulk so largely in the public eye until a new idea and a new advertising policy were brought into operation. Both the new idea and the advertising policy are in the nature of a revelation in practice in the British field.

It should be stated that the directing mind behind Kruschen Salts to-day is Alfred Marland, whose previous work in advertising here has been in association with world-known proprietary brands and has always been characterized by a boldness and imagination that have contributed not a little to the advancement of advertising as we know it.

First, the idea. Kruschen Salts, in the ordinary way has an unpleasant flavor which the very nature of its ingredients makes it impossible to disguise. This rendered it unattractive to women and children and not a few men, and in consequence it was felt that with these ruled out as consumers something like sixty-six per cent of possible sales were being lost. The problem was to make the advertising one hundred per cent efficient in its appeal. It was discovered that while Kruschen Salts taken in water was not inviting, in beverages such as tea, coffee or milk it was tasteless.

Mr. Marland calls this his "million dollar idea" and well he might, for its capitalization in advertising has changed the whole character of the market for the line. From the moment it was introduced into the advertising it became clear that the previously non-responsive public had become accessible, and immediately it was decided to make this the keynote of all advertising. One other ingenious touch was added with the object of suggesting in a familiar way the infinitesimal size of the dose. The whole idea was thus summed up in the Kruschen advertising: "Tasteless in Tea. Take as much as will lie on a sixpence every morning at a cost of a farthing a day." This is the "million dollar idea" and it importance is such that no advertisement appears without it; in some the whole copy is based on it, but generally speaking it is featured in a display panel so that it cannot be overlooked.

Without the least exaggeration it can be said that not only is this responsible for the new success of the advertising but it has resulted in the formation of what might equally be termed a "million dollar habit," almost a national habit.

Perhaps one of the most interesting features of this advertising is that it is based on a very elementary idea. What is the one universal desire? Happiness was Mr. Marland's answer, and, accordingly, every Kruschen Salts advertisement is keyed up to suggest happiness. Sometimes this is stressed in the illustrations very effectively—happy jolly old men, radiant women and laughing children—but in all the copy the aim is to suggest the attainment of happiness through good health.

The new advertising policy is bold in two ways. It embraces the first instance known to me where a British advertiser has deliberately set himself to recognize only such papers as give net sales figures as suitable media for his advertisements. And it is the only case in my experience where an advertiser regards all other forms of advertising as incomparable to that of the press, with the dailies and Sunday papers in heavy preponderance. This bold policy—for it must be remembered that Great Britain is by no means complete in its service of net sales papers—had a remarkable effect, not without some disadvantages. For one thing this concentration upon net sales papers resulted in such a decisive increase in business that it was found possible to increase so rapidly that in a short time the advertising campaign had risen to ten times its former proportions. The main disadvantage of this policy is that because several very important towns are not represented by net sale papers, it has not been found feasible to concentrate upon these centres, the creation of the demand therein having to depend therefore upon the national newspapers circulating there.

Newspaper figures are used as talk to dealers; proofs of advertisements with their circulation stated in net sale figure totals are sent to all dealers in advance. That is to suggest to the retail trade what is being done to help them, for neither showcards nor window bills are distributed. The press does all the advertising.

The "million dollar idea" and the net sales policy have worked wonders. Dating only from January, 1921, each month and every month, the sales of Kruschen Salts have shown an advance. Summer and winter, spring and autumn have made no difference in the rise in sales-figures, yet this entire period has been one of the most notoriously "bad times" ever experienced in British advertising.

Mr. Marland says it is the combination of a happy idea and his faith in net sales that has done it. As I have no knowledge of any other advertiser in Great Britain having such progress to record over that period, I should not be surprised if Mr. Marland is right.

Advertising that can associate smiles with salts and carry the association throughout the copy is good advertising. This idea also may be worth several millions to American medical advertisers.

Special Section for Bakery Opening

The Lansing (Mich.) State Journal, June 20, issued a second section to the paper celebrating the opening of the new bakery of the Lawrence Baking Company. There were 10 pages in the section, 2 of which were full page advertisements of the Lawrence Baking Co.

Peirce Joins Powers & Stone

Warren H. Peirce has been appointed New England manager of Powers and Stone, Inc., publishers' representatives. He was with J. W. Barber Advertising Agency, Boston, for the past three years.

DETROIT PAPERS WIN FIRST RACING BATTLE

Circuit Court Upholds Injunction Against Interference With Track Editions — Chicago Tribune Gets U. S. Writ

Three Detroit newspapers and scores of newspapers entering the city, who are fighting an attempt to enforce a law prohibiting publication of race track betting results, scored their first victory when Judge Harry J. Dingeman, in Wayne circuit court, refused to lift the injunction under which the papers are now continuing to publish the results.

The action of Judge Dingeman will have the effect of continuing the injunction in effect at least until October, when the Supreme Court will pass on the constitutionality of the law, under which warrants were issued recently for the representatives of the newspapers in question.

The Chicago Tribune, safeguarding its interests in Detroit, did not wait to see the outcome of the hearing on the injunction, but appealed to the Federal Court, and was granted a restraining order forbidding the prosecuting attorney and the police from interfering with the sale in Detroit of the Tribune with racing results.

The Federal Court took jurisdiction in this case because the Tribune is an Illinois corporation.

Judge Dingeman, in the Circuit Court proceeding, upheld in full the contentions of Robert M. Brownson, attorney for the Free Press, who argued that the Circuit Court, functioning as a court of equity, has a right to restrain a criminal prosecution when property rights are involved.

Former Judge Patrick H. O'Brien represented the Times and William G. Bryant the Journal.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bartlett admitted that it had been stated in court by a member of the prosecutor's staff that the law involved was unconstitutional. The admission, however, did not place the prosecutor's office on record as holding the law to be unconstitutional, he said.

Baltimore Sun Aids Students

The Baltimore Sun will award 3 scholarships for full time study in the Johns Hopkins Summer School this year to students who apply for admission to the journalism department which is being conducted in co-operation with the Sun and the Evening Sun. Each scholarship will provide free tuition for three of the regular Hopkins courses, "The Principals and Practices of Journalism" conducted by Raymond S. Tompkins, of the Sun staff, "The Forms of Contemporary Prose Writing," under Dr. Francis A. Litz, instructor in English at Hopkins, and any other related course in the English field. Following the plan established last year the students will be given an opportunity to publish a real newspaper of their own. Last summer a four page paper, the Hot Times, was issued, with a circulation of 1,000 copies.

Tribune Plans European Ads

The Chicago Tribune is planning to run advertisements in all the large publications in Europe concerning its prize of $100,000 for the most artistic front and side elevation for the Tribune's new plant opposite its present home.

Special Supplement on Northwest

The Bellingham Publishing Company, publishers of the Bellingham (Wash.) Reveille, has issued 50,000 copies of an illustrated supplement in album form containing a great many views of the Pacific Northwest.

Special Adds McCall's

McCall's Magazine has appointed Blanchard, Nichols, and Coleman its Pacific coast representatives.

NUMBER TWENTY-SIX OF A SERIES

Another Advertiser testifies to the Boston American's

Proved value to Advertisers

S. Vorenberg, president of Vorenberg's, clothiers, of Boston, has found the Boston American to be "the most profitable advertising medium in this section," according to his signed statement.

In fact, this series of advertisements, which started January 1, might be continued almost without end; so many other national and local advertisers stand ready to testify to the fact that the BOSTON AMERICAN is THE evening newpaper of New England.

A Remarkable 3-cent Evening Newspaper

BOSTON AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Research and Promotion Departments at Service of Advertisers

CLASSIFIED AND FOUND ALL THERE

The go-getters of the little money makers that create reader interest were as happy and prosperous looking as any group that gathered in Milwaukee during the recent A.A.C.W. convention. The manner in which they tackled the problems of making single six-liners grow to columns would have done credit to a convention of space grabbing sport editors in the heat of the baseball season. Left to right they are:
Top Row—E. T. Lockhart, Grand Rapids Press; I. W. Williams, Philadelphia North American; J. W. Dunigan, Springfield, Ill., State Register; F. C. Erbele, Philadelphia Inquirer; R. J. Geiger, Nashville Banner; Joe Bunting, Bloomington Pantagraph.
Center Row—Charles Winters, Chicago Daily News; E. F. Stoneham, Portland (Me.) Express; C. W. Nax, St. Louis Globe-Democrat; F. L. Tate, Toronto Star; C. L. Perkins, Chicago Herald & Examiner; A. L. Loud, Illinois State Journal; George Pelles, Chicago Herald & Examiner; E. H. Barrett, Chicago Herald & Examiner; H. M. Hatfield, South Bend Tribune; O. E. Schenk, Chicago American.
First Row—P. M. Hughes, Minneapolis Tribune; J. J. Tierney, Spokane Spokesman-Review; A. Levich, St. Paul Dispatch & Pioneer Press; J. L. Irvin, Des Moines Register & Tribune; C. T. Hardin, Columbus Dispatch; W. S. Broker, Milwaukee Sentinel; Miss Ella Strebig, Fort Wayne Journal Gazette; J. P. Klouda, Davenport Times; J. W. Wiegand, St. Loius Post-Dispatch; Lester Schultz, Danville Commercial News; H. W. Klink, Lancaster Intelligencer; Miss Marion Griffiths, Chicago Herald & Examiner; C. B. Nissen, Los Angeles Herald; Miss Florence Monson, Chicago Daily News; H. G. Barringer, Indianapolis News; (unidentified); R. E. Seiler, Los Angeles Examiner; J. A. Byrne, Cleveland News; Harry Gwaltney, Milwaukee Journal; J. L. Jernegan, Chicago Herald & Examiner; J. H. Butler, Houston Chronicle; M. P. Goodfellow, Brooklyn Eagle; H. J. Moehlman, Baltimore Sun; George Thall, Detroit Free Press; G. N. Gundersen, Baltimore News; Miss Isabel Arkenberg, Arkenberg Advertising Agency, Chicago; M. M. Kelly, Eau Claire Leader & Telegram.

COST PER SALE, NOT COST PER LINE, VITAL FACTOR IN CLASSIFIED

Better Copy, That Tells at Once What Advertiser Wants to Buy or Sell, Will Make Rate Charged by Newspaper of Small Moment

By C. L. PERKINS

Executive Secretary, Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers.

DURING the past year, more than ever before, classified advertising departments have devoted efforts to securing better copy from advertisers. This phase of classified building should, however, receive still greater attention, as it is based on one of the fundamentals of this type of advertising.

Want-ads are, after all, not advertising in the generally accepted meaning of that term. The purpose as a rule is not to create markets, stimulate demands, or promote the name or character of a business. Lineage in the want-ad columns renders a specific service instead of advertising the business or commodity of the space-buyer. It delivers a message which finds for him an employe, a tenant or a buyer for a specific thing he has for sale. It does not create workers, tenants, buyers, etc. It brings together people who have opposite wants.

Anything which increases the efficiency of this service builds classified. One of the greatest ways of adding to the potency of want-ads is to educate advertisers to write them so that readers can know definitely that the advertiser does have a want that is opposite his. If one wants to buy a house of a certain definite type and price, he will find on reading a column of "House For Sale" want-ads that he will not answer half of them because he is unable to tell whether the advertisers have the kind of property he wants. This applies to all classifications. Advertisers do not tell enough to get the greatest possible results, and often they tell so little that they get no results.

The Indianapolis News is one of the papers now promoting better want-ad copy. It recently ran a full-page advertisement headed "Write Your Want-ads Right." In part it said:

"Many people look upon a want-ad as they do a telegram—they count the words religiously to make it as short as possible. And they write in a hurry.

"True enough, a want-ad is the shortest cut to your buyer, but the short, incomplete want-ad, hurriedly written, is not the want-ad that gets results.

"The successful want-ad is the one that tells a complete, interesting story about the thing you have to sell. The good want-ad is written slowly and carefully, so that it can be read with complete understanding. There is no haste on the part of the reader; he reads leisurely and he wants to know what you have to tell him. Tell it, then, directly, fully, interestingly.

"The reader of a want-ad must be told by the ad itself. He will not, as a rule, call you up for further particulars, because he is wary of obligating himself even by so much as a telephone call. He will call you up to close a sale after your ad has sold him. Your ad, then, besides telling all about the thing you have to sell, must sell it; it must create a desire for it; it must have a bit of real salesmanship.

"Let us be emphatic about the cost of a want-ad. It isn't the cost per word or the cost per insertion that counts. It is the COST PER SALE.

"The well-written, attractive, interesting, selling want-ad is the one that costs the least because it gets results."

BALTIMORE SUN

Average Net Paid Circulation in May, 1922

Daily (Morning and Evening)
232,575
Sunday, 159,865

Which when compared to May, 1921, shows

AN INCREASE OF 14,892 Daily
8,595 Sunday

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

LICKED AGAIN!

Washington Newspaper Golfers Find Senators Strong on Links

Washington newspaper golfers, suffering from their second drubbing within a few weeks, have foresworn competitive play except among themselves. The members of the corps who sought easier prey in members of the Senate after the defeat administered by New York and Boston golfers in the recent EDITOR & PUBLISHER trophy play, were virtually annihilated by the statesmen over the links of the Chevy Chase Club last Tuesday.

Eleven Senators, reinforced by Speaker Gillett, met the newspapermen, selected from the Senate Press Gallery, and not a reporter came off winner. The manner in which the Senators won was as follows:

Speaker Gillett and Senator Kellogg vs. W. E. Brigham, Boston Transcript and M. B. Judd, New York Sun, 14 points.

Senators Hale and Newberry vs. Robert M. Choate, Boston Herald and Charles S. Groves, Boston Globe, 10 points.

Senators Hitchcock and Edge vs. Charles Michelson, New York World and Bond P. Geddes, Associated Press, 9 points.

Senators Townsend and Robinson vs. W. L. Bruckart, Associated Press and G. Gould Loncoln, Washington Star, 1, point.

Senators Phipps, and Jones of New Mexico vs. Robert L. Norton, Boston Post and Edward B. Clark, Chicago Evening Post, 23 points.

Senators McKinley and Capper vs. Harold Phelps Stokes, New York Evening Post and John J. Marrinan, Boston Telegram, 11 points.

The newspaper men, according to the terms of the contest, will blow the Senators to a chicken dinner at an early date.

By GENE BYRNES

The Greatest Comic in the World

Here is the list of papers publishing the full page in color each week:

Baltimore News
Boston Globe
Boise Statesman
Bellingham American-Reveille
Council Bluffs Nonpariel
Cleveland Szabadsag
Chicago Polish National Daily
Dayton News
Detroit Polish Daily Record
Detroit News
Greensburg Record
Great Falls Tribune
Havana El Dia
Long Beach Telegram
Louisville Courier Journal
Milwaukee Nowiny Polskie
Mexico City El Democrata
Newark La Tribuna
Worcester Gazette
New York Herald
New Orleans Times-Picayune
Oakland Tribune
Philadelphia Bulletin
Peoria Journal Transcript
Pueblo Star Journal
Pittsburg Leader
San Antonio Light
Salt Lake Telegram
Springfield Union
Savannah Morning News
Sandusky Star-Journal
Seattle Times
Sioux City Journal
Syracuse Post Standard
Tacoma News Tribune
Toledo Times
Tampa Tribune
Utica Observer-Dispatch
Washington Star

We can furnish this comic in full-page matrices, full color, black and red, or black alone, or as the first page of a printed comic section.

HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE

280 Broadway New York City

Distinctive

Only one Daily Newspaper in St. Louis publishes a Full Page of News Photographs every day—

The POST-DISPATCH

Only one Daily Newspaper in St. Louis publishes a Full Page of Comic Features every day—

The POST-DISPATCH

Only one Daily Newspaper in St. Louis publishes a Double Page of Features for Women every day—

The POST-DISPATCH

Only one Daily Newspaper in St. Louis publishes Four Pages of Sport News and Features every day—

The POST-DISPATCH

St. Louis is an Evening newspaper town—a ONE newspaper town—and the Post-Dispatch is FIRST in ST. LOUIS

Only one Daily Newspaper in St. Louis, in the evening field, publishes the Associated Press Dispatches—

The POST-DISPATCH

National Representative:
The S. C. Beckwith Special Agency

NEW FEATURE GROUP ORGANIZED LIKE A. P.

(Continued from page 8)

SECTION 2. The president shall preside at all meetings of the board of directors and shall act as temporary chairman at, and call to order all meetings of the stockholders. He shall sign certificates of stock, sign and execute all contracts in the name of the corporation, when directed so to do by the board of directors; appoint and discharge agents and employees, subject to the approval of the board of directors, and he shall have the general management of the affairs of the corporation and perform all the duties incidental to his office. At the annual meeting he shall present to the shareholder's a full and complete report and audit covering the year's operations.

SECTION 3. The vice-president shall, in the absence or incapacity of the president, perform the duties of that officer.

SECTION 4. The treasurer shall have the care and custody of all the funds and securities of the corporation, and deposit the same in the name of the corporation in such bank or banks as the directors may elect; he shall keep and at all reasonable times exhibit his books and accounts to any director or stockholder of the corporation upon application at the office of the corporation during business hours; he shall give such bonds for the faithful performance of his duties as the board of directors may determine.

SECTION 5. The secretary shall keep the minutes of the board of directors, and also the minutes of the meetings of stockholders; he shall attend to the giving and serving of all notices of the company; he shall have charge of the certificate book and such other books and papers as the board may direct; he shall attend to such correspondence as may be assigned to him, and perform all the duties incidental to his office; he shall have the custody of the seal of the corporation; he shall also keep a stock book, containing the names, alphabetically arranged of all persons who are stockholders of the corporation, showing their places of residence, the number of shares of stock held by them respectively, the time when they respectively became the owners thereof, and the amount paid thereon, and such book shall be open for inspection as prescribed by law.

ARTICLE V.

CAPITAL STOCK.

SECTION 1. Certificates of stock shall be numbered and registered in the order they are issued, and shall be signed by the president or vice-president and by the secretary or treasurer, and the seal of the corporation shall be affixed thereto. All certificates shall be bound in a book, and shall be issued in consecutive order therefrom and in the margin thereof shall be entered the name of the person owning the shares therein represented, the number of shares, and the date thereof. All certificates exchanged or returned to the corporation shall be marked canceled, with the date of cancellation, by the secretary, and shall be immediately pasted in the certificate book, opposite the memorandum of its issue.

SECTION 2. Transfers of shares shall only be made upon the books of the corporation by the holder in person or by power of attorney duly executed and filed with the secretary of the corporation, and on the surrender of the certificate or certificates of such shares. Any share or shares of stock offered for transfer shall be subject to the restrictions set forth in the charter of the corporation and the secretary shall be charged with the duty of insuring exact and full compliance therewith. The board of directors shall have and are hereby given authority and power to establish by resolution such rules and regulations not inconsistent with the charter as may be found necessary or convenient for the execution of the charter provisions relating to the ownership and transfer of shares of stock.

ARTICLE VI.

CHECKS, NOTES, DRAFTS, ETC.

SECTION 1. All checks, drafts, notes, bills of exchange and orders for payment of money, shall be made, signed, endorsed or deposited as the board of directors may by resolution provide.

ARTACLE VII.

APPLICATION OF EARNINGS.

SECTION 1. No dividends shall be declared or paid out of the earnings of the corporation. All earnings shall be applied to the general purposes of the corporation, and any deficiency therein shall be contributed by the shareholders. The amount of such contribution by each shareholder shall be such proportion of the total as the number of shares owned by each shareholder bears to the total outstanding shares.

ARTICLE VIII.

INSPECTORS.

SECTION 1. Two inspectors of election shall be elected at each annual meeting of stockholders to serve for one year, and if any inspector shall refuse to serve or shall not be present, the meeting may appoint an inspector in his place.

ARTICLE IX.

SEAL.

SECTION 1. The seal of the corporation shall be in the form of a circle, and shall bear the name of the corporation and the year of its incorporation.

ARTICLE X.

AMENDMENTS.

SECTION, 1. These by-laws may be amended at any stockholders' meeting by a vote of majority in amount of the shares outstanding, represented either in person or by proxy, provided the proposed amendment is inserted in the notice of such meeting. A copy of such amended by-law shall be sent to each stockholder within ten days after the adoption of the same. Any stockholder may propose an amendment by forwarding it to the secretary a sufficient time in advance of any meeting for insertion in the notice of the meeting.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED AT THE ORGANIZATION MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS OF NORTH AMERICAN NEWSPAPER ALLIANCE, INC.

Held in New York City June 23rd, 1922.

RESOLVED that until further ordered by the board of directors no invitations to participate in the service of the North American Newspaper Alliance be extended to others than newspapers or substitutes for newspapers named in the list of the organization committee, and that the basis of assessment as set forth in the approved form of contract is understood to and shall include the net paid daily average circulation of the publisher as set forth in the contract and the circulation of the paper having the largest circulation in any city allocated to such publisher.

Members of North American Newspaper Alliance are:

Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette.
Little Rock (Ark.) Gazette.
Las Angeles Times.
San Francisco Bulletin.
Denver Post.
Bridgeport (Conn.) Post & Telegram.
Hartford (Conn.) Times.
New Haven (Conn.) Register.
Waterbury (Conn.) Republican & American.
Washington (D. C.) Star.
Atlanta Constitution.
Savannah News.
Boise (Idaho) Statesman.
Chicago News.
Indianapolis News.
Des Moines (Ia.) Register & Tribune.
Sioux City (Ia.) Tribune.
Louisville Courier-Journal & Times.
New Orleans Times-Picayune.
Baltimore Sun.
Boston Post.
Detroit News.
Duluth (Minn.) Herald.
Minneapolis Tribune.
St. Paul (Minn.) Dispatch & Pioneer Press.
Kansas City (Mo.) Star.
St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
Butte (Mont.) Miner.
Lincoln (Neb.) State-Journal.
Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald.
Jersey City Jersey Journal.
Albany Times-Union.
Buffalo News.
New York World.
Elmira (N. Y.) Star-Gazette.
Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union.
Syracuse Post-Standard.
Utica Observer-Dispatch.
Cincinnati, Times-Star.
Cleveland Plain Dealer.
Dayton (Ohio) Journal & Herald.
Oklahoma City Oklahoman & Times.
Portland Oregonian.
Erie (Pa.) Times.
Philadelphia Bulletin.
Pittsburgh Dispatch.
Charleston (S. C.) Post.
Memphis (Tenn.) News-Scimitar.
Dallas (Tex.) News & Journal.
El Paso (Tex.) Herald.
Houston (Tex.) Chronicle.
San Antonio (Tex.) Express & News.
Salt Lake City (Utah) Telegram.
Norfolk Virginian Pilot.
Richmond (Va.) News-Leader.
Seattle Times.
Spokane Spokesman-Review.

CANADA

Calgary (Alta) Herald.
Edmonton (Alta) Journal.
Vancouver (B. C.) Province.
Victoria (B. C.) Colonist.
Winnipeg (Man.) Tribune.
Halifax (N. S.) Herald & Mail.
Toronto (Ont.) Star.
Montreal (Que.) Star.

Allocated papers to date are:

Mobile (Ala.) Register & Times.
Fresno (Cal.) Republican.
Oakland (Cal.) Tribune.
Sacramento (Cal.) Bee.
San Diego (Cal.) Union & Tribune.
Wilmington (Del.) Journal & News.
Peoria (Ill.) Star.
Springfield Illinois State Journal.
Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-Sentinel.
South Bend (Ind.) Tribune.
Terre Haute (Ind.) Star.
Davenport (Ia.) Times.
Topeka (Kan.) State Journal.
Wichita (Kan.) Beacon.
Shreveport (La.) Journal.
Portland (Me.) Express & Telegram.
Lewiston (Me.) Journal.
Fall River (Mass.) Herald.
New Bedford (Mass.) Standard.
Springfield (Mass.) Union.
Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.
Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press.
Hattiesburg (Miss.) American.
Jackson (Miss.) News.
Vicksburg (Miss.) Post.
St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press.
Reno (Nev.) Gazette.
Manchester (N. H.) Union & Leader.
Camden (N. J.) Courier.
Newark (N. J.) News.
Trenton (N. J.) Times & Advertiser.
Albuquerque (N. M.) Journal.
Akron (Ohio) Beacon-Journal.
Canton (Ohio) Repository.
Youngstown (Ohio) Telegram.
Tulsa (Okla.) World.
Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot & News.
Reading (Pa.) Eagle.
Providence (R. I.) Journal & Bulletin.
Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram.
Burlington (Va.) Free Press.
Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger & News-Tribune.
Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal.

CANADA

Hamilton (Ont.) Spectator.
London (Ont.) Free Press.
Ottawa (Ont.) Citizen.

In deciding upon what paper should be invited to become members of the Alliance, Major Pickering explained that as a general thing the largest paper in the territory was considered, modifying this by the general character of the paper and modifying this again by the character and ability of publisher.

The attorneys for the Alliance are Taylor, Jackson, Brophy & Nash, of 56 Pine street, New York. It is understood that Mr. Jackson spent nearly two months in constructing the constitution and by-laws of the Alliance in order to make it as nearly "tir tight" as possible. The Associated Press agreement with its member paper was taken as a model. The entire territory of the United States and Canada has been allotted to member paper and allocated papers by the Alliance with the exception of two or three minor points.

The Atlanta Journal
ATLANTA, GA.

5c Daily — 10c Sunday

Associated Press
United Press

Leased Wire Cable and Financial News

An outstanding newspaper

Advertising in The Journal Sells the Goods

NEW PRODUCTION RECORD Reached by Ford in Detroit

Detroit's Prosperity Is Yours With News Advertising

DURING the month of May, The Ford Motor Company established a new monthly record with the production of 144,469 cars, trucks and tractors.

Ford Company officials said that while they have no means of computing exactly what the June production will be, they are confident that it will exceed the May output.

The Ford Motor Company is not the only one in Detroit working at top notch. Practically every automobile plant in the city is working full time; many have night shifts.

All this means that Detroit is prosperous. There is no unemployment. There is even a scarcity of skilled employees. Such a condition warrants your making strenuous efforts for launching your advertising campaign in Detroit immediately.

Besides the advantage of prosperity, Detroit offers you another—the ability of one newspaper to cover at one time and at one rate the whole Detroit field.

The Detroit News with its more than 224,000 Daily and 243,000 Sunday circulation reaches 90% of all the homes—figures from verified house to house canvass.

The Detroit News

Member of National Newspapers Inc.
"Always In The Lead"

ACCESSIBLE PARTS AND STRONG BUILD GIVE SPEED TO PRINTING PRESS

Modern Newspaper Time Schedules Require Quick Start and Well Printed Papers Throughout Editions—Heavy Frame Adds to Power—Fudge for Late News

By OSCAR C. ROESEN

EDITORIAL NOTE.—Mr. Roesen, whose ideas on newspaper press equipment are sought by publishers as were those of his late father, is associated with R. Hoe & Co., of which his father was vice-president for many years. He will contribute articles from time to time to EDITOR & PUBLISHER on pressroom problems of the newspaper.

AS most newspapers adhere closely to a definite time schedule for printing their various editions this fact must be considered in designing the newspaper printing press of today. Most papers have to deliver a certain number of papers to the railway depots, post offices, carrier routes, etc., at a certain time to insure the delivery of their paper in seasonable time. The closing of the stock market and the finishing of the various sporting events make it necessary for the newspaper press to produce the maximum number of well-printed newspapers at the beginning of the run.

Thus a press must be so designed that all controlling parts are easily accessible and adjustable, and it must be so constructed that the possibility of its being put out of commission by breakdown is reduced to a minimum, if the time schedule is to be met efficiently.

The various units of the press can be all placed on the floor, with aisles between them so that the pressmen can easily place the plates in their various positions without climbing and without stopping. When the plates are on the cylinder they must be locked on quickly and securely.

When the press gets under way the ink must be set so that the papers are neither under or over printed. As stated previously, the press must produce a maximum of well printed papers at the beginning of its run. It was this condition that led R. Hoe & Co. to develop their ink pump distribution, for with it the color on the entire machine can be set uniformly for an ordinary type page by means of a gauge which fits under the ink-adjusting screws and as this device feeds the ink to the plate uniformly at all speeds, it can be seen that this is a great help in starting the edition and meeting the time schedule.

In folding the paper the controls of the folding and nipping rollers must be placed outside of the folder frames so that the necessary adjustments can be made while the press is in operation.

In order to guard against breakdown each unit is driven by its individual upright driving shaft so that if accident should occur the damage will be confined to one unit, but in order to prevent any serious trouble the best machines of today are built with extra heavy side frames, solid steel cylinders and the gears are manufactured of heat-treated forged steel so that the machines can withstand great strain without damage.

To further guard against breakdowns the various operating mechanisms are protected by pins which "shear off" when the mechanism is subjected to a strain which would cause a breakdown and lay up the machine, it being only necessary to insert new pins, after removing the cause of trouble, to start up the machine again.

Extra heavy construction also gives the machine a reserve speed, for it is evident that a press that is heavily built can operate at high speed without vibration and on account of its rigidity will produce well-printed papers at the increased speed. Thus, if for some reason the edition falls behind the schedule, due to poor paper, pasters or other trouble, this reserve speed can be called upon to make up for the lost time, just as a railroad engineer calls upon the reserve speed of his locomotive to make up the time he has lost earlier in his run.

As mention was made of the importance of getting papers on the street after the close of a baseball game, prize fight, etc., it may be well to mention the "fudge device" designed and patented by the late William Loveland and Harry Sloane of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin. With this fudge bed the score by innings of a baseball game can be printed inning by inning so that the papers printed have the correct score one minute after the close of any inning. This is accomplished by having a font of type on each machine, and a telegraph operator in the pressroom with a direct wire to the ball grounds. At the close of an inning he marks the score on a large black board which is in view from every press: the presses are stopped, the type corresponding to the score for that particular inning inserted into the fudge and the presses started again. Thus at the end of the game it is only necessary to add the total runs, hits and errors and the paper has a complete score by innings for the game.

By using this device and method the New York Telegram was able to put its papers on the street with a complete round-by-round story of the Carpentier-Dempsey prize fight less than one minute after the knockout had occurred.

In summing up it will be seen that in order for a newspaper to meet a definite schedule, a press must be constructed so as to have all parts accessible and must also function so as to produce a maximum number of papers at the beginning of each edition, which reflects in the design of the presses as outlined above and the best presses of today incorporate in their design such features.

Speaking of Rate Reductions

The last 6 months Post Office statement of the Washington Times shows an average daily increase of over 22 per cent.

The absence of any rate increase during the past year makes this circulation increase equivalent to a most extraordinary rate reduction.

No wonder national advertisers increased their space for the past seven months until the gain totals OVER A QUARTER OF A MILLION LINES.

THE WASHINGTON TIMES

3c Daily, 10c Sunday

G. LOGAN PAYNE, Pub.

National Advertising Representative
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.,
Chicago, Detroit,
St. Louis and Los Angeles.
PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH,
New York and Boston.

Japan's Total Wealth Has Increased 50 Per Cent In 10 Years

For American Advertisers this fact has deep significance. It means that the Japanese as a nation of buyers are better able than ever to consume American merchandise.

The Proved Fact!

That Japan today offers the most profitable outlet in the world for American export goods is proved by those forward-looking manufacturers and distributers whose prosperity has been built on wisely planned advertising campaigns in

THE JIJI SHIMPO
時事新報

They have won for their products nation-wide popularity and for their houses a prestige reflected by The Jiji's high character. The secret of their success lies in this simple fact:

"In Japan, the Buyers Read The Jiji"

Cables
"Jiji Tokyo"
Bentley Code

Morning and Evening Editions

BALLOTING SYSTEM VITAL TO SUCCESS IN NEWSPAPER CONTESTS

Newspapers Should Hold the Good-Will of Every Contestant and This Depends Entirely Upon the Honesty of the Contest Man—Strict Accounting Absolutely Necessary

By JOSEPH S. ROGERS

IT has been made plain in the previous articles of this series that the success of a newspaper circulation campaign where automobiles are given as prizes, depends in the main on the integrity of the contest man. At the end of a campaign, a publisher should have the good will and esteem of every candidate participating, no matter whether the contestant won or not. That is as it should be with an honestly conducted contest.

The official records of a campaign go a long ways in determining the honesty of a contest man. If a contest man can show a dollar taken in for every vote issued, then the publisher can feel assured that the campaign has been honestly administered and that the contest man has been fair and impartial. All of the successful contest managers can do this.

One of the most widely used good voting ballot systems may be explained as follows:

Every subscription that a contestant turns in is made out in triplicate on a voting ballot, giving the name and address of the subscriber, the price of the subscription, its length, and the number of votes allowed. One copy of these ballots is given to the contestant, one to the circulation department, and one the contest man keeps.

Under this system, therefore, the newspaper can account for every dollar taken in during the campaign, can verify the number of votes given on each subscription, and can prove that the prizes have been properly awarded.

On the other hand, some of the unprincipled contest people issue votes haphazardly, viz., if a contestant turns in ten subscriptions a slip of paper saying good for 500,000 votes will be issued. Under this plan there is nothing to prevent the unscrupulous contest man from making this ballot read 1,500,000 votes, as there is no possible way of checking up the votes issued with the cash taken in.

"Second payments" are "gold" for the unscrupulous contest man. By second payments are meant the extending of subscriptions already obtained in the campaign to longer periods. Let us consider that a contestant has obtained five subscriptions for six months and persuades the subscribers to extend their subscriptions to one year. The candidate turns in these extensions or second payments. The contest man issues a "blanket" voting ballot covering these extensions. There is nothing to prevent the unscrupulous contest man from "going south" with the money on these second payments, as the subscriber is already getting the paper and will not know about the "embezzlement" until the first payment on the subscription expires. By that time the contest man is out of town. When the subscriber makes a complaint, the paper has no record of the second payment, and in order to pacify the contestant and the subscriber, usually extends the subscription on the subscriber's say-so.

It should not be construed from the above paragraph that many contest men "go south" with second payments. However, a publisher naturally wants to avoid any such possibility, and he can do this by insisting on the contest man having a system of votes, money and subscriptions that will stand an exhaustive audit at the close of the campaign.

I was talking to a contest man of questionable reputation not long ago, and he told me he had just signed a contract for a contest in the middle west. "I am broke," he said, "but I am not worrying."

"Where are you going to get the money to finance the opening of the campaign?" I asked him.

"Oh, that's easy," he said, "I'll just hold out the 'old' subscriptions."

By that the contest man in question meant that during the first days of the campaign, he would himself pocket the money turned in on subscriptions from those persons who were already getting the paper. The subscriber would not know for a month or so that the subscription had not been put on the books. In the meantime the contest man would probably have gotten on his feet and if any complaint arose he would no doubt make good.

To avoid any such complications, it is best for the publisher to appoint some member of his staff to handle all the money. Big contest men are in favor of this plan, as it takes the responsibility off their hands. In any event, if the contest man has a proper voting ballot system, every dollar taken in can be accounted for every night.

When a contest man is selling a contract, he is apt to exaggerate concerning the "expert" staff which he carries with him, men, he says, who have been with him for years. Such statements are not always correct, and a publisher would do well to investigate not only the contest man, but every man in his organization.

Not long ago the circulation manager of a newspaper which was running a contest hired private detectives to investigate the past performances of every man connected with the campaign. When the detectives submitted a written report to him, the circulation manager was more than pleased. Other circulation managers might do the same thing to their advantage.

As a matter of fact, the "expert staff" which some contest men claim is oftentimes recruited from a nearby town. The contest man is anxious to get his help as cheap as possible, and only the larger companies, as a rule, can afford to carry a complete staff of men with them. The unscrupulous contest man says to his employe after he has hired him: "If any person around the newspaper asks you what experience you have had in the contest business, tell him that you have been with me for years."

It is such persons picked up by the contest man who by their actions may reflect against not only the contest man, but on the newspaper as well.

Several years ago I wrote the advertising and publicity copy for the biggest and most successful contest company in the country. The campaign was being conduted on one of the largest metropolitan dailies and I took especial pains with every line that went into the paper.

Last year while I was managing a contest in a southern state, I noticed that a circulation campaign was being run in a nearby town, and to my amazement I saw that the copy my self-styled rival was running was identical with that I had written several years ago. I always considered that plagiarism was the worst form of theft, so I wrote a letter to the contest man in question and in a nice sort of way asked him "how he got that way."

The letter I received in reply was a "classic." The man said that he got the "copy" in question from a contest man whom he used to work for in Canada—that he never heard of me—and what was the difference if he had stolen my stuff. The letter closed by saying:

"You certainly must have been in the contest business long enough to know that everything goes."

This instance is cited merely to emphasize that some contest men, not all by any means, know no difference between right and wrong, and it is of vital importance that every publisher planning to put on a circulation campaign thoroughly investigate the contest man.

Spurious references are often given. Claims are made of running a contest in such-and-such a city when the city in question never had a contest. Some contest men have been known to forge letters of recommendation from publishers. Some contest men, now in business for themselves, at one time worked for others and claim to have managed big contests of which they were only an integral part.

Be sure that you have the right contest man before you go ahead.

The fourth article of this series by Mr. Rogers will explaint the methods of "appointing" and "coaching" contestants. It will point out how the "extra" prizes have been known to have been "won" by the contest man.

1922 BEATS 1921

FROM January 1 to June 1, 1922, The Passaic Daily News published 192,490 more lines of paid advertising than during the same period of 1921.

FROM January 1 to June 1, 1922 the circulation of The Daily News averaged 1327 more copies daily than during the same period of 1921.

Advertising Lineage Audited by De Lisser Bros. A. B. C., of course.

DAILY NEWS
Passaic, New Jersey

G. M. HARTT, Editor. R. E. LENT Gen'l Mgr.

Dayton Papers Hosts to Newsies

Carrier boys of the Dayton (Ohio) Journal and Evening Herald enjoyed a big picnic and outing June 22, as the guests of the newspapers. They were taken to Lakeside Park where strip tickets good for the various concessions at the park were issued. And a picnic dinner was served.

St. Paul Newsies Have Picnic

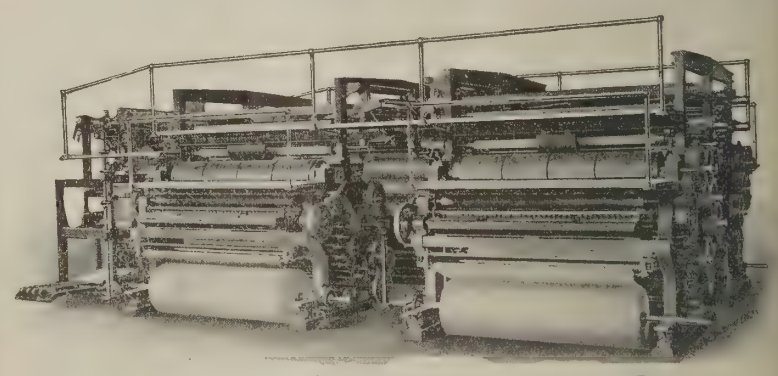
All the newsboys of St. Paul took part in a picnic at Wildwood Park June 19. They were in charge of H. "Mogy" Bernstein, chairman of the Newsboys' Picnic Association, and Reuben Kovsky, acting treasurer of the association.

SPORTS WRITER KILLED

"Tiny" Maxwell and Percy Sanderson in Collision Near Philadelphia

Robert W. Maxwell, sports editor of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger, and Percy Sanderson, the Evening Ledger's golf expert, were badly injured in an automobile accident near Norristown early Sunday morning. Mr. Maxwell's hip was dislocated and seven of his ribs fractured. Mr. Sanderson's skull was fractured and he also sustained concussion of the brain. Both men are in the Montgomery Hospital, at Norristown, and while their conditions are still serious they are expected to recover.

Mrs. Sanderson, and Miss Florence Gram and Frank Mackin, the latter two friends of the two newspapermen, sustained less serious injuries.



PERCY SANDERSON R. W. MAXWELL
Public Ledger Photos

The accident was caused by a head-on collision between Mr. Maxwell's car and a six-ton truck. Mr. Maxwell's car was wrecked.

Bob, or "Tiny," as Mr. Maxwell is best known, is one of the most widely known newspaper men in the country. He is also noted as a former All-American football star. He played first on the University of Chicago eleven, and later came to Swarthmore. During the last few years he has been nationally known as one of the foremost referees in the big college football matches.

Mr. Sanderson writes under the nom de plume of "Sandy McNiblick."

Robert W. Maxwell, sports editor of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, who was injured in an automobile accident near Norristown early Sunday, died Friday morning, June 30.

This Scott Double Quadruple "Multi-Unit" Newspaper Printing Press consisting of 4 Units and 4 Folders will produce newspapers up to 16 pages at 72,000 per hour, up to 32 page papers at 36,000 per hour and up to SIXTY-FOUR Page Papers at 18,000 per hour, delivering products in one, two or four sections as desired.

THE PROVIDENCE JOURNAL
JOHN R. RATHOM, MANAGER

have one of the Scott "Multi-Unit" Octuple Presses and it can be seen running every day in the week.

THIS IS THE PRESS OF NO REGRETS

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
Plainfield, New Jersey

NEW YORK
1457 Broadway

CHICAGO
1441 Monadnock Block

Pennsylvania

THE RESPONSIVE MARKET

Nearly 55% of Pennsylvania's population is located in 147 cities of over 5000 people. This means that these prospective buyers of your product—nearly 5,000,000—are close to the retail outlets for your goods. So close, in fact, that you are sure to get quick response to your advertising, if it is placed in the newspapers listed on this page.

COVER THE FIELD THOROUGHLY BY USING

Pennsylvania Daily Newspapers which reach the buying public oftener than any other media.

By localizing advertising throughout the Keystone State national advertisers will get results beyond anything which can be obtained through any other medium for an equal amount of money expended.

THE USE OF THESE DAILIES MEANS TRADE LEADERSHIP

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call	(M)	29,021	.09	.09
Allentown Call	(S)	16,104	.09	.09
Bethlehem Globe	(E)	8,066	.04	.04
Bloomsburg Press	(M)	6,316	.029	.029
*Chester Times and Republican	(M&E)	14,752	.065	.05
Coatesville Record	(E)	5,436	.0214	.0214
*Connellsville Courier	(E)	5,652	.0179	.0179
*Easton Express	(E)	15,668	.05	.05
*Easton Free Press	(E)	12,557	.05	.05
*Erie Times	(E)	26,428	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	36,478	.095	.095
*Lancaster Intelligencer and News-Journal	(M&E)	21,867	.08	.08
*Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,088	.035	.035
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(M)	54,541	.17	.15
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(S)	63,767	.22	.18
Pottstown Ledger	(E)	1,590	.025	.025
Pottsville Republican	(E)	11,558	.055	.05
Scranton Republican	(M)	32,180	.12	.10
*Scranton Times	(E)	37,701	.12	.10
Sharon Herald	(E)	4,888	.021	.021
Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	3,911	.021	.018
*Warren Times-Mirror	(E&M)	7,931	.036	.036
*Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	15,426	.06	.05
West Chester Local News	(E)	11,010	.03	.03
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	21,234	.08	.05
York Dispatch	(E)	16,549	.045	.045
York Gazette and Daily	(M)	16,614	.045	.045

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

HEARST'S N. Y. INVASION TOPIC

(Continued from page 10)

wholly or partially cities of the second class, the proprietor of a newspaper is entitled for publishing such notices, matters and advertisements aforesaid, other than the session laws, for each inch of agate twenty-nine ems to the line, to one dollar and twenty-five cents for the first insertion and one dollar for each subsequent insertion; and in all cities of the first class, to twenty-five cents per agate line of twenty-nine ems for each insertion. If such notices, matters and advertisements aforesaid, other than the session laws, are printed in type other than agate, the proprietor of a newspaper shall be entitled to the number of inches such notices, matters and advertisements would occupy set in agate twenty-nine ems to the line] to four cents per agate (five and one-half point) or nonpareil (six point) line of a column width not less than twelve ems, provided that in computing such charge per line, the line shall average at least six words, display copy, agate measurement (fourteen lines to each inch), twelve to thirteen pica ems wide, depending on the make-up of the paper publishing such display copy, for each insertion in newspapers having less than five thousand circulation; five cents per line for such newspapers having five thousand or more circulation and less than seven thousand five hundred; six cents per line for such newspapers having seven thousand five hundred or more circulation and less than ten thousand; and one cent per line in addition to the six cents for the initial ten thousand circulation, for each additional five thousand circulation possessed by such newspapers until the maximum rate of twenty-five cents per line (one hundred thousand to one hundred and five thousand circulation) is reached, to which two cents per line shall be added to the initial insertion charge in each separate advertisement. In reckoning line charges allowance shall be made for date lines, paragraph endings, titles, signatures and similar short lines as full lines where the same are set to conform to the usual rules of composition. This rate shall not apply to counties wholly within Greater New York City where the legal rate for such publication shall be at the rate of twenty cents per agate line.

§ 2. Section forty-eight of chapter thirty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act in relation to legislation, constituting chapter thirty-two of the consolidated laws," as last amended by chapter four hundred and sixty-seven of the laws of nineteen hundred and twenty-one, is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 48. PUBLICATION OF CONCURRENT RESOLUTIONS. The secretary of state shall send to each newspaper designated pursuant to law, in the order in which they are passed, and as soon as the slips are printed, copies of such concurrent resolutions as are required to be published. Concurrent resolutions proposing amendments to the constitution shall be published in such newspapers, at the times prescribed by the election law, under the direction of the secretary of state, at the expense of the state, in such manner, by the use of italics and brackets, as to indicate the new matter added and the old matter eliminated. [The charge for such publication shall be paid by the treasurer of the state on the warrant of the comptroller, after certification by the secretary of state that the said publication has been regularly made as provided in this section, at the rate prescribed by law, specifying such rate. The charge for such publication outside of a city shall be at the fixed rate of thirty cents for each folio of one hundred words. The charge for such publication within any city shall be at the rate prescribed by statute for the publication of a summons, notice, order or citation in the same city. Provided, that in any county containing wholly within its boundaries a city of the second class, the charge for the publication of such resolutions in such newspapers shall be at the rate of six cents per agate line of a column width not less than twelve and one-half ems for each insertion; and provided further, that in any county containing wholly within its boundaries a city of the first class, the charge for the publication of such resolutions in such newspapers shall be at the rate of eight cents per agate line of a column width not less than twelve and one-half ems for each insertion.]

§ 3. Chapter fifty-one of the laws of nineteen hundred and nine, entitled "An act in relation to public officers, constituting chapter forty-seven of the consolidated laws," is hereby amended by inserting therein after section seventy, a new section, to be section seventy-a, to read as follows:

§ 70-a. FEES TO BE PAID BY PUBLIC OFFICERS FOR PUBLIC ADVERTISEMENTS. The charge for the publication, of concurrent resolutions, proposed constitutional amendments, propositions or questions to be submitted to the voters of the state, tax sales and official notices required to be published by state boards, commissions or officers in newspapers of the state, shall be paid by the state treasurer on the warrant of the comptroller, after certification by the secretary of state that such a publication has been regularly made as prescribed by law. The charge for the publication, if authorized by law, of digests of laws of a local nature in the newspaper designated to publish such digests shall be paid by the several counties of the state in which such laws may be published, upon like certification. The charge for the publication of concurrent resolutions, proposed constitutional amendments, propositions or questions to be submitted to the voters of the state or of any political subdivisions thereof or therein, tax sales by the state or any county or municipality therein, and of all official notices and advertisements required to be published by law at the expense of the state or of a county or other municipality shall be at the rate of four cents per agate (five and one-half point) or nonpareil (six point) line of a column width not less than twelve ems, provided that in computing such charge per line, the line shall average at least six words, display copy, agate measurement (fourteen lines to each inch), twelve to thirteen pica ems wide, depending on the make-up of the paper publishing such display copy, for each insertion in newspapers having less than five thousand circulation; five cents per line for such newspapers having five thousand or more circulation and less than seven thousand five hundred; six cents per line for such newspapers having seven thousand five hundred or more circulation and less than ten thousand; and one cent per line in addition to the six cents for the initial ten thousand circulation, for each additional five thousand circulation possessed by such newspapers until the maximum rate of twenty-five cents per line (one hundred thousand to one hundred and five thousand circulation) is reached, to which two cents per line shall be added to the initial insertion charge in each separate advertisement.

This rate shall not apply to counties wholly within Greater New York City where the legal rate for such publication shall be at the rate of twenty cents per agate line. In reckoning line charges allowance shall be made for date lines, paragraph endings, titles, signature, and similar short lines as full lines where the same are set to conform to the usual rules of composition. Every newspaper designated for the publication of concurrent resolutions, proposed constitutional amendments, propositions or questions to be submitted to the voters of the state and making claim for compensation must be established at least one year, entered in post office as second class matter, and be printed and published in the town or city of its post office address and shall attach to such claim an affidavit of the circulation of such newspaper for the six months period ending March thirty-first or September thirtieth immediately preceding and file a copy of its report to government or the Audit Bureau of Circulations, which shall be used as the basis of circulating rating. Papers unable to file either report shall accept the minimum rate per line until such time as they establish to the satisfaction of the state comptroller sufficient circulation to entitle them to a higher rate. It shall be the duty of each board of supervisors in the several counties of the state, in making out the assessment-rolls, to assess and levy on the taxable property of the county whose representatives they are, such sums as shall be sufficient to defray the expense of publishing the digests of laws of a local nature, if such publication be authorized, applicable only to the county affected, in the newspaper designated.

§ 4. Section two hundred and eighty-seven of the surrogate's court act is hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 287. Fees of printers. Except as otherwise specially prescribed by law, the proprietor of a newspaper is entitled for publishing notice, order, citation or other advertisement, required by this chapter to be published, [for each inch of agate twenty-nine ems to the line, to seventy-five cents for the first insertion and fifty cents for each subsequent insertion. In counties containing wholly or partially cities of the second class, the proprietor of a newspaper is entitled for publishing such notices, matters and advertisements aforesaid, for each inch of agate twenty-nine ems to the line, to one dollar and twenty-five cents for the first insertion and one dollar for each subsequent insertion; and in all cities of the first class, to twenty cents per agate line of twenty-nine ems for each insertion. If such notices, matters and advertisements aforesaid are printed in type other than agate, the proprietor of a newspaper shall be entitled to the number of inches such notices, matters and advertisements would occupy set in agate twenty-nine ems to the line.] to four cents per agate (five and one-half point) or nonpareil (six point) line of a column width not less than twelve ems, provided that in computing such charge per line, the line shall average at least six words, display copy, agate measurment (fourteen lines to each inch), twelve to thirteen pica ems wide, depending on the make-up of the paper publishing such display copy, for each insertion in newspapers having less than five thousand circulation; five cents per line for such newspapers having five thousand or more circulation and less than seven thousand five hundred; six cents per line for such newspapers having seven thousand five hundred or more circulation and less than ten thousand; and one cent per line in addition to the six cents for the initial ten thousand circulation, for each additional five thousand circulation possessed by such newspapers until the maximum rate of twenty-five cents per line (one hundred thousand to one hundred and five thousand circulation) is reached, to which two cents per line shall be added to the initial insertion charge in each separate advertisement. In reckoning line charge allowance shall be made for date lines, paragraph endings, titles, signature, and similar short lines as full lines where the same are set to conform to the usual rules of composition. This rate shall not apply to counties wholly within Greater New York city where the legal rate for such publication shall be at the rate of twenty cents per agate line.

§ 5. This act shall take effect immediately.

In addition to formulating the legal rate bill the joint committee actively worked against the Walton Bills (a group which provided against the reduction in the number of insertions of Surrogate's Notices), securing agreement of their sponsor to their "dying in committee." Other bills which were not to the best interests of publishers were also opposed. The committee was resoluted a vote of thanks for its work and authorized to continue its efforts.

A. R. Kessinger of the Rome (N. Y.) Sentinel, president, was chairman of the meeting and Henri M. Hall of the Jamestown Journal was secretary. The annual meeting will be held in December. No changes were made in the officer personnel.

WOOD ASKS PUBLISHERS' AID

Without High Dry Mat Tariff, American Firm Says It Will Die

"If we receive proper tariff protection, we are prepared to promptly instal new equipment and enlarge our mill to produce an absolutely uniform and perfect dry mat and to considerably reduce our cost of manufacture and selling price," is the promise that the Wood Flong Corporation makes in a letter sent to publishers a few days ago in an appeal for their support of the Wood plea for a tariff on imported dry mats.

The letter is a protest to the publishers, who, it states, have been responsible for the reduction of the originally proposed rates by the Senate Finance Committee. If the committee's rate is enacted into law, the Wood letter states, the business cannot possibly survive.

In that case, the letter declares, the only alternative left to publishers will be the use of German dry mats, and it states that "no newspaper can safely depend upon imported articles of any kind, nor can it expect to receive the high standard of service and assurance of unfailing supply which is provided by the Wood Flong Corporation."

It points out that if the Wood Corporation is forced out of business, "as it will be without your help, you may expect to pay a considerably higher price than dry mats ever before sold for."

A. P. Executive Committee Meets

The executive committee of the Associated Press held a brief meeting June 26, at which only routine business was transacted. Those who attended were Charles Hopkins Clark, Hartford Courant; Charles A. Rook, Pittsburgh Dispatch; W. L. McLean, Philadelphia Bulletin; Frank B. Noyes, Washington Star; Adolph S. Ochs, New York Times, and John R. Rathom, Providence Journal. Of the directors and officers of the A. P. there were present Herbert F. Gunnison, Brooklyn Eagle; Melville E. Stone, counselor; J. R. Youatt, treasurer; D. D. Moore, New Orleans Times-Picayune, and Frederick Roy Martin, general manager. Kent Cooper and Jackson S. Elliott, assistant general manager, and Milton Garges, chief of the traffic department, were also at the meeting.

Murdered Judge a Former Editor

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Leon Wing, the judge at Reno race track who was murdered by jockey Archie Ziegler today, was formerly on the San Francisco Examiner. He went to the paper as an office boy, became one of the sporting editors, was an expert on race horses and left the paper about seven years ago to become judge at the Tia Juana race track.

Hearst Will Rebuild Mother's Gift

William Randolph Hearst will rebuild Hearst Hall, the gymnasium and assembly rooms given to the University of California by his mother, which were destroyed by fire June 20. The day after the fire Mr. Hearst wired his offer to rebuild to David P. Barrows, president of the university, and June 23 the buildings and grounds committee met and formally accepted the offer.

Broadcasting in Tacoma

The Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger has installed a radio broadcasting station.

H. N. KELLOGG REAPPOINTED

Heads A. N. P. A. Labor Board, Subject to Directors' Approval

INDIANAPOLIS, June 27.—Harry N. Kellogg is again chairman of the Special Standing Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, having been appointed by members of the committee at a meeting here yesterday. This was forecast in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week. The appointment is subject to the approval of the A. N. P. A. directors, who will meet some time in August, but there is every probability that Mr. Kellogg will be confirmed in his old post.

H. N. KELLOGG

He resigned shortly before the A. N. P. A. convention this year to assume the ownership of the Waterloo (Ia.) Times-Tribune, the name of which he changed to the Waterloo Tribune, and has been connected with the committee in an advisory capacity since the convention. Abrogation of the international labor agreements left a number of disputes between publishers and union employes unsettled and Mr. Kellogg, who had been associated with the conduct of the case before the agreements expired, has been at the committee's Indianapolis office for the past three weeks.

J. B. Pinkham, who was field man for the committee last year and was reappointed at the convention, continues in that capacity.

It is understood that the committee has found difficulty in securing a successor to Mr. Kellogg and that he was not averse to resuming his old post when the committee offered it to him. Mr. Kellogg retains his interest in the Waterloo Tribune, he stated this week.

The committee also met with a committee of the International Typographical Union to consider cases which arose before the arbitration agreement expired. No findings were announced.

Boston Advertiser Has 2 Ad Staffs

The Boston Advertiser is trying out a new plan of advertising solicitation. As there is the Sunday Advertiser, a standard size paper, and the Daily Advertiser, a tabloid pictorial issue, an advertising staff entirely distinct from the Sunday Advertiser to specialize in advertising to fit the character of the paper has been organized under the direction of Ray C. Mills, advertising manager, and M. C. Priest, business manager. The staff under Mr. Mills, recently advertising manager of the Fall River Herald, consists of 6 men with special training in advertising solicitation for a pictorial newspaper. The Sunday Advertiser staff remains unchanged.

Macon Paper Loses 12-Cent Verdict

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MACON, Ga., June 28.—Former Mayor Glen Toole obtained a verdict of 12 cents in his $50,000 libel suit against the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph. A jury in Macon city court on Wednesday afternoon, the third day of the trial, rendered this verdict after two hours' deliberation. Under the Georgia law, all of the costs in the case above the amount named, 12 cents, is assessed upon the plaintiff. The former mayor charged that he had been libeled when the Telegraph said that he figured in an automobile wreck. He denied this.

Seattle Stereotype Wages Cut

SEATTLE, Wash., June 22.—A local arbitration award, dated yesterday, maintains the 44-hour week for newspaper stereotypers and reduces wages $2.50 per week for journeymen. This is a five per cent reduction in wages. The new contract expires December 31, 1923.

"OHIO FIRST"

Ohio is one of the best territories possible to find in the United States. It has everything to make it an ideal market as a tryout proposition for national advertising campaigns.

Here are found nearly six million people—five per cent of the population of the United States—85% native white, 11.8% foreign born and 3.2% negroes.

Ohio has 1,414,068 families or 34.4 per square mile. Of these 256,695 families live on farms. These farms have a total acreage of 23,515,000, making approximately seven farm families per square mile.

Ohio farm products and Ohio manufactured products mount well into the billions of dollars in value annually. Ohio ranks fourth in value of all manufactures and in ten industries outranks all other states.

Ohio newspapers listed here are market finders for national advertisers. They have helped numerous manufacturers to win a place in Ohio and to hold it. They are at your service.

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Akron Beacon Journal	(E)	35,904	.085	.085
*Akron Times	(E)	19,518	.06	.06
*Akron Sunday Times	(S)	21,952	.07	.07
*Athens Messenger	(E)	9,775	.03	.03
Bellefontaine Examiner	(E)	4,407	.0179	.0179
Cincinnati Enquirer	(M&S)	73,120	.17-.35	.17-.35
Cleveland Plain Dealer	(M)	181,185	.32	.38
Cleveland Plain Dealer	(S)	221,084	.37	.43
Columbus Dispatch	(E)	72,317	.15	.14
Columbus Dispatch	(S)	74,654	.15	.14
Conneaut News Herald	(E)	3,094	.017	.0179
Dover Daily Reporter	(E)	4,410	.02	.02
*Hamilton Daily News	(E)	8,143	.04	.04
Ironton Irontonian	(M)	3,150	.0179	.0179
Kenton Democrat	(E)	2,400	.014	.014
*Lima News and Times-Democ't	(E&S)	16,083	.07	.05
*Lima Republican-Gazette	(M&S)	10,270	.035	.035
*Marietta Times	(E)	6,160	.025	.025
Middletown Journal	(E)	5,037	.025	.025
Newark American-Tribune	(E)	6,573	.025	.025
Piqua Call and Press-Dispatch	(E)	6,039	.025	.025
Portsmouth Sun and Times	(M&E)	16,286	.06	.06
Portsmouth Sun-Times	(S)	10,059	.04	.04
*Toledo Blade	(E)	95,683	.25	.23
Toronto Tribune	(E)	1,092	.011	.011
Warren Daily Chronicle	(E)	6,405	.025	.025
*Youngstown Vindicator	(E)	24,063	.07	.07
*Youngstown Vindicator	(S)	25,220	.07	.07

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, April 1, 1922

J. E. HARDMAN DIES SUDDENLY

Heart Failure Kills Managing Editor of Davenport Times

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

DAVENPORT, Iowa, June 28.—James E. Hardman, aged 51, for 20 years managing editor of the Davenport Daily Times, died suddenly Wednesday evening following an attack of heart trouble. He had been suffering for some time but remained at work up until press time on the day of his death because of extra work in connection with the National Grotto convention here. Mr. Hardman formerly lived at Sigourney, Iowa, where he began his early newspaper training, later coming to Davenport as reporter for the Times. He worked through the editorial department until he was made managing editor in 1901.

Most of his term of service has been under E. P. Adler, publisher of the Times and president of the Lee newspaper syndicate. Many prominent newspaper men and writers of today began under Mr. Hardman during his term of service, including Harry Hansen, Fred Hatton, Floyd Dell and others.

His out-of-town acquaintance covered newspaper offices throughout the central west and he was a prominent figure in the correspondents' section of most of the national political conventions held in the central west.

"CARNATION" DAN O'LEARY DEAD

Great Fire of 1872 Brought Dean of Police Court Reporters to Chicago

"Carnation Dan" O'Leary, aged 69, dean of Chicago's police reporters, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Chicago, June 24. He acquired the sobriquet because he always wore a carnation on the left lapel of his coat. Twenty years ago at his sister's funeral he plucked a carnation from the casket and told a group of newspaper men attending it that he would always wear one in her memory. "Carnation Dan" worked on practically every newspaper in Chicago during the past thirty years. He came to Chicago as a volunteer fireman with the Detroit department at the time of the Chicago conflagration in 1872, and never returned to Detroit. He was formerly a player on the old Indianapolis baseball team.

Obituary

CORA HANEY PETTIBONE, wife of William H. Pettibone, general manager of the Detroit Free Press, died June 24 in St. Joseph's Sanitarium, Ann Arbor, Mich. Mr. and Mrs. Pettibone were attending the pre-commencement exercises preliminary to the graduation of their daughter, Dana, from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, when Mrs. Pettibone was taken ill. Her physician recommended an immediate operation for appendicitis. This took place Tuesday, and Mrs. Pettibone showed improvement until a sudden change for the worse resulted in her death.

MISS TILLIE MAY FORNEY, daughter of the late Col. John W. Forney, died June 25 in Philadelphia. Miss Forney was for many years associated with her father, who was one of the most prominent journalists of his day. She collaborated with her brother, John W. Forney, in publishing "Progress," a magazine with which her father also was identified. Miss Forney contributed to various magazines and other publications.

JOHN L. BEST, for 25 years an editor of the Northampton (Mass.) Daily Hampshire Gazette, died recently.

MRS. CLEMENTINE KENDRICK BURNS, aged 70, who sold the Boston Globe since the paper first was handled in Saco, Me., in 1875, died in that city June 23.

MISS MARY A. GOULD, aged 60, for more than 25 years associated with the business office and circulation department of the Daily Eastern Argus, now combined into the Press Herald at Portland, Me., died June 26.

MRS. A. W. POTTS, mother-in-law of Capt. Raymond I. Tennant, formerly in the service department of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press and president of the St. Paul Town Criers' Club, died recently at Moravia, Iowa.

CAPT. GEORGE WALLIS HAMILTON, marine corps aviator, who was killed in a 3,000-foot nose dive at Gettysburg, Pa., Monday, was the son of Charles A. Hamilton, Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Times. The younger Hamilton held the Distinguished Service Cross, the Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre with palms for service overseas.

WILLIAM DEWEES, aged 56, president of the Chicago Addressing Company and originator of the circular advertising business, died the past week. He founded the C. S. Boles Addressing Company in 1883. Later the firm was reorganized as the Chicago Addressing Company.

MRS. EVA TALLMADGE BROWNE, aged 67, widow of J. Stanley Browne, managing editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star from 1888 until he died in 1915, is dead in Rockford.

WATKIN L. ROE, editor and publisher of the Preston (Ida.) Franklin County Citizen, died June 19. For 20 years Mr. Roe was foreman of the "ad" alley of the Salt Lake (Utah) Herald.

HENRY RIGHTOR, aged 52, formerly a New Orleans newspaper man, died last week of heart disease.

To Unveil Tablet to Newspaper Men

A bronze tablet in memory of the 14 British Columbia newspaper men who fell in the World War will be unveiled August 6 by Lieut. Gov. Walter C. Nichol of British Columbia. It will be placed under the dome of the Parliament Building in Victoria and will also carry the names of the more than 50 newspaper men who served in the war and returned. The memorial has been subscribed to by the daily and weekly papers of British Columbia and the Institute of Journalists.

GRADUATES GET JOBS

Washington Journalism Seniors Ready for End of School

Seven of the nine students who will be graduated at the School of Journalism, University of Washington, in June, have accepted positions. Three members of the class are doing part-time work in offices where they will become permanent employes as soon as college closes. The senior class roll follows: Harold H. Marquis and Donald S. Harris, Miller Freeman Publications, New York and Seattle; Frank Lockerby, Associated Press, Spokane; Loren Milliman, Lewiston (Ida.) Tribune; Minnie Nelson, Seattle Post-Intelligencer; Phebe Hunt, society editor, Ellensburg (Wash.) Evening Record; Ruth Ainsworth, associated with her father, Fred L. Wolf, in the publication of the Newport Miner. Miss Margery Lindsay, Seattle, announced her engagement to Mitchel V. Charnley now on the staff of the Walla Walla Bulletin.

Fred B. Judges, Spokane, who will graduate in six months, is Northwest representative of the Pictorial Review.

Hiester Guie, alumnus and former member of the staff of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, has joined the Everett News.

Monitor Cleveland Ad Office

The Christian Science Monitor has opened a new branch advertising office in Cleveland which will cover Ohio, western New York and Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Michigan, with Eugene Batten in charge. Horace H. Delano has been appointed manager of the Chicago branch advertising office, succeeding Charles M. Veazey, who has gone to Boston.

M. N. Stiles Home from Buenos Aires

M. N. Stiles, head of the Associated Press bureau at Buenos Aires, arrived in New York June 23 on a leave of absence. He is at present in Washington and will go to several central Western cities before he returns to South America.

Tacoma Papers Have Picnic

Employes of the Tacoma (Wash.) News, Tribune and Ledger had their annual picnic June 27 at the Lakeside Club, American Lake. About 150 enjoyed the outing.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

NEWS AND FEATURE SERVICES

Maintain Prestige—Create Circulation—Attract Advertising

NEWS SERVICES

(Via leased wire or laid down in New York, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Seattle, San Francisco or Los Angeles.)

PUBLIC LEDGER COMBINATION NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER FOREIGN NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER DOMESTIC NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER BUSINESS NEWS SERVICE.

FEATURE SERVICES

WEEKLY MAGAZINE PAGES IN MAT: Personality Page, Special Feature Page, Science Page, Short Story Page. COMICS: "Somebody's Stenog." (Hayward), "That Reminds Me" (Collins), "And Then He Changed His Mind" (Dunn), "Dumb-Bells" (Dunn), "The Crossing Cop" (John). CARTOONS: Sykes' Daily; "Follies of the Passing Show" (Hanlon), Weekly; "Children of Adam" (Rehse), Daily. FICTION: Daily and Weekly Detective and Mystery Serials; Hazel Deyo Batchelor's Daily Love-Problem Serials; Daily and Weekly Short Stories. RADIO FEATURE: "Radio in the Home" (Daily). MIDGET FEATURES of stick length: "Things You'll Love to Make," "Things for Boys to Make," "The Housewife's Idea Box," "What's What," "After-Dinner Tricks," "The Home in Good Taste," "How to Save When Shopping," "Cultivating Your Charm," "Famous Ghosts," "Favorite Recipes of Famous Women," "Sharpening up Your Memory," "Guess Who?" "Pam's Paris Postals," "The Children's Hour," "History of Your Name," "Who-Why-What-When-Where?" "Human Curios," "Sportfolio," "What Are You Good For?" "Making More Money," "Daily Fun Hour," "Can You Tell?" "Correct English," "Read Your Character." HOME PAGE FEATURES: "A Daughter of Eve," "The Latest" (Paris Fashions), "Home Cooking," by Queen Victoria's cook, "As Woman to Woman," "Dreamland Adventures." SPORTS COMMENT: "The Sport Reel," "Wise Tennis Tips" (Tilden). PUZZLES, CUT-OUTS, TRICKS and MAGIC.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

© TRADE LINOTYPE MARK ©

Every important improvement in methods of composition for the past 36 years has been the result of LINOTYPE initiative.

Every part of the LINOTYPE is there because the machine is better for it and every part fits into the big scheme of simple operation. The LINOTYPE is the machine of no compromise.

The illustration shows the Model 24, text and display LINOTYPE. As many as ten faces in six different sizes are immediately available from the keyboard.

Exhibitors at Boston Graphic Arts Exposition

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE

THE "AGED MAN" AND SOME OTHERS THAT MEAN NOTHING

Reporter Who Claims Championship as Chronicler of Hen House Construction and Confesses Authorship of Effusions That Gagged Readers Yells "Stop"

By D. H. TALMADGE

FAR be it from me to find fault with the bright young men who write the news for the daily papers. I shoot this as a sort of barrage in the beginning of what I am about to say, so that there may be no misunderstanding. I do not want to be taken as a critic. I do want to be taken as a lover of good English, although I readily admit my own weakness as a purveyor of the article.

I have not been this way always. I wrote news, or what passes for news at the crossroads, for a good many years. It is possible that were I to claim the record for having chronicled the building of more hen-houses and barns than any other writer on the American press I might make the claim stick. But I am not proud, nor am I much ambitious any more. I have been guilty of writing up weddings so effusively that everybody gagged except the families of the contracting parties. I have done obituaries, hundreds of them, which were so sloppy they made me ashamed, but this was due to a conviction that the relatives of the deceased made them sloppy. In the writing of these and other stock stories at the crossroads I have used the same phrases over and over again. It is not altogether safe to spring new stuff. A bride is a bride, and a remains is a remains, and a leading citizen is a leading citizen. One's scope is necessarily limited. It is the part of wisdom for him to adhere to the stereotyped phrases.

This, however, is aside from the point. The light on the sunset trail seems more penetrating, more revealing, than that on the other side of the divide. The mind body reacts more slowly, and the mind, no longer concentrated on matters pertaining to the daily rush, becomes sensitive to imperfections. It is not in a captious spirit that it utters its protests. Rather it is with a feeling of tenderness for the language, and a longing, a desire, for purity, for perfection, in the use of the printed word.

A young writer of news told me the other day, somewhat impatiently, that the sole purpose of the language is to express meaning. He is not entirely correct, even from his own standpoint as a writer of news. For instance of his incorrectness there is the word "staged." It is neither elegant nor kind to abuse an innocent, not overly strong, word. Everything is "staged"—boxing matches, pink teas, political debates, declamation contests, surgical operations, bargain sales—until one is bored stiff. Again, there is the term "aged man," which for some quite unknown reason is used frequently. The subject of the "aged man" story is more often than not under the age of sixty. Why "aged"? Why not plain "man"? To the reader who has celebrated fifty or sixty birthdays since his arrival in this vale of tears the adjective is maddening. For months I have been in my daily skimming of the papers confronted by the term, "a local hospital." It appears that most of the deaths occur in "a local hospital." The average person is interested in knowing the name of the hospital, but in many localities he cannot obtain this knowledge through the press. This, of course, has no reference to the subject under consideration, though it might be well for the young person who does the hospital stuff to coin a new term to apply to the cheerful one of dissolution. Parrots are well enough in their place, but really one becomes weary of parrot-like phrases in the columns of his favorite daily newspaper. Why not cut out the hospital entirely, and simply say that the person died?

Then there is "well known." I counted recently twelve references to "well known" people in one issue of the paper with which a red-headed boy tries to break one of my front windows every morning. "Well known" applied thus indiscriminately means nothing except that the mental machinery of the writer is working in a groove and that the vast wealth of possibilities in the language is lost to sight, and I suspect that in some cases it is not to memory dear either.

Do you not see, boys, that the reiteration of phrases destroys the force of your work? That the "meaning" which your words are intended to convey is lost thereby? There is a young fellow who writes news for a certain daily newspaper in this U. S. A. who no longer uses the word "notable." Time was when pretty much everything that came to him for write-up was "notable." A political meeting, an arrest by the county sheriff, a sermon by the pastor of the Presbyterian church, all were "notable." Then one day he called a man "notable" who thought that "notable" meant "notorious" and the jolt which followed was sufficiently strong to boost the young chap's mind out of the groove in which it was running. Providence now and then butts in and helps a chap in spite of himself.

Is there a paucity of adjectives in the language? There is not. It might be better if there were. Refreshments as recorded in the society columns are either "delicious" or "dainty" always and forever, amen. Nine out of ten homes where functions (by the way, there is a word for you!) occur or take place or are pulled off are "beautiful." It is a lie in many instances, but presumably the owner of the home and his women folk like it. The less beautiful it is the better they like it, too. It makes the unrelated reader sick, however, if he is sensitive to newspaper technique. I pass over the "charming" hostess with a shudder. Once back at the cross-roads I called a woman "charming" in the society news, and in the same issue called her husband a "disorderly conduct" in the police news. And that "charming" woman dropped into the office presently and called me godamfule, just like that.

It is difficult for me to concentrate, I find. This article is not what I thought to make it when I sat down to the old mill. I have wandered and am wandering. The reference to the woman who was "charming" calls up an incident in which another woman is concerned. This woman was positively notorious. She was a stench in the nostrils (good old phrase, time tried and fire

(Continued on page 36)

The high quality of HUBER'S Grit-Free BLACK NEWS INKS also prevails in HUBER'S COLORED INKS for comic and magazine supplements.

Manufactured by

J. M. Huber

Main Office: NEW YORK

HUBER'S colors in use since 1780

IOWA—

Owns 69 different makes of motor trucks for a total of 30,535

Just another item which shows the policy of Iowans to employ modern methods. From this number, over 9,000 are on farms, ranking Iowa third in number of motor trucks on farms in 1921.

There were 430,118 passenger cars of 67 makes registered in Iowa the same year. Here Iowa is first, with one machine to every 5.5 persons. Well over 177,000 of these automobiles are on farms—more than any other state.

A Leader in the Automotive World

Garage and accessory dealers have increased from 1,500 to approximately 5,000 in less than ten years. Iowa is universally regarded as one of the finest automobile and motor truck markets in the country.

Automobile ownership is a sign of individual wealth. Practically everyone wants a car and owns it if possible. Iowa's place as first in the number of machines per capita would indicate that individually, Iowans have greater-than-usual buying power.

Where could be found a more desirable field for goods meeting a popular demand? Live concerns are concentrating their advertising on this productive market.

You can reach all Iowa through these newspapers.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(M)	10,510	.035
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(S)	13,171	.035
*Cedar Rapids Gazette.....(E)	19,711	.06
*Council Bluffs Nonpareil .....(E&S)	14,749	.05
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(E)	14,649	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,080	.06
*Davenport Times .....(E)	23,839	.07
*Des Moines Capital .....(E)	60,186	.14
*Des Moines Sunday Capital .....(S)	33,607	.14
*Des Moines Register and Tribune..(M&E)	122,074	.20
*Des Moines Sunday Register.....(S)	116,465	.20
*Iowa City Press-Citizen .....(E)	6,320	.035
Mason City Globe Gazette.....(E)	11,015	.035
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,868	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	13,186	.05
*Sioux City Journal .....(M&E)	50,804	.11
*Sioux City Journal .....(S)	38,168	.11
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	15,099	.05

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

Albee Corporation, 14 East Jackson Blvd., Chicago. Placing copy on United Hydro Tires.

Barritt & Co., 220 South State street, Chicago. Reported will make up list during next 30 days for Sidway Mercantile Company, baby carriages, Elkhart, Ind.

Bauerlein, Inc., Hibernia Bank Building, New Orleans. Has been appointed advertising agents for Paul Gelpi & Sons, chocolate manufacturers, and the Association of Commerce, New Orleans.

Berrien Company, Inc., 19 West 44th street, New York. Has secured account of Illinois Zinc Company, Chicago.

Blackman Company, Inc., 120 West 42d street, New York. Will make up lists during July for Lewis A. Crossett Company, men's and women's shoes, North Abington, Mass.; placing orders with newspapers in various sections for Red Book Magazine, 33 West 42d street, New York. Placing orders for Procter & Gamble, Cincinnati, in newspapers.

Bloomingdale-Weiler Advertising Agency, 1420 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Has secured account of M. Eiseman & Sons, cigars, 246 North Delaware avenue, Philadelphia.

Central Foundry Company, 90 West street, New York. This firm, manufacturer of "Universal" cast iron pipe, will make up lists during July and will advertise direct. Henry Hoeltge, advertising manager, is in charge.

Dake-Johanet Advertising Company, Charleston Bldg., San Francisco. Placing orders on Tysmal Medical Company.

D'Arcy Advertising Agency, International Life Bldg., St. Louis. Placing copy for Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Dauchy Company, 9 Murray street, New York. Reported will make up list of newspapers for Glen Brothers, nursery products, 1768 East Main street, Rochester, N. Y.; again placing classified orders with newspapers for Madison Mills, hosiery, 503 Broadway, New York.

Lee E. Donelley Company, Ulmer Bldg., Cleveland. Will make up lists during next 30 days for Born Steel Range Company, household ranges, 517 Huron road, Cleveland.

Dunlap-Ward Advertising Agency, Union National Bank Bldg., Cleveland. Making contracts for varying space with newspapers for Cleveland Automobile Company.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Reported will make up list during July for E. W. Rose Company, "Zemo," 1750 East 27th street, Cleveland.

Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency, Terminal Bldg., Philadelphia. Placing orders with New York City newspapers for Mifflin Chemical Corporatoin, "Mifflin Alkohol Massage," 527 Hudson street, New York.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 623 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Will make up lists during July and August for Pyramid Drug Company, 227 East State street, Marshall, Mich.

Gray Advertising Agency, Gray Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. Using 90-line, 24-time space in newspapers for Paratabs Laboratories.

Greenleaf Company, 516 5th avenue, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers in New York and vicinity for Pencil Products Company, "Salrite" pencil, 175 5th avenue, New York.

Groesbeck, Hearn & Hindle, 350 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of Watson Stabilator Company, shock absorbers, 207 West 57th street, New York.

Harvey Advertising Company, Inc., 304 Walton Bldg., Atlanta. Reported will make up list of newspapers during July for Blosser Company, medical, 82 North Pryor street, Atlanta.

Honig-Cooper Company, 74 New Montgomery street, San Francisco. Handling advertising of Sussman, Wormser & Co., wholesale grocers, San Francisco. Newspapers, trade papers, and outdoor posters will be used in the Coast territory to advetise "S & W" coffee; also handling advertising of Baumer-Waldner Company smokers' specialties.

E. T. Howard Company, 117 West 46th street, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts with newspapers for Phillips-Jones Corporation; has secured account of Independent Warehouses, Inc., New York, chain of warehouses in United States.

Martin V. Kelley Company, 2d National Bank Bldg., Toledo. Has secured account of Balba Corporation of America, perfume, Toledo.

Lord & Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing 5,000-line orders for Nordyke-Marmon Motor Company; issuing 5,000-line orders on Pepsodent Company.

Lord & Thomas, 366 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of Autostrop Safety Razor Company, 656 1st avenue, New York; placing orders with New England newspapers for S. Liebman's Sons, "Old Scotch Brew."

Lyon Advertising Agency, Inc., Times Bldg., New York. Has secured account of Carlisle Tire Corporation, "Carlisle Rope Tires," Stanford, Conn.

O. J. McClure Advertising Agency, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. Will use newspapers for Hawkins Mortgage Company, Portland, Ind., operator of a chain of loaning societies in several states.

Eugene McGuckin Company, 1211 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Placing orders with newspapers for Interlaken Mills, "Interlaken Book Cloth," Providence, R. I.

Mace Advertising Agency, Lehmann Bldg., Peoria, Ill. Make up lists in July and December for Empire Manufacturing Company, "Empire" steel wagons and wheels, 615½ Hampshire street, Quincy, Ill.

Matos Advertising Agency, Bulletin Bldg., Philadelphia. Has secured account of James Good, Inc., "Good Dog Soap," 2111 East Susquehanna avenue, Philadelphia.

Harry C. Michaels Company, 113 Lexington avenue, New York. Placing orders with Connecticut newspapers for Diamond Bottling Company, Waterbury.

B. G. Moon Company, Proctor Bldg., Troy, N. Y. Placing orders with New York City newspapers for W. O. Horn & Bro., Inc., "Reviva" cravat, 53 West 14th street, New York.

Patterson-Andress Company, Inc., 1 Madison avenue, New York. Making 5,000-line contracts with newspapers for Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

John O. Powers Company, 50 East 42nd street, New York. Placing copy with newspapers that have magazine sections for Mum Manufacturing Company, "Mum" and "Amoray" talc, 110 Chestnut stret, Philadelphia.

William H. Rankin Company, 1 West 37th street, New York. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections for American Ever Ready Works, flashlight, Long Island City, N. Y.

H. E. Remington Advertising Company, 225 East Superior street, Chicago. Placing copy on Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad.

Irwin L. Rosenberg Company, Wrigley Bldg., Chicago. Has secured accounts of the Gifts, Art Wares & Novelties Association and of the Audiola Radio Company, Chicago.

Louis Charles Rosenberg, 23 East 26th street, New York. Will make up lists during July for Columbia Metal Box Company, 226 East 144th street, New York, electrical cabinets, safety switches and medicine cabinets.

Sek Manufacturing Company, 4301 West Kinzie street, Chicago. Asking rates and information.

Snitzler-Warner Company, 225 North Michigan Blvd., Chicago. Has secured account of Tildesley & Co., "Yacht Club Salad Dressing," 314 North Clark street, Chicago.

J. L. Sugden Advertising Company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Placing copy in Ohio papers for "Victor" hairnets.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 242 Madison avenue, New York. Has secured account of Vanity Fair Underwear, Reading, Pa.

Vanderhoof & Co., 167 East Ontario street, Chicago. Will make up list during July and August for University of Chicago Press, books and journals, 5750 Ellis avenue, Chicago.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts with newspapers for Northwestern Yeast Company; again making newspaper contracts for Lambert Pharmacal Company, "Listerine," 2101 Locust street, St. Louis.

Cut Paper Rates to Southwest

Rates on newsprint paper moving from Oregon and Washington mills to Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado are to be reduced as soon as new schedules can be issued, according to announcement made by the Southern Pacific Company. The reduction will be from $1.25 to 87 cents to Texas and Oklahoma and from 94 cents to 79 cents to Colorado.

(By Science Service)

Means:

INTERESTING READABLE ACCURATE RELIABLE POPULAR SCIENCE
NEWS STORIES

in

THE SCIENCE NEWS BULLETIN

Write or wire for territory and rates.

SCIENCE SERVICE
1115 Connecticut Ave.
Washington, D. C.

NEWMARK WITH DURANT

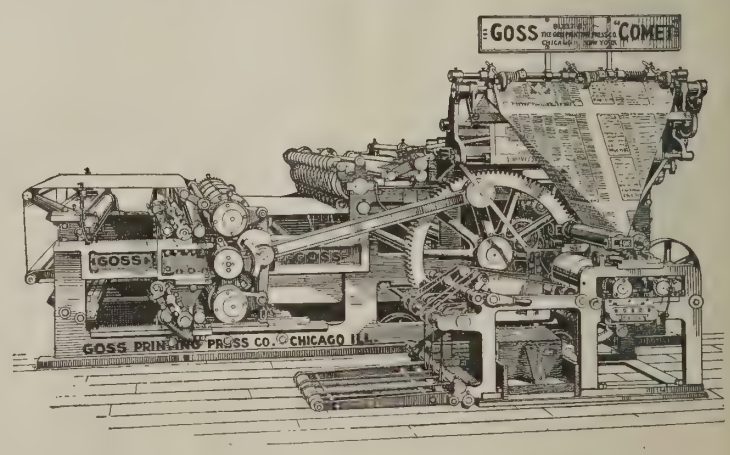
For 13 Years With General Motors Sales and Ad Force

J. H. Newmark, for thirteen years associated with General Motors companies in a sales and advertising capacity, has resigned as advertising manager to join Durant Motors. He is one of the oldest men in point of service to leave the organization, having worked under every presidence since the big company's inception. He entered General Motors via Olds Motor Works, where he spent one year which was followed by a six-year association with Oakland Motor Company. For more than 5 years he was located at the executive offices of the Chevrolet Motor Company, New York City. When the advisory staff of General Motors corporation was organized a year ago, he was asked to become a member of the sales, advertising and service section, of which Norval A. Hawkins is the director. Mr. Newmark's office will be in Long Island City.

J. H. Newmark

Reporters Have Own Outing

Chicago afternoon newspaper reporters and writers organized a "motor train" into the country with their wives or sweethearts on June 25. The fleet of motor cars started out at 8:30 in the morning and Deer Park was reached before noon. A dinner in the woods, swimming, boating and races in which prizes were awarded helped to make up an entertaining program. Those in the outing included "Jimmy" Murphy, veteran of the Chicago Journal; Walter Wright, of the Daily News; Emil Hukba, of the City News Bureau; Leroy F. (Buddy) McHugh, Chicago Evening American; Pearce Butler, of the Chicago Evening Post; Harry Heydenburg, of the United Press; Adolph Wagner, reporter on the American, and Joseph D. McHugh, of the Chicago Evening American rewrite desk.



WOMEN REPORTERS GATHER

General Federation of Women's Clubs the Magnet

With prominent club women from all over the United States and foreign countries numbering about 4,000 in session at the 16th biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at Chautauqua, N. Y., more than 50 special writers and correspondents are covering the meeting, together with many editors and associate editors of women's publications.

Correct reporting was discussed by representatives of the press on Friday of the first week of the meeting. Among those who told the club women about newspaper and magazine work were Miss Sarah MacDougal, the New York Sunday World; Miss Elizabeth Toombs, Harper's Bazaar; Mrs. James J. Reed, Fayetteville, Ark., editor of the Federation News; Miss Ida Clyde Clarke, Pictorial Review; Miss Martha Dodson, the Ladies' Home Journal; Mrs. Harriet C. Emmons, Modern Priscilla; Mrs. Josephine Dascomb Baker; Miss Elen Foster Stone, the Philadelphia Public Ledger; Miss Grahm, the Congressional Digest; Mrs. Gertrude Bonnin, writer of children's stories; Mrs. Dye, the New York Evening Post; Miss Louise Dooley, the Atlanta Constitution; Mrs. E. C. Smith, the Wheeling (W. Va.) Register; Mrs. Adelaide P. Smith, the United Press; Miss Lessie Leonard, the New England Women's Press Association; and Miss Nellie Scanlon, who came to the United States to report the disarmament conference for New Zealand papers.

GOSS
COMET FLAT BED PRESS

Prints 4-6 and 8 Page Papers
From Type Forms and Roll Paper.
A 5 Horse Power Motor will drive it.

Now Being Built for Early Delivery

Write for Literature and Prices

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.
Main Office and Works: 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago
New York Office: 220 W. Forty-second St.

NEWS OF ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

THE Clarksburg (W. Va.) Advertising Club installed its news officers t a dinner held June 15. Arthur Heinze vas the toastmaster. The new officers re J. Monroe Boyer, president; Dr. C. . Wilson, vice-president; George R. nyder, secretary; and J. C. Yost, reasurer.

The mid-summer meeting of the Ver-ont Press Association took the form f a pilgrimage into Northern Vermont nd Southern Canada last week. Gath-ring in St. Johnsbury June 22, about 25 ewspaper men and their wives and riends enjoyed a banquet at the Maple rove Inn as the guests of the St. Johns-ury newspapermen and the Commer-ial Club. Frank E. Howe, editor of ie Bennington Banner, and president of ie Vermont Press Association, presided t the exercises after the banquet. Ar-ur F. Stone, of the St. Johnsbury Cale-onian-Record welcomed the newspaper-en for the press of his town and Edgar . Brown spoke for the Commercial lub.

On Friday morning, the party left in x automobiles for the Averill Lakes. rom there they proceeded to Sher-ooke, P. Q., on Saturday, and remained ere Saturday night. The party was ndsomely entertained at luncheon Sat-day noon at Newport by the local embers of the association.

Mrs. Mamie Wynne Cox, Dallas, was ected president of the Texas Woman's ress Association in its meeting at ichita Falls June 18, and Waco was lected for next year's convention. ther officers are: Mrs. Bettie Ma-uder, San Angelo, first vice-president; rs. J. M. F. Gill, Burkburnett, sec-d vice-president; Mrs. F. M. McKay, senberg, third vice-president; Miss nsuelo Lankford, Sherman, corre-onding secretary; Mrs. W. B. Hamil-n, Robert Lee, Tex., treasurer. Miss ecca Lamar West, Waco, Miss Estelle ace, Beaumont, and Mrs. Cornelia nes, formerly of Texas, now of Los ngeles, were awarded prizes for best erature written during the past year.

Chester I. Campbell, president of the ilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, cently supervised a day's outing at the ashore for crippled and orphaned ungsters. He has been receiving many ters of appreciation from the kiddies.

In a recent talk given before the ranton (Pa.) Motor Trades Associa-n, Charles Swisher, of the Swisher dvertising service of that city went on ord as favoring a plain statement of cts in advertising. He spoke on the bject "Advertising, survey your pro-ct." The speaker also dwelt on the st circulation of the daily newspapers the country, saying there are 2,000 ilies with a circulation of 30,000,000.

The New York Advertising Club golf mmittee has arranged three tourna-nts during which the Presbrey cup d the Golfers Magazine cup will be yed for. The first tournament will be ld on the St. Albans course July 28; second on the Dunwoodie course, gust 15; and the third on the Shack-axon Jersey course, September 27.

In advance of the summer session of State Press Association, Southwest ashington newspaper men gathered in ympia, Wash., June 17, for a business l social session. Speakers were Rus-l Mack, the Aberdeen World; Dan ud, the Montesano Vidette; Herbert mpbell, the Vancouver Columbian; W. Kennedy, department of journal-n, University of Washington; R. L. app, the Morton Mirror; M. L. ncher, University of Washington; l J. Newton Colver, the Seattle Post-telligencer.

Members of the Worcester (Mass.) dvertising Club, 150 strong, enjoyed an ing on June 24 at Rocky Point, ovidence, R. I. A clambake was in-uded among other features. R. P. binson was chief marshal. Sports re under direction of John Burford, of the Worcester "Y" as umpire and Philip Frye, R. C. Moore, Edward King, H. E. King, and J. J. Sullivan. The members were guests of R. M Daschner, Worcester hotel proprietor and the W. H. Graham Corporation, headed by Ray O. Page, the company's Worcester manager.

The Michigan Woman's Press Association held its annual meeting at Flint, June 15, 16 and 17. The following officers were elected: Dr. Emma E. Bower, editor and publisher, the Lady Maccabee, Port Huron, president; Mrs. Clara Pierson, Stanton, first vice-president; Mrs. Fred W. Gage, Battle Creek, second vice-president; Mrs. Marion Long Jones, women's page editor, the Flint Daily Journal, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Emma R. Sherman, Paw Paw, recording secretary; Mrs. Grace Greenwood Browne, Jackson, treasurer; and Miss Martha E. Moll, Detroit, Mrs. Irene Pomeroy Shields, Bay City, Mrs. Mary A. St. John, Lansing, Mrs. C. M. Davis, Fenton, and Mrs. Margaret H. Alden, Detroit, directors.

The summer meeting of the Kentucky Press Association is in session at Crab Orchard, Ky., June 29, 30 and July 1. The newspaper men will not only talk shop and routine business, according to J. C. Alcock, Danville Messenger, but will compete in foot races, swimming races, diving contests and other athletic events. Special prizes are offered for the best front page make-up, best printed matter, ugliest editor, most bald-headed editor, etc. Among those on the program for speeches are Harry Giovannoli, Lexington Leader; Arthur Krock, Louisville Times, and B. F. Forgey, Ashland Independent.

The National Association of Theater Program Publishers plan to create new by-laws and adopt a standard rate card for program advertising. Action is also favored to bar from theater programs all questionable and misleading advertising. Officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, E. E. Brugh, of the Clyde Riley Advertising System, Chicago; vice-president, D. R. Mills, Omaha, Neb.; secretary-treasurer, Louis G. Sprecher, Los Angeles, Cal.; members national advertising commission: John H. Logeman, Chicago; D. R. Mills, Detroit; J. C. Chevalier, New York.

The Arkansas Press Association, held its 50th annual meeting in Little Rock June 7. Over 60 members were present at the opening session. R. O. Schaefer, editor of the Southern Construction News was elected president of the association, succeeding J. C. Jolly. Other officers for next year are: Frank E. Robins, Canway Log Cabin Democrat, first vice-president; H. M. Jackson, Mariana Courier-Index, second vice-president; C. C. Hudson, Dierks Banner, third vice-president; Clio Harper, Little Rock Parke-Harper News Service, corresponding secretary (reelected); E. A. Fowler, Benton Courier, Financial secretary; T. D. Harris, Marked Tree Tribune, Recording secretary; Dr. A. C. Millar, Little Rock, Arkansas Methodist, orator; the Rev. J. L. Wadley, Texarkana Texarkanian, chaplain (reelected); Mrs. Ruby Livingston, Russellville courier-Democrat, poet (reelected); Fred W. Allsopp, Little Rock Arkansas Gazette, was elected historian for life.

The foreign advertiser will have no advantage in rates over the local advertiser in Washington State newspapers if a motion adopted at the Southwest Washington group meeting of the Washington State Press association is carried when the entire association meets at Pullman next month. Thirty publishers at the June 17 meeting voted to present a resolution to the state body providing that the minimum rate charged for foreign advertising be equal to the net rate for local advertising with the 15 per cent. agency discount and the 2 per cent. cash discount added.

Members of the Past Presidents Club of the Missouri Press Association are enjoying an outing at Cape Girardeau this week as the guests of Fred Naeter, of the Cape Girardeau Southeast Missourian. The party left St. Louis June 30 and will arrive in Cape Girardeau Saturday morning, have lunch as the guests of the Rotary Club and dinner as Mr. Naeter's guests at the Country Club. Addresses will be made by Dean Walter Williams of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, William Southern, Jr., and others.

The next semi-annual meeting of the Midwest Circulation Managers' Association will be held at Colorado Springs, Colo., September 6 and 7. The Association takes in the five states of Colorado, Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas. The officers are: Sidney D. Long, Wichita (Kans.) Eagle, president; William Boeshans, St. Joseph Gazette, vice-president; W. W. Rhoads, Farm Home and Mechanical Farming, Kansas City, secretary-treasurer.

Program Ads Under Ban

At a meeting of the Business Men's Association of Canandaigua, N. Y., a resolution was adopted opposing all appropriations for advertising except in newspapers, in street cars and on theater curtains. It was stated that within the past six months the merchants of Canandaigua, which is a small village, have contributed $4,000 for advertisements to be inserted in programs, small magazines and other publications from which little or no real return was received.

Topeka Capital Larger—Adds Features

The Topeka (Kan.) Daily Capital, published by Senator Arthur Capper, recently has increased the size of the paper and added a number of new features, including a serial, a page of pictures, several editorial page features and added cartoons.

Wins Chicago Trib Art Prize

Paul Cross Chapman, 24 years old, an ex-soldier, who has had comparatively little art training, has been awarded a $5,000 prize by the Chicago Tribune for the best mural decorations for the news room of its new plant.

NEW MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM FOR SMALL CIRCULATIONS

Publishers with daily mail circulations of 2,000 can handle their lists with the same efficiency, accuracy and time savings enjoyed by such users of a Multi-Mailer System as the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Indianapolis News and over fifty other large publications.

Multi-Mailer System No. 17, specially designed for small lists, gives all the Multi-Mailer benefits at a low initial investment.

Direct imprinting, daily correction of mail list, speed, accuracy, economy—those are only a few of its advantages.

Further information may be secured by writing The Speedaumatic Company 817-825 Washington Blvd., Chicago.

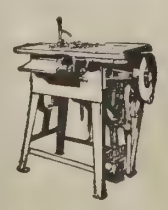
The Ludlow

For Stereotype Requirements

YOUR stereo man will appreciate the strength, height-to-paper and the low quads of Ludlow slug composition. In fact, congratulations will be exchanged between your stereo man, compositors, pressman—and the advertiser himself, who cannot fail to notice the superior typography.

Fewer Make-Overs Necessary

Low quads—11 points lower than the printing surface, are an attractive feature. They overcome the old difficulty of stereotyping from forms with shallow areas.

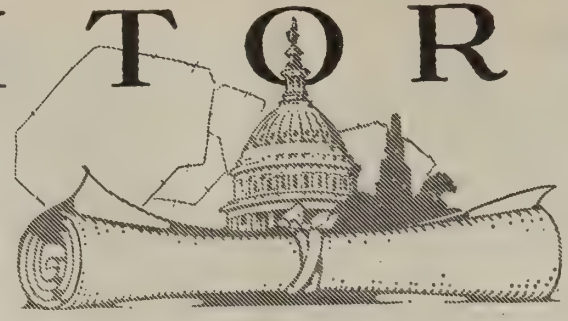


Strong slugs—slugs that will not break down even under dry-mat pressure—are a gratifying improvement. The shape of a Ludlow T-head slug limits the size of possible air bubbles to the minimum, and there are no hollows underneath.

T-head slugs are one explanation of the strength of Ludlow composition under pressure. Every Ludlow face over 12-point is supported by at least six walls. Walls are the strongest parts of any slug. The substantial overhanging face, supported by accurate underpinning, provides a form of solid metal which will stand any pressure.

Type-high accuracy is necessary to the stereotype room. Ludlow slugs are remarkably true in this respect, and this accuracy never varies. Ludlow mats do not wear. Slugs from old matrices are as high as from new ones. And Ludlow typefaces are always new.

Unbreakable italic is a boon to the stereotyper. Kerns never break off from Ludlow italic. All kerns are supported by the whole strength of the Ludlow slug.



"The full kerned italics that can be secured by the Ludlow improve the appearance of the paper; foundry italics soon have the kerns broken under the dry mat process, but with the Ludlows we can give perfect type free from broken kerns. Our advertisers like the italics." — Topeka State Journal.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
Eastern Office: World Building, New York City

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION ABOVE 10 PT.

EDITORIAL

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

Compiled by CHARLES W. MILLER,
Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald

IT is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because His compassions fail not. The Lord is good unto them that wait for Him, to the soul that seeketh Him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord—(Lam. iii:22, 25-26). He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God—(Micah vi:8). Thou shalt have no other gods before Me—(xx:3).

JOURNALISM'S OPPORTUNITIES

THERE has been no time in the history of the world when there was greater opportunity for the true journalist. No week passes that EDITOR & PUBLISHER does not have a request to suggest or recommend a person capable of assuming a position of responsibility in the profession that is to play the greatest part of all in moulding the future.

There will always be jobless men, but never before has there been such a great need and demand for men who can rise above the hurly-burly crowd and assume leadership through fearless honesty and a desire to establish their livelihood on truth. Journalism is the greatest modern medium of civilization; it is the equalizer of the world's melting pot. In America journalism has won greater freedom to do things worthwhile than has ever been within the grasp of any calling that has been forced to measure material return with service to mankind in maintaining real independence; the rewards are great and the only demand that must be met in return for them is unstinted labor dominated by honest purpose.

Five years ago American journalism was divided into two major classes, metropolitan and country. Ambition generally pointed to the former as the niche for greatest achievement and reward. In the five years that have passed a new field of opportunity has been opened to the real journalist. It was opened at Paris and broadened into a reality at the Washington Conference on Disarmament and at Genoa; its field is world-wide and its purpose is international interpretation and world understanding.

Statesmen will continue to confer and issue communiques, but there has come into being in recent years a new type of reporter hailing from the four corners of the earth. With his fellow-workers—from England, France, Japan, China, Brazil, Germany, and the United States, calling one another by their first names—he will gather in some telegraph or cable office to exchange views, and the next day the true news of what has occurred will be heralded to the world by the press of a dozen nations.

There is something thrilling and inspiring about this new sphere of journalism, with its opportunity for service; many will envy the members of its limited corps as thep troop from parley to conference and conference to courts and measure their journeys by the distance between world capitals.

But, it should not be forgotten that the success of the men in this new field of journalism will depend entirely upon the honesty and vision of the moulders of public opinion at home; it is to meet this need that journalism in America, country and metropolitan, offers greater opportunities today than ever before in its history—no matter how small the community, a newspaper has ceased to be a matter of machinery, paper, ink, advertisements and something with which to fill.

The new mission is truth combined with service—there is opportunity for every man of ambition.

SPEED VS. "ECONOMY"

COST is important, but not the only consideration in handling news under the demands of modern journalism. This is particularly true in the transmission of news of international import, and no better example of the giving way of financial saving in the interest of speed can be found anywhere than in the Far East where there is the greatest possible need of better news communications. Proponents of world understanding through the free flow of news won a notable victory by securing a three-year extension of the right to transmit news between this country and Japan by United States Navy radio via Guam.

While the rate on press messages sent by Navy radio is 6 cents a word cheaper than by either a cable or commercial wireless, John R. Morris, Far East editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, who has just completed an investigation, reports in an article appearing in this issue that Navy radio is no longer being used in the handling of news between this country and Japan because of the great delays, particularly at Guam. There can be reasonable excuse for Navy radio being twelve hours behind the commercial services and steps to remedy this condition should be taken at once.

THE GATHERING OF THE FORCES

GIGANTIC groundswells are rolling under the surface of American journalism. Their trend is toward an increasing measure of "standardization" for the daily newspapers, not along lines where this development is already marked, but in fields where it has been only slightly evident in past years. With Mr. Hearst moulding plans for fifty new daily or Sunday newspapers, as Park Row gossip has it, the Scripps-McRae organization reaching out into new fields every few months, one hundred and fifty other first class dailies banded together for the purchase and distribution of important newspaper features, another group forming a syndicate to pay $250,000 for the former Kaiser's memoirs, and another score soliciting advertising for a national weekly magazine, truly the newspaper business seems headed for stirring events.

Formation of the North American Newspaper Alliance, full details of which appear in the news columns, is one of the greatest steps taken by American newspapers since the Associated Press was formed on its present lines two decades ago. Except for the joint character of the new enterprise, its points of similarity with the A. P. are limited, but they are alike in this—that the whole can do for each of its parts what none of them could do as an individual newspaper.

Opportunities in which the Alliance can function with full efficiency will not arise every day, of course, but its existence as a market for big news features is likely to call into being features that will demand for their purchase the resources that such an organization alone can mobilize. It is eloquent testimony of the offorts which newspaper oners will make today to give their readers the best newspapers that money or brains can create.

Apparently, the Alliance is no menace to the present feature services and syndicates, with which it disclaims any intention of competing. Neither does it appear to stand in the way of more and better news, as distinguished from feature matter. It is in the news columns that the daily press of the country suffered most during the war and the period of press agentry that followed it, and it is these that need most restoration to former standards of accuracy and intelligent discrimination between clean news and subtle propaganda. Good features will forward this end, if they have any effect at all.

There have been widely-advertised features aplenty since the armistice, features of supposedly international appeal, but with mighty few exceptions the product has been inferior to the advertising. If the brains and wealth of 150 of the best newspapers in America united in the new Alliance can overcome the present tendency to pay big prices for "big names" and put the "big names" into their columns only over really important and carefully prepared utterances, they will have sent American journalism far ahead on its new path of progress.

"BY THEIR FRUITS—"

LEW HAHN, managing director of the Nation Retail Dry Goods Association, in an open lett addressed to Senator McCumber, refuting th charge that the department stores of the country ar profiteers, says that the Senator has, in citing i stances of profiteering, chosen articles of small i portance, all, or nearly all of them imported, an sold as side lines, and that he has purposely ignore the important items of commerce.

Perhaps this is so. Perhaps, if "bread and butte merchandise" was used in proof of the "profiteering charges, the answer would be different.

Mr. Hahn's letter was published in the New Yor Times of June 25. It is no more than fair, in d fending the retailers against this charge, to ci some of the items contained in the New York Tim of the same date, showing that prices are very clo to cost.

On page 2 we find that J. & J. Slater have r duced the prices of shoes from $15 to $6; from $ to $8, and from $20 to $10.

On page 4 we are told that Franklin Simon Co. have reduced the price of French hand-ma underwear, women's blouses, capes, coats and wra as well as suits just 50 per cent—cut them in tw that they have cut the price of children's froc from $15.75 to $6.50.

On page 5 we find that Bonwit Teller & Co. ha cut the price of women's coats from $115 to $ from $195 to $98, that tweed suits have been reduc from $45 to $12.50, that French hand-made linger has been reduced from $28.50 to $5, together with items in all, all listed at similar reductions.

On page 6 Stewart & Co. have reduced dress from $69.50 to $25, together with six other items similar purport.

Saks & Co., on page 12, have noted reductions wraps and coats from $45 to $25, from $59.50 $29.50; silk frocks from $29.50 to $15.95, and n merous other reductions.

These are but a few of the reductions advertis throughout the paper.

When we stop to consider that every merch makes an average profit on every dollar's worth merchandise that he buys and sells; that the t suits, exactly alike, one selling for $100 and t other for $50, yield $150 and that that $150 rep sents a profit—it is hard for some of us to thi that there is no profiteering.

Perhaps Senator McCumber may judge some these stores from their own statements publish in their own advertising.

As to the newspapers being controlled by the a vertisers—that is twaddle. Because the advertis choose to misuse the space they buy; because th foul their own nest, so to speak, is no indicat that they own the newspapers, for it is hard, inde to get the stores even to agree as to the particu newspapers to use.

The stores do not profiteer as much as they mig however, for, season after season, "regular" pri are getting to be more and more recognized by buying public as merely prices at which goods not sold, and, due to the persistent advertising, peo are constantly growing keener on avoiding all m chandise unless it is "special" or "reduced."

THERE is no petty criminal that is worse than rat of prey who appeals for the contents of purses of the ignorant and unknowing through th vanity. A few years ago their kind were conduct short story schools that promised riches and fame; day scenarios are their inviting bait. The Scr Writers' Guild of the Authors League has decla war on this growing graft and every newspaper n with a knowledge of the practice can render a s service by communicating with that organization 6716 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, Cal.

PROF. Bristow Adams' proof to the New Y State Press Association that crime news recei only 4 per cent of the June space in leading pap of the state demonstrates that an open mind a good footrule will refute most of the wild char laid against the American press.

PERSONAL

EDWARD B. McLEAN, publisher of the Washington Post, June 24 and 25 entertained President and Mrs. Harding, Secretary Weeks, Attorney General Daugherty, Senator Edge, and Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board, at his country home near Leesburg, Va.

Frank A. Munsey, publisher of the New York Herald, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, widow of the late Whitelaw Reid, former publisher of the New York Tribune, were among the American guests at the dinner given by Ambassador and Mrs. George Harvey June 24, in honor of King George and Queen Mary at which Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft were also guests.

Carroll Shaffer, of the Chicago Evening Post, is host to a group of a dozen business men of Chicago at Ken-Caryl, the Shaffer ranch at Littleton, Colo. Charles Segner, managing editor of the Post, accompanied the party and S. J. Duncan-Clark is acting managing editor in his absence.

Dean W. F. G. Thatcher, of the School of Journalism at the University of Oregon, stopped in Chicago on his way to the East as a representative of Oregon newspapers. He will visit various advertising agencies and newspaper representatives for a close study of matters pertaining to national advertising.

William C. Deming, editor of the Cheyenne (Wyo.) State Leader, June 14 was elected president of the board of trustees of the University of Wyoming.

Edgar A. Guest, newspaper poet, received the degree of Litt.D. at the 61st Albion College commencement June 26.

Frederick W. Enright, publisher of the Boston Telegram and Lynn (Mass.) Telegram News, has returned from a business trip to New York and Chicago.

Col. R. R. McCormick, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune, has returned from a visit to the Tribune's mills at Shelter Bay, Canada.

Henry W. Clendenin, editor-in-chief of the Springfield Illinois State Register, has left for Spokane, Wash., where he will spend the summer with his daughter. He is 85 years old, but still writes daily editorials for his paper.

A. L. Brimin, one of the publishers of the Prentice (Wis.) News-Calumet, has been appointed postmaster at that place.

Howard Kahn, editor of the St. Paul Daily News, spent several days recently in Chicago.

Williard G. Bleyer, director of the department of journalism, at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, will give a series of lectures at the American Library Association convention which will be held at Detroit from June 26 to July 1.

Herbert S. Houston, president of the Houston Publishing Company and publisher of Our World and World Fiction, who has been in Europe for the past months, will sail for home on the Berengaria July 1.

Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lord, who on July 1 will become director of the budget succeeding Charles G. Dawes, was a newspaper man before he entered the army at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. Gen. Lord started as editor and part owner of the Rockland (Me.) Courier-Gazette, later drifted to Cardiff, Tenn., where he established a paper. His next venture was in Denver, where he was assistant editor of the Colorado Morning Sun. He had returned to Rockland as editor of the Rockland Daily Sun in 1898 when war came and he went into the army as paymaster.

E. L. Conn, former Washington correspondent, has arrived in Tokyo to assume the editorship of the Japan Times Mail an English-language newspaper owned by Japanese capitalists, published in Tokyo.

Miss Mary Gray Staples, daughter of Arthur G. Staples, managing editor of the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, was married June 24 to Ralph C. Harvey, of Boston, in the chapel of Bates Colleges, Lewiston. She is a granddaughter of the late Congressman Nelson Dingley, of Lewiston, former owner of the Journal.

William H. Dow, business manager of the Portland (Me.) Evening Express and Sunday Telegram, is receiving congratulations on the fact that he is now a "grand daddy." William Dow Bailey is the name of the newcomer.

Miss Etta I. Ward, publisher and editor of the Winchendon (Mass.) Courier for 20 years and member of the New England Women's Press Association, has returned to her home after being away for 8 months. Miss Ward was a delegate from the National Editorial Association to the Press Congress of the World at Honolulu last October. After that, she left to visit China, Japan and the Philippines and spent part of the winter in California.

Charles B. Welch, editor and general manager of the Tacoma (Wash.) News Tribune, accompanied by Mrs. Welch and their two sons, have left Tacoma on a motor trip south to the Mexican boundary. During his absence he will write of his motor experiences in a column called "Motor Peregrinations."

Major Lester D. Gardner, president of the Gardner-Moffat Company, publishers of Aviation, the Rubber Age, and Tire Trade Journal, was honored by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by election to the corporation. This corresponds to trustee in other colleges. Mr. Gardner graduated from the Institute in 1898 and has been very active in Technology affairs ever since, having been president of the Technology Club of New York.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOM

RICHARD ATWATER, editor of the Pillar to Post column of the Chicago Evening Post, returned from his vacation in the Dunes.

Hugh O'Donnell, who for ten years conducted a newspaper in Menominee, Mich., before coming west, and was formerly editor and publisher of the Kooskia (Idaho) Mountaineer, has been commissioned registrar of the land office at Lewiston, Idaho.

Byron Ford has resigned as director of the co-operating marketing page of the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader.

John Manning, former reporter of the Detroit News, has joined the Detroit Times staff.

Dwight Moody, of the 1922 class of the Columbia School of Journalism, and Frank Mahoney, for several years with the New Bedford Times, have joined the staff of the New Bedford (Mass.) Evening Standard.

Arthur F. Packard, one of the best known photographers in southern New England, has retired from business to join the New Bedford Standard staff of camera men.

Helen Worthington, until recently society editor of the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen-Patriot and Karl Schweinfurth, of Lansing, were married in the latter city June 10. The bride has edited society pages in several Michigan cities as well as doing special signed feature work, and is an officer in the Michigan Woman's Press Association and a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club. They will live in Lansing where Mr. Schweinfurth is connected with the Durant Motor Corporation.

Joseph Macqueen, who has been for years musical editor and book reviewer for the Portland Oregonian, has gone to Olympia, Wash., as news editor of the Evening Recorder. Mr. Macqueen was formerly connected with a Philadelphia newspaper. On his departure for Olympia he was entertained at luncheon by forty leading musicians of Portland.

William H. Johnston, cartoonist for the Boston Telegram and the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, and Miss Alva Smith have announced their engagement.

S. J. Leffler, formerly of the New York American and for the last two months on the New York Telegram, has been appointed Eastern editorial and business representative of the Glass Worker and China, Glass Lamps both of which are published at Pittsburgh. He has opened an office at 116 West 39th street.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

A. R. MALTON, new business manager of the Toronto Globe, in succession to Wm. Findlay, who resigned recently, will enter upon his duties on June 23. He is a native of Watford, Ont., and received his education at the Watford Public School and the Petrolea Collegiate Institute. He entered the service of the Bank of Toronto at London in 1902 and was connected with that institution for 18 years, the last five as chief supervisor at the head office in Toronto. For the past two years Mr. Malton has been associated with the advertising agency of McConnell & Fergusson, Limited, as a director of the company. Mr. Malton's training and experience give him an intimate knowledge of business conditions and business enterprise.

A. R. MALTON

Michael E. Hennessey, Boston newspaper man, on the Globe for some years, celebrated, with Mrs. Hennessey, last week their 32nd wedding anniversary.

Raymond S. Mowers, managing editor of the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star has returned from a vacation spent in New York.

Daniel Duval, sports editor of the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star, is spending part of a two weeks' vacation at the Y. M. C. A. physical training camp at Springfield, Mass. Edward Nowvinski is acting sports editor.

Miss Josephine M. Leonard has resigned as assistant to the managing editor of the Schnectady (N. Y.) Union-Star and has joined the staff of the Syracuse (N. Y.).

Charles J. Hanford, who formerly conducted a column in a Florida newspaper is now writing a column, "Kohn for Komment," for the Frederick (Md.) Daily News.

R. W. Bentley, managing editor of the Tampa Tribune, has been spending two weeks vacation at Anna Maria Beach, his fishing ground.

Franklin Peterson, Dominion news editor of the London Times, is in Calgary. He is traveling through the country gathering information and getting acquainted with the people and customs of Canada.

Mrs. Miriam Green Ellis, agricultural editor of the Edmonton (Alberta) Bulletin, is on a trip up the Peace and MacKenzie rivers as far as Fort McPherson, the farthest Northern point touched by the boats of the North.

Miss Harriet Ashbrook, formerly society editor of the Lincoln Nebraska State Journal, and now of the staff of the Calgary Morning Albertan, has left to spend two months at her home in Mitchell, Neb.

E. Perrin Schwartz has returned to the Milwaukee Journal as assistant Sunday editor after spending a year on the copy desk of the Chicago Daily News.

Clifford M. Bond has resigned from the Milwaukee Journal to join the Casper (Wyo.) Daily Tribune.

Mayor Hubert H. Peavey, editor of the Washburn (Wis.) News, is again a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the 11th district.

Will C. Conrad, former exchange editor of the Milwaukee Journal, has started on a tour of Wisconsin during which he will write a series of historical articles for the Journal.

Stuart Godwin, for many years a member of the Washington staff of the old New York Sun and more recently connected with the Haskin Syndicate, has joined the Washington staff of the Cosmopolitan News Service.

Laurence Todd, Washington correspondent of the Federated Press, expects to leave for Europe early in the fall and Paul W. Hanna, former Washington correspondent for the service, will return to take charge of the capital bureau.

William Henderson, telegraph editor of the Victoria (B. C.) Daily Times, Harold B. McDonald, of the staff of the Victoria Daily Colonist, and C. A. Sutherland, of the Vancouver Province, were among the guests of the Canadian National Railway system at the opening of the new Jasper Park Lodge in the Rocky Mountains recently.

Ernest LeMessurier, cartoonist for the Vancouver (B. C.) World, has left for Toronto, to join the staff of the Telegram.

Arthur W. Pense has joined the editorial staff of Kingston (Ont.) Daily British Whig for the summer months.

Alex C. Givens, sporting editor of the Kingston (Ont.) British Whig, has just recovered from a serious illness and before assuming his regular duties is working on circulation.

Frederick Moore, who as an Associated Press correspondent was stationed several years in the Far East, is now foreign counsellor to the Japanese Foreign Office. With Mrs. Moore and their

The following papers have signed contracts for the Haskin Service:

The Canton News
The Flint Daily Journal
East Liverpool Review and Tribune
Ashtabula Star-Beacon
Grand Forks Herald

four children, he arrived in Tokyo early in June.

Mrs. Charles Denny has arrived in Tokyo to join her husband, the newly-appointed Tokyo Associated Press correspondent.

Glenn Babb, news editor of the Japan Advertiser, has returned to Tokyo after a vacation of four months spent in the United States.

J. Courtland Elliott, formerly connected with the editorial staff of the Kingston Whig, has returned from France after a year of post graduate study at the University of Paris.

Oliver L. Hall, managing editor of the Bangor (Me.) Commercial, accompanied by Mrs. Hall and their daughters, attended the diamond jubile convention of the Zeta Psi Fraternity of North America, at Swampscott, Mass.

J. Lewis Milligan, Toronto journalist, has been appointed editor of the Belleville (Ont.) Intelligencer. Prior to his joining the staff of the Intelligencer he was connected with the Toronto Globe for eight years, and started his newspaper career on the old Peterboro Review.

Charles A. Warren, assistant managing editor of the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News, is spending his vacation in Cleveland, Akron, and other northern Ohio points.

Howard Weber, staff photographer of the Springfield (Ohio) Morning Sun, and Miss Hazel M. Ogden were married in Springfield June 20.

R. B. Vail, resident manager for Birmingham, Ala., of the Western Newspaper Union, has purchased the Bay Minette, (Ala.) Baldwin County Times, and will take it over July 1. He sold it some time ago.

Miss Florentine Michaud, society editor of the St. Paul Daily News, has gone abroad for 2 months as social secretary to a St. Paul family and will visit England, France, Spain, Italy, Belgium and Holland.

Archie H. Vernon, former city editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, and commander of the Minnesota department of the American Legion, was nominated as Republican candidate for the state supreme court at the primary election.

Webb Miller, Paris correspondent of the United Press, and Mrs. Miller were so proud of the fact that a boy arrived Wednesday that they cabled the news.

Joseph E. Hennessy, who covers the Minnesota state capitol for the St. Paul Daily News, is taking his vacation at the lakes in the northern part of the state.

Edgar Rogers Bean, in charge of the "lobster shift" of the New York Sun, spent a portion of his vacation in St. Paul and Iowa.

Miss Mary Thompson is taking the place on the assistant society desk of the Tacoma (Wash.) News-Tribune recently vacated by Miss Edith McLeod, who is to be married in July.

A L. Bixby, poet, lecturer and writer, for 30 years a member of the editorial staff of the Lincohn, (Neb.) State Journal, has been taking a Pacific coast trip.

Herman Hunt is a new member of the editorial staff of the Tacoma (Wash.) News-Tribune.

H. F. Kuhn, formerly with the Tacoma (Wash.) Bureau of Records in the police department, is now on the staff of the Salt Lake Telegram.

Frank B. Constant, who years ago was city editor and later business manager of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News, visited Hutchinson this week. Mr. Constant now lives in Chicago.

Miss Kate Webber, formerly club editor of the Chicago Tribune, is the new exchange editor.

R. J. Finegan, managing editor of the Chicago Evening Journal, left this week for his vacation.

James P. Bicket, news editor of the Chicago Evening American, was away this week on a vacation and will take the balance of his month's leave in July.

John Main, member of the Chicago Evening American's rewrite desk, ill for more than two months, will return to his desk July 6.

Isabel Drummond, a member of the Philadelphia North American staff, has completed the law course at the University of Pennsylvania and received a degree.

William Blinn, reporter for the Chicago Evening American, returned June 26 from two weeks' vacation.

Miss Genevieve Forbes, of the Chicago Tribune, is in New York on two weeks' vacation.

Howard Mann, sports editor of the Chicago Evening Post, has bought an $18,000 home in Lombard, Ill.

Tony Andoly Dahl, news editor of the Chicago Evening Post, has left on a fishing trip in Georgian Bay.

Frank Mailhotter is a new member on the Chicago Evening American's copy desk.

J. L. Kilgallen, of the International News Service, returned from Herren, Ill., where he covered the Southern Illinois mine massacre.

H. C. Eldred, reporter on the Chicago Evening Journal, and formerly on the Chicago Post, has been forced to resign because of illness.

H. H. Kinyon, for four years managing editor of the Trans-Pacific, Tokyo, has resigned and is now on his way back to the United States. Henry W. Kinney, who came to the staff of the Trans-Pacific from the Honolulu Advertiser, will succeed Mr. Kinyon.

James Harris, formerly a member of the Chicago Tribune's staff, is now on the Long Beach (Cal.) Press.

Randall E. Howe, editor of the Ripon (Wis.) Press and Miss Viola Sydow, were married June 19.

Edward H. Burns is now a reporter for the Chicago Tribune. He was a reporter years ago on the old Chicago Record-Herald and of late years has been in the advertising branch of the work.

Cecil Storey, editor of the Vernon (Tex.) Times, is the uncontested candidate for representative in the Texas legislature from the 111th district, Wilbarger and Wichita counties.

Vincent Y. Dallman, managing editor of the Springfield, Illinois, State Register, recently made an address on journalism and reporting before several hundred Boy Scouts.

Thomas Murphy, associate editor of the Times, in Scranton, Pa., has returned home from a visit to New York city.

William R. Lynett, of the Scranton (Pa.) Times staff, has been re-elected secretary-treasurer of St. Thomas College Alumni in that city.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

ELDEN W. MATHEWS, circulation manager of the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News, has resigned, effective July 6, to join the circulation department of the Cincinnati (Ohio) Post. Roger O. Dudley, for two years assistant circulation manager of the News, succeeds him. A farewell banquet was tendered to Mr. Mathews by a group of circulation department employees and carriers on June 21.

John Chance has joined the field staff of the circulation department of the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News.

O. Eugene Nelson, a member of the advertising staff of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram News, and Mrs. Nelson are the parents of a baby daughter, Claire Elinor, born June 8.

Harold S. Croshier, of the advertising department of the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star, and Miss Kathleen Drums of Schenectady, were recently married.

Miss Florence Blose, formerly employed in the business office of the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News, will become the bride of Ivan L. Long, cashier of The News, on July 19.

William McCloskey, advertising salesman for the Springfield (Illinois) State Register, has been made automobile ad manager, succeeding Philo Kane, who has entered the insurance business.

W. E. Sherlock, in charge of country circulation, has been made circulation manager of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, succeeding E. W. White, resigned.

Miss Grace F. Kaercher, manager and part owner of the Ortonville (Minn.) Independent, was nominated for clerk of the supreme court of Minnesota on the Republican ticket at the primary election.

Miss Mattie Rasens, of the Chicago Evening Post's circulation department, returned after a six weeks' visit in California.

Charles V. Smith has become manager of the Crawfordsville (Ind.) Journal. Mr. Smith is the son of A. M. Smith, sole owner and proprietor of this paper.

Paul J. Hawke, until recently eastern representative of the Independent and later advertising manager of the Industrial Digest, New York, has joined the advertising staff of Dan A. Carroll, special newspaper representative, New York and will solicit general accounts. Mr. Hawke started his advertising work with the Chicago Tribune.

George M. Cootes, of the merchandising department of the Kingston Whig, has just returned from a short vacation in London, Ont., and other Western Ontario points.

Freddie Pense, circulation solicitor of the Kingston Whig is making a good recovery after an accident which occured while on duty some weeks ago.

Sherman Hill, business manager of the Kingston (Ont.) Standard, made a business trip to London, Ont., last week.

N. L. Lucius, of the Los Angeles office of the Chicago Tribune's Pacific & Atlantic Picture Service, returned to the Coast from Chicago during the week.

Garland Merrill, of the merchandising department of the Wichita Eagle, has returned from a business trip to Chicago.

Luther Weaver, former service man of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, has joined Major Harrison Fuller, former assistant managing editor of the papers, and now general manager of the Minnesota statewide organization which is working to exterminate wheat rust.

William F. Povah is now covering the city hall assignment for the Victoria (B. C.) Times.

Fred Law, hotel reporter for the Vancouver (B. C.) World, has left for California, from where he will write special articles.

P. W. Luce is now writing a humorous column of comment on the front page of the Vancouver (B. C.) World under the title "Phizz."

WITH THE AD FOLKS

L. E. HOLLAND, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, this week made his first visit to New York headquarters of the A. A. C. W. since his election at Milwaukee. He and Sir Charles F. Higham, M. P. were the guests of honor at the luncheon June 29, of the New York Advertising Club.

Ralph E. Mooney, fiction writer, is

RYAN GETS NEW OFFICE

Now Assistant General Manager of St. Louis Star

Tom A. Ryan's fourteen years of service with the St. Louis Star have resulted in his appointment to the newly created position of assistant general manager of that publication. Mr. Ryan is also treasurer of the Star. He has filled virtually every position in the business end of the paper, working himself up to the post of business manager and advertising manager. Before joining the staff of the Star, Mr. Ryan was with the old St. Louis Republic for three years. Other changes on the Star are the promotion of E. N. Giles to be advertising manager and C. J. Edeleman to be in charge of foreign advertising.

TOM A. RYAN

now connected with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's house organ in St. Louis.

E. K. Thompson has resigned as advertising manager of the T. M. Sayman Products Company, St. Louis.

Clinton Brown has left the St. Louis Times and has become a member of the firm of Ferree-Taylor-Brown, advertising counselors.

Arthur J. Gaines, former treasurer of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, has resigned as manager of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, to engage in similar work in New York.

C. B. Nichols, associated with John Branhan, newspaper representative in the Mallers building, Chicago, left for a fishing trip in Northern Wisconsin. Mr. Branhan is on a business trip in Tennessee.

Miss Grace Ryerson, assistant to W. S. Grathwohl, Chicago newspaper representative, is planning for a vacation at Long Lake.

George F. Rogers has become sales and advertising manager of the General Heating & Ventilating Company Los Angeles.

Bernard H. Brunner has joined the All-American Investing Company, New York, as advertising manager, in which capacity he was formerly associated with Parsons & Whittemore, Inc., New York.

Norbert A. Considine, president of the Paper House of Pennsylvania, Edward Winslow, of the William Fell Printing Company, of Philadelphia and Mr. Long of the Eugene McGuckin Advertising Agency, of Philadelphia were recent visitors in Springfield (Mass.)

NOTES OF THE AD AGENTS

THE Gotham Advertising Company of New York, has absorbed the business of the Vedder Overseas Service, successor to the Johnston Overseas Service.

Jerome Kircher, of the Gardner-Glen Buck Advertising Company, St. Louis and Miss Alicia Hafner were married there recently.

C. H. Giddings, formerly with farm paper groups and with the Mace Advertising Agency, Peoria, Ill., has joined the staff of Critchfield & Co., Chicago.

Donald B. Skinner has resigned as advertising manager of the Tobey Furniture Company, Chicago, and is now on the staff of the J. Roland Kay Company Chicago. He is succeeded with the Tobey Furniture Company by A. Schiebel, formerly with the William Freund Company, Chicago.

Miss E. N. Hall, formerly with the Dorland Agency, New York, has become space-buyer of the James Advertising Agency, in that city.

GUY BARHAM BURIED

Funeral of Publisher Who Died London Held in Los Angeles

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 29.—Guy Barham, president of the Los Angeles Herald Publishing Company, who died in London June 9, was buried today and the city paid its tribute to his memory both as a distinguished citizen and friend.

Rules on the first page of all editions of his paper were turned. All operations in the Herald plant were stopped from 10.30 a. m. until 11 o'clock. The doors of the Herald were locked and telegraph tickers in both the United Press and International News Service bureau were stilled.

Dean William MacCormack of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral conducted Episcopal burial service in the First Congregational Church by arrangement with Dr. Carl S. Patton, the pastor, because St. Paul's has been dismantled and the new edifice not yet built.

The active pall bearers were chosen from among the department heads of the Evening Herald. They were Donald Keeler, Louis Richardson, W. J. Hanson, Edwin R. Collins, Arthur Hollick, C. G. Cookerly, Eugene O. Menz and Marshall S. Culver. On the list of honorary pall bearers were the names of notable men of the city, the state and the nation.

PAPERS BAR DETAILS OF TROTTER CASE

Grand Rapids Press, Herald and News Refrain Until Wife Proves Sensational Charges Against Evangelist Husband

The Grand Rapids Press, Herald and News have refused to publish any of the details in the sensational suit brought by Mrs. Trotter against her husband, Melvin E. Trotter, evangelist and head of the Grand Rapids Rescue Mission. Mrs. Trotter is suing for separate maintenance. This decision to publish nothing more than bare announcements of the trial has caused general discussion in that city and resulted in the Grand Rapids Press editorially defending its position.

The Press says that it will publish the decision of the court, but that it does not believe that the reputation of the evangelist should be destroyed if the charges made against him are not proven. It is contended by the newspaper that the Mission had done too valuable work in Grand Rapids, but holds that Mr. Trotter should and will be exposed if the court holds the charges proven.

The Press editorial was printed after the Chicago Herald-Examiner had appeared in Grand Rapids featuring the trial and publishing a sensational deposition from a former chairman of the Rescue Mission Board setting forth an alleged confession of Mr. Trotter as to his relations with his secretary. This deposition is being published serially in the Herald-Examiner. Mr. Trotter, a former worker with Billy Sunday, first started his religious career in Chicago.

Other outside newspapers are also carrying accounts of the trial, while the Associated Press during the past week has also given daily accounts of the testimony. The trial is proving most sensational owing to the nature of the charges and the prominence of the defendant.

Radio Agreement in Twin Cities

The Minneapolis Tribune, the Minneapolis Journal, and the St. Paul Pioneer Press and Dispatch, in accordance with the recommendation of J. A. O. Preus, governor of Minnesota, have agreed to discontinue their individual radio telephone broadcasting stations in favor of the station of the University of Minnesota. This agreement was signed by the papers 22 after a conference between F. E. Murphy of the Tribune, H. V. Jones, the Journal, and C. K. Blandin, the Pioneer Press and Dispatch. This now leaves the field clear for the state university.

MERGER IN ZANESVILLE

Evening Dispatch Sold to Signal and Times-Recorder Owners

Another newspaper consolidation was noted this week when the Zanesville (Ohio) Publishing Company, publisher of the Morning Times-Recorder, Evening Signal and Sunday Times-Signal, purchased the name, goodwill, subscription list, advertising contracts and all assets of the Dispatch Publishing Company, publisher of the Evening Dispatch. W. O. Littick is general manager of the purchasing company.

W. D. Littick

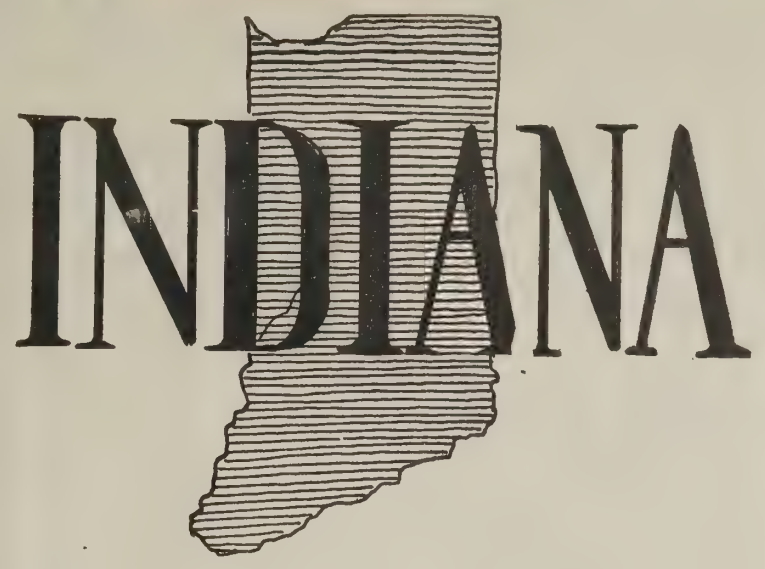
The Dispatch was started as an evening paper May 16, 1921, but, although it had built up a circulation of 5,000, had considerable local advertising, and the United Press and N. E. A. services, it was unable to reach a profitable basis and its owners concluded that the city could not support three daily papers. Sale of the Dispatch, which was effected by Harwell & Cannon, of New York, leaves Dayton, with nearly 200,000 population, the smallest Ohio city supporting three daily newspapers. Zanesville has 30,000 population.

The addition of the Dispatch circulation to that of the Signal and Times-Recorder is expected to make the total well above 30,000, which is sold to advertisers in combination only at 7 cents a line. There will be no advance in rate. Robert E. Ward, Inc., represents the Signal and Times-Recorder in the national field.

Get Facts For Churches

Why shouldn't advertising managers lend the help of their research departments to the churches in order that they may improve their copy?

Where are the "prospects"—the market—of the churches which advertise most largely in your town?



Is the copy of these churches written to reach the prospects? Help the churches to get full value for the space they buy—they must have results to justify their expenditure, just as every other advertiser.

We have two series of 10 ads each which many papers have been glad to buy for use in stimulating larger results by individual churches.

Copy will be sent on approval for a stamp. Address Herbert H. Smith, 156 Fifth Ave., New York.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. of W.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER is co-operating by donating this space.

For years past Indiana has been recognized as a most profitable market for nationally advertised goods, ranging from hair pins to hay presses.

What is true of the past is doubly true today.

Not only is Indiana well balanced but she is "right in the heart" of everything, wonderfully blessed in location, steam, electric and water transportation, agriculture, steel industry, coal mining, building and general manufacture.

National advertisers should cultivate intensively and immediately the ready, accessible and fertile field represented by Indiana's three million prosperous people.

You can reach them quickly and economically by placing your advertising with the papers listed below.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,151	.025
*Evansville Courier	(M)	22,938	.05
*Evansville Courier	(S)	21,392	.05
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M) 23,528	38,582	.10
*Fort Wayne Evening Press	(E) 15,054
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	24,661	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	31,508	.08
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(S)	32,008	.08
*Gary Evening Post and Tribune	(E)	8,953	.05
*Indianapolis News	(E)	115,634	.20
LaPorte Herald	(E)	3,721	.025
†South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,021 (E) 9,170	18,191	.05
†South Bend News-Times	(S)	18,864	.05
South Bend Tribune	(E&S)	16,027	.055
*Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,381	.06
*Vincennes Commercial	(M&S)	5,010	.025

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statements, April 1, 1922.
†Publisher's Statement.

An Accounting and Federal Tax Service for Publishers

References on Application

CLIFFORD YEWDALL
33 West 42nd Street
New York City

Fastest Growing Paper in South

NEW ORLEANS STATES

Over 50,000 daily
Over 63,000 Sunday

About 80% gain over last year.

Represented by

S. C. Beckwith Special Agency, New York
John M. Branham Co., Chicago

From 28,000 to more than 105,000

In Seven Months

The Detroit TIMES

Their Own Newspaper

Our readers continue because they get all the news daily and know just where to find it.

The Pittsburg Dispatch

Pittsburg's Best Advertising Medium.

Branch Offices:

Wallace G. Brooke,
Brunswick Building, New York
The Ford-Parsons Co.
Marquette Building, Chicago, Ill.

"The Land of Opportunity for Newspaper Men"

Editor & Publisher Classified Columns

MAKERS-MONEY-SAVERS

This is a regular weekly department designed to answer questions, offer suggestions and generally help the man and woman of the smaller city dailies and weeklies. Henry Beetle Hough, co-editor and publisher of the Martha's Vineyard Gazette, will be a regular contributor, but your ideas on money making and for money saving are wanted also. For each idea published we will pay $1. When your idea appears clip it out and send it to the MONEY SAVER EDITOR and payment will be made by return mail. Your ideas must be workable, told in as few words as possible and new to this department. Contributions to this department will not be returned.

WHY is it that the average country weekly and small city daily neglect both editorial and sport departments?

There are but few papers of the country weekly class and the small city daily class that treat both of these departments as they should.

For instance, we will discuss the editorial sections of the average country weekly. Too frequently they consist of one or two editorials, short or long or perhaps just of medium length all reprints from some big city newspaper. One is likely devoted to the high price of mittens in Florida. If there are two, the other may be devoted to the building of a bridge in New York City or some other metropolitan center far removed from the district in which the country weekly in question circulates.

A bright and newsy editorial section of at least two columns, set in either special measure and in eight or ten point type, if there is a linotype machine in the office, would be of incalculable benefit to the paper. If there is no machine, the editorials could be set to single column in eight or ten point Roman or Gothic. Above all, the editorials should not be too long. Perhaps the leading editorial could be a half column or at most a column. But as a rule it is not advisable to pass the three or four stick mark for an editorial. That is, if the editorial is typed to be read.

The editorials should be breezy and there should be the fullest simplicity in the wording. There are too many embryo journalists on small papers who labor under the delusion that people want to read jaw-breaking words. In this connection, I am reminded of the admonition given me by a city editor on a Boston paper when I was extremely young at the game. I had been very fond of writing my articles in highbrow. I mangled my poor intellect in thinking big words when small words would cross my mind. The city editor looked me over carefully one day after I had brought a story to his desk, and then looked at the copy I tossed to him. He said, "Say, Bill, we're not advertising Webster's dictionary on this paper."

The editorials for the country weekly and small city daily should have a local interest. It is all very well for the big city newspapers to devote editorial space to the activities of Lenine in Russia, but the small paper has a limited clientele, and must cater to that clientele.

Adjoining the editorial columns it would also be advisable to conduct a column of humor of special interest to the district. Humor is something that appeals to every reader—even the perpetual grouches.

Plate editorials should never be used. The editorial section should be the keynote section of the paper. Of what interest will plate editorials be to the readers? And, moreover, no plate editorials will have the bright and clean appearance of the typed editorials.

And in the matter of sport sections. The average country weekly and small city daily carry no sport sections at all. Now, the time has long since gone into the discard that newspapers underrated the attractions of the sport sections. Just as there are sport sections in the large papers there should be sport sections in the small papers. Even if it were but a quarter page, it would be attractive to the young men and boys particularly. Surely there are young men and boys in the districts covered by the country weeklies and the small city dailies.

And the sport matter should not be all reprint. Make at least sixty per cent of it of local interest, and therefore written in the office. Specialize on the current sports. In the outdoor season lay emphasis on the outdoor sports such as baseball, golf, football, tennis, running, track athletics, lacrosse, swimming, rowing, etc. And in the indoor season play up local activities in basketball, boxing, wrestling, pool swimming, hockey, skating, indoor baseball, indoor track athletics, water polo, etc.

Surely if the publishers of small papers would devote more attention to editorials and sports there would be more progressive appearing country weeklies and small city dailies. And there is no doubt the financial returns would not be long in proving that attention to editorials and sports pay and pay well—in both directions, circulation and advertising.—W. J. McN.

If you don't keep a clipping morgue, and many smaller newspapers do not, it will be found a helpful thing for the city editor, in dating up his calendar in advance to make notes of the date and page on which advance stories of events were carried. The reporter, when he receives an assignment, can thus refer readily to the previously published story and get his bearings from it.—R. F.

The merchants in Prettyprairie (Kan.) have what they call "Bargain Day" once a month. A prize of $1 is offered to the farmer wife who brings in the most eggs that day. Another prize is given to the farmer who brings in the most chickens on that day, and so on.

The merchants pay these prizes in merchandise, and the city paper co-operates by printing the prizes and the winners' names. This stunt has proven to be a success and should be worth trying in other towns.—B. F. C.

Nearly any country publisher could secure more local advertising by making an intelligent survey of his field. Every business firm should be charted, showing the number in various lines of business, competition, possibilities of expansion of each, possible advertising appropriation and other pertinent points. Advertising can then be solicited from these firms on a business-like basis, and in many instances regular schedules can be prepared and submitted to the firms for approval.—N. B. S.

"Favorite Recreations of Some of Our Folks" is a good topic for human interest stories which might be easily secured for the country paper and which, when published, would interest everyone and please the people about whom the stories were written. For instance, everyone in town may know that the Methodist minister's favorite recreation is working in his garden, but this fact may never have been published in your paper, and because everyone was familiar with the fact it would have that much more interest when published. And a new slant could be given to it by getting the minister to tell how he became interested in gardening, what some of his outstanding successes in gardening have been, and so on. This sort of a series could be kept going indefinitely, because it would all be news, and it would all prove interesting all the time.—F. H. W.

Night calls for doctors are much rarer in small towns than they are in bigger cities. Consequently, whenever a doctor in your town is called out at night, it is news. Are you printing all the news of this sort that occurs in your town? Find out, each week, from the local physicians what their night calls during the week have been and write up the proper sort of news items about these calls.—F. H. W.

E. E. Brodie, publisher of the Enterprise, Oregon City, Ore., is now in Bancock as our U. S. Minister to Siam. In his absence Hal Hoss, secretary of the Oregon Editorial Association, is in charge of the paper.

Hal Hoss is a go-getter, and has developed a line of work usually overlooked by newspaper publishers in small communities.

This year he has printed Annuals for the high schools at Oregon City, West Linn, Forest Grove, Woodburn, Milwaukee, Beaverton, Molalla, Estacada, and Canby, at prices ranging from $250 to $750. The local advertising carried in the Annuals reduces the cost of the volume to the student to $1.

Another line of work that he has developed is the printing of leaflets for summer resorts. The result has been that during the past month the Oregon City Enterprise has done a business exceeding $10,000. All of which goes to show that it is not the size of the town in which you are located that counts but the initiative of the publisher combined with the determination to turn out nothing but high class work.—F. L.

A regular department devoted to interesting extracts from letters received by local folks from former residents of your city and territory who have moved to other cities would be of constant interest. Of course only the really vital, interesting parts of the letters should be quoted and, of course, the full names and addresses of the people sending the letters should be given, as well as the full names of the person receiving the letters and the relationship between the two, whether father and son, or just friends, should be given. There would be plenty of this sort of stuff to be secured for each issue and it would be real news.—F. H. W.

Features by
Irvin S. Cobb
Fontaine Fox
Hugh Fullerton
Rube Goldberg
Ed Hughes
Burns Mantle
T. L. Masson
O. O. McIntyre
Frederick Palmer
H. J. Tuthill
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

KANSAS IS A RICH, RESPONSIVE FIELD—TOPEKA, ITS CAPITAL A GOOD "TRY OUT" CITY

They Are Best Covered by the

Topeka Daily Capital

TOPEKA, KANSAS

Only Kansas Daily With a General Kansas Circulation

Dominates its field in circulation, all classes of advertising, news, prestige and reader confidence.

Supplies market data—does survey work—gives real co-operation.

Arthur Capper

PUBLISHER

MEMBER A. B. C.-A. N. P. A.

THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL

has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America.

Perth Amboy, N. J.

Plants are putting on men. Plant managers are optimistic regarding future. Building trades active.

Evening News

F. R. NORTHRUP
350 Madison Avenue, New York City
Foreign Representative

In New Orleans it's

THE ITEM

Big Circulation Gains That Stick!

A Hollister Campaign will increase your circulation by thousands—and hold it.

Among publishers who know are The Philadelphia Inquirer, San Francisco Chronicle, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Washington Post, Los Angeles Times and many others.

Now on The Louisville Herald. Write or wire for more facts.

HOLLISTER'S CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
Largest in the United States
300 MERRITT BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Waste

Distribution before advertising is the motto of the Merchandising Department of The Indianapolis News. Eliminate the waste.

The Indianapolis News

New York Office: Dan A. Carroll, 150 Nassau St.
Chicago Office: J. E. Lutz, The Tower Bldg.
Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Manager.

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Newspaper
Circulation over 32,500 Average
Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston — New York — Detroit — Chicago

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

LEADS ALL LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWSPAPERS IN TOTAL PAID CIRCULATION

Government statement for six months ended March 31, 1922

Average 146,233 daily

New York
J. W. MOLONEY
1104 Times Bldg.

Chicago
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
6 No. Michigan Ave.
Suite 401, Tower Bldg.

Let Us Fill Up your paper with advertising on dull days - no obligation
Write
JOHN B. GALLAGHER CO.
52 VANDERBILT AVENUE
NEW YORK

DOLLAR PULLERS

Advertising and circulation managers are always on the lookout for new ideas that will increase advertising receipts and win new circulation. Your idea for increasing advertising or circulation may not appeal to your manager, but it may be just the thing that some other manager wants. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each idea printed under this head. The fact that the idea is now being used in your city does not bar it from the department. Address your communications to the DOLLAR PULLER EDITOR. When they appear clip them and mail them in and receive payment by return mail. Unavailable ideas will not be returned.

THE Burlington (Ia.) Gazette ran a page headed "Modern Mechanical Refrigeration Makes Meat Markets More Efficient." Reading matter and cuts were supplied by the makers of such apparatus who also took space, explaining the value to the housewife of such sanitary preservation of foods. Advertising of markets, so equipped, filled the rest of the page.—H. D. K.

The Philadelphia Record publishes each week a very unique and interesting advertisement known as "Save Some." This is in the form of a cooperative advertising campaign and the plan is to educate the public to the advantages of a savings account and to urge people to stop in at one of the banks or trust companies listed in this advertisement and open a savings account. The cost of this is equally divided among the banks and trust companies whose names appear in the advertisement.—G. B. S.

As the fall moving season approaches build an advertising page around the rates for moving, hints from experienced packers as to how to take care of household goods, show distances from one important point to another in your city and give other real information. Moving companies, repair men, furniture and house furnishing houses probably could be induced to go in on a page of this kind.—H. D. K.

A Bible Contest is good to run when evangelistic services are being held.

In each advertisement conceal a Bible quotation or proverb. In a box on the page give the exact book, chapter and verse from which the quotations are taken. In each instance there will be only one word from the Bible quotation in each advertisement. Find the quotation by reading each advertisement carefully, finding the word that sounds as though it would be found in the quotation referred to in the Bible.—R. B. M.

"Know Omaha and Omaha Stores" is a general theme of a series of eight full-page advertisements being published in the Omaha Daily Bee. This series has an interest for every resident of Omaha and tributary territory. It pictures the marvelous growth of the city as a retail market center in unusually graphic manner. By photographs and historical text the story of the city's present advantages as a trading post are told with compelling force. The advertisements are an unsolicited tribute by the Bee to the city's retail trade. Preparation of the copy, the engraving and all other work in connection with the ad, was undertaken by the various departments of the Bee. This would be a good advertising stunt for every paper in the United States.—A. R. D.

A feature page that can be run for several weeks is the National Advertised Products page. For instance, take Gold Medal Flour, get the wholesale distributor and all the dealers handling it for ads. To make it more interesting give only the telephone numbers of the merchants and offer a sack of flour to the one bringing in the correct list. The next page can be on Royal Baking Powder or Campbell's Soup—in fact, any national known product.—V. B. N.

How many gallons of gas a day are sold in your city? How many women purchasers of gas are there? What is the average amount of gas purchased by autoists at one time? How many out-of-the-state cars are served by your filling station on an average day? This sort of information could be easily secured from your gas distributing companies and gas filling stations, and this story would not only be of interest to all autoistss in your city but would also be a good story around which to center the ads of local filling stations which, as a rule, are not very good advertisers.—F. H. W.

The Fort Wayne News & Sentinel, of Fort Wayne, Ind., recently cashed in on the popularity in radio by a unique group page of advertisements. A number of ads were grouped on a page with portions of the ads printed in the dot and dash radio code. The letters of the code with the corresponding dots and dashes opposite them were given at the top of the page. Prizes amounting to $10 were offered by the paper to the person sending in the first correct translations of all the radio portions of the advertisements.—F. H. W.

The automobile season is in full blast, and to keep the classified columns before the auto owner is to print a license number each issue in the classified column, and give five gallons of gas free to the owner of the car bearing that number. Or to make it of interest to everybody, pick a name at random from the subscription list and give free theatre tickets. This would make them read the classified ads. —V. B. N.

What is the oldest store on Main street in your city? What is the oldest store on Circle street? What is the oldest store on each of the other business streets in your city? Find out what these store are and then get special advertisements from them to be used in connection with a story telling about earlier conditions in your city. Most of the stores would be glad of such an opportunity for emphasizing their age and long service to local customers.—F. H. W.

Get up an article on "How to Keep Cool." Let it consider various ways of avoiding the heat. You may compile a list of Dont's such as: Don't walk on the sunny side of the street, don't eat meat, don't lose your temper, etc. Place this article in the middle of the page, and then get advertisements to surround it from ice dealers, electric fan dealers, summer clothing merchants, soda water companies, etc.—D. R.

In all small cities practically all the stores close on National holidays. Why not sell a page or two of small ads under the heading, "These Stores Will Be Closed" (name of holiday)?—G. L. K.

When looking over old newspapers and reprinting extracts, such as "25 Years Ago Today," you will find many weddings. Look up in your city directory to find whether those people live in town yet. If they do, send them a letter of congratulation. Tell them that you found the record of their wedding in the paper, and ask if they plan to celebrate. They will be pleased to be remembered by the newspaper. Send a solicitor around to see them later, if they are not on your subscription list.—E. C. H.

The Memphis Press is carrying each Monday a Pure Food page which consists of an editorial feature boosting the independent grocer. At the bottom of the page are listed 56 representative independent grocers. It was a part of the contract with the grocers whose names are listed at the bottom of the page that they stock and push all products advertised on the page during the campaign. We then sold 13 manufacturers or jobbers spaces on the page. Once each 13 weeks each of these advertisers is given the large space in which to exploit his line. Each week the line which has the large center space gets window and counter display in each of the stores listed at the bottom of the page.—L. E. H.

Get more people reading your classified columns by using this idea recently tested out by the Springfield Republican and News, Springfield, Mass. The paper arranged the stunt in co-operation with Riverside Park, a nearby pleasure resort. Readers were told to go through the classified columns carefully and look for any which in any way mentioned this park. On an announced day, tickets tieing up with each mention of the park, would be found at the amusement resort, concealed under picnic tables, and, in fact, everywhere. A large list of prizes donated by the Springfield merchants for the sake of the publicity value of the stunt ranged from a Ford car down. Try it out.—J. M. M.

Too many country publishers take business as it comes to them, without an aggressive policy in regard to either advertising or subscription. They solicit advertising without any regular policy or program, and if their volume of space is lower than that of their competitor or contemporary in another town, after a cursory examination, they excuse themselves with the thought, "Well, I'm not so bad off; I got nearly as much as this fellow and he is in a larger town," or "he has a better field." These publishers should measure their advertising each week and the total compared with the volume in other papers in the same territory. They should not "pat themselves on the back" unless their volume of space is equal to or exceeding that in papers published in towns of equal size.—N. B. S.

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
Again Leads All Six-Day Publications in United States in National Advertising

In 1921 the Buffalo Evening News assumed the leadership of the National Advertising Field among all papers publishing only six days per week.

In 1922 the Buffalo News retains this leadership.

National Advertising 1921—2,517,574 agate lines.

THE BUFFALO MARKET.

The Buffalo market is a responsive market, an economical market, and built upon the rocks of sound conservative growth.

In 1921 there were more building permits and more money spent for buildings of all kinds including factories and additions than in any other year of its history.

In 1921 there were more business structures erected in Buffalo than in any previous year.

It is significant to note that at the present time there is no retail store for rent.

Buffalo is busy.

Buffalo is prosperous.

Buffalo is withstanding the onslaught of the reconstruction period.

Your campaign will pay in Buffalo.

BUFFALO EVENING NEWS
E. H. BUTLER, Editor & Publisher.
Kelly-Smith Company, Representatives, Marbridge Bldg., New York, N. Y.; Lytton Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Waterloo, Iowa
POPULATION 36,230
Waterloo Evening Courier
AND WATERLOO DAILY REPORTER
A. W. Peterson, General Manager
RATE 5c FLAT
Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

The circulation figures, totaling over 15,000, tell a wonderful story for Waterloo, and emphasize Waterloo as an important and intelligent center for national advertisers. The big point about this circulation of the Waterloo Evening Courier is the fact that it is absolutely steadfast—8,000 in Waterloo and 7,000 outside. Look up the record for any previous year, and see if the Courier's circulation has ever slumped in any year, or ever increased radically. Just a steady increase. Careful examination will show no trace of premiums, cut rates, or anything else that leads in some measure to subscribers taking a paper which is not their real choice.

The Pittsburgh Post

A newspaper of character, integrity and enterprise which has earned the confidence of the people of the world's greatest industrial district.

DAILY and SUNDAY

Few Papers — (if any) — surpass the TRENTON NEW JERSEY TIMES
AS
A Food Medium

A recent reader survey indicates that among the housewives of the city our Thursday Food Feature Department—upward of four pages devoted to food recipes and news and food advertising—is the best feature carried by the Times

Circulation 30,237 Member A. B. C.
KELLY-SMITH CO.
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

FIRST PAYMENT OF $6.66 BRINGS 20 WAR VOLUMES

Twenty war volumes, telling in detail the complete story of the World War, will be delivered to any address in the United States on an initial payment of $6.66. Twelve monthly payments of $5.00 each will complete the cost of the set—$66.66—bound in cloth. Illustrated with reproduced photographs of battlefield scenes, portraits of political military and naval leaders, cartoons, maps and facsimiles of important documents.

THE NEW YORK TIMES WAR VOLUMES
Published by
The New York Times Company
Times Square, New York
Descriptive booklet on request.

HOLD CIVIC PRIDE CAMPAIGN

Schenectady Union-Star Interests Citizens and Industries

The Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star is conducting a Civic Pride campaign. A permanent Civic Pride organization for Schenectady and its environs has been organized. Schenectady's industries are included in the scope of the organization. Get together meetings have been held in the various wards of the city. The Union-Star conducted a contest for a slogan for the campaign with a $25 prize. "Invest For Your Best in Schenectady," was the winner.

Gimbel Brothers Will Expand

Gimbel Brothers, New York, will in 1924 take over the building of Saks & Co., which occupies the block frontage on 6th Avenue from 33d to 34th streets, and which adjoints present Gimbel building which fronts on 6th avenue from 32d to 33d streets, thus giving them two buildings. Isaac Gimbel, president of Gimbel Brothers, signed the lease which is for 20 years and carries with it an aggregate rental of $8,000,000. The other store, Saks & Co., will move to a new building on 5th avenue.

THE "AGED MAN" AND OTHER NONENTITIES

(Continued from Page 27)

tested!) of the people in the town who were considered to be, both by themselves and the newswriters, the better element. Possibly she was not so much worse than some of the others, but she did not give a whoop who knew it and the others did. Sensitive about it, too, the others. It came to pass that this woman decided to move to another city. Was not driven out, you understand, but decided to move for business reasons. In a spirit of gentle irony the announcement of her departure was made in the paper. An old moth-eaten phrase was called up for the purpose—"Newton's gain is old town's loss," and within thirty minutes after the paper was on the street a dozen men made it a point to drop in at the office and laughingly congratulate the writer on having pulled a good one—haw-haw-haw! Two of these visitors were in the office when the woman herself entered. She stood for a moment, a tense moment, before she spoke. I thought she was trying to decide which one of several lines of unladylike talk, the possession of which she had demonstrated on former occasions, to use. I braced myself. Mentally I mapped out a course of progress down the press-room stairs and into the sweet, pure air of the alley. When she suddenly dipped a hand into her bag I almost started. Anything was possible—gun, knife or acid. I watched that hand. But when it came out of the bag it contained only a small black purse. When she opened the purse she smiled, smiled through a mist of tears (to make use of another old friend) from the hardest pair of green eyes I ever saw in a woman's face. "That was mighty nice, what you said of me in the paper, young man," she said. "It's the first kind word I've had from anybody in this town since Gawd knows when." Then she placed a five-dollar bill on the table, asked me to see that it was credited on her subscription account, gave me her address, and went out ugly and defiant as you please. You can't always tell. The two men laughed after she had gone. I did not. But I gave those two birds the coldest stare I had in stock. There is soul even in news writing. The writing of even trifling news may be made an art.

It is not often done, however. Perhaps that is the cause of all the trouble.

Visitors Welcome by the Item

The New Orleans Item has announced that visitors may go through the various departments daily and from 8 to 10 on Saturday nights. Guides are furnished to explain the various operations.

SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT
For Newspaper Making

FOR SALE

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

For Sale
One 8-page Double Drive Angle Bar Duplex 20th Century Press with motor all in splendid shape. Full particulars will be furnished on request. The Morning Commercial, Vincennes, Ind.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and Business bought and sold, American Typefounders' products, printers and bookbinders machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

NEWSPAPER PRESSES
FOR SALE

Two 32-page 4-plate-wide Duplex "Tubular" Presses. Now printing the Richmond News-Leader.

Also two Duplex Sextuples now printing the New York Tribune.

For particulars apply to

R. HOE & CO.
504-520 Grand St.
NEW YORK, N. Y.
7 Water St., Boston, Mass. 827 Tribune Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

FLEXIDEAL
A Dependable, Uniform
DRYMAT
Better in performance than any other, and at a LOWER price. A trial will convince you.

Unlimited Stock on Hand at all Times

The Flexideal Company
15 William Street
NEW YORK CITY

Newspaper Plant Equipments
Established in 1912

PECKHAM MACHINERY CO.
MARBRIDGE BLDG, 34th & B way
NEW YORK CITY

Modern Hoe (low down) Press, 18 pages at 30,000, printing up to 36 pages, with plate finishing machine.
Press can be shipped and erected at once.

1 Model B Intertype, 3 Linotypes from same plant.

Take It To
POWERS
Open 24 Hours out of 24
The Fastest Engravers on the Earth

Powers Photo Engraving Co.
154 Nassau St., Tribune Bldg.
New York City

For Prompt Service
TYPE
Printers' Supplies
Machinery

In Stock for Immediate Shipment by Selling Houses conveniently located

"American Type the Best in Any Case"

AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS CO.

Boston	Pittsburgh	Kansas City
New York	Cleveland	Denver
Philadelphia	Detroit	Los Angeles
Baltimore	Chicago	San Francisco
Richmond	Cincinnati	Portland
Atlanta	St. Louis	Spokane
Buffalo	Minneapolis	Winnipeg

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

NEW YORK, N. Y.
RATE CARD
in effect March 11, 1922

1. General Advertising

a. Transient rate 50c per agate line (minimum space 14 lines—1 inch).

Full page	672	agate lines	$200.00
Half page	336	" "	113.00
Quarter page	168	" "	60.00
Eighth page	84	" "	35.00
Sixteenth page	42	" "	20.00

b. PREFERRED POSITIONS.

Front and back cover rates on application.

Inside front and back covers 10% extra.

All other positions 25% extra.

2. Time Contracts

a.	Agate Lines	6 insertions within year	12 insertions within year	26 insertions within year	52 insertions within year
Full page	672	$188.00	$175.00	$150.00	$125.00
Half page	336	100.00	94.00	88.00	75.00
Quarter page	168	56.00*	50.00*	47.00*	44.00
Eighth page	84	30.00*	28.00*	25.00*	23.00
Sixteenth page	42	18.00*	15.00*	14.00*	13.00

All 52 consecutive-insertion contracts (see last column above) are based on consecutive insertions within the year. Extra space is charged at the 52-insertion rate, but contract is credited for one insertion only.

Half pages and full pages on 6, 12 and 26-time contracts may be used at the option of the advertiser within the twelve-month period.

*Quarter, eighth and sixteenth pages must be on definite copy schedule.

b. Contract advertisers are accorded the privilege of same insertion rate for larger space. For example: an advertiser under contract for twenty-six (26) quarter-pages at $47 per insertion is accorded the privilege of half pages at $88 and full pages at $150, but such advertisement is to be credited on contract as but one insertion of contract space.

c. Rate maker card—52 consecutive insertions—minimum space 28 agate lines—net rate 28c per agate line. Extra space pro rata.

d. All rebates earned by advertisers using more than contracted space within life of contract are paid in advertising space to be used within one month after expiration of contract.

3. Classified Advertising

a. Help Wanted..... .06 a word
For Sale..... .06 a word
Situations Wanted..... .03 a word
Business Opportunities..... .06 a word

b. All advertisements inserted on a strictly cash basis, except on orders from contract advertisers.

c. No discount for frequency of insertion.

4. Reading Notices—(None)

5. Commissions. Allowed to recognized agencies on other than publishers' advertising.

6. TERMS

a. All accounts payable net 30 days and subject to sight draft immediately thereafter.

b. Two (2) per cent. cash discount allowed on current advertising bills paid on or before the tenth (10th), provided all previous bills are paid.

c. Engravings, electrotypes, etc., are made at the expense of the advertiser and are not subject to cash discount.

d. Advertising copy will be prepared by the service department of EDITOR & PUBLISHER at an additional charge of 10%.

7. Mechanical Requirements

Column width, 13 ems. Column depth, 168 lines. Columns to page, 4. Size of page 9 x 12 inches.

Double center spread, 12 inches deep x 19 inches wide. Half tones used in advertisements should be 133 line screen.

8. Time Schedule and Miscellaneous

a. All copy subject to publishers' approval. b. Forms Close Thursday.

c. Advertisements must be in office by Wednesday P. M. for current week's issue.

d. Corrections on advertisements may be made up to Thursday, 5 P. M.

e. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will not be responsible for errors in advertisements, due to failure to return proof in time to make corrections.

f. Failure to furnish new copy on definite insertion contracts will compel use of previous advertisement.

g. Copy for advertisement should be received as early in the week as possible to insure good display and position.

h. All cuts should accompany copy. i. All new cuts and art work made at expense of advertiser.

9. Publishing Date—Saturday of each week.

10. Circulation

a. Member of A. B. C.

b. (February 1/22) Circulation 5,007

11. Subscription Rates—Domestic $4.00. Canada $4.50. Foreign $5.00

12. Executive Personnel

J. W. Ferguson, general manager; John F. Redmond, managing editor.
J. B. Keeney, advertising; Fenton Dowling, circulation.

Introduction to Employer and Employee

SITUATIONS WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order. For those unemployed one insertion (adv. not to exceed 50 words) FREE.

Advertising Man
...nts position on small daily. Capable of ...king complete charge of advertising. Four ...ars' experience. University journalism ...aduate. C-704, Editor & Publisher.

Advertising Man
...capable man, experienced as copy writer, ...esman and advertising manager, seeks more ...vantageous connection. Interested in posi...n as advertising manager in medium-sized ...y, account executive on metropolitan pa... or copy writer in agency. Successful ...ord that will prove interesting to some ex...itive. University trained, highly recom...nded. Position must be permanent and ...er more than ordinary opportunity for the ...ure. Box C-711, Editor & Publisher.

Editor, Business and Office Manager
...years experience, age 35, married. Thor...ghly reliable. Capable of assuming entire ...arge of daily. Employed; available at ...ort notice. Salary secondary condition, if ...mpetence leads to recognition and promo...n. Convincing references. C-710, Editor & ...blisher.

Circulation Manager
...shes to make change after July 15th. Nine ...rs' experience, successful. Reference fur...shed. C-706, Editor & Publisher.

Cost Analyst, Auditor, Office Manager
...gh-grade newspaper executive. After ten ...rs I outgrew previous position and ...er one year I find that present position ...mises no definite future. Age 36, excel...t business and literary education. Present ...ary $5,500. Want permanent proposition ...m well rated firm. Address C-646, Editor ...Publisher.

Experienced Man,
...wants position as news or managing editor ...nity of 25,000 to 50,000. University educa...n. Capable writer, can handle men and ...ce-up. At present employed on one of ...rest papers of Middle West. Desires posi...n as permanent location. East or South ...ferred. Reply to Box C-705, Editor & ...blisher.

First Class Desk Man
...cient, experienced newspaper man in mar... for job as news or managing editor in ...thwest, California preferred. Now night ...dor of paper 60,000 circulation. Best of ...erences. Address C-708, Editor & Pub...er.

Foreman
...1 room foreman, nine years experience, ...able of handling any size mailing room. ... references. Box C-712, Editor & Pub...er.

General Manager-Publisher
...erienced and successful newspaper execu... familiar with up-to-date advertising ... circulation methods, efficiency and busi... detail and proper direction of all depart...ts of newspaper making, seeks opportunity ...general manager-publisher of live small ...daily with field for expansion. Refer...s include leading publishers. Address C-... Editor & Publisher.

Give Me Punch
...power in your editorial page. In game ...years. Prefer connection with Repub...n daily or weekly. Have been on papers ...large national circulations. Age 50. ...ried. Health good. Available immedi...y. Best references. Address Geo. D. Bea...n119—15th St., N. E., Washington, D. C.

Live Reporter,
...our years on city dailies, wants position ...general news or special feature writer. ...ress Box C-700, Editor & Publisher.

Thoroughly Experienced Man
...h has been editor and manager in towns ...o 50,000 and managing editor in towns up ...0,000, desires to return to town of 20,000 ...up. Best recommendations. What have ...to offer? C-689, care Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Afternoon Paper,
leader in its field, circulation more than twenty thousand, wants real display advertising salesman. Start fifty dollars week. Address Box C-701, care Editor & Publisher.

Classified Advertising Manager
One of the fastest growing dailies in New England desires a classified advertising manager who has a "make good" record. The man for this position must be a first class salesman and be competent to take full charge of a classified department. This one of the biggest opportunities in the East. Applications are to be made by letter, giving age, nationality, experience in detail, salary expected and references. Write Harold F. O'Keefe, Director of Advertising, Portland Press Herald, Portland, Me.

Maybe You're the Man, or you may know him. An advertising man with ability and energy can secure a third interest in a business magazine of the highest class that will net the right man $12,000 a year and give him $15,000 worth of stock—and a congenial life connection. An investment of $5,000 is necessary. Magazine established over five years and has valuable affiliations. Seven thousand business executives to be added to list before January 1st. Address Owner, P. O. Box 85, Times Square, New York.

Salesmen acquainted with buyers and who can obtain orders for sales and order books can make favorable commission arrangements with leading Chicago concern in this line. Chicago Sales Book Co., 337 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Wanted:
Capable and efficient circulation manager to take charge of the circulation of a daily and Sunday newspaper in an Eastern city. We want a man between 30 and 40 years old who has had experience in all branches of circulation work. A man capable of producing results in a keenly competitive field is required. A competent assistant who has had the required experience will be considered. State salary, age and experience, etc., in first letter. A good opportunity is offered for the right type of circulator. Address C-702, Editor & Publisher.

STORIES & POEMS WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Stories, Poems, Essays, Plays Wanted
We teach you how to write; where and when to sell. Publication of your work guaranteed by new method. Walhamore Institute, Dept. J, Lafayette Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

NOTICE

INTERNATIONAL PAPER COMPANY

New York, June 28th, 1922.

The Board of Directors have declared a regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent (1½%), on the preferred capital stock of this company, payable July 15th, 1922, to preferred stockholders of record at the close of business July 7th, 1922.

OWEN SHEPHERD, Treasurer.

$10,000

for first payment on an attractive newspaper property. Pennsylvania and Ohio locations preferred. Proposition X. Y.

C. M. PALMER
Newspaper Properties,
225 Fifth Ave. New York

Unusual Opportunities

Daily & Weekly NEWSPAPERS
TRADE PAPERS

HARWELL & CANNON
Newspaper and Magazine Properties
Times Building, New York
Established 1910

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

EDITORIAL WRITER, twenty years with two eastern dailies of the better class, now available because of change in management. Broadly informed in the big industrial problems, particularly transportation. "Qualified to act in any capacity on the news or editorial end. Writes clearly, interestingly and effectively. One of the highest grade men in newspaper work." Position and prospect more important than initial salary. Our No. 2457-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BLD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Publisher-Business Manager

Do you need a man experienced in every branch of newspaper work to assist you in your duties and to promote your newspaper?

Applicant now employed but wishes to enter field with opportunities greater than at present afforded. Now completing third year as advertising executive on daily newspaper in 20,000 middle west city. Has served as city and managing editor; published county seat weekly for seven years; practical printer.

Thirty-three years of age; married; college graduate.

Want to make change about September 1, and want permanency. References willingly furnished.

Kindly outline your proposition and make arrangements for personal interview.

Address C-703, care Editor & Publisher.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

A. A. C. Election Methods

DES MOINES, June 23, 1922.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: In your excellent article on page 10 of your June 10 issue you use the following language:

"It was proposed also that instead of nominating the president and secretary-treasurer from the floor of the convention, these two officers be nominated by the joint assembly—a subsidiary body of the association. This proposition was defeated and the method of electing officers remains unchanged."

This statement is incorrect. The motion to kill this provision in the revised constitution was lost.

The original proposed change in the constitution provides that the joint assembly should make nominations for president and secretary-treasurer, but that other nominations might be made from the floor. This provision stands.

Sincerely yours,
T. W. LE QUATTE,
Chairman Committee on Constitution and By-Laws.

Originality in News

NEW YORK, December 16, 1921.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: With reference to the article which appeared in your issue of December 10, in regard to the disappearance of originality in the American newspaper, in particular as to "news"—"Originality in News" is certain to disappear as the machinery for obtaining news improves and increases. When I first began to edit flimsy in 1874, the Associated Press covered nothing but routine matters, and its reports of an occurrence so far as skill in writing was concerned and impression on the reader were worthless. At the burial of the Unknown Soldier the report of the Associated Press was widely accepted by readers as a newspaper classic. To me it was the best report made. This change will go on.

The Associated Press can pay higher salaries, give more permanency than any one newspaper. In previous wars some one newspaper has stood at the front so conspicuously that its primacy was recognized. This was not true in the war of 1914-18. Local press associations each weave a finer mesh and cover a city, so far as the total of news is concerned, more closely than any single newspaper. In time the skill with which the news is presented in the agency will equal that of the newspaper.

A large amount of "originality" in giving news consists in graphic and piquant variations from the fact. The "rewrite man" causes more errors than almost any other one factor in newspaper service. I knew all that brilliant group which Dana, Lord and Doc. Wood gathered and taught in the Sun forty years ago. Under the training of these three men who understood accuracy, and this was as true of the Washington correspondent, as I was for a part of this period for the Sun, these men were taught to be accurate as well as brilliant, but they started the habit of mind in the American newspaper which regarded it as more important to be felicitously readable than fastidiously accurate. Between this tradition and the rewrite man the American newspaper has suffered.

The steady progress, however, of all forms of organized news service has led steadily and continuously to the common supply as a whole of a record of news which more and more makes newspapers uniform and which must make them so.

The practical result is that the "originality" of a newspaper is going to depend not on the record of facts, which will be more and more alike in all newspapers able to command the best sources of news, but in the other branches of a newspaper, in its editorials, in its criticism, in chroniques like Mr. Broun's, in special articles and in all the various ways in which opinion is expressed.

This is going to make the education of the journalist more and more important. The various news which is born every morning and dies every evening will be standardized. The treatment of aspects of this news, on the financial page, in comment, in the handling of events where opinion comes in to play, stage criticism, on social questions, and above all, on the editorial page, force, style, vigor, punch grow more and more indispensable.

Sheer newspaper ability will always count, but exactly as in any form of athletics strength and swiftness are doubtless indispensable, but these will not reach their full flower and fruit unless through training, so mere newspaper knack and nose for news will not get a man over without education. The difficulty with the newspaper today is that its management is so hot on making money that it is unwilling to pay the salaries which will command trained men of the first order. Salaries have advanced in the last ten years. In spite of this advance every man who reads this knows of men who ought to be on newspapers doing public service, who are tempted from this to advertising, publicity and propaganda. Said Byron:

"Ye have the Pyrrhic dance as yet.
Where is the Pyrrhic Phalanx gone?
Why of the two lose the nobler and the manlier one?"

TALCOTT WILLIAMS,
Director-Emeritus,
School of Journalism, Columbia Universtiy.

Editorial Note.—The communication presented above was dated December 16, and was written following the publication of an article in EDITOR & PUBLISHER by Hugh Logan of the New York World, in which the author found fault with the present method of syndicating news and features. In a note written under date of June 22, Dr. Williams explains that after writing the very interesting letter printed above, he mislaid it, but it is so interesting and bears out the general impression of newspaper men that we are glad to print it regardless of its age, although the details of the original article that brought forth this comment have, no doubt, been forgotten by many of the readers.

ADVERTISES NEED OF DOCTORS

Maine Medical Association Receives Answers from Porto Rico

As a result of a unique advertising campaign conducted by the committee of public relations of the Maine Medical Association letters from doctors all over the country and from as far away as Porto Rico, making inquiries regarding places where they may locate in Maine flooding the State.

The committee is using as its piece de resistance in this work a map demonstrating how many towns in Maine offer excellent advantages for young doctors who want to come and settle there. A survey of the state a short time ago showed many of these small towns to be lamentably lacking in physicians. This information furnished the impetus for the publicity campaign for more doctors for Maine.

HAD HARD TIME AT HERRIN

Don Ewing First at Scene of Mine Strife in Illinois

Illinois and Missouri newspaper men covering the bloody mine rioting at Harrin, Ill., have been up against conditions that rivaled the difficulties met by writers who covered the West Virginia mine fighting a few months ago.

Newspaper men who managed to get into the town had to combat poor wire service and absolute lack of facilities for getting over the scene of conflict.

Don Ewing, of the Chicago Bureau of the Associated Press was the first man into Herrin. After ten attempts he managed to hire a taxicab driver willing to drive through the mine war zone. Circling about in the taxi Ewing counted the bodies of twenty-six men and got the first accurate account of loss of life. Later he was under fire when he got between two opposing factions and was threatened when he tried to give water to a dying non-union miner.

Would Join A. B. C.

The Enid (Okla.) Eagle has applied for membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Roto for La Presse

La Presse, Montreal, will commence with its issue of June 24th, the publication of a weekly rotogravure supplement.

A New

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

Series

"High Spots in History"

Conspicuous historical events told in brief humorous rhymes with irreverently comic illustrations.

A Genuinely New Idea

A first publication, daily humor feature by the author of "Pigs Is Pigs" is bound to be a winner.

Territory is closing now.

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue New York City

Million Dollar Hearst Features

The World's Greatest Circulation Builders

International Feature Service, Inc.
New York

The Baltimore News

has just joined us for our

DAILY PUZZLE SERVICE

THE INTERNATIONAL SYNDICATE
213 Guilford Ave., Baltimore, Md.

The

Pittsburg Press

Daily and Sunday

Has the Largest CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURG

MEMBER A. B. C.

Foreign Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St., New York
544 Fort Dearborn Bank Bldg., Chicago
A. J. NORRIS HILL, Hearst Bldg., San Francisco

"The African World" & "Cape-to-Cairo Express"

Published every Saturday in London.

AMERICAN OFFICE
No. 1 West Thirty-fourth St.,
NEW YORK CITY

Telephone Fitz Roy 2969

HUNCHES

Managing editors and city editors are always on the lookout for news; and feature ideas that can be used locally. Editor & Publisher will pay $1 for each hunch published under this head. The fact that the hunch is not being worked successfully in your city does not bar it from this department. Address your contributions to the Hunch Editor. When they appear, clip them and mail them in and receive payment by return mail. Unavailable hunches will not be returned.

LOVE and storage warehouses have a connection that does not appear on superficial examination. But when love flies out the window, the storage company's van backs up to the door. Another romance in storage is what rental of a compartment in a storage warehouse means. Interview the manager of such a warehouse for some unusually interesting sidelights on love and housekeeping.—E. C. L.

Women's ankles are getting larger. Eighteen months of low shoe styles has developed the Achilles tendon. An interview with shoe dealers, doctors and with flappers rounds out an interesting local story.—H. B. S.

What are the former newsboys of your city doing now? Run a story about each successful one and in comjunction a story of what each of your present newsies hopes to be later in life. This series offers a good chance to hammer away with the name of your paper in every paragraph. It sticks in the memory of the casual reader.—J. H. B.

During the summer months many graduates of high school and college are planning to decide definitely what work they shall specialize in at college or what path they shall follow in the business world. Now is an appropriate time for a series of helpful articles setting forth the comparative advantages of various trades and professions. Such a series of articles will be appreciated by those who have not found themselves and who are anxious to get reliable vocational guidance. The articles should explain such things as the duties of the work, opportunities, qualifications for success, range in salary, etc. The articles should not be general, but should carefully analyze each occupation in a separate article. Representative men in those occupations will be glad to cooperate with you or perhaps write the entire articles.—D. R.

Conduct an "Ambition Survey" among the high school students of your city. What is this boy graduate going to do and what is the girl going to take up? What profession or trade will enter or study for and why do they make that certain choice? A very interesting series can be worked out along these ideas.—G. S., Jr.

How many of the leading citizens in your town are college men? At what age did most of them go to work? How much did they get at first? A story along this line would be particularly appropriate at this time of the year when so many young people are thinking about going to college or getting a job.—F. H. W.

Are the people of your city careful in handling library books? The Worcester Telegram ran a one-page story on vandalism. The librarian attributed the damage to books, which totalled over $10,000 in one year, to post-war license. Entire chapters were ripped from books which could not be replaced.—J. H. B.

Everyone is interested in food. So it would be of interest to all your subscribers to learn what the favorite foods of some of your leading citizens are. Does the president of the First National Bank like pork chops better than any other kind of food? Is the president of the Women's Club League in your city partial to potato salad? Information of this sort could be easily secured and with it should be presented some of the favorite recipes of leading citizens.—F. H. W.

CONVENIENT FORM BIOGRAPHY NOTICE

Full name _____ Residence _____

Single Married Widowed Divorced

Place of Birth _____ Date of Birth _____

Place of death _____ Hour _____ Date of Death _____

Married to _____ Where and When _____ Children _____ (Married Names) _____ Residence _____

Brothers and Sisters _____ Residence _____

If formerly a soldier, what division, and war _____ When Discharged _____ Rank _____

What school attended _____

Member of church _____ Member of societies _____

Held what public office _____ When _____ Politics _____

How long in State _____ How long in county _____

How long in U. S. if foreign born _____

Name of Father _____ Maiden name of mother _____

Last occupation (profession, trade, industry) _____

Previous occupation _____

Date of Funeral _____ Place _____ Hour _____

Minister _____ Cemetery _____

Special Music _____ Pallbearers _____

Cause of death _____ Physician (last) _____

Remarks: _____

Report furnished by _____ Republican-Leader, Marion, Ill.

The Marion (Ill.) Daily Republican uses the above obituary form which is furnished in tablet form to all local undertakers. The undertakers obtain the data for the family and for their record and thus the paper obtains its information with less effort and without duplication of calls. We call it "biography form" and use it for all politicians and other prominent persons, filing the same in our "morgue" after it has been dated.—OP.

106 Different Newspapers of U. S. & Canada Are Now Using

The Beck Comic Cartoons

"Gas Buggies"
(Daily)
"Down the Road"
(Sundays or Saturdays)

IF YOUR TERRITORY IS OPEN TELEGRAPH FOR TERMS

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK

The Mount Vernon, N. Y. DAILY ARGUS

carries more display advertising than any other newspaper in Westchester County.

This is an acknowledgement of its power that the advertiser should heed, if desirous of reaching the people of Mount Vernon.

GEO. B. DAVID & CO.
Foreign Representative
171 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

America's Best Magazine Pages

Daily and Sunday

Newspaper Feature Service
241 WEST 58TH STREET
New York City

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business-builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

NEW ENGLAND

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356
*Attleboro Sun .....(E)	4,968	.0275	.0175
*Boston Sunday Advertiser(S)	416,358	.55	.55
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	284,724	.45	.45
Boston Globe .....(S)	322,907	.55	.55
Boston Post .....(M)	380,796	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	401,797	.55	.55
Boston Telegram .....(E)	145,113	.20	.20
Boston Transcript .....(E)	38,443	.20	.20
*Fall River Herald.....(E)	12,905	.035	.035
*Fitchburg Sentinel .....(E)	10,739	.05	.035
*Haverhill Gazette .....(E)	15,425	.055	.04
*Lynn Item .....(E)	16,273	.06	.04
*Lynn Telegram News.(E&S)	16,886	.05	.05
Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader(M&E)	20,419	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard-Mercury .....(M&E)	30,659	.07	.07
*New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	24,853	.07	.07
Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	15,845	.035	.03
*Salem News .....(E)	20,023	.09	.07
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	74,394	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	42,741	.18	.15
MAINE—Population, 768,014
Bangor Daily Commercial(E)	14,469	.05	.04
*Portland Press Herald (M&S)	19,291	.07	.06
*Portland Express .....(E)	25,424	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram .....(S)	25,966	.10	.07
NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683
Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,312	.03	.02
Manchester Union-Leader (M&E)	28,649	.10	.06
RHODE ISLAND—Population 604,397
Newport Daily News....(E)	6,171	.035	.03
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	24,063	.07	.06
Pawtuxet Valley Daily Times (Arctic) .....(E)	2,475	.021429	.021429
*Providence Bulletin .....(E)	59,767	.135	.135
Providence Journal .....(M)	30,662	.08	.08
*Providence Journal .....(S)	54,629	.12	.12
*Providence Tribune .....(E)	22,501	.10	.09
*Woonsocket Call .....(E)	13,024	.04	.04
VERMONT—Population, 352,428
*Barre Times .....(E)	6,644	.03	.02
Brattleboro Daily Reformer. (E)	3,016	.03	.015
Burlington Daily News...(E)	7,001	.04	.04
*Burlington Free Press..(M)	11,108	.05	.05
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record .....(E)	3,124	.025	.015
CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631
*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	43,033	.145	.14
*Bridgeport Post .....(S)	18,395	.085	.08
*Hartford Courant .....(D)	29,780	.08	.07
*Hartford Courant .....(S)	48,600	.10	.09
*Hartford Times .....(E)	44,077	.12	.12
New Haven Register..(E&S)	32,537	.09	.08
*New London Day.....(E)	10,325	.06	.045
Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	11,629	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour .....(E)	4,594	.025	.025
*Stamford Advocate .....(E)	8,254	.0375	.03

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.

Has 40% of the Nation's Savings Deposits

With seven and a half per cent of the population of the United States and forty per cent of the savings, the New England territory offers the greatest of all markets.

It must also be remembered that New England's population is chiefly urban—85 per cent live in cities, where there is a freer spending of money.

New England people, accustomed to buying advertised commodities which appeal to them, cannot be reached except through newspaper advertising.

These papers will introduce you to the right people.

The Pulling Power of Advertising

The Globe
AND Commercial Advertiser.

A CAREFUL study of results from various advertising campaigns over a long period of years would seem to prove conclusively that most satisfactory and profitable returns come to the concern which is ultra-conservative in the representations it makes regarding the merit and value of its goods.

There are those who still look upon advertising space as a mere device to lure women into dry goods stores and specialty shops or to produce leads for intensive salesmanship. But the real big fellows in business to-day are big because they have built up a prestige for fair play, honest goods, genuine values and real sales.

There are stores which do the biggest and most profitable business on the basis of 2 per cent. for advertising, while there are others who hold a lesser degree of public confidence and often spend up to 10 per cent. for advertising.

Those who use advertising as a vehicle for matching their cupidity against the judgment of women crowding a counter for bargains lose most of the cumulative value represented in advertising.

MEMBER A. B. C.

THE NEW YORK GLOBE

MEMBER A. B. C.

JASON ROGERS, Publisher

LORENZEN & THOMPSON, Inc.
Special Representatives
CHICAGO NEW YORK

THIS ISSUE—TWO SIDES TO ALL QUESTIONS? NOT FOR EDITORS

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.]

Vol. 55. No. 14 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

PROOF that New York is a Receptive Market!

THREE years ago, in June, 1919, a well known firm from Chicago opened a plant to manufacture and sell in New York a new product in an over-crowded field. The article was consistently advertised and selling effort kept up at all times. Within three years, in June, 1922, this manufacturer was selling one of every three buyers of such commodities in New York City and the product itself enjoyed the largest sale in the United States in its field. The manufacturer was The Chicago Tribune. The product was the Daily News—grown from nothing to more than 500,000 copies a day—bought by one of three morning newspaper buyers in New York City.

THE demand that made this newspaper can be tapped through it! The wanted newspaper is a good medium to reach the wants of its readers. Get the details!

THE NEWS

New York's Picture Newspaper

25 Park Place, New York—Tribune Building, Chicago

LARGEST MORNING CIRCULATION IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK STATE DAILY NEWSPAPERS

The newspapers listed here are sold on the idea of co-operation.

They co-operate with one another in boosting the state of New York as the greatest market on earth.

They co-operate with the powers that be in thir own communities in making their home town the best place on earth in which to live.

They co-operate with their local merchants in keeping their business in their home towns as much as possible.

They co-operate with national manufacturers in popularizing trade marked goods--co-operating in every posible way.

These New York State Daily and Sunday newspapers, forty nine of them, nine Sunday, eleven morning and twenty nine evening, published in twenty-two cities, come as near covering the State as is possible in any one list.

Co-operate with local dealers, by advertising your merchandise to the homes where the buying habit is usually created.

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(M)	31,950	.09	.09
*Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(S)	47,041	.11	.11
Auburn Citizen .....(E)	6,702	.04	.035
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle.....(E)	61,561	.20	.20
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle.....(S)	75,566	.20	.20
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer...(M&E)	85,857	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier .....(S)	120,554	.27	.22
*Buffalo Express .....(M)	38,099	.12	.10
*Buffalo Express .....(S)	58,205	.18	.14
*Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	104,958	.21	.21
*Buffalo Evening Times.....(E)	85,006	.15	.15
*Buffalo Sunday Times .....(S)	102,809	.15	.15
*Corning Evening Leader.....(E)	7,364	.04	.04
Elmira Star-Gazette .....(E)	23,792	.09	.07
Geneva Daily Times .....(E)	5,432	.04	.04
*Glens Falls Post-Star.....(M)	7,324	.03	.03
*Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	6,295	.03	.03
Gloversville Morning Herald.....(M)	5,717	.035	.03
Hornell Tribune-Times .....(E)	6,874	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,454	.04	.04
*Jamestown Journal .....(E)	7,030	.025	.025
*Jamestown Morning Post.....(M)	9,525	.05	.03
*Middletown Times-Press .....(E)	6,721	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	8,056	.04	.04
Newburgh Daily News.....(E)	10,378	.05	.05
New Rochelle Daily Star.....(E)	3,900	.02	.02
*New York Globe.... .....(E)	149,882	.40	.38
*New York Evening Mail.....(E)	147,760	.41	.40
New York Evening Post.....(E)	35,006	.32	.25
The New York Herald.....(M)	177,629	.48	.45
The New York Herald.....(S)	177,629	.48	.45
The Sun, New York.....(E)	180,442	.48	.45
New York Times.....(M)	344,596	.65	.6305
New York Times.....(S)	542,039	.75	.7275
*New York Tribune.....(M)	137,011	.40	.36
*New York Tribune.....(S)	141,973	.40	.36
New York World.....(M)	351,309	.60	.58
New York World.....(S)	601,108	.60	.58
New York World.....(E)	280,727	.60	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette.....(E)	14,196	.06	.05
*Olean Times .....(E)	5,854	.025	.025
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise..(E)	11,340	.05	.05
Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	64,388	.20	.18
Saratoga Springs Saratogian.....(E)	8,224	.04	.04
*Staten Island Daily Advance.....(E)	8,782	.04	.04
Syracuse Journal .....(E)	45,014	.10	.10
Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,647	.05	.05

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Auditor's Report, April 1, 1922.

The Ninth Convention of the A·B·C·

(AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS)

will be held at the Hotel La Salle Chicago

October 19th & 20th

NINETEEN · TWENTY · TWO

The DINNER

NIGHT OF OCTOBER 20th

WILL BE HELD IN THE

DRAKE HOTEL

$1,468,256,900 In Manufactured Goods

PHILADELPHIA'S

1921 Output

6169 industrial plants in Philadelphia last year turned out products valued at $1,468,256,900, according to the report of State Secretary of Internal Affairs Woodward, just made public.

The 243,348 employes in these widely varied manufacturing plants received $267,365,300 in wages during 1921. The capital invested totaled $983,309,200.

Philadelphia, as one of the leading textile centres, produced goods of this class worth $398,422,400.

Other leading products, with their values, were:

Metals and Metal products	$265,144,000
Food and kindred products	210,463,700
Chemicals and allied products	151,056,000
Paper and printing	141,704,800
Leather and rubber goods	72,468,600
Building and contracting	65,631,900

Philadelphia, the "Workshop of the World" and the third largest market in the United States, represents a market which will not be overlooked by live manufacturers.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

The Bulletin

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America

Net paid daily average circulation for six months ending March 31, 1922

494,499 copies a day

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
681 Market Street

LONDON
M. Bryans,
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
J. J. E. Hessey,
5 rue Lamartine (9).

(Copyright 1922—Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 6,200

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday preceding the date of publication—by the Editor and Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Branch Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 55 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1922 No. 14

TWO SIDES TO ALL QUESTIONS? NOT FOR EDITORS

Only One Side to the Truth, Declares William Peter Hamilton, Chief of the Wall Street Journal, Who Thinks 21,500 of Nation's 22,000 Weekly Editorials Were Better Unwritten

By THOMAS H. ORMSBEE

"OF the 22,000 editorials which I estimate the newspapers of the country print each week, 21,500 might as well better never have been printed."

This sentence of condemnation was spoken by William Peter Hamilton, for nearly 13 years editor of the Wall Street Journal, New York. Mr. Hamilton's statement is not a mere snap judgment, but arises from long thought upon the subject and incidentally a much longer period when, as a member of the news staff of his paper, he wrote over 700 editorials before he had one printed as he had written it. During these years this English-reared Scotchman, now an American citizen, has followed editorial writing in the United States and has evolved his own principles for this very important branch of newspaper work—principles which he employs daily in the writing of those hard-hitting, clearly-stated, brief editorials which appear on the front page of the Wall Street Journal.

"Most editorials are not real editorials, but merely lengthy dissertations that would be equally effective if cut up into cakes and used for filler," Mr. Hamilton continued. "I believe that an editorial should leave the reader with a single thought in his mind and not a multiplicity of unrelated ideas. The true editorial might well be constructed as a simple syllogism—with a major premise founded upon a truth, a minor premise based upon the news of the day, and a conclusion, which is the logical deduction."

"You can put your premises, illustrations and conclusions in any way you please, but you must arrest the reader's attention before the end of the first line. The title can often serve this purpose. Then can all be done in not more than 1,000 words. An editorial needs a mighty good excuse to be longer.

"The long editorials that you see too frequently tire the reader before he is half through and, what is more serious, they leave him with a confusion of impressions and opinions instead of a clearly crystallized thought not the truth implicit in the day's news.

"Why is it that such an overwhelming proportion of the editorials printed throughout the country do not qualify? Then you suggest lack of disciplined thought you have gone, I think, to the root of the trouble.

"You can't write a fifty-fifty editorial. I believe the man who tells you that there are two sides to every question. There is only one side to the truth. Further, the man who writes editorials should read, read, widely read and his reading should be up to the moment. But he must get his editorials out of books. He must associate with men of affairs or his editorials will be lacking in the human touch. This they must have and they can only get it by contact with affairs, poise and ideas."

From officeboying to a London stockbroker to the editorship of the Wall Street Journal, January 1, 1908, and ever since all accomplished since the 80's—it would be romantic enough to suit any newspaper man if traveled by the most direct route. William Peter Hamilton traveled round the world the other way—Africa, New Zealand, Australia, and saw America first at San Francisco. At times it would seem as if he had purposely taken the most roundabout direction.

"Stockbroking and clerking did not interest me greatly," he continued. "What I wanted to do was to write. I did financial and special newspaper work on the Pall Mall Gazette under H. Wickham Steed, although not a regular member of the staff. Once I spent a winter night in a London pauper casual ward for him—the hardest twelve guineas I ever earned. I deviled for Harold Frederick, the famous London correspondent of the New York Times. He and I had for each other, what might be called, the attraction of opposites. In those days the Spectator was, as it is today, a serious publication. It allowed itself but one relaxation, letters from its readers telling of marvelous intelligence in dumb animals. Frederick would invent the most preposterous Yankee dog stories and then turn them over to me to be put in what he termed my solid Middle-class English. I would kill all the humor, sign it 'Pater Familias,' or 'Mother of Six,' and send it along to Spectator, which actually printed one such outrage in all seriousness.

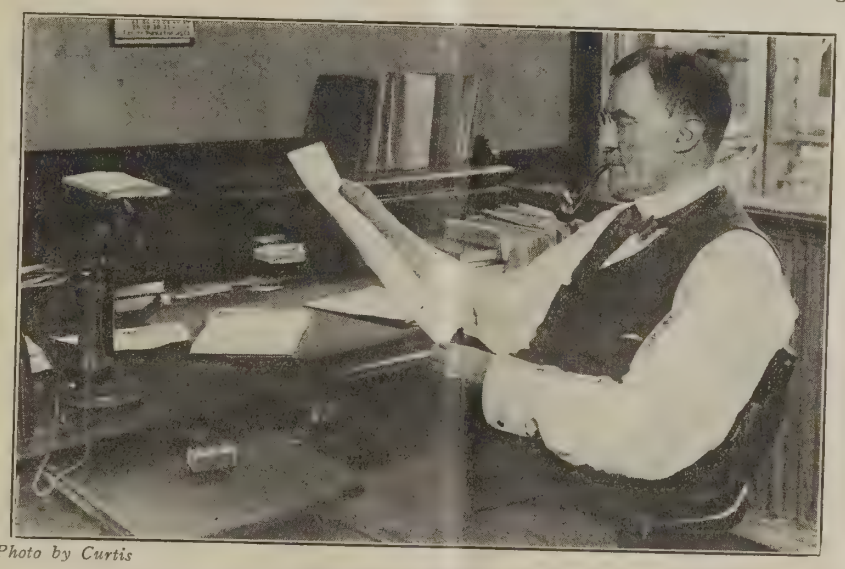

Photo by Curtis

"A major premise founded upon a truth, a minor premise based upon the day's news and a conclusion"—and you have an editorial built according to William Peter Hamilton, who smokes his pipe on Wall Street now after years of globe-trotting.

"In 1893 I went out to Africa to report the first Matabele campaign. I could ride and shoot and had held an officer's commission in the English territorial auxiliary forces. I volunteered for the Bechuanaland border police and did some war correspondence during the campaign which, much like other British Empire expansion, was done with insufficient supports and inadequate medical equipment. As Kipling says: 'If the British army had waited for supports the British Empire would have ended at Margate Beach.'

"After the war was over I worked for the Johannesburg Critic, a weekly social and financial paper. This was during the gold boom of 1895. Malarial fever drove me to other climates and started me on a sea voyage which rather by chance took me to New Zealand.

"When I was following my profession in South Africa, I was thrown in contact with Cecil John Rhodes. He had definite ideas and large conceptions, far above the mere making of money. Money was necessary to the carrying out of his ideas, to the extension of white civilization from the Cape to Cairo, with a railroad as the outward and visible sign of something of even spiritual significance. In the respect of intuitive intelligence I have met only one man like him—the late J. Pierpont Morgan. It was impossible to follow the rapidity of their mental processes. There was something phenomenal about it, like the performances of mathematically gifted children who can give you the square root of a number in thousands with a few moments of mental calculation. Other well-known men—speaking perhaps from the point of view of a reporter—seemed to have mental processes much like our own. Most of the great captains of industry I have met, like James J. Hill and Edward H. Harriman, had a quality essential to a first-rate thinker. They could eliminate the irrelevant. They could grasp the fundamental fact in a page of verbiage. But Rhodes and Morgan could do more. They could reason to an often startling but sound conclusion before you could state the premises.

"When the Spanish-American war broke out I was on the press there. The only dispatches we had on this came from the Reuter service sent out from London over the Eastern cables, for there was no service across the Pacific. These Reuter dispatches were so heavily loaded with stories from the New York newspapers, the Journal and the World, which were printing such stories as 'the Spanish fleet off New York,' and that sort of thing, that the proprietor of the paper ordered World or Journal news killed.

"Well, one night, as I was putting the paper to bed, a dispatch of about a hundred words came through telling of the Battle of Manila Bay. I knew enough of war at first hand to recognize the real thing, stopped the press and put it in. The next day the other paper in the town, an afternoon one, did not confirm it. The proprietor came down and fired me for disobeying orders. It was confirmed sixteen hours afterward. I was too indignant to accept an offer of reinstatement on account of my 'youth and inexperience.' It was not until years later that I learned from Harden, then editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, who had been the World's correspondent at Manila Bay, that by knowledge of the Eastern cable system he was able to give Dewey's official dispatch six hours' start and beat it by sixteen hours.

"It was on the outbreak of the Boer war that I came to America on the invitation of Thomas F. Woodlock, an old London friend and then a partner in Dow, Jones & Co., to keep Wall Street straight about that war and its market importance, which was little enough, as we had a bull market up to near the end of it.

"That did not take all my time and I invented for the Dow-Jones Financial News Service the stock market paragraphs, which has since become a standard feature of the service and the Wall Street Journal. Their aim was to get, as far as possible, a reason, if only a tentative reason, for all individual and general fluctuations in the stock market. Mere generalities were not acceptable and I could tell many stories, ranging from pathos to wild absurdity, of the gathering of news which might be stale in half an hour.

"Such news was of course of high value to active brokerage houses serving as it did to sustain interest in the market. They all had customers whose appetite for such news was insatiable. I am still humbled by the crudity of some of the reasons I had to give, especially as I was evolving a method. But, at last, it was genuine news-collecting and not guessing. It was early this period that I came in personal contact with the Sam-Bowles-the-elder method of training a newspaper man. Charles H. Dow, the founder of the Wall Street Journal, had been brought up in newspaper work by the elder Bowles and, like his master, he would call me up for a sort of police third-degree on my previous day's work. My protest to Dow's partners was met by the assurance that this was Mr. Dow's way of showing his affection—a regard only extended to promising material."

Mr. Hamilton confessed to no hobbies, says he hates exercise, and cannot see well enough to play golf. His style and editorial methods mould his assistants and he says that, after C. W. Barron, the owner of the news service, the Wall Street Journal, the Boston News Bureau, the Philadelphia News Bureau and Barron's, he gets as much from his colleagues as he gives. It is fair to say they deny this.

"An editor must always be considered in his relation with the proprietor of the paper if he does not happen to own it," continued the editor of the Wall Street Journal. "Clarence W. Barron, with whom I have worked for over twenty years, is the greatest newspaper genius I have ever met, not excluding Lord Northcliffe, and a brilliant writer himself. He tests out his men to the last ounce and knows their work better than they do themselves, but is big enough to let them do it in their own way if they can show him the right results. It is this sympathy and even affectionate understanding to which I owe that confidence and courage which is indispensable in editorial work."

From the start of his New York work Mr. Hamilton volunteered editorials out of his spare time and only when he had written over 700 did he see his first one in print. Prior to this his thoughts and phrases were often worked over by others. After this initial editorial his average soon improved to two out of every five accepted, and when Sereno S. Pratt left to become the secretary of the New York Chamber of Commerce, he was selected to succeed him.

The aim of the Wall Street Journal, under Mr. Hamilton's editorship is to take the quackery and mystery out of Wall Street. He believes that the paper can't and must not "four-flush" on its news. That the men on the desk must know as much and more about the news they handle as the reporters who write it. By a continuation of the Bowles-up-on-the-carpet pedagogical method, it is the aim of the paper to make its news staff not second-rate specialists who might be able to explain a matter to some one already acquainted with the subject, but first-rate specialists who know their subject so well that they can make any portion of it clear to a schoolboy.

"I dictate an editorial in about ten minutes," Mr. Hamilton continued, "but this same editorial has frequently been long in embryo and is quickened into birth by the news of the day. What is going to happen is more to me than reminiscence. I hate to think that I may ever get so old that the news of the morning paper won't be worth waking up for.

"Wall Street, what do I think about it? Wall Street has steadily raised its ethical standards throughout my twenty-three years' experience. Of course there will always be sharpers who use a Wall Street address for fraudulent purposes, but that is only the homage vice pays to virtue. If it were not for the real integrity of Wall Street, whose word is better than its best bond, this address would be useless to these people, and they would send out their bait from Washington or Peekskill.

"Improvements in Wall Street and the stock exchange are all from the inside. All true reform works from the heart out. A financier's character means much down here, not only with brokers but with financial newspaper men.

"So far as editors and reporters are concerned Wall Street is no Tom Tiddler's ground where you pick up gold and silver. You stay a relatively poor man but for what you can save from your salary. If you once allow a broker to carry you on a stock transaction, he owns you body and soul from then on.

"For the self appointed bodies which would try to regulate Wall Street and everything else, I have neither use, space nor sympathy. Congress exists to regulate the affairs of the country and it should not be dominated by the agricultural bloc, the Anti-Saloon League, the labor unions, nor anybody else.

"Materially, Wall Street was never sounder than it is today. This also applies to the business condition of the country as a whole. If I were to guess what is going to happen during the next year or two, and that is as far as I would care to project my estimate into the future, I would say that we are going to see an era of prosperity due to gold inflation. The Federal Reserve System is only required to have a forty per cent gold reserve and it has now more than double this amount. This must expand the currency and stimulate enterprise, adventure, speculation, or whatever you choose to call it.

"Public opinion of the country has not recovered its poise since the war. It has been dragged hither and yon by leaders who use the vicious theater manager's plan of giving the people what they want. Our people as a whole are suffering from moving pictures and newspapers that save them the trouble of thinking."

COURT AWARDS PAPERS JUDGMENT AGAINST STRIKING PRINTERS

NEWCASTLE (England) newspapers, the Chronicle and the Mail & Leader, secured judgment in the Newcastle Police Court a few days ago against each of 97 union printers, on the ground that the printers had broken their contract with the newspapers when they failed to report for work on July 31 and subsequent days, while the recent strike against a wage-cut awarded by the Industrial Court was in progress.

While the plaintiffs asked damages of £10 in each case, they stated that the object of the proceedings was not to recover money, because any damages would be inadequate compensation for the actual loss sustained, but to vindicate the position of the plaintiffs. They requested that if the court decide that a case was made out damages be assessed at the nominal sum of 25 shillings in each case. It was testified that the defendants were all members of the Typographical Association, their wages being regulated by national agreements.

The bench found that the representatives of the Typographical Association acted within their authority in submitting the question of wages to the Industrial Court and that the findings of that court were therefore binding. The plaintiffs, the bench held, were justified in reducing wages in accordance with the award, and the defendants were not justified in leaving their employment without proper notice. Judgment was therefore given for the plaintiffs for the 25 shillings agreed damages and costs in each case.

Appeal has been taken by the Typographical Association to the High Court. If the latter should uphold the Newcastle decision, according to Robert Smillie, one of the British Labor Party leaders, "trade unionism will have received the biggest set-back it has ever had." He urged the Labor Party generally to rally to the printers' support.

WON'T ARBITRATE 44 HOURS

N. Y. Employers Agree on That, But Not to Other Rules of Pressmen

International union law as an arbitrable factor in printing trades disputes is occupying a prominent place in negotiations between the New York Employing Printers' Association and the pressroom unions, employers holding that international union law written since the inception of the present arbitration agreement is subject to arbitration under that agreement. The employers have agreed that the 44-hour week was covered by an international law enacted prior to October 1, 1919, and is therefore not arbitrable under the present agreement.

Other points on which the employers seek and the unions resist arbitration are the scale and the complement of men on automatic presses and on 65-inch presses. The employers state that the 65-inch press law was enacted after the signing of the present arbitration contract and that no union law exists which covers the operation of two automatic presses by one man and that both of these questions are therefore arbitrable.

The resolution adopted by the Printers' League covering these points concludes:

"WHEREAS, the Closed Shop Branch will welcome the time when laws for the printing industry can be established through joint conference and enactment by union and employers' organizations, and invites the co-operation of the international unions to attain this end,

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the membership of the Closed Shop Branch instructs its executive committee to demand the conciliation or arbitration of all points not specifically covered in the laws of the International Printing Pressmen's & Assistants' Union as of Oct. 1, 1919, and that the executive committee is given full power to act in this emergency on all outstanding questions as a unit involving union laws in negotiations with the unions concerned."

TYPO WAGE CUT IN WINNIPEG

Scales Renewed for Des Moines Printers and Wilkes-Barre Stereotypers

Local arbitration in Winnipeg, Man., has resulted in reduction of the newspapers' typographical scale by $4.80 a week for night work for the first six months of a one-year contract and a further cut of $1.88 per week for the second six months. Day workers get a reduction of $4.30 a week for the first half-year and $1.38 for the second. The new scale is: First six months, night, $46.20; day, $43.70; second six months, night, $44.32; day, $42.32.

Scales were renewed in the Des Moines (Ia.) typographical contract and for Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) stereotypers.

The Des Moines agreement runs from June 1, 1922, to June 1, 1924, and provides a weekly wage of $46.50 for night work and $43 for day work, for a 48-hour week.

The Wilkes-Barre stereotype agreement is effective until December 31, 1923, renewing for two years the previous five-year contract. Forty-eight hours, day and night, constitute the working week, for which the following scale is provided: Night work, $38; day work, $35; Saturday night work, $8.50. Differences are to be settled by the chapel affected selecting a union man from another chapel and the publisher affected selecting another publisher, the two to act as a board of arbitration and render decision in ten days. If they cannot agree, they are to select a third member, whose decision shall be binding.

THREE ARBITRATION DECISIONS

International Board Rules on St. Louis and Two Louisville Cases

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 28.—Decision was reached by the International Arbitration Board here Friday in the cases of the Louisville and St. Louis stereotypers. The board deadlocks on the Seattle and Portland (Ore.) stereotype cases. Louisville publishers had appealed from a local arbitration award which granted an increase of $4.82 a week to journeymen from Feb. 1, 1922. The International Board cut the increase from $4.82 to $1.82. In the St. Louis stereotypers' case, the board decided that wages should continue at present scale on a two-year contract, with either party having the right to reopen the wage scale within a year.

Session of the board on Friday with the International Printing Pressmen's & Assistants' Union resulted in a decision on the Louisville pressmen's case, th only one before the board. Wages pro vided in the present three-year contrac effective September 4, 1921, were con tinued, with the right of either party t reopen the matter within a year.

The deadlocked stereotypers' cases g over to the September meeting of th board.

BRITISH WALKOUT ENDS EMPLOYERS WIN

Printers Accept Pay-Cut Under Awar of Court Rejected a Month Ago— Scale Reduced 12/6d by Next May

Normal printing conditions were re sumed in provincial newspaper offices c England, Wales and in Belfast, Irelan when the Typographical Associatio executive council recommended that th union printers accept the wage-cut re cently awarded by the Industrial Cour sitting as an arbitrator. The agreemer reached between the Typographical Asso ciation and the Federation of Maste Printers, and the Newspaper Society pro vide for a reduction of three shillings week, effective immediately; a similar re duction on September 9, 1922, a furthe three shillings on November 11 and final cut of three shillings sixpence c May 5, 1923, making a total reduction 12 shillings sixpence a week.

It was also agreed that wages should l stabilized until December 31, 1923, a that no applications for reductions or i creases should be made in the rate wages payable under the national agre ment during that period.

The employers' associations agreed recommend to their members that Typ graphical Association members be rei stated in their former positions and t Typographical Association agreed not expel members who remained at or r turned to work under the Industri Court award.

It was further agreed that members the Typographical Association should n be brought within the provisions of t agreement until they had received 14 da notice from their employers.

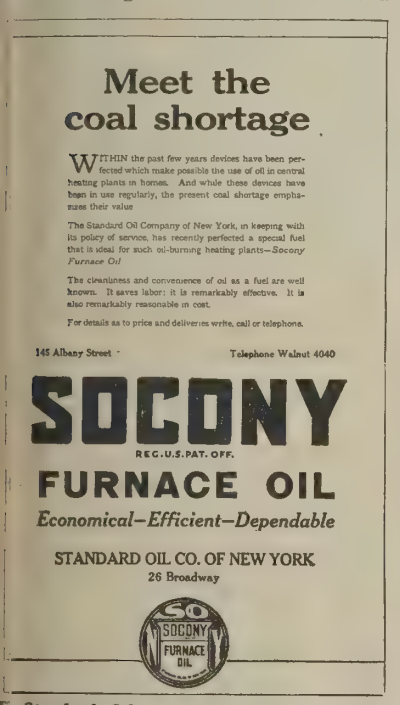
The strike arose July 21 when t Typographical Association by a referend vote rejected the award of the Industr Court, whose offices as arbitrator h been requested by the employers' ass ciations and the executives of the Typ graphical Association, following failure conciliation proceedings. The employe associations accepted the award as a m ter of course, but the union executiv declared that their constitution debarr them from similar action, as it compell a referendum vote of the membership such questions. They urged acceptan of the award in submitting it to the me bership, stating that economic conditio made a fight inadvisable, but the vote w heavily against acceptance.

During the strike, Belfast was witho local newspapers, as the employers ma no effort to put out even make-sh editions. In other cities where the str was effective, the publishers organi emergency printing forces from other partments, or used photo-engraved pla of typewritten copy for their news. many cities, the last week of the str was marked by heavy defections from strikers' ranks.

Diviny Heads Printing Craftsmen

John J. Diviny, superintendent of Government Printing Office, Washingt D. C., was elected president of the Int national Association of Printing Ho Craftsmen, August 30 at its annual c vention held in Boston. It had been tended to continue the session to the 3 but quick handling of business permit its conclusion the 30th. Harvey Weber of Buffalo, N. Y., defeated W. Kenkel of New York for the vice-pr dency. Buffalo was selected as the 1 convention city.

COAL STRIKES OPEN UP ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES IN MANY LINES



Oil, Gas and Electrical Appliance Manufacturers Have Been Quick to Cultivate Sales Prospects in Newspaper Copy and Engineers and Transportation Firms Are Also Present

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

EDITORIAL NOTE—This is the seventh of a series of articles by Mr. Franklin on important cases of creating sales through newspaper advertising, based on studies of methods and results of current successful local, sectional and national users of newspaper advertising. Readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER who know the facts behind noteworthy efforts are invited to send them to Mr. Franklin, care of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Suggestions and comments are invited. The next article of the series will appear in an early issue. Look for it.

THE arrival of a shortage of coal in the offing for this winter has brought with it a new selling opportunity for a considerable group of advertisers and prospective advertisers throughout the country,—once more proving the truth of the axiom, "It's an ill wind which doesn't blow somebody some business."

The situation is one of keen interest to every newspaper advertising manager desirous of pushing his total advertising tonnage upward, the agency executive who is looking for new accounts or a new selling angle.

The Standard Oil Company of New York is one of the first to recognize the opportunity offered coal substitutes by the miners' strikes. Here is a specimen of its newspaper advertising copy, four columns wide by fourteen inches deep, on the newly perfected Socony Furnace Oil.

Hence to develop old accounts and many manufacturers who would like to make sales under conditions which automatically provide a large army of prospects who can be reached best and most quickly by newspaper advertising.

The word is being passed among leading sales managers of the country that the market for devices which save fuel or give heat without coal is going to be greater through the winter of 1922-23 even than it was during war times. Immediate settlement of the coal strike would not make material difference, since there will be a shortage, anyway, EDITOR & PUBLISHER learns.

Oil heaters, gas heaters, fuel economizers, coal substitutes, supplementary heating specialties, wood-burning stoves, heat regulators and similar products are without question scheduled for a wide sale. It is forecasted at Washington by those close to the situation that coke will be used to an extent never before seen.

All of this means an advertising situation not quite like that of any previous year. It also means that the advertising space used by those firms whose sales should be stimulated by this emergency marketing should increase greatly, if advertising managers of newspapers, agency men and the companies themselves are properly on the job."

Already, although the cold months are some weeks away, a number of progressive companies have pushed their "coal strike" merchandising under way. A study of some of the things being done even now will be suggestive as to what may be expected later.

The Standard Oil Company of New York, in keeping with its policy of service, one of the first to recognize the opportunity and to "shove off" advertisingly a campaign which is likely to place it among the leaders on big sales this fall and winter. It has perfected a special fuel for oil-burning plants known as "Socony Furnace Oil."

In copy four columns wide by about 14 inches deep, under the heading, "Meet the coal shortage," the company points out:

"Within the past few years devices have been perfected which make possible the use of oil in central heating plants in homes. And while these devices have been in use regularly, the present coal shortage emphasizes their value.

"The Standard Oil Company of New York, in keeping with its policy of service, has recently perfected a special fuel that is ideal for such oil-burning heating plants—Socony Furnace Oil.

"The cleanliness and convenience of oil as a fuel are well known. It saves labor; it is remarkably effective. It is also remarkably reasonable in cost. For details as to price and deliveries, write, call or telephone." The address of the local office is appended.

The Socony name is featured strongly, thereby putting behind the new product the prestige of the long newspaper advertising of the Standard Oil Company. The three words, "Economical—efficient—dependable," appear under the name of the product. The fact that only through newspaper advertising could the news of this newly-added product be flashed quickly over a considerable area should not be overlooked.

People take time to change their habits, unless an emergency forces them to do so quickly. In this copy, the Standard Oil Company has used astute psychology in making it clear that oil-burning devices are not some odious substitute for something better, but that they always have been used and have considerable value.

As is to be expected, the more progressive public service gas and electric corporations are alert to the fact that the situation can hardly be other than favorable to the sale of gas, electricity and devices for using them. One gas company, in an eastern city, is using copy one-column wide by seven inches deep on page one of the papers in its city. The heading, "Your gas company and the coal shortage," ties up closely with the news headlines of the day.

The copy explains:

"We are prepared to give every possible assistance to avert suffering from lack of heat due to the coal shortage.

"It is evident from facts now before us that heat from fuel other than coal will be needed. Gas is the ideal fuel for supplemental heat and those residing where it is available are fortunate.

"However, we wish to sound a timely warning to all gas users: Do not postpone purchasing new gas equipment or notifying us about putting your present appliances into first-class condition. Later we will probably be rushed with orders, at which time it will be impossible to give prompt service to all customers.

"Call at the office or telephone your request for an inspector to call and look over your equipment and tell you what is needed to put it into good shape and make suggestions for new appliances."

This is typical of copy which can be used all over the country right now. In almost every city where there is a newspaper, there is a public service corporation of this sort which should be stimulated to action.

One of the manufacturers who would be expected to be adjusting his advertising and sales to the current situation is the maker of oil-burning furnaces. He is. In single column copy, nine inches deep, the Automatic Oil Heating Company, manufacturer of the "Nokol" furnace, shows a diagram of how such a furnace operates with, below, the single, significant word, "Coal," which is enough to rouse the average reader's interest these days.

"You are worried about your coal supply," the copy says. "Your coal dealer has warned you that the situation is serious. He cannot furnish you a supply now, nor guarantee either a supply or a price next winter. Unless the strike is settled soon, the conditions will be worse.

"Nevertheless"—this in blackface type—"you can secure an abundance of clean, dependable, sanitary heat by burning oil in a Nokol burner, the operating cost of which, in the average heating plant, is equivalent to anthracite at $11.25 a ton.

"You can avoid the shoveling of coal and ashes and you can eliminate the furnace man.

"The fire will automatically go out when the house is warm and will start up again automatically as the temperature drops. You can have uniform heat all the year without dust, ashes, smoke, smell or labor. Ten thousand Nokol users testify to these facts.

"The Standard Oil Company will now contract to deliver oil in your tank until May 1, 1923, at 10 cents per gallon; this guarantees both your supply and the price. Illuminating gas (for pilot only) and electricity to operate the motor are required, but the cost of same is nominal.

"Now is the time to install Nokol to assure your comfortable, adequate heat supply next winter. Nokol can be instaled in any furnace or boiler."

It is a reasonably safe wager that continuous copy of this sort while the public need grows more acute will do more to convert home owners into becoming permanent users of oil-burning furnaces than could be done under ordinary conditions in a number of years.

Department stores have sensed the potential market and are featuring oil heaters and gas cook stoves. They back up copy by quoting fuel administration rules issued in one state:

"1—Don't burn a pound of coal this month or next month or October.

"2—Cook and heat water for your household with a kerosene or gas stove.

"3—Buy a portable kerosene heater. It is handy. It is cheap. It can be easily moved from room to room during the chilly autumn mornings. It will save coal. It will save money. It will perhaps keep you out of the coal line next winter. If you live in a city and prefer a gas stove, buy that. At any rate, it is up to you to help and the coal you can get along without will either keep your family warm next winter."

That "copy" is not by an advertising man, but by a state fuel administrator.

A manufacturer of furnaces brings out in preferred position newspaper copy the fact his ranges will burn soft coal, coke or wood in certain types. He emphasizes also that electric and gas cooking attachment are supplied for all of his ranges.

The Autocar Company of Ardmore, Pa., with a soft pedal on "scare copy," has been publishing an open letter four columns wide by about 11 inches deep, addressed "To All Autocar Truck Owners Throughout the United States."

"We feel assured, because of action now being taken, that a sufficient amount of coal will be mined and that it will be transported by rail and waterways," the company said, over the signature of the president, David S. Ludlum. "Distribution will be controlled, making necessary piece-meal delivery. This will require a tremendous increase in the number of vehicles to do the work.

"During the months just ahead, our increased industrial and agricultural transportation necessities must be taken care of at the same time that this extraordinary amount of coal is being handled. It is, therefore, more than likely that embargoes will be placed on short hauling of general merchandise. Such a ruling will make necessary an immediate increase of motor truck transportation.

(Continued on page 8)

When an emergency arises suddenly it is newspaper advertising which becomes the manufacturer's right arm, because it is only in this way that vast numbers of prospective buyers can be reached overnight and the facts laid before them.

LADY NORTHCLIFFE IS BELIEVED HEIR UNDER VISCOUNT'S TWO WILLS

Arnholz and Sutton File Suit Against Second Will, of Which She Is Executrix—London Expects Times Will Be Sold and Half-Dozen Buyers Are Named

LONDON is still agitated over what will become of Lord Northcliffe's newspaper properties and especially as to who will be the new Jove behind the Times—"The Thunderer." The question remains unanswered, but there have been columns of speculative articles in the daily and weekly press, nominating among others, as the new owner of the Times, Lord Rothermere, Viscount Northcliffe's brother; Esmond Harmsworth, heir of Lord Rothermere; Sir John Ellerman, owner of the second largest interest in the Times; and Sir William Ewert Berry, owner of the Sunday Times and Cassell's Publishing House.

Sir George Sutton

New fuel was added to the flame of speculation when Lord Riddell's News of the World last Sunday stated that a fight was probable over Lord Northcliffe's wills, of which two are said to have been executed, the first on March 22, 1919, with four codicils, the last of which is dated April 27, 1922; and the second shortly before his death, of which Lady Northcliffe is sole executrix. Executors and trustees named in the first will are Henry Preuss Arnholz and Sir George Sutton. Mr. Arnholz was the solicitor and an old friend of Northcliffe's, and Sir George Sutton was for many years his secretary and is now chairman of the Amalgamated Press, one of the largest of Northcliffe's publishing interests.

It is reported that Lady Northcliffe is the chief beneficiary under both of these wills, which are the subject of a suit by Sutton and Arnholz to determine which document will be admitted to probate. It is charged in the suit that Northcliffe was not of sound mind when he executed the last will, and this question will have to be decided by the court.

Sir George Sutton was appointed administrator pendente lite of Northcliffe's personal estate, on motion of counsel for Lady Northcliffe, although nominally he is opposed to her. She presented the second will, dated last July, while Sutton and Arnholz presented the will of 1919. The difference in the two is reported to be that the first covers annuities which are not mentioned in the later document. Pending decision of the court, Lady Northcliffe has consented to the continued payment of these annuities, the amount of the beneficiaries of which have not been made public.

It is thought the Daily Mail and the Evening News will be carried on according to Northcliffe's ideas, and that the Amalgamated Press will remain intact, but that the Times, and the Weekly Dispatch, a Sunday paper, will be put on the market, presumably to meet the inheritance taxes imposed by the Government. It is also reported that the Weekly Dispatch was for sale before Northcliffe's death, but there is no confirmation of this from the Northcliffe organization.

What will happen to the Times is the subject of a signed article in the Observer—Viscount Astor's newspaper—by J. L. Garvin. He states that Sir John Ellerman, shipping magnate, was ready to purchase the Times, in which he holds an interest, when Northcliffe's control was threatened last year, but he does not know whether Sir John still has this intention. "It has also been believed," Garvin says, "that Lord Rothermere, if other conditions permitted, would buy the Times for his heir, Esmond Harmsworth."

Sir William Berry is mentioned, according to Garvin, as the most probable purchaser. It is pointed out that he played the principal part in the "unprecedented transaction which takes the risk of paying the staggering figure of £100,000 for the Prime Minister's memoirs."

Sir William, Garvin believes, would have the close sympathy of the Lloyd George government. Other competitors for the paper he names are Lord Beaverbrook, owner of the Daily Express, and Sir Mackay Edgar, owner of the Saturday Review and Sperling's Journal. He also believes there is a chance that the Rhodes Trust might buy the Times and "under Lord Milner's admirable direction" make it an organ of thorough and unprejudiced information or of views balanced but not reactionary, independent but constructive.

Lord Derby is mentioned in other quarters as a contender for the premier factor in British journalism. He is said to be "interested with important financial groups in preserving the Times' Imperial character."

EDITOR & PUBLISHER has received from several British newspaper owners and workers exclusive statements which testify to the regard with which the late publisher was held by employers and employes alike.

Lord Burnham, proprietor of the Daily Telegraph said:

"The death of Lord Northcliffe leaves a real void, not only in the life of the newspaper press, but in the life of the British Empire, for he had that elemental force of character that stamps itself on the imagination of the world and no other name in England save that of the Prime Minister was so widely known the world over. "The Press made him what he was, but there can be no question that he has left the Press a far more powerful instrument in making and shaping of public opinion than he found it. There will be few who will question his right to the title of greatness even though it may have been greatness of a specialized and peculiar kind. In the real sense of the term he was the most wonderful news man, to use an old description, who ever lived. His instinctive foreknowledge of the ebb and flow of public emotion and his foresight as to the vagaries of public taste were almost uncanny in their accuracy. "I recall with tenderness and gratitude his constant admiration for my father's career which he showed in so graceful and generous a manner by heading a distinguished body of journalists who visited him on his 80th birthday in 1913. I recall, too, with pain and pleasure many occasions when he showed me in public the finest evidence of his personal regard, notably at the Empire Press Union, after the return of the delegation of the British Press from attending the Imperial Press conference in Canada in 1920. In spite of some rivalries which I prefer to call an honorable emulation, we were always the best of friends and I am glad to look back upon a personal association of many years unsullied and untarnished by a single stain."

H. M. Richardson, general secretary of the National Union of Journalists writes:

"I worked for Lord Northcliffe for a few months and also knew him as an employer in my capacity as official of the N. U. J. It has been said many times and with truth that he did a great deal to raise the status of the working journalist, from junior reporter to editor. He approved of the formation of a trade union of journalists. He had been through the mill and had a memory for conditions which prevailed when he was a reporter. It would be affectation to attribute to Northcliffe the vast improvement that has been brought about in the last few years in journalistic conditions. That improvement is due to the organization of journalists. But Northcliffe did much more than we had a right to expect from any employer to encourage us in our pioneer days, and we shall always think affectionately of him in consequence. Journalists held all sorts of views about his journalism and his policies, but there is unanimity on his excellence as an enlightened employer."

Sir William Ewert Berry, proprietor of the Sunday Times, Graphic publications and Cassell's publications, and mentioned as a purchaser of the Times writes:

"The death of Lord Northcliffe has caused such a void in the newspaper and publishing world in Great Britain that it is almost impossible to realize the industry without him. Rarely has any industry been dominated to such an extent as that to which Northcliffe dominated his own calling and in all the strife and battle of newspaperdom, it has to be remembered that that domination was rarely questioned. His was a leading, compelling mind and his contemporaries could but admire it. One tribute to his ability as a working journalist, which was how he described himself to me only a few weeks before he started on world tour, has always impressed me and was this — that all the hundreds of brilliant journalists who worked for him from time to time acknowledged him as a master craftsman.

"Have met many who did not like him. have met some who have quarrelled with him but I have never met one who did not willingly admit that he was a great and outstanding journalist. Many have criticised him as a man, but none as a journalist. I imagine Northcliffe would have thought it impossible to have earned a greater tribute."

Impressive pictures of the last honor paid by Britain to Northcliffe are painted by camera and pen in issues of the London dailies which have just reached the country. One of the photographs showing the immense crowds that lined the path of the funeral cortege appears on page 9 of this issue, and space prohibits the printing of others equally interesting which illustrated the London Times the day after the funeral. One especially notable was a pencil sketch by Spencer Pryse of the services held in Westminster Abbey, showing the casket of Northcliffe before the high altar and draped with the historic Abbey pall of white brocade embroidered with the cross, the arms of the Abbey, the crowned Tudor rose and the crowned portcullis of Westminster. Candles stood at the head and foot of the catafalque no flowers lightened the gloom of the pile, the shadows of which were intensified by the candles on the altar.

The Times' account states:

"There were large sections of the crowd who attended to do honor to Lord Northcliffe for reasons that may be called more intimate and personal. For instance, a body of journalists marched from Fleet Street to the Abbey in testimony of their recognition of the immense services which Lord Northcliffe rendered in raising the status of the profession. There were also numbers of compositors and other newspaper workers, women as well as men, whose conditions of employment and wages he had improved by the influence his example carried to circles far beyond his own offices and workshops. As for the Americans, they honored Lord Northcliffe as one remarked who had returned from Shakespeare's country specially to attend the funeral—because he was of the few Britons who rightly understood and appreciated the United States."

A list of floral tributes from public officials and journalists all over the world as well as from Northcliffe employes occupied a column and a half of six-point solid type in the Times and the Daily Mail. Many of them bore the names of American newspapers, editors and press association executives, and many were extremely elaborate.

COAL STRIKES OPEN UP ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES IN MANY LINES

(Continued from page 7)

"We therefore suggest that you look over your equipment and if it needs any repairing or overhauling that you have it done now, or, if instead of overhauling or repairing you wish to trade for a new or larger truck—do it now. If you need additional trucks, purchase them now.

"Our sales and service stations in your territory will do everything in their power to quickly get your trucking equipment in first class shape to handle your business. The coming months of September, October, November, December, January, February and March we believe will burden the nation's transportation facilities to the limit.

"We want to serve each and every one of our customers to the best of our ability and we ask your co-operation in ordering now anything that you may require. We appreciate the business relations we have heretofore enjoyed with you and hope we can serve you now in this emergency."

Newspaper advertising broadcasted quickly what was virtually a personal letter to truck owners at a fraction of what the direct-mail expense would have been and in a much more telling way.

The Consolidated Gas Company of New York, through paid advertising space in newspapers, is showing the public the value of using a new mantle light which burns 3½ cubic feet an hour in place of the old-fashioned flat-flame burner which wastes 10 cubic feet an hour. The fixture is installed free of charge and the mantles placed in position likewise. Three extra mantles are offered without charge to those who install the more economical burner at once.

In fact, the greater New York gas and electric companies have been among the first to urge conservation of all heat and power, asking their customers to keep in mind the fact that wasted heat, light or power means wasted coal. It is urged that lights be turned off when not needed and that fewer be burned.

A manufacturer of steam- and hot-water furnaces ties up with the situation, under the heading, "Will you keep warm during the coal shortage?", with the facts to show why using one of his furnaces will save coal because of its economy in burning and complete combustion.

Still another advertiser—an indication of how a situation like the present one touches many lines of work—is a firm of industrial engineers who, in conservatively laid out copy two columns by four inches in preferred position on newspaper editorial pages, ask:

"Have you considered the advisability of utilizing gas, electricity or oil as a fuel? The experience of the ———— Engineers, covering a quarter of a century of power plant operation, is at your service."

Under the imitation handwriting heading, "Good Substitutes for Coal," the Magee Furnace Company suggests electricity and gas as combined in the Magee ElectriGas, a cabinet range which is termed "the most remarkable range since the introduction of the Magee Electri-Coal."

The advertising then explains the mechanical details of both the gas half and the electric half. It states at the bottom that "There is an electric cooking attachment for every Magee range made in the last ten years."

An emergency ariser suddenly, locally, sectionally or nationally, perhaps bringing with it certain sales and advertising opportunities. When it does, it is newspaper advertising which becomes the manufacturer's strong right arm because only in this way can vast numbers be reached simultaneously overnight with the facts to be laid before them.

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

'orld travel and yachting are the recreaons of Miss Frances Knowles-Foster, who cently returned to England after a mission the United States for the British Society
Women Writers. She has visited all parts Europe and is also familiar with India and e Far East.

There must have been mechanical troubles Saturday night. Walter F. Walsh seems to be the only serious member of this picnic party of New Haven Register employes at Double Beach, Conn. (right). Four of the crowd proved to the camera that newspapermen can be happy at a picnic even when they have along their wives. From left to right: Mrs. H. B. Kennedy, Walter F. Walsh, foreman of the Register composing room; Mrs. H. I. Phillips, Hugh B. Kennedy, general manager, New Haven Register, Peter Kennedy, general manager of the Kennedy household, "Tim" A. Ryan, New England representative of the Ault & Wiborg Ink Company, Mrs. T. A. Ryan and H. I. Phillips of the New York Globe.

Charles M. Palmer, with the pipe and the rod, and Irvin Cobb, like to get away from material things now and then. Both are anglers by preference, when Palmer can get away from buying and selling good newspapers and Cobb feels like forgetting magazine editors.

All editors except one—he on the extreme right is a forest ranger who showed the National Editorial Association party (above) where to get the fish. We don't know who caught them, but he's one or more of the above (left to right), W. C. Lush, Yankton, S. D.; C. G. Jenness, Rochester, N. Y.; G. B. Dolliver, Battle Creek, Mich.; G. C. Woodruff, Litchfield, Conn.; Homer Harwood, Warren, Mich.; John Nichols, El Reno, Okla.; G. B. Williams, Geneva, N. Y.; F. F. Marsh, Wareham, Mass.; and Fred Evans, Belleville, Ill.

owds like that which lined Parliament quare (left) covered every foot of the ven miles of London traversed by the fun-al cortege of Viscount Northcliffe. At the ad of the procession, left centre, is seen e coach bearing the "Empty Chair," the ral tribute of the Mail editors.

ide World Photo

Lady Northcliffe is said to be the chief heir to her husband's great publishing interests under wills now before the courts. She is seen below in court dress and wearing the coronet of a Viscountess.

P. & A. Photo

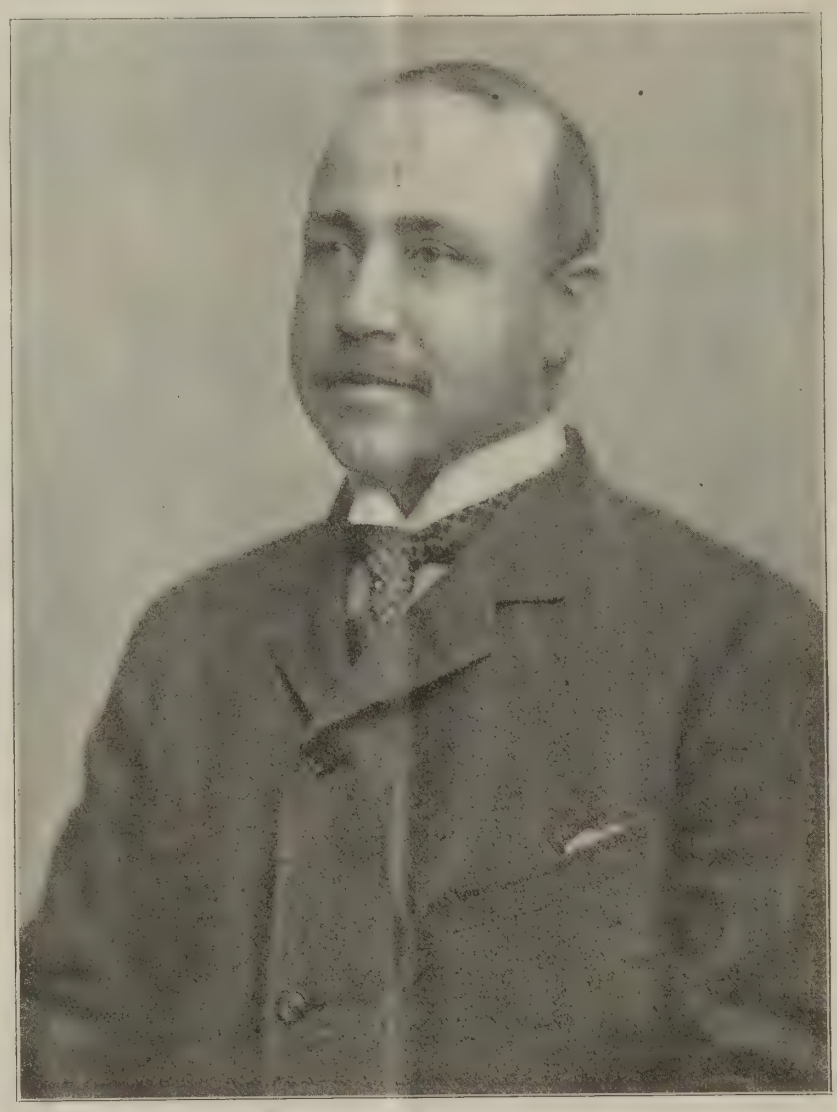
DELAVAN SMITH, INDIANAPOLIS NEWS CHIEF, DIES IN 61ST YEAR

Associated With Newspapers Since Childhood, He Served Under His Father With Western Associated Press and Had Been Owner of the News Since 1899

DELAVAN SMITH, who died August 25 at his farm Lost Rock, near Lake Forest, Ill., in his 61st year, was one of the foremost of a group of publishers who have made the American evening newspaper one of the most powerful forces in world journalism, both in its ability to influence public opinion and as an advertising medium. His conection with the Indanapols News, of which he was part owner and publisher at the time of his death, covered a period of 30 years, for many of which he was its sole owner and chief directing force.

He was born in Cincinnati December 28, 1861, and his early training in the home of his father, William Henry Smith, was in an atmosphere of journalistic enterprise, historical research, political activity and public service. William Henry Smith during the Civil War was an editorial writer on the Cincinnati Gazette, to which post he had risen after being managing editor of the Times, and was active in raising and equipping Ohio troops for the Northern armies. After two years as secretary of state of Ohio he established the Cincinnati Evening Chronicle in 1866 and in 1870 was appointed general manager of the Western Associated Press. In 1883, when the Western and the New York Associated Press were consolidated, he became general manager of the new body.

His political associations in the meantime and afterward were with those in the highest places in the United States, as is attested by several biographies, the best known of which is "The Life of Rutherford Birchard Hayes," President of the United States from 1877 to 1881 and an intimate friend of William Henry Smith. Material for this biography was collected and prepared by Mr. Smith and the work was completed in 1914 by Charles R. Williams, son-in-law of William Henry Smith and brother-in-law of Delavan Smith and editor of the Indianapolis News from 1892 to 1911.



His school days over and followed by his work for the Western Associated Press, he joined the staff of the Chicago Inter-Ocean, but shortly afterward he decided to become publisher of his own newspaper. He operated the Washington, (D. C.) Post on an option basis for a few months and later investigated the Northwestern field with a view to buying the Seattle News, but these ventures were dropped when his father, in 1892, purchased the majority control of the Indianapolis News from its founder, John H. Holliday. Major W. J. Richards remained as minority stockholder and business manager and Charles R. Williams, mentioned above, became editor-in-chief.

Seven years later, William Henry Smith having died in the meantime, the News was sold in dissolution of partnership proceedings and Delavan Smith outbid all prospective purchasers, his offer of $936,000 securing the News for himself and Mr. Williams, the latter taking a fourth interest. This holding was purchased b Mr. Smith in 1911, upon Mr. Williams' retirement.

In 1917, when Mr. Smith was seriously ill, he gave to his cousin, Charles R. Fairbanks, an option on all the News property, to be exercised either by Mr. Fairbanks or his heirs. Mr. Fairbanks died in 1918 and his heirs arranged to take three-fourths of Mr. Smith's holdings, leaving him with a one-fourth interest and exclusive management of the property as publisher.

While he had many other business interests, his first concern was his newspaper. He was one of the original stockholders in the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, was for years vice-president of the Oliver Typewriter Company and. in association with Victor F. Lawson of the Chicago Daily News, he was interested in and for a time president of the Cox Multi-Mailer Company.

While his personally-written editorials were not frequent, he was in constant touch with his executives and directed the News' policy in a general way. He was a familiar figure at almost every national political convention, Democratic and Republican, during his active career, attending them with his staff correspondents, sharing their work and their hardships. His interest and his keen vision in politics made his bachelor farm at Lost Rock a Mecca for many national political figures.

DELAVAN SMITH

He was a personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, but that friendship did not deter the News from giving space to some of the criticisms printed about Roosevelt's acquisition of the Panama Canal Zone, and indictments were brought against Mr. Smith in the District of Columbia Federal Court. Mr. Smith contended that he should have the right of trial in the state where the paper was published and the case was brought before Federal Judge Anderson in Indianapolis. The case was dismissed by Judge Anderson in a decision which has become one of the keystones of newspaper jurisprudence, the court concluding its findings as follows:

"To my mind that man has read the history of our institutions to little purpose who does not look with grave apprehension upon the possibility of the success of a proceeding such as this. If the history of liberty means anything—if constitutional guaranties are worth anything—this proceeding must fail.

"If the prosecuting authorities have the authority to select the tribunal, if there be more than one tribunal to select from; if the government has that power and can drag citizens from distant states to the capital of the nation, there to be tried, then, as Judge Cooley says, this is a strange result of a revolution where one of the grievances complained of was the assertion of the right to send parties abroad for trial.

"The defendants will be discharged."

Mr. Smith's views on the field of journalism can be put in a few words. He believed it to be the duty of a newspaper to look after the interests of the public. He was aware of the fact that special interests are always well represented by able and well-paid attorneys and technical experts. He was generally opposed to fads in government and stuck to the idea that each governmental department—the executive, the judicial, and the legislative—could most profitably work well within its own field. He believed an executive might properly be a leader in legislative thought but never a boss of legislative affairs.

Mr. Smith's relations with the News' staff, from the elevator men to the managing editor, were close and personal. He was quick to learn the troubles of his employes and equally quick to relieve them when relief lay in his power and he was a frequent visitor when in good health to the news room. A short time ago he made his last tour among the reporters and desk men, greeting old friends and making the acquaintance of newcomers since his last rounds. One of the veterans of the staff decided to help the process by introducing each of the new men to the publisher, but gave it up when he found that Mr. Smith was not content with a mere formal handshake, and recognized no time limits on his conversations. The pilgrimage lasted over three hours, but at its close there was no lack of a common bond between the men who made the News and "the boss." And Mr. Smith's standing as a newspaper man among his own people is proven by that title, the only one that designated him on the newspaper which was at once his life-work and his recreation.

TELL DIVORCE DETAILS WHEN TRIAL ENDS

Grand Rapids Papers Await Verdict in Evangelist's Case and Bear Charges of Conspiracy for Their Silence

The three Grand Rapids daily newspapers, the Press, Herald and News, for the first time Aug. 25 published details of the divorce case of Melvin E. Trotter, noted evangelist. The story was told in connection with the decision of Judge Major L. Dunham in granting the evangelist a divorce on his crossbill and holding the charges of Mrs. Trotter false.

The judge praised the newspapers for not publishing daily accounts of the trial and held that the charges made by counsel for Mrs. Trotter that the newspapers had conspired to prevent the public knowing the full details, were not well founded. The court also criticised the action of Chicago newspapers in making capital and circulation out of the case.

The Grand Rapids Press editorially stated that it would publish the decision of the court, but that it believed the Trotter case was not a mere divorce action. It held that the evangelist had accomplished too great good in Grand Rapids to have his work torn down by charges, if not proved in court.

All three Grand Rapids newspapers were severely criticised by many of their readers for not publishing the details of the case during its progress. It was the silence of the newspapers that caused the charges by Attorney Geib.

No case in years has attracted the attention of the Trotter case. He was one of the best known evangelists in the central west and hundreds of Grand Rapids people eagerly obtained outside newspapers that carried a full account of the testimony. The Associated Press, after the trial had advanced a few days started giving its members accounts o the case. The three Grand Rapids newspapers, however, simply mentioned the witnesses on the stand.

CLEAN UP FT. WAYNE FIELD

Sunday News-Sentinel and Evening Press Die by Agreement

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 29.—Announcement was made today in the Evening Press and the News-Sentinel that the Press and the Sunday News-Sentinel will be suspended, effective September 2 by agreement between the Journal-Gazette Company and the News Publishing Company. This will leave the morning and Sunday field to the Journal-Gazette the evening to the News-Sentinel. The Press, as the Journal-Gazette's evening issue, and the Sunday News-Sentinel were both started early in 1921.

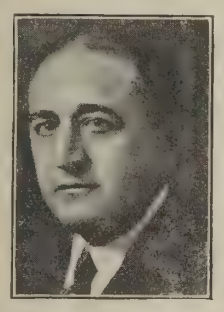
No financial consideration was involved and no surplus machinery is made available by the suspensions.

Ross S. Nelson, managing editor of the Journal-Gazette and Press, remains in that post on the Journal-Gazette. William Kellogg, day city editor, takes the night city desk; Lawrence F. Levenberg, night city editor, takes the night telegraph desk. Two desk men and several reporters and artists and a photographer are open for positions.

There are no staff changes on the News-Sentinel.

Will Meet in Rome

The International Chamber of Commerce will hold its second general meeting in Rome, Italy, March 18 to 24, 192 A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, is chairman of the American section.



Special Adds the Star

Hamilton-De Lisser, Inc., New York and Chicago, has been appointed national representative of the Long Island City (N. Y.) Star.

PUBLISHERS MAKE POOR COPY, IT'S SAID, BUT DONOHO FOUND THEY DIDN'T

San Francisco Chronicle Reporter Had Lively Afternoon When He Tackled His Own "Boss" and Adolph S. Ochs Together on Questions of the Day

INTERVIEWING newspaper publishers is traditionally an assignment not welcomed by the daily paper reporter. The only worse job, they'll tell you, is interviewing two of them at the same time—and one of them the "boss." The "game" is too wary, knows too many parries for leading questions, won't "pull any lines" that the copy desk will look upon with gracious eyes. It's a bad job, all around.

ADOLPH S. OCHS

M. H. DE YOUNG

Nevertheless, it has been done, and Harry C. Donoho of the San Francisco Chronicle did it well last week when he was ordered to interview Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, who was the guest of M. H. de Young, publisher of the Chronicle. Mr. Ochs and his host were together when Donoho found them and they couldn't be separated, so the reporter cast all caution to the winds and decided on what he called a "double-barreled interview."

The host, Donoho's "big boss," and his guest enjoyed the situation thoroughly, especially when the reporter made his first question on the tariff, on which he knew they held opposite views. He awaited the fireworks and wasn't disappointed. The tariff was soon abandoned as a subject on which no agreement was possible and foreign loans followed it into Limbo. So did the ship subsidy. Not much for quotation so far, but Donoho was having a good laugh.

"Well, what about the strike?" he asked.

"A whole lot of people," Mr. Ochs replied, "are praying for the time when there shall be no controversy between capital and labor. As for me, I say thank God, we have and shall continue to have difference of opnion as between the employer and the employe. Such a condition is just as essential to the continued well-being of our country as is the existence of the two great political parties. One serves as a check on the other.

"In this particular strike both sides are wrong. The railroads are wrong in assuming that they can say what constitutes a living wage, and the workers are wrong in assuming that they can dictate wages and working conditions as a nation-wide proposition. In my judgment the greatest menace to organized labor today is that it has permitted itself to be maneuvred into a position where it seeks to make wages and working conditions uniform over the country. That cannot be done. A complaint that might well be valid and just in one part of the country might be both invalid and unjust in another."

Donoho signalled his "boss" for help at this point. "Say, what is this fellow —a Democrat or a Republican?" he whispered.

Mr. de Young chuckled. "Huh! He's a Southern Democrat."

Explanations and qualifications followed on both sides.

"What would you say about the return to normalcy?" was Donoho's next bomb.

Mr. Ochs replied that "we had not yet returned to normalcy." In too many cases, he feared, wages had been reduced before the cost of living had come down adequately, which he looked upon as a dangerous precedent.

"The question of wages is one that must ever remain a matter of conference and discussion as between the employer and the employe. Am I not right, Mr. de Young?"

"Well, you're right once in a while," conceded the California Republican to the New York Democrat.

"It is the province of the worker to demonstrate his ability," Mr. Ochs continued, "to give an honest day's work and to induce his employer to pay the best possible wage. On the other hand, the employer must not arrogate to himself the right to determine just what is a living wage. He must be just, and at the same time he can not permit himself to be pushed too far toward the brink."

"What would you say of conditions in general in this country? What are the opportunities now, as compared with other years?" Donoho asked.

"Never before in the history of the world has opportunity for success been so rife," asserted Mr. Ochs.

"The young man of today has a thousand opportunities to every one in our days," Mr. de Young added.

Agreement at Last.

"What do you consider the finest type of young American of today?" Donoho inquired.

"The newspaper reporter," responded Mr. Ochs and Mr. de Young almost in a breath. "There is in this country today no finer, more loyal or more capable man than the average newspaper man. I would take his word against that of almost any man I know. Incidentally, the American press is the cleanest and most wholesome in the world."

Donoho bowed to their superior judgment and went on his way rejoicing.

Mr. Ochs voiced his beliefs on other subjects—notably the integrity of the American newspaper—in an interview with the San Francisco Bulletin during his visit.

"Some persons," said Mr. Ochs, "obviously not well-informed, attribute to newspapers generally base and improper motives. In all fairness they should make their criticisms individual; should mention the newspapers they have in mind specifically, and not allow the odium of their remarks to reflect upon all newspapers.

"One hears these unfair, indiscriminate and sweeping charges of corruption against the American press in both houses of Congress and even reads them in some of the newspapers.

"Let the critics of American journalism mention by name the newspapers they allege 'are controlled by their advertisers' or 'are being bought.' Then the really constructive and honorable interests in the American press could unite their efforts and get rid of the dishonest element.

"It is my conviction, after half a century of experience, that the American press, with few exceptions, is the most patriotic, courageous and enterprising in the world.

"We have many conspicuous examples of this courage and fineness, and the history of American journalism is full of great sacrifices for principle. But we never see these held up above the sweeping condemnation. If people learned to have more confidence in their newspapers, the standards would be raised, for editors and publishers would feel and assume greater responsibility.

"We have demonstrated the fact that a decent and dignified newspaper can be prosperous. It has grown to be a superstition among newspaper men that the promotion of circulation demands coarse humor, salacious news and sensationalism. But what kind of circulation do they get by it? Of what value and importance is it to a publication? How enduring is it? What a pity it is that we cannot rid our splendid newspapers of a lot of this rubbish and serve it apart from the daily press to people who enjoy that kind of 'literature.' But, of course, we have numerous examples of newspapers refusing to attach to their presentation of the news 'carriers' of such character, because of their realization that the intelligent, thoughtful people of the community do not want it. The great bulk of self-respecting people have always shown that a newspaper respecting itself soon wins the respect of the community."

Mr. Ochs was the recipient of a special greeting by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, the hospitality of the business district also being proferred him.

MIAMI CABLE OPENED FIRST OF NEW LINES

Western Union Gets Operation License After South American Countries Cancel Monopolies — East Coast Line Planned

The first of the new cable lines to be laid between the United States and South America as the result of the recent agreement between the All America Cable Company, an American corporation, and the Western Telegraph Company, Limited, a British company, has been placed in full operation. The line was opened this week when, proceeding under a full license granted by President Harding, the Western Union Telegraph Company opened its line from Miami, Florida, to Barbadoes, where it connects with the Western Telegraph lines to Europe and Pernambuco. The license was issued upon notice to the State Department that the Argentine government had waived the monopoly rights granted the Western Telegraph Company, Limited.

Argentina was the last country in South America to surrender its monopoly arrangement which until recently existed in behalf of the Western Telegraph Company with all the countries on the east coast of South America. As the result of the agreement between the two companies the All America has given up its monopoly rights in the countries on the west coast and both shores of South America now are open to cable enter by either company.

Before the opening of the Western Union cable from Miami to Barbadoes all cables from Brazil, Uruguay or Argentina to the United States have been routed by Western Telegraph lines to Europe or by All America lines up the west coast to Panama. The All America shortly expects to lay a cable to the east coast of South America by way of Porto Rico, competing directly with the Western Telegraph-Western Union line via the Barbadoes and Miami.

Munzel Leads Newspaper Golfers

H. F. Munzel of the Chicago Herald and Examiner led the Chicago newspaper men's golf tourney August 28 at Olympia Fields with a net score of 76. This was one stroke better than that of Carl M. Marston of the Daily News. H. J. Wymer and Basil G. Wyrick, Associated Press, tied for third place, while Don Dillon of the Daily News, and W. L. Vining of the Herald and Examiner were next with 81 each.

Intertype Frisco Branch Moves

The Pacific Coast branch of the Intertype Corporation has moved into new quarters in its own building at 560 Howard street. It is a two-story and basement structure of concrete and provides about three times as much storage space as its former quarters on 3rd street.

A. M. PAPER IN SEATTLE BLETHEN'S PLAN?

Step Would Be "Financially Disastrous" But May Be Necessary, He Says, and He's Ready to Start on 72 Hours' Notice

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 28.—C. B. Blethen, editor and publisher of the Seattle Times, an afternoon newspaper, said in a full-page editorial over his signature August 27 that it is conceivable that the Times may start a morning paper in oppositon to the Hearst-owned Post-Intelligencer. Declaring that such a course would be "financially disastrous," because advertising revenue would be divided between the afternoon and morning Blethen publications, nevertheless, the publisher says, "on the other hand, it is conceivable that conditions of competition might become such that the Times' owners would find themselves forced to adopt this very course which they feel would be so uselessly expensive."

All plans for such an emergency have been made, Blethen says, and the Times can establish and publish a morning newspaper on seventy-two hours' notice. He says:

"The name has been selected and the name plate designed and built. All necessary news services have been engaged and are available at a moment's notice. Business office space outside the Times building is ready on 24 hours' notice. Every man needed for every department and every job is ready to perform his task the minute this morning newspaper is called into being. To be concsise, in a certain desk in the Times building a new seattle morning newspaper lies ready for publication."

The editorial discusses at length Hearst journalism and the forthcoming publication of the Seattle American, an afternoon tabloid newspaper.

W. J. Davis is publisher of the American and denies Mr. Hearst has any ownership or interest in it.

NEW DAILIES IN PALM BEACH

Record Announced for Oct. 15 as All-Year Afternoon Paper

The Palm Beach Record will commence publication as an afternoon daily with three editions, one at one o'clock, another at four and a final at six, about October 15 according to an announcement made recently in a full page advertisement in the Palm Beach Tropical Sun. The Floridian Publishing Company has been incorporated with a capital of $100,000 to publish this paper. Its stock price is $100 a share.

It will have full leased wire United Press service. A complete photo-engraving plant will be installed for its own and commercial work. Advertising from firms which come to Palm Beach for the Winter season will be refused and only advertising placed upon yearly contracts will be accepted. The officers of the Record will be George L. Moreland, president and general manager; M. K. Wanaga, vice-president and business manager; Fred L. Corey, secretary; Edward Cowles, managing editor; C. H. Benson, at one time circulation manager of the Chicago Tribune, circulation manager; John A. Black, advertising manager.

E. P. Fildes, who recently started the Tropical News at Jacksonville, is understood to be in Chicago purchasing a complete plant, which he will ship to Palm Beach for daily which he will establish there. It is also rumored that the Palm Beach News, a morning paper published during the season, intends to add an afternoon edition.

George L. Moreland, president and general manager; M. K. Kanaga, vice-president and business manager; Edward Cowles, managing editor; C. H. Benson, late circulation manager Chicago Tribune, circulation manager.

MEN'S QUALITY STORE MAKES GOOD IN ENGLISH NEWSPAPER ADS

Austin Reed's of London Started With a Small Shop, and "Quality" Advertising Has Given Them Nine London and Four Provincial Branches

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT
(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

LONDON, Aug. 15.

ONE of the most interesting successes in British newspaper advertising today is the men's store of Austin Reed, Ltd. It is perhaps the nearest thing we have to the application of the American idea—while retaining complete English characteristics—in this country, and it certainly is the only outstanding example of fine advertising in the newspaper press applied to high quality men's wear.

We have many men's stores throughout the country, many of them consistent advertisers, but they are, in general, houses that appear to rely in their advertising upon the attraction of the bargain price rather than the emphasis of quality. On the other hand, we have in London a few old-established men's stores which have shown considerable confidence in the use of advertising for a good many years, but their announcements have been and are more of the type of the old-fashioned retailer who, with socks and shirts to sell, merely mentions them and their prices, and leaves everything else to the imagination of the readers.

Austin Reed, Ltd., are like none of these. It must be nearly twenty years since I saw their first advertisements. At that time they had two or three shops. One was in the West-end and another in the city. What attracted my attention in the first instance was the manner in which the store windows were dressed. They struck a note of simplicity, dignity and quiet color schemes in shirts, ties and the like that was quite new to London at that time. They commenced to advertise in a comparatively modest way, and I was interested to observe that the same dignity, and a real touch of distinctiveness, were observed in the lay-out, style and copy.

They suggested at sight that here was a store that did not pretend to sell cheap goods, did not offer the commonplace, but were striking out in the direction of supplying men who wanted something reliable, in good taste, and of genuine quality character and were willing to pay a little more for those features.

It would not be accurate to say that Austin Reed's made an amazing success instantaneously, or that all London flocked to their doors. But they certainly made a hit, and one by one new stores were opened in other localities and the newspaper advertising gradually extended.

All this time they have adhered to their policy, never allowing anything cheap (in the inferior sense) in their stores, never lowering the standard of their quietly effective window displays, and never ceasing to talk good quality in their advertising copy. It would have been easy, with the English nature being what it is, for the advertising copy, because of the necessity for keeping on the high quality-note, to become stilted and formal, but to have done so would have been fatal. Instead, a chatty, semi-conversational style was adopted and the risk of diminished interest has been reduced to a minimum.

Some Good "Overs" for Keen Sportsmen

IT is characteristic of the English sportsman that he passes on a good thing, so, year by year, the fame of Austin Reed Sportswear spreads and the customer list lengthens and lengthens, until to-day enormous stocks are essential to adequate catering for such demand.

Only the man in the trade has an accurate conception of the vast accumulation of "overs" resulting from our big and busy trading—a few of this line and a few of that—few in themselves but considerable in the aggregate, frankly remnants and only in the way of an organisation which needs shelf space for complete ranges of new goods.

Here, then, is the harvest for those fortunate men who have holidays ahead and those who would add to their sports gear with advantage—all the Sportswear "Overs" are divided among the Austin Reed shops to be cleared this week, or while they last, at prices cut to figures that suggest that the opportunity won't last long.

It is not possible, under these circumstances, to publish more than a few examples, and the following is a very brief summary of the long but rapidly shortening list.

Golf Jackets, 30/- now 25/-; 33/6 to 39/6 now 31/-; 42/6 to 55/- now 37/-
Blue Blazers, 30/- now 27/-; 37/6 & 39/6 now 34/-; 42/6 now 37/-
Grey and Cream Flannel and Gabardine Trousers, 21/- now 19/-, 25/6 now 22/-; 27/6 & 30/- now 25/-; 35/6 & 37/6 now 32/-
Three-Piece Suits at £5 5s. 0d. & £5 17s. 6d. now £4 15s. 0d.
Two-Piece Flannel and Tweed Suits at £3 5s. 0d. now £2 14s. 0d.
A.R. Raincoats, 90/- & 95/- now 80/-, 75/- now 65/-, 67/- now 54/-; 55/- now 47/-
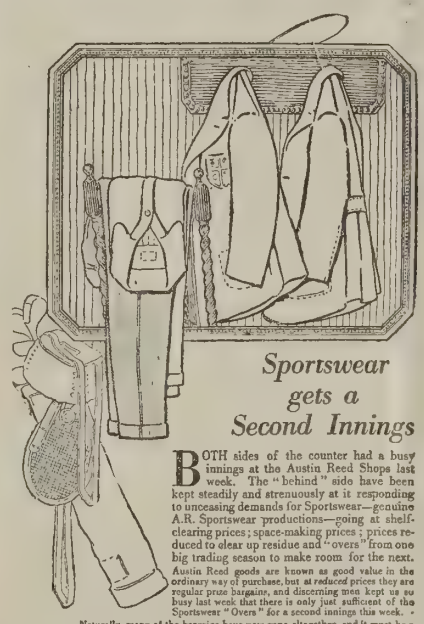
Light Weight Mercerised Dressing Gowns (Paisley effect) 17/6 now 15/-

SAFE BUYING BY POST. All Austin Reed productions sent carriage paid to any address in the British Isles. If goods are not approved and are returned within three days your money will be refunded in full. Address your letters to Austin Reed Ltd., 113 Regent Street, London, W. 1.



Showing at all the Austin Reed shops this week.

Austin Reed Ltd
HOSIERS TO DISCERNING MEN

NINE LONDON SHOPS
13 Fenchurch St., E.C. 3 113 Regent Street, W. 1 135 Victoria St., S.W. 1
8 St. Mary Axe, E.C. 3 189 Strand, W.C. 2 33 Oxford Street, W. 1
157a Cheapside, E.C. 2 21/22 Walbrook, E.C. 4 94 Coventry Street, W. 1
Also at Birmingham, Manchester, Bristol and Preston.

"The Shops that sell Summits"

The development of the Austin Reed business is due solely to an appreciation of two facts—the possession of the right goods and the ability to talk about them, and knowing the value of newspaper advertising.

Sportswear gets a Second Innings

BOTH sides of the counter had a busy innings at the Austin Reed Shops last week. The "behind" side have been kept steadily and strenuously at it responding to unceasing demands for Sportswear—genuine A.R. Sportswear productions—going at shelf-clearing prices; space-making prices; prices reduced to clear up residue and "overs" from one big trading season to make room for the next.

Austin Reed goods are known as good value in the ordinary way of purchase, but at reduced prices they are regular prize bargains, and discerning men kept us so busy last week that there is only just sufficient of the Sportswear "Overs" for a second innings this week.

Naturally, many of the bargains have now gone altogether, and it must be a case of "first come, first served" with those who take advantage of this week's opportunity. The following list is some indication of what is yet available at time of going to press:—

Grey and Cream Flannel and Gabardine Trousers, 21/- now 19/-; 25/6 now 22/-; 27/6 & 30/- now 25/-; 35/6 & 37/6 now 32/-
Blue Blazers, 30/- now 27/-; 37/6 & 39/6 now 34/-
Golf Jackets, 30/- now 25/-; 33/6 to 39/6 now 31/-, 42/6 to 55/- now 37/-
A.R. Golfing Pull-Overs, Scotch knit from finest Botany Yarn, 25/6 now 21/-
Three-Piece Suits at £5 5s. 0d. & £5 17s. 6d. now £4 15s. 0d.
A.R. Raincoats, 90/- & 95/- now 80/-; 84/- now 74/-; 75/- now 65/-; 67/- now 54/-; 55/- now 47/-
Light Weight Mercerised Dressing Gowns (Paisley effect) 17/6 now 15/-

SAFE BUYING BY POST.—All Austin Reed productions sent carriage paid to any address in the British Isles. If goods are not approved and are returned within three days your money will be refunded in full. Address your letters to Austin Reed Ltd., 113 Regent Street, London W. 1.

Showing at all the Austin Reed shops this week.

Austin Reed Ltd
HOSIERS TO DISCERNING MEN

NINE LONDON SHOPS
13 Fenchurch St., E.C. 3 113 Regent Street, W. 1 135 Victoria St., S.W. 1
8 St. Mary Axe, E.C. 3 189 Strand, W.C. 2 33 Oxford Street, W. 1
157a Cheapside, E.C. 2 21/22 Walbrook, E.C. 4 94 Coventry Street, W. 1
Also at Birmingham, Manchester, Bristol and Preston.

"The Shops that sell Summits"

Austin Reed advertisements reflect "a store for discerning men." The copy is aimed at that class—not the bargain hunter.

The development of the Austin Reed business is due solely to an appreciation of two facts—the possession of the right goods and the ability to talk about them, and the value of newspaper advertising. The position of the busines among others of its kind may be judged by their advertisements; they reflect a "store for discerning men." The copy is aimed at that class—not the bargain-price hunter; the windows are dressed only to interest the man who will pay about half as much again as usual to get something of service.

That combination of forces striking the quality, note and appealing to discerning men has spelled success with a big S. The peculiarly national circulation of the London newspapers in which Austin Reed's have concentrated so well, meant, of course, a demand from the area outside London, and although the house maintained a capable mail-order department, it became apparent that the idea that had caught on in the metropolis was taking the fancy of men throughout the country to such an extent that it was obviously necessary to meet that demand in a more local fashion. Today, therefore, in addition to a chain of nine London stores—not palatial buildings or floors, be it noted, but just single or double-front shops—there are Austi Reed branches in Manchester, Birmin ham, Bristol and Preston, these bein served by advertising in the local new papers of those towns and substantiall supported by national advertising in th London dailies.

There is one very remarkable featur about the Austin Reed advertising tha has impressed me since I first membe it. There is plenty of competition i men's wear advertising in the newspape columns, from the department stores an multiple-shop traders, but all that ap peals to one class, probably the large section of the male community, it is tru Despite it all, the Austin Reed adverti ing stands aloof. It appeals to a diffe ent class, for it is advertising that make the reader (the right type of reader feel, not that he wants a shirt or pa jamas, but that he needs an Austin Ree shirt or pajamas, and that if he want them of distinctive style and quality, h has simply got to go to Austin Reed for them and nowhere else.

I know offhand of no other retail ad vertiser in the British newspaper pres today of whom that can be said in suc definite terms. Which, after all, is pretty good achievement for Austi Reed's.

DODGE HEADS SCRIPPS FOREIGN AD OFFICE

Allied Newspapers, Inc., Organized to Solicit National Advertising for All Present and Future Scripps-McRae Press

The latest step in the expansion program of the Scripps-McRae Newspaper interests is the incorporation, just announced by Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of the Allied Newspapers, Inc., with headquarters at New York. The new company consolidates the foreign advertising departments of the Scripps-McRae newspapers, and provides representation for the concern's old properties as well as for the new papers to be established or acquired. Included, also, is the production of the Ad Art Service. Reorganization of the Scripps foreign department is the occasion for several changes of personnel.

W. H. DODGE

William H. Dodge, president of the Scripps-McRae League, becomes president of Allied Newspapers, Inc., in active charge of a program which includes the establishment of branch offices in the South and on the Pacific Coast, in addition to those already in operation in Chicago and Cleveland.

William G. Chandler succeeds W. H. Dodge as president of the Scripps-McRae League and will operate the Ohio papers.

Entering the newspaper business in his "teens" as classified advertising solicitor on the Cleveland Press, Mr. Dodge has been successively manager of classified advertising, display advertising, manager of the Press, business manager of the Cincinnati Post, general business manager of the Scripps-McRae League and for the last seven years has been president of the Cleveland Press, Toledo News-Bee, Akron Press, Columbus Citizen, Cincinnati Post, Covington Post, Des Moines News, Oklahoma News, and of the Youngstown Telegram sinc its purchase.

W. G. CHANDLER

Mr. Chandler, who in recent years ha been closely associated with Mr. Dodg in Cleveland, also began his newspape career at the bottom of the Scripps McRae ladder. Starting as counter cler at the Cleveland Press, he became ad vertising manager of the Toledo News Bee and has been business manager o the Cleveland Press and the Toled paper.

Harry H. Hoffman, manager of th Scripps foreign department, will hav offices in New York, and James Pollock advertising manager of the Cleveland Press, will join the New York office of Allied Newspapers, Inc., later in the fall. John Meilink will succeed Mr. Pollock at the Press.

H. H. HOFFMAN

There are now 30 Scripps-McRae newspapers with others to be added, it is stated, in the near future. The following paper are now owned and operated: Clevelan Press, Akron Press, Toledo News-Bee Columbus Citizen, Cincinnati Pos Youngstown Telegram, Covington Pos Knoxville News, Memphis Press, Bir mingham Post, Terre Haute Post, Hous ton Press, Dallas Dispatch, Fort Wort Press, Oklahoma News, Des Moine News, Indianapolis Times, Evansvill Press, Denver Express, Seattle Sta Spokane Press, Tacoma Times, Portlan News, San Francisco Daily News, Sac ramento Star, Los Angeles Record, Sa Diego Sun, Washington (D. C.) News Norfolk Post, and El Paso Post.

Ad Art Service, of which Fran Dickel is manager, which has been op erating from the Cleveland plant of th Newspaper Enterprise Association, wil be amalgamated with Allied Newspapers Inc., and be produced from New Yor headquarters with larger facilities.

Floor space for the New York office has been acquired in the Vanderbil Concourse Building, 52 Vanderbilt ave nue, which is added to the space for merly occupied by the Scripps foreig department.

New Special for Periodicals

Dorr & Corbett, periodical publishers representatives, has been formed b Charles W. Corbett, for several year Eastern advertising manager of Woman World, and Charles Dorr, who for 1 years has been in charge of New Eng land for a group of magazines.

EUGENE FIELD IN NEW BIOGRAPHY AS 72D ANNIVERSARY NEARS

Slason Thompson Relates Incidents and Quotes from Newspaper Verse Which Made the 45 Years of Field's Life a Pageant of Fun for Himself and His Readers

By CARL H. GETZ

EDITORIAL NOTE.—Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, have kindly granted permission to EDITOR & PUBLISHER to reprint excerpts from Slason Thompson's two-volume biography of Eugene Field. Most of the writings reprinted below are taken from the old files of Chicago and Denver newspapers for which Field wrote.

SEVENTY-TWO years ago tomorrow there was born in St. Louis a baby boy not with a silver spoon in his mouth, but a soft, fuzzy feather in his hand with which to tickle the hearts of men. This youngster's name was Eugene Field, who in the words of his able biographer, Slason Thompson, was "as gentle and genial a spirit as ever walked the earth."

Surely there never lived a more human individual than 'Gene Field, and it is doubtful whether many have surpassed the quaintness of his humor. Newspaper men like to think of Field as a newspaper man and poets as a poet. He was both.

"I am a Yankee by pedigree and education," Field wrote at one time, "but I was born in that ineffably uninteresting city St. Louis."

He attended the private school of Rev. James Tufts at Monson, Mass., Williams College, Knox College and the University of Missouri, but failed to graduate from any.

He went abroad twice, once to spend his patrimony and a second time to search for health.

Included among the newspapers on which he worked were the St. Louis Evening Journal, St. Joseph (Mo.) Gazette, St. Louis Times-Journal, Kansas City Times, Denver Tribune, and the Chicago Morning News (later the Chicago Record.)

A glimpse of Field's waggish character may be had by reading some of the paragraphs below, which are taken at random from his writings:

Here is a paragraph written while Field was on the Denver Tribune:

"See the Wasp. He has pretty yellow stripes around his Body, and a darning needle in his tail. If you will Pat the Wasp upon the Tail, we will Give you a nice Picture Book."

Here is one Field wrote in the Chicago Morning News about his actor friend, William H. Crane. Like Field, Crane suffered from digestive troubles.

"Mr. William H. Crane, the actor, is looking unusually robust this autumn. He seems to have recovered from the malady which made life a burden to him for several years. He thought there was something the matter with his liver.

"Last July he put in a good share of his time blue-fishing with Grover Cleveland. One day they ran out of bait.

"'Wonder if they'd bite at liver?' asked Crane.

"'They love it,' answered Cleveland.

"So without further ado Crane out with his penknife, amputated his liver, and minced it up for bait. He hasn't had a sick day since."

Here is a crop note Field wrote at one time:

"The town of Hegler, on the Kankakee, Minonk and Western Railroad, is invisible in a forest of corn. A search party under the direction of the road commissioners are looking for it."

The paragraph below was written by Field in 1894:

"The oldest house in Chicago stands on the West Side, and was built in 1839 A. D. The oldest horse in Chicago works for the Lake View Street-Car Company, and was present at the battle of Marathon, 490 B. C."

Field's salary was paid weekly to his old wife, or rather what was left of it was paid to her. Field applied all of his resourcefulness to finding ways and means of getting part of his salary in advance. Now and then he would write supplications to the treasurer in verse. Here is one he sent to Collins Shackelford, cashier of the Chicago Morning News:

"A SONNET TO SHEKELSFORD

"Sweet Shekelsford, the week is near its end,
And, as my custom is, I come to thee;
There is no other who has pelf to lend.
At least no pelf to lend to hapless me;
Nay, gentle Shekelsford, turn not away—
I must have wealth, for this is Saturday.

"Ah now thou smilest a soft relenting smile—
Thy previous frown was but a passing joke,
I know thy heart would melt with pity while
Thou heardst me pleading I was very broke.
Nay, ask me not if I've a note from Stone,
When I approach thee, O thou best of men!
I bring no notes, but, boldly and alone,
I woo sweet hope and strike thee for a ten."

When Field dipped into politics he usually produced something like this:

"Senator Dawes has been out among the Sioux Indians too. They call him Ne-Ha-Wo-Ne-To—which, according to our office dictionary, is the Indian for Go-To-Sleep-Standing-Up."

In his auto-analysis Field wrote, "I do not smoke tobacco." The truth is he smoked almost all of the time. He wrote at one time:

"Oh, children, you Must never chew
Tobacco—it is Awful!
The Juice will Quickly make you Sick
If once you get your Maw Full."

Literary folks in Chicago were amazed to read the following one day:

"It is officially announced by the official board of managers of the National Federation of Realists that Hamlin Garland put on his light weight flannels last week."

While Field was on the Denver Tribune he learned that his friend, Wolfe Londoner, as chairman of the Republican County Central Committee, was instructed to arouse interest and enthusiasm among the colored voters of Denver. Whereupon Field wrote the following advertisement which appeared in large type the next morning:

WANTED
Every Colored Man in the City
To Call at Wolfe Londoner's Store.
A Car load of Georgia
Watermelons
Just Received
For a special distribution
Among his Colored Friends.
Call Early and get Your Melon! ! !

When Mr. Londoner opened his store the next morning he had to get a traffic cop to get him to his front door. Londoner didn't have any melons and he didn't know where to get any. But just as the mob was getting ready to rush the front door the melons appeared from some mysterious source and the day was saved.

Field was always hard up for money. One time when Trotty, his little girl, asked for a text to recite at Sunday-school, he gave her this:

"The God will provide, my father can't."

During Field's later years, Melville E. Stone, then editor of the Chicago Morning News, now the grand old man of the Associated Press, assigned to him the pleasant task of entertaining distinguished visitors. One of the funniest of these entertainments was a luncheon at the Union League Club, in honor of Edward Everett Hale. Let Mr. Field's biographer, Mr. Thompson, tell the story:

"Field prepared the menu with infinite care, and to the carnal eye it read like a dinner fit for the gods. But in reality is consisted of typical New England dishes, in honor of our New England guest, masquerading in the gay and frivolous lingo of the French capital. Codfish-balls, with huge rashers of bacon, boiled corn beef and cabbage, pork and beans, with slices of soggy Boston brown-bread, corn-bread and doughnuts, the whole topped off with apple-pie and cheese, were served with difficult gravity by the waiters to an appreciative company. The bill promised some rare and appropriate wine for each course, and the table flashed with the club's full equipment of cut glass for each plate. But alas and alack-a-day! when the waiters came to serve the choicest vintage from the correctly labelled bottles, they gave forth nothing but Waukesha spring water. Not even 'lemonade of a watery grade' did we have to wash down our luncheon, where every dish was seasoned to the taste of salted codfish. But we had all the water we could drink, and before we were through we needed it."

While Mr. Thompson is on his feet, we ought to have him tell another story about Eugene Field. This is what he tells:

"It was on an occasion somewhat similar to this, given in the early winter, that Field perpetrated one of his most characteristic jokes, with the assistance of Mr. Stone, by this time manager of the Associated Press. The latter, at no little trouble, had provided as luscious a dessert of strawberries as the tooth of epicure ever watered over. They were the first of the season, and fragrant with the fragrance that has given the berry premiership in the estimation of others besides Izaak Walton. While everybody was proving that the berries tasted even better than they looked, and exclaiming over the treat, Field was observed to push his saucer out of range of temptation. At last Mr. Stone remarked Field's action, and asked:

"'What's the matter, Gene, don't you like strawberries?'

"'Like them,' said Field; 'I fairly adore strawberries! They are the only fruit I prefer to pie.'

"'Then why don't you eat yours?' queried Stone.

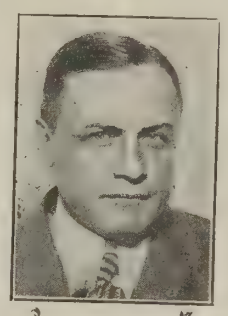
"'B-because,' answered Field, with a deep quaver in his voice, 'b-because I'm afraid it would s-s-spoil my appetite for p-prunes.'"

Field died November 4, 1895. In his death America lost a rare character whose creed was love and whose religion was kindness and who belonged to the church of the common brotherhood of man, as Rev. Frank M. Bristol so happily expressed it in his funeral address. His songs were ones of sweetness. When he died, all America was filled with sorrow.

SMOKE FOR BOSTON ADVERTISER

It Will Write Its Name on Seaside Skies Next Week

Writing the name of an American newspaper in the sky at an altitude of 3,000 feet will be attempted on Labor Day, along lines similar to those followed in England, at Revere Beach, near Boston, under auspices of the Boston Advertiser. Capt. Burr W. Leyson, Jr., former member of the Royal Air Force in the world war, will attempt the stunt, if weather permits, in a Bristol monoplane. Each letter will be more than 1,000 feet in length and will occupy more than a mile and a half in the sky. Two tanks on top of the plane's wings will contain the special smoke composition used. As soon as one letter has been completed by numerous twists, turns, nose-dives, tail-spins, and other aerial feats, the smoke will be shut off. If the weather proves suitable, Capt. Leyson will try the stunt Sept. 3, at Nantasket Beach on Boston Harbor.



Has $400,000 for Newspaper Space

The $400,000 advertising fund, raised to tell the World what Northern and Central California has to sell, will shortly be spent with newspapers of all parts of the United States, except California, and foreign countries. In raising the money, the committee selected 17,000 trades or groups and allotted to each its proportional share of the total.

C. M. PALMER TAKES TWO PARTNERS

E. D. DeWitt and Dean Palmer Join in Making Newspaper Brokerage Firm of Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer —Kauffman Continues

Formation of the co-partnership of Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer was announced this week by Charles M. Palmer, who for many years has conducted his brokerage business for the sale and appraisal of newspaper properties under his own individual name, with offices at 225 Fifth avenue, New York. Mr. Palmer now has associated with him E. D. DeWitt and Dean Palmer, his son. Frank K. Kauffman, who has been office manager for Mr. Palmer for many years, will continue in that capacity with the new firm.

E. D. DE WITT

Charles M. Palmer's experience as a broker dates back to the late nineties, when he resigned from the Hearst organization. Since then he has figured in many of the largest newspaper sales transactions negotiated in the United States. Recently the sale of the Detroit Journal to the Detroit News was handled by Mr. Palmer, who also has been owner or publisher of over forty newspapers during his long career in journalism.

DEAN PALMER

Dean Palmer has been assisting his father for several years. Previous to entering the brokerage business he was connected with the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press and the New Orleans Item, acquiring extensive experience in all departments of newspaper work.

E. D. DeWitt was graduated from Princeton University in 1900. His first newspaper work was done as a member of the New York Times staff and later on the Mail & Express. Then he went with the James Gordon Bennet newspapers, where he rose from advertising manager of the New York Evening Telegram to general manager of the New York Herald Company. He also spent three years in Paris as business manager of the European Herald. In 1914 Mr. DeWitt purchased an interest in EDITOR & PUBLISHER and was its general manager until, after the death of Mr. Bennett, the Herald management induced him to return to that newspaper, where he remained until the sale of the property to Frank A. Munsey.

A new picture of Charles M. Palmer is presented on Page 9 of this issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Minneapolis Journal Adds Roto

The Minneapolis Journal will add an eight page rotogravure section to its Sunday paper, commencing September 17. H. R. Foster of the editorial staff has been appointed editor of the new supplement. Additional space in an adjoining building has been obtained and is now being remodeled.

New Nichols Executive

Tom F. Blackburn has joined the staff of the Charles F. W. Nichols Company, Chicago, as an account executive.

COST OF CIRCULATION, NOT ITS VALUE, INTERESTS U. S. TAX COLLECTOR

Detroit Journal Sale of 140,000 Subscribers for $1,700,000 Has Bearing Only as Collateral Evidence—Clauses of 1918 Act Under Which Publishers May Seek Relief

By CLIFFORD YEWDALL, A. S. A. A., C. P. A.

Editorial Note.—EDITOR & PUBLISHER will publish an article each week on taxation problems affecting newspapers and advertisers, conducted by Mr. Yewdall. This is a continuation of the series begun in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of December 10, 1921, and carried into March of this year. Mr. Yewdall will deal with the everyday problems of newspaper taxation reports and accounting, as gathered from his personal experiences in working for publishers all over the country. He will endeavor to answer any questions asked of him through EDITOR & PUBLISHER. In taking up the work, he desires to make the following statement: "I am not a lawyer and I appreciate that Federal tax cases present problems requiring the best attention of an accountant and a lawyer who has given the subject special study. The legal discussions in my articles are based to a considerable extent on discussions of the chairman of the Federal Taxation Committee of the A. N. P. A., Arnold L. Guesner, of the Minneapolis bar, with whom I have worked on tax cases."

IN last week's issue there was published in full a recent decision of the Solicitor of the Internal Revenue Bureau, covering treatment of special cases under the relief sections of the Revenue Act of 1918 (Sections 327 and 328). This solicitor's opinion stated that before application could be made under the relief sections for assessment, abnormal conditions affecting the capital or income of the taxpayers must be established by proof.

CLIFFORD YEWDALL

The phrase "abnormal conditions" was defined as follows:

"(a) Where a corporation is placed in a position of substantial inequality because of the time or manner of organization.

"(b) Where the capital employed, although a material income-producing factor, is very small or in a large part borrowed.

"(c) Where there is excluded from invested capital under section 326 intangible assets of recognized value and substantial in amount which have been developed by the taxpayer.

"(d) Where the net income for the year is abnormally high due to realization in one year of income earned during a period of years.

"(e) Where extraordinary gains have derived from the sale of property where its principal value has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration.

"(f) Where proper recognition cannot be made for amortization, obsolecence or exceptional depletion during the World War."

We will now analyze each individual outline above and see wherein newspapers come under these sections.

It does not require deep study to find the meaning of this condition. Where all corporations in the same line of business are organized in the early years with small capital they are not placed in a position of substantial inequality. Most newspapers have been in business 20 to 25 years and were started with small capital. They have been built up at enormous expense, which expense has been paid out of the profits as they were earned. Some were more successful than others and grew fast, but that their earnings are high and capitalization low, does not mean that they are in a position of substantial inequality. Substantial inequality in this case means inequality one with the other. All newspapers practically are in the same situation and it is only those newspapers that were started in recent years that have large capitalization due to the fact that those newspapers were the outcome of the purchase of an older publication either for cash or stock.

(b) Where capital employed, although a material income producing factor, is very small or in a large part borrowed.

The capital employed in the average newspaper is very small according to the newspaper man's books, but proper investigation to ascertain the correct capital employed in the conduct of its business will show that its invested capital is large. There is no authorization in any of the laws or rulings to place any corporation under the relief sections just because it does not care to dig out the facts regarding its particular situation and present them in proper form to the Department. All newspapers have a large capital employed in their business. That capital is not shown on the books because the average newspaper charged all the expense of building up its property to expense, and not to capital.

The large capital investment of each newspaper is its circulation lists and mechanical equipment. The cost of the mechanical equipment, which in many cases has to a considerable extent been charged off as expense, can be easily ascertained and the proper depreciation rates applied thereto to find its value for invested capital purposes. The cost of building up its circulation structure has in most cases been charged off to expense as the expenditure was incurred.

The recent ruling issued by the Department permitting the transfer from expense to capital of those items paid out to build or acquire a circulation structure permits all newspapers to produce their evidence and data to substantiate the cash invested in its most valuable asset, thus adding to the capital employed in the business, and entirely eliminates subsection (b) of this ruling as a reason why newspapers should be given relief under the relief sections of the 1918 law.

(c) Where there is excluded from invested capital under section 326 intangible assets of recognized value and substantial in amount which have been developed by the taxpayer.

There appears in parentheses after this condition the following significant statement:

> "In view of the specific limitations upon admission of intangibles into invested capital contained in Section 326 of the Act, applications for assessment under Section 238 upon this ground should be carefully scrutinized and the application denied where its allowance would result in defeating the avowed purpose of the limitations contained in Section 326."

Under Section 326 there are excluded certain parts of intangible assets acquired for stock. Hence this statement in (c) would afford relief only in those cases in which a corporation happens to have issued stock in exchange for intangibles—for instance circulation, which the Bureau regards as an intangible. What is said in (c) would afford no relief in a case in which the circulation has been built up by expenditures made year after year in the usual way.

Hence, any opening to newspapers to obtain relief under this sub-section of the ruling is confined to a limited number of cases, and in those cases it is confined to items of stock issued for intangibles. Furthermore, the parenthetical statement largely nullifies even this limited possible relief.

That a circulation structure has value is not disputed by the Internal Revenue Bureau. The recent sale of the circulation lists of the Detroit Journal of approximately 140,000 net paid daily, to the Detroit News for the sum of $1,700,000 paid in cash, is a concrete example of the worth of circulation. Many newspaper publishers are of the opinion that this sale settles once and for all the value of a circulation list. However, under the revenue laws, the question is not what is its value, but what did it cost? We are confronted with the wording of the statutes which holds us down to cost. The decisions of the Supreme Court, under the revenue acts also are against testing invested capital by values. Cost is the only basis that can be used. While this sale will be good collateral evidence, it cannot be used as a basis for inclusion in invested capital for prior years of your circulation structure.

Each newspaper must prove its own case according to the facts and conditions pertaining thereto. It would be necessary, for instance, in a case like that of this recent sale, for the former owners of the paper to show the Department what the circulation structure cost them, not what they sold it for.

You can include in invested capital the amount of cash actually invested in building up the circulation structure or other intangible assets, which cash must be paid out by the corporation because, under the law, as we have already shown in past articles, if you can prove that you have paid out money to build your circulation structure, that cash invested will stand up to 100 per cent of the amount so spent.

Conditions (d) (e) and (f) do not apply to newspapers, hence it is of no avail discussing them here.

Next week, additional information regarding the relief sections of the various income tax acts will be given and discussion of the fundamentals underlying the same given.

NEWSPAPER LINEAGE

Two Minor Typographical Errors in Last Week's Tabulation

Much interest has been expressed by readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER in the tabulation of lineage, circulations, advertising rates, and milline rates in last week's issue and it promises to become an important addition to the reference data now extant on the newspaper business. For this reason and to bring the tabulation as closely as possible to 100 per cent accuracy, it is desired to correct two minor typographical errors which might confuse those who use the compilation.

On page 24, the population of Oklahoma City is given as 991,258. The correct figure is 91,258.

On page 26, the Montreal Gazette is listed as an evening paper. It is issued every morning except Sunday.

These are the only errata noted by EDITOR & PUBLISHER to date and its readers have called no others in the statistics to its attention. It will be pleased to receive notice of and correct any other inaccuracies that readers may find, and will welcome any suggestions for enhancing the content or convenience of the tabulation in future issues.

In the box on page 34 headed "Evening Newspaper Leaders," the Indianapolis News should have been listed in eighth place, with a six-day lineage for the period January-June, 1922, of 7,908,060 lines. The revised standing of the twelve leading evening papers on their six-day lineage follows:

EVENING NEWSPAPER LEADERS

Six-Day Lineage Only

	Name	Lineage	Net Paid Circulation	Min. For. Adv. Rate	Mil Ra
1.	Detroit News	9,119,978	225,301	$.40	$1
2.	Chicago Daily News	9,062,145	397,584	.65	1
3.	Philadelphia Bulletin	8,572,300	494,499	.55	1
4.	Los Angeles Herald	8,501,206	150,463	.24	1
5.	Newark News	8,458,978	108,468	.21	1
6.	Flint Journal	8,456,896	28,539	.08	2
7.	Washington Star	8,291,047	89,876	.20	2
8.	Indianapolis News	7,908,060	115,634	.20	1
9.	Pittsburgh Press	7,539,448	144,643	.20	1
10.	Los Angeles Express	7,295,554	83,008	.15	1
11.	Baltimore Evening Sun	6,946,386	105,584	...
12.	Montreal Star	6,791,590	110,843	.16	1
	Total	97,506,575	2,054,442	$3.04	$1

University to Be Host to Editors

West Virginia University has invited the publishers and editors of the daily and weekly papers of the state to attend a conference at the university, Morgantown, November 16, 17 and 18.

JULY LINEAGE GAIN 5.9%

Only 4 of 28 Listed Cities Show L Against Last July

Only four cities of the 28 listed the New York Evening Post Statisti Department for July, 1922-1921, nev paper advertising lineage show losses this year as compared with last. Of 124 newspapers listed, 80 made gains a 43 losses over July, 1921. In one c no comparison was available. The to lineage of all papers for July, 1922, w 89,911,188, a gain of 5,302,696 lines, 5.9 per cent, over the 1921 total 84,608,492 lines.

The summary by city totals follo

	1922	1921	Gai
	4*..	4*..
New York	10,707,422	10,309,708	397,7
Philadelphia	5,394,289	4,899,043	495,2
Birmingham	1,461,502	1,484,588	23,0
Chicago	5,005,191	4,620,030	385,1
Los Angeles	6,874,518	6,279,840	594,6
Baltimore	3,708,037	3,460,091	247,9
Boston	4,033,259	3,965,959	67,3
Louisville	2,190,635	1,986,478	204,1
Detroit	3,645,866	3,455,508	190,3
Cleveland	3,119,025	3,205,800	86,7
Washington	3,367,581	3,258,911	108,6
Oakland	1,628,760	1,417,682	211,0
Seattle	2,260,258	2,297,890	37,6
San Francisco	4,004,518	3,396,540	607,9
Buffalo	2,527,507	2,395,696	131,8
St. Louis	3,233,860	2,950,760	283,1
Indianapolis	2,495,124	2,315,262	179,8
Milwaukee	2,180,578	2,109,208	71,3
Minneapolis	2,588,474	2,473,555	114,9
St. Paul	1,348,200	1,178,758	169,4
New Orleans	2,742,657	2,545,928	196,7
Cincinnati	2,768,100	2,565,300	202,8
Houston	1,957,704	1,905,204	52,5
Columbus	2,611,477	2,440,610	170,8
Providence	2,240,855	2,097,057	143,7
Denver	1,998,668	1,825,376	173,2
Richmond	1,689,699	1,495,678	194,0
Dayton	2,127,424	2,272,032	144,6
Totals	89,911,188	84,608,492	5,302,6

* Gain; † Loss.

PRES. HARDING LOSES TEMPE

Thought Reporters Were Checking Mayflower Guest List

President Harding's antipathy for h ing reporters on his trail, when he getting away from the cares of state, manifested again last Saturday to th press association men who followed h to the navy yard wharf when he boar the Mayflower for a week-end trip d the Potomac River.

When the party was going aboard, President, who as a rule shows g patience with reporters, and realizes t it is part of the game of a public ma have them always on hand, got the pression the men were checking up on list of members of the party which been given out in advance at the W House. He took immediate and vigor exception to what he considered wa challenge to his good faith.

He was angry and would scarcely li to the explanation of the reporters, they were required to be on hand by t offices and were there primarily to gu against the President of the United St being left uncovered in case of accid It so happened that the name of Attor General Daugherty, who made the t had been omitted accidentally from official White House list.

The President's little lecture to the porters on the dock was taken by members of the press generally as result of misunderstanding, and none Washington tried to read into it any tempt on the part of the White House censor comings or goings of reporters.

irst in San Francisco

1922

Jan.	Feb.	March	April	May	June	July	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.

8,359,624
lines during first six months of 1922

Is your advertising story being told here?

The record of newspaper supremacy in last week's issue of the Editor and Publisher pointed unerringly to the San Francisco Examiner as FIRST in San Francisco. Again and again and again the Examiner has out-stripped every San Francisco newspaper in advertising leadership. Why? Because it gives an advertiser two things: A commanding circulation that dominates and a trade-aid service that stimulates.

Blanketing Northern and Central California with its circulation of more than 150,000 daily and 300,000 Sunday, the advertising influence of the San Francisco Examiner is overwhelming. Coupled with this is a merchandising service that puts added sales-force into every advertising dollar you invest in this rich trading territory. For details, write or get in touch with our representatives.

"There is no substitute for circulation"

AN AMERICAN PAPER FOR AMERICA FIRST THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

San Francisco Examiner

Monarch of the Dailies

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF

New York: W. W. Chew, 1819 Broadway

Chicago: W. H. Wilson, Hearst Bldg.

TRUTH ABOUT FARMERS IN DAILY NEWS WILL HELP NATION'S BUSINESS

Newspapers, by Competent Reporting of Rural Affairs, Can Focus Public Opinion on Marketing and Banking Systems, Accused of Causing Loss and Waste

By B. L. CRANDALL

UNDER the heading "More profit than ever to papers who secure farmers' patronage," in EDITOR & PUBLISHER for May 13, 1922, the writer presented some of the possibilities awaiting managing editors and crculation managers in the rural sections provided they made a real, thorough effort to give their papers an appeal to readers in the open country and small communities near them.

The article took the purely selfish standpoint, that of the financial gain and added prestige which would come to a newspaper from such effort, and almost entirely overlooked another reason why editors and circulation men should give more attention to their outside subscribers.

The daily newspaper has today probably the greatest influence upon public opinions, customs and policies of any institution in the country. Its influence is beyond measure, and in that very fact lies an economic reason why rural and agricultural news should receive more attention:

For many years, the farmer and events in the agricultural world were considered "back page" copy, something to be "buried" in an obscure part of the paper or never appear at all. Many newspapers seemed to pride themselves on their "metropolitanism," their ability to get by with editorials slapping the farmers and currying favor with their city readers, and their complete lack of anything that might be termed "farmer viewpoint." When farmers took them to task—but rarely—in letters to the editor, it frequently happened that far from practical replies were published or answers given which served more to arouse the ire of their country readers than to benefit the paper.

The situation was, and is, that little if any attention was given to rural problems. It apparently was taken for granted that as long as the milk man left milk at the door every morning and there was a good supply of fruits and vegetables in the markets, things must be prospering in the country and that it called for no attention from the man on the desk.

The result of this situation was that the farmer was getting along with his farm papers for agricultural news, taking the daily for the latest notes on crimes, strikes, scandals, fashions, fads and whatnot, but not getting a fair picture of the city man. At the same time the city man was not being kept in touch with country affairs. The farmer did not, and does not, fare as well in public opinion under this policy of the press. Too few newspaper men have any knowledge of farming and an even smaller number are informed about farm marketing problems. As a case in point, if the price of milk is raised in the city, howls of highway robbery by farmers are raised by many editors, totally disregarding the fact that no increase may have been made by the city distributor to the farmer, or if an increase was made, that it was not in proportion to that asked of the city consumer.

Many editors, even now, when agricultural matters are being given greater attention by newspapers, are guilty of caustic comments and expressions about farmers when they have to pay 25 cents for a head of lettuce worth about 10. When potatoes go up, or direct product of the farm, the farmer is associated with these high prices, for no other reason than that editors don't know the facts, have no reporters capable of getting them and presenting them and do not know that the average farmer gets only about 30 cents out of the dollar paid for his milk.

Because of this ignorance, the man in the country has been attacked when the real difficulty was and still is faulty marketing of farm produce, which results in the fleecing of both the producer and the consumer. The producer in but extremely rare instances sets the price at which his products are sold.

When business generally began to slow up after the war, everyone tried to ascertain the reason, and to provide a remedy. After all sorts of talk about steel credits, foreign exchange and markets, shipping, freight rates and countless other subjects, it was finally discovered that the farmer was at the bottom of the whole trouble, and he and his affairs immediately became a source of news.

The newspapers suddenly discovered that the man who was busy with his soil and stock, could not overnight cut down his production from war requirements, and had therefore flooded the markets with his products, knocked the price of farm produce right out from under himself, had produced at greater cost than he could sell for and was in such a position that he could not buy.

All the bright forecasts that things were improving and that good business was just around the corner failed, and it was discovered in addition that "agriculture is not only the foundation, but the pace-maker and barometer of all business."

It suddenly dawned on many publishers that after all they had been overlooking a good bet and several papers put agriculturally trained men on their staffs to write farm news and editorials on agricultural problems.

But it is undoubtedly true that few newspapers have staff men sufficiently informed on rural affairs and problems to attempt safely to take up the burden of drawing city and country people closer together. The average newspaper man is a "cub" when it comes to writing farm news. He is in most cases city-bred, out of sympathy with farmers, could not tell from an examination of a pedigree record whether it disclosed quality or not, and in most cases gets in hot water when he tries to write farm news.

Business in this country is not yet back to that condition vaguely termed "normalcy," and it will not be until agriculture is a more prosperous business for nearly half the population of this country. The farmer is a good buyer when he has money. He wants home comforts, good furniture and clothes, electric lights and modern appliances just as much as his city brother, but he cannot have them when he markets his produce below production costs. When he stops buying, all kinds of businesses slow up and the time has come when newspaper publishers should realize that unprofitable agriculture directly reflects unfavorably upon both the retail and manufacturing trade, their advertising sources.

The stage is set and the actors are needed, but the actors cannot be ordinary pencil-pushers. A type of news-writer and editorial writer must be and is being developed to meet the situation which confronts the nation and through the influence which their papers wield, bring about adjustment of agricultural problems through careful and accurate presentation of facts that will arouse public sentiment toward correction of evils which now exist.

The farmer of today is hemmed in by a marketing system which is uneconomic. This system and its disadvantages to the entire country are worthy of study by publishers who realize that their advertising revenues depend upon the problems of the farmer.

Effort to ascertain facts will quickly disclose that the man assigned to the task cannot have any set "beat." He will have to travel far and wide throughout the region his paper touches. In doing so, he will as a matter of course run into sources of many interesting news items which will make the paper more readable. This, if followed up by the circulation department, will result in a larger mail list.

One of the facts that such a news writer will quickly learn is that besides being handicapped by an inefficient means of getting his products to the consumer, the farmer is also up against a banking system which is far from right. The writer will sense the fact that through their influence newspapers can bring about a change in banking methods which will aid farmers, add friends for the paper and bring about not only better conditions for the farmer but the consumer and the country in general.

At present, it is the custom for most banks to loan money on three or four months' time. To be sure, many of the notes can be renewed but such credit is not flexible enough. It is a rare case when a farmer can plant, harvest and sell a crop within three or four months. The average growing season of most crops is longer than that, saying nothing about the time needed for sowing, harvesting and preparing for market.

The result is that even with an extension of time, the farmer is hurried in selling his crop, because the bank wants its money. This hurry causes "dumping" to secure funds, lowers prices unnecessarily, means smaller returns to the farmer and in consequence less purchasing power for him.

It is always risky to attempt to tell someone how to run his business, particularly when not familiar with all of the conditions affecting it, but investigation of conditions as briefly outlined above will undoubtedly show that there is a field for effort by newspapers, entirely different than they have ever tackled before.

John Hancock hit the nail on the head when he stated, "I have ever considered dividual, but more especially the comit as the indispensable duty of every member of society to promote, as far as in him lies, the prosperity of every inmunity in which he belongs."

Special Opens St. Louis Office

Alcorn-Seymour Company, Inc., newspaper representatives, open a St. Louis office September 1 under the management of C. A. Schulenburg, formerly of the Gardner Agency.

BALTIMORE

with a population of 750,000 people, 62 per cent of whom own their own homes, is a tryout market of unusual merit.

Your request for specific information will be given individual attention by the Service Bureau of The Baltimore Sun.

Everything in Baltimore
Revolves Around

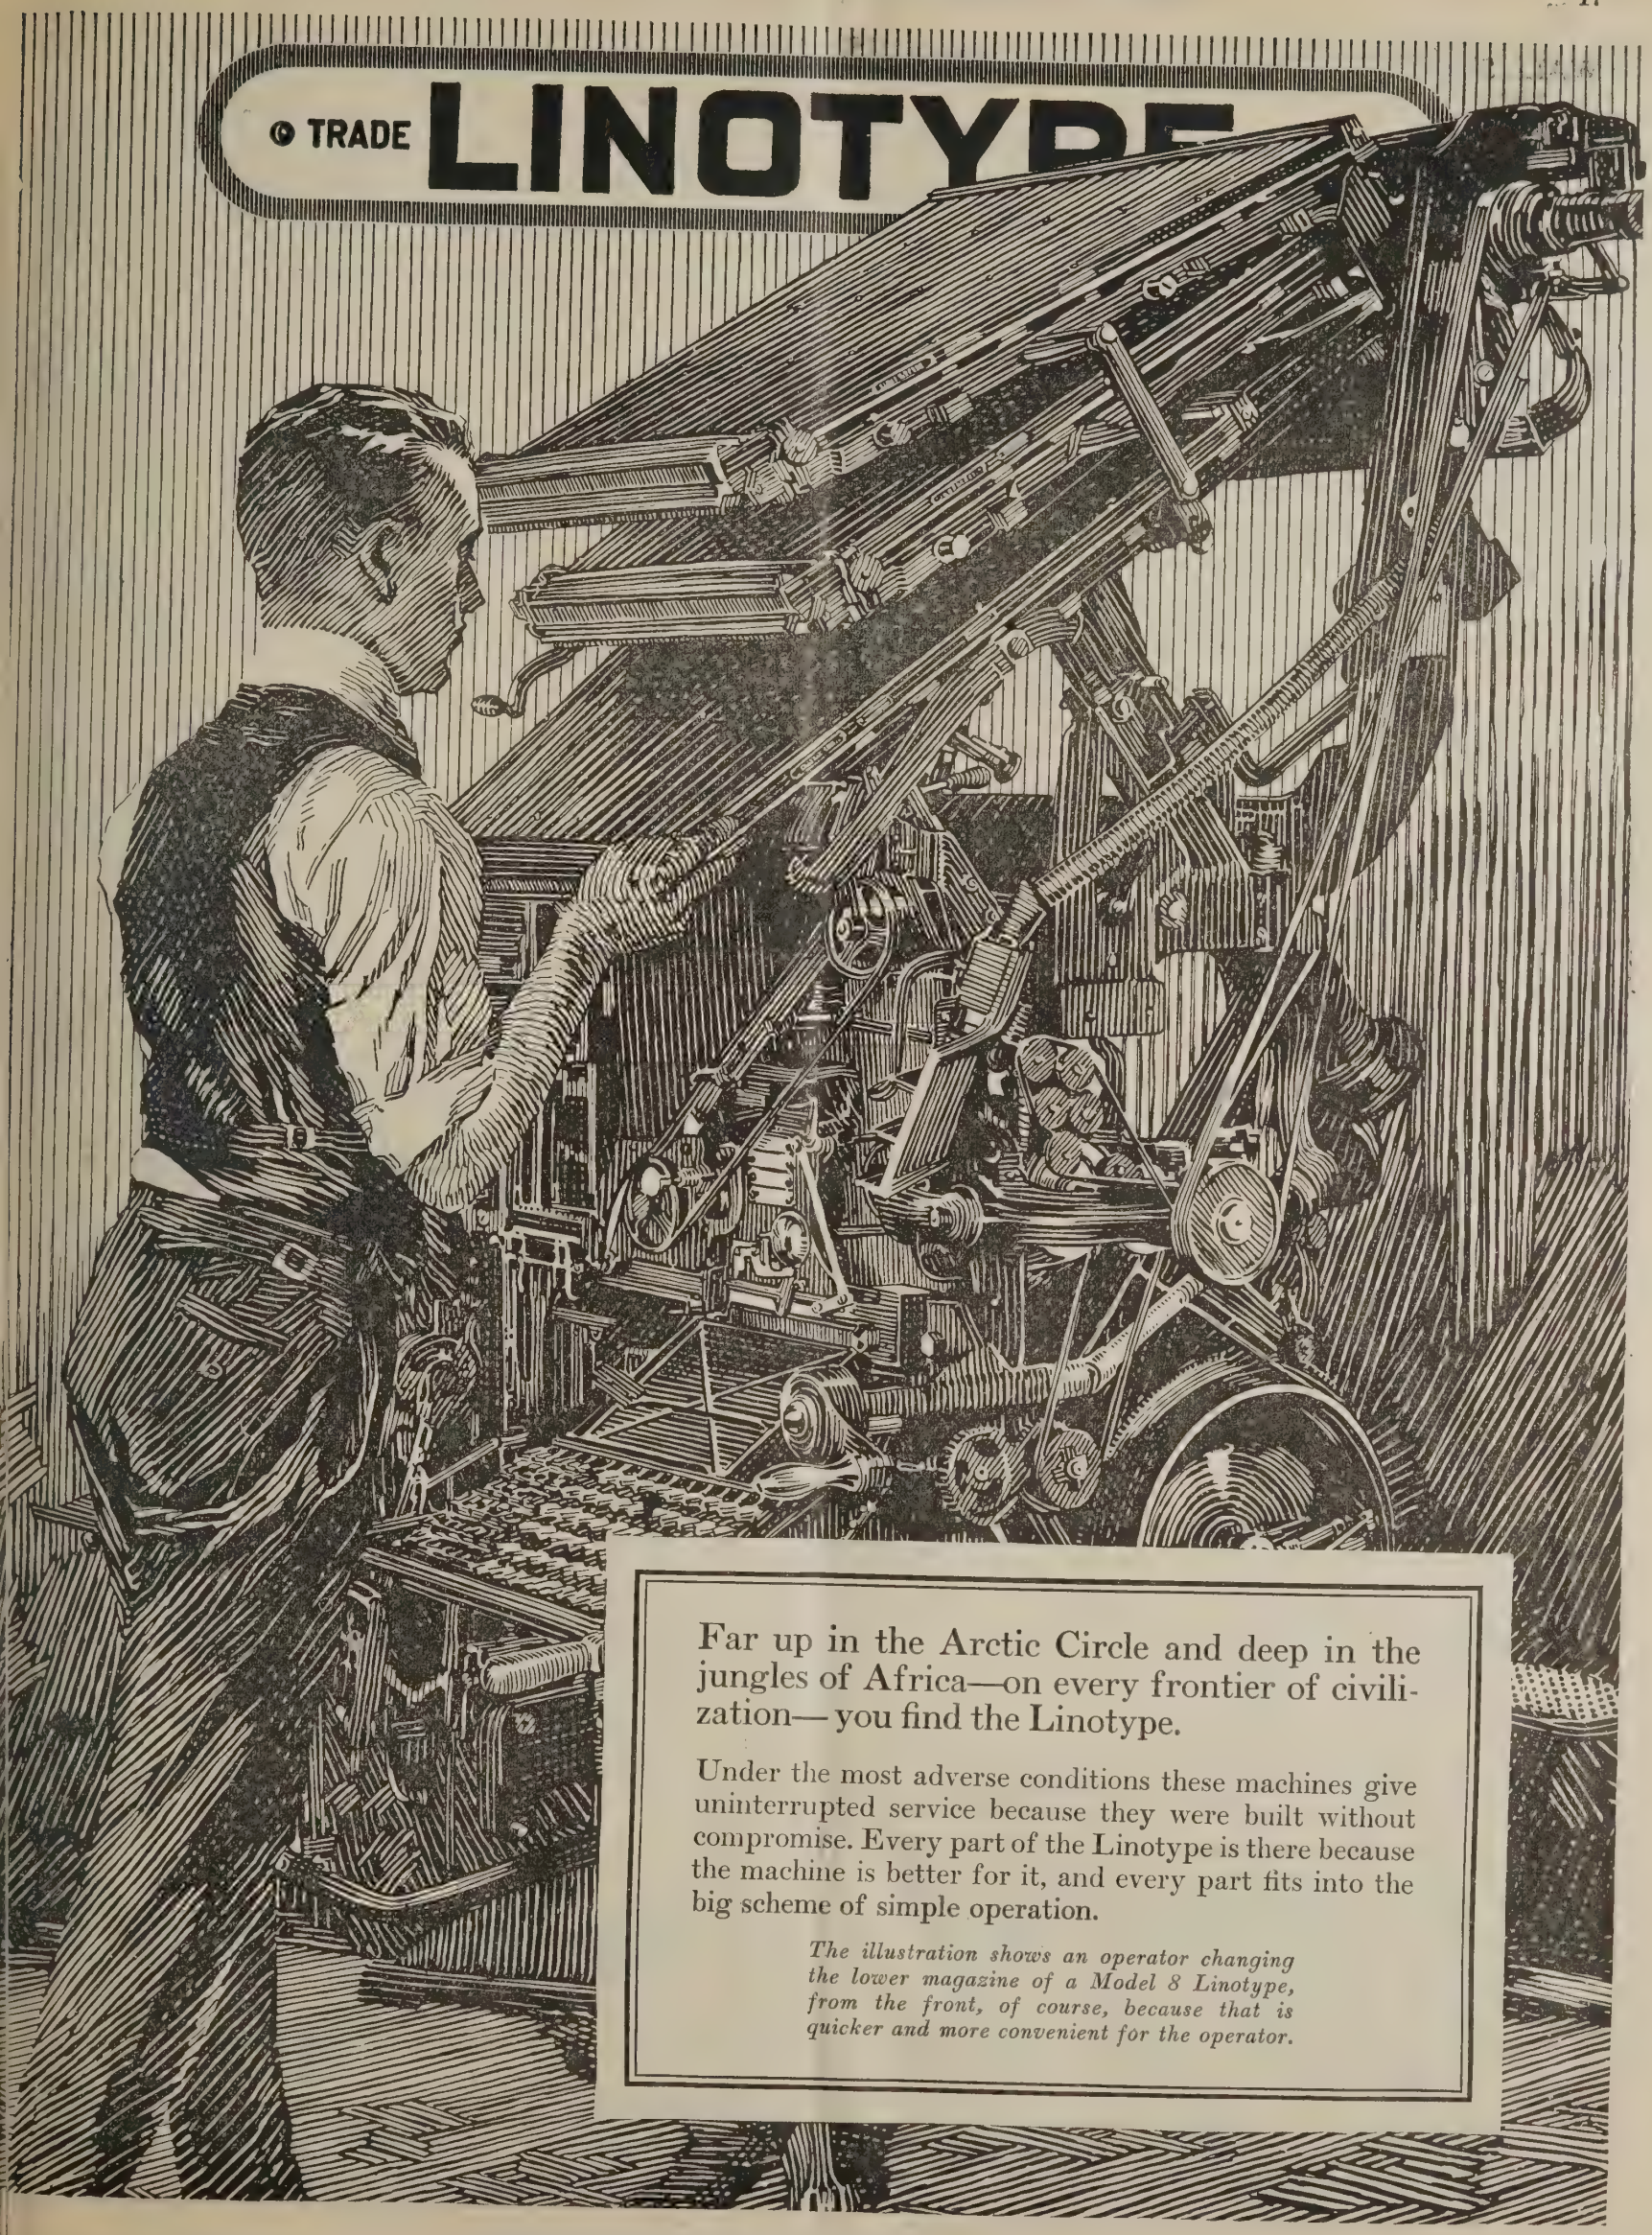
THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

A BARGAIN IN NEWSPAPER CIRCULATION

THE recent acquisition of The Detroit Journal by The Detroit News and the former's consolidation with it has created the greatest circulation bargain ever offered advertisers in America. The News has added a third to its circulation and has not announced any advance in rates.

The circulation range of The Detroit News since the consolidation has been so far beyond the 260,000 expected that The News has hesitated to emphasize such an entirely new standard of proportion between rate and circulation. As the circulation and advertising rate of The News stand now it offers unquestionably the best advertising opportunity in America. Autumn will bring a still further circulation increase, which means an even greater bargain.



Advertisers should not miss this unique advantage of being able to reach a city of a million, outstandingly prosperous, at one time and with one rate. The News has 100% coverage of the field, reaching practically every English-speaking home in Detroit

The Detroit News

More Than Double Nearest Week Day City Circulation.
Greatest Sunday Circulation in Michigan.

"Always in the Lead"

Member Notional Newspapers, Inc. Sunday Advertising in Colors

Far up in the Arctic Circle and deep in the jungles of Africa—on every frontier of civilization—you find the Linotype.

Under the most adverse conditions these machines give uninterrupted service because they were built without compromise. Every part of the Linotype is there because the machine is better for it, and every part fits into the big scheme of simple operation.

The illustration shows an operator changing the lower magazine of a Model 8 Linotype, from the front, of course, because that is quicker and more convenient for the operator.

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Scotch Series

WALL ST. NOT MUNSEY'S TREASURE TROVE

In Denying Charges That His Stand Against Bonus Is Based on Self-Interest, He Says Work Made His Money

Emphatic, categorical denial of recent charges that self-interest prompted him in his opposition to the soldier bonus was made Monday by Frank A. Munsey in a four-column front-page signed editorial in his New York Herald, headed "A Few Facts That Are Due to the Public." The Herald's opposition to the various bonus measures is stated by Mr. Munsey to have been determined by himself on the ground that "with the country now carrying a war indebtedness of $23,000,000,000, the Congress has no right to put an additional burden of $5,000,000,000 of indebtedness on the backs of the people" and also because "the bonus measures are largely political raids on the Treasury devised and engineered by politician-statesmen in Congress as an appeal to the soldier vote."

FRANK A. MUNSEY

Mr. Munsey continues, stating that some of the charges levelled against him have been "bitter, some of them venomous and criminally libelous. Briefly, they amount to this, that I am a rich man, that I made a large share of my fortune in United States Steel and munition stocks, that these steel stocks were enormously profitable during the war."

He quotes at length from statements to that effect by the New York Daily News, denouncing them as "utterly and wholly false," and goes on:

"The facts that have to do with these charges are these. The fortune I have, be it little or big, did not come to any considerable extent through the buying and selling of stocks. Some years ago, when my income was mounting large from my magazine business, I put some of my money then lying idle in bank into the security market. Up to this time all my thought and energy had gone into the upbuilding of my magazines business.

"Weird stories have been circulated about my undertaking in the security market. Until now they have been good-natured, though, I must say, grossly inaccurate. The bitter charges now, because of my stand on the bonus, are largely founded on these inaccuracies and exaggerations with respect to my security holdings. But inaccuracies and exaggerations good-naturedly expressed are one thing, and malicious, bitter and wholly unwarranted attacks with the view to discrediting my newspapers in their fight against the bonus are quite another.

"It was recently said that in my stock transactions I acted upon inside information, a sure thing. There has never been a sure thing in any of my business activities, or in any of my financial investments. I have always been willing to take a chance on my own judgment, always been willing to take a loss on my own judgment.

I have never had a business partner in my publishing enterprises and other interests. I have reasoned out my own problems, done my own thinking and I followed this method strictly in my stock transaction.

"I bought always with a view to a long term and not a short one. Getting in and out of a stock every day, or every few days, or several times in a day, is highly speculative; buying for a long term, that is, to hold with the expectation of increased values with improving business conditions, is like buying and selling real estate.

"With sufficient experience in the security market to satisfy me and with some profit—not enough to get excited about—I withdrew my capital from the street and turned to something more dramatic, more worth while, the daily newspaper. My actual net profit from my security holdings was relatively inconsequential compared with the aggregate profit of years from my publishing, real estate and other interests.

"I have not owned a share of Wall Street securities of any kind whatsoever in, I should say, something like a dozen years. I owned no Wall Street securities at the beginning of the war. I owned no Wall Street securities during the war, and I have owned no Wall Street securities since the war. I do not own now, and never have owned, a share in any munition plant of any kind or description. I had no connection, directly or indirectly, with any property or interest that lent itself to profiteering during or after the war.

"I made no money whatever, directly or indirectly, out of the war or anything associated with the war. On the contrary, my interests, due to the high cost of magazine and newspaper-making and the generally disturbed condition of affairs, suffered a very heavy shrinkage during the war and in the inflation period after the war.

"This statement, answering the charges that my fortune has been made largely in Wall Street and from munition investments and war profiteering, must not be taken to mean that I have any apologies to make for my operations in listed securities. I ventured less into the realm of chance in Wall Street, far less, than I did in undertaking to found and build up without capital and without experience a magazine business in competition with the great established magazine properties of New York, and I took far less chance than I have taken, and one generally takes, in the daily newspaper field.

"The fortune I have, such as it is, has come primarily from two sources: the $40 capital I brought with me from Maine to New York 40 years ago and the capacity God gave me for work. It has been done by fairly sound reasoning, the courage to put my conclusions to the test and by paying the price in work.

"I am a thorough believer in work. I love work and I wish all Americans loved work as I love it. Generally speaking, there is no such thing as getting something for nothing. We must pay the price in thought, in care, in watchfulness, in work—intense, everlasting work.

"If I were a manufacturer of hardware, or textiles, or shoes, or anything else not linked up with public affairs, this statement in answer to careless and vicious charges would not be imperative, though I hold that one who is at all before the public, whatever his line of endeavor, owes it to the public to correct misstatements and put the truth before the public.

"But with the newspaper owner the situation is highly sensitive, as the newspaper is a public institution. The newspaper is just what the man back of it makes it. The newspaper mirrors the man back of it, mirrors the man who puts himself into it. If his heart is in the public service, his newspaper will be a bulwark of strength to the community and to the country. Indeed with the present political subserviency to the vote, the best hope for sound government must rest with the well-purposed, independent press.

"The attitude of the New York Herald on the bonus has been the conscientious attitude of the owner of the New York Herald. I have no personal or selfish motive in my objection to the bonus. Fifty bonuses might be paid to soldiers and it wouldn't affect me personally.

"I have taken my stand against the bonus on the ground that it is all wrong in theory, that it degrades the American soldier. It robs him of the spirit of patriotism, the spirit of defense of his country. I have taken my stand against the bonus because the Government is in no condition to shoulder this additional burden, because the taxpayers of the country are in no condition to shoulder this additional burden, and because the payment of the proposed bonus to soldiers would be a vicious precedent for future generations to deal with."

New Half-Owner of Oswego Times

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.)

OSWEGO, N. Y., August 31.—E. M. Waterbury, for 13 years city editor of the Corning (N. Y.) Leader, has become an equal partner with C. L. Snowden in the ownership of the Oswego Times and is now editor of the paper.

New York Ad Agency Bankrupt

The Riteservice Advertising Agency, Inc., 621 Broadway, New York, was placed in bankruptcy August 29 by the following creditors: the Press Publishing Company (the New York Yorld and Evening World), $14,841; the Star Company (the New York American), $913; and the News Syndicate Company, Inc. (the New York News), $2,678. This agency recently made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors.

Denver Post Entertains Merchants

The Denver Post entertained the visiting merchants who attended the "Market Week" held in Denver August 14 to 19. All merchants visiting the Post plant were shown all the workings of the plant from the big presses in the basement to the linotypes on the top floor.

Raising $50,000 for Advertising

The Commercial Club, Salt Lake City, is raising another $50,000 for advertising. Newspaper and advertising space will be used as it was last year when $40,000 was expended for this purpose.

Woll Again Heads I. P. E. U.

Matthew Woll, Chicago, was re-elected president of the International Photo Engravers' Union at its annual convention in Chicago. Other officers elected were: Vice-president, E. J. Volz, New York; second vice-president, J. F. Maguire, Boston; third vice-president, Charles Horrocks, Seattle; secretary-treasurer, H. F. Schmall, St. Louis.

Princetonian Adds Roto

The Princetonian, the daily paper of the Princeton University, will add a rotogravure section of from four to eight pages to its Saturday paper when publication starts for the college year. Last Spring the Princetonian absorbed the Princeton Pictorial.

It is with deep sorrow we announce the death on Tuesday, August 15th, 1922, of Mr. William F. Dobbs, owner and manager of the Dobbs Advertising Agency, Danbury, Conn.

The Agency will be continued at Mr. Dobbs' express wish by Miss Lula M. Sniffen, who for several years has been his private secretary and assistant. Miss Sniffen becomes the sole owner and manager of the agency and will carry it on under the same name and policies as have heretofore governed it.

The Ames Medicine Company, of which Mr. Dobbs was also owner, will be managed by Miss Sniffen in the interest of Miss Mabel R. Dobbs, daughter of the late Mr. W. F. Dobbs, and the business will be handled as usual from the office of the Dobbs Advertising Agency.

DOBBS ADVERTISING AGENCY.

You Really Contact the World With Washington (D.C.) Advertising

This is an international city now—more so than ever before—attracting people from everywhere. So that the eyes of the world literally focus on the advertising pages of The Washington Star.

The Star is sufficient for any advertising campaign in Washington—for nearly everybody here—resident and visitor—reads The Star.

Our Service Department will be glad to advise with you.

The Evening Star

WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Write us direct or through our

New York Office
Dan A. Carroll
150 Nassau Street

Paris Office
5 Rue Lamartine

Chicago Office
J. E. Lutz
Tower Building

TO TEACH ADVERTISING IN AUSTRALIA

N. S. H. Catts Brings Interesting Information on How Things Are Done in His Country—Few Women in Advertising

"The American exporter cannot take care of a market 10,000 miles away. Merchandising plans and copy appeal need to be adapted to local conditions and until he realizes that, American goods cannot be marketed to the best advantages abroad," says Norman S. H. Catts, of the Catts - Patterson Company, of Sydney, Australia. Mr. Catts is visiting New York and other principal cities of the country, in the interest of his firm. To illustrate the statement he made to EDITOR & PUBLISHER, Mr. Catts cited the case of several national advertisers who came to Sydney and other Australian cities, bringing with them the same copy and plans which they had used successfully in America, only to find their Australian campaign flat failures.

NORMAN S. H. CATTS

"If you should visit Sydney, in a little while, you would think you were in an American city, for we speak the same language, wear the same clothes, observe the same customs and in appearance—everything is the same. But when it comes to advertising it is different. I think for an advertising man to be successful in Australia, he has to live among the people of the country and study them, not for a few months, but for years.

"You will doubtless be interested to know that within perhaps a year's time, there will be a standardized course of advertising, used in all of the schools and colleges of Australia. An advertising man will not be born overnight, but will work for and obtain a degree, just as if he were a lawyer or doctor, or any other professional man. This advertising course is now in process of completion, and it's going to be an excellent one.

"Regarding women in advertising? Well, I can only think of three or four who have taken it up as a profession. So I know of very few newspaper women. While, of course, there are many women working in Australia, doing stenographic and clerical work, there are fewer in other lines. Perhaps that is due to the fact that Australia is one country which has more men than women," said Mr. Catts.

Mr. Catts, who is at the head of what is credited as being the largest advertising agency in Australia, has a number of American clients, and is responsible for the sale of many American products in his country. He is a native of Sydney, and has always been most active in advertising circles. He was one of the founders of the Advertising Club of Sydney and served for three years as its honorary secretary, before the club had a paid executive. In 1920 he was president of the club and was largely responsible for the wonderful success of the second convention of Australian Advertising Men, held in Sydney that year. As the club in Sydney prospered, Mr. Catts helped with the organization of clubs in six other cities of Australia and of two in New Zealand. In addition to his agency activities, Mr. Catts is interested in the publishing of "Aussie," a monthly magazine founded during the war by an Australian soldier.

Mr. Catts is leaving this week for Boston, where he will spend several weeks before returning to his home in Sydney.

"WORCESTER'S ONE BIG NEWSPAPER"

Telegram-Gazette

WORCESTER TELEGRAM PUBLISHING COMPANY
THEODORE T. ELLIS, PUBLISHER
WORCESTER, MASS

August 22, 1922

Mr. Paul Block,
95 Madison Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Block:—

I noted your advertisement of recent date in a trade paper, stating, on account of the sale of the Detroit Journal in which you were interested, that you are now in a position to accept another representation in its place. Sorry you did not write me before you published that advertisement, as I would have been pleased to allow you to state that you are sending my paper, The Telegram-Gazette, over $400,000 worth of foreign advertising this year.

If publishers in general knew as well as I do the kind of representation your splendid organization gives I believe the vacancy you now have would soon be filled.

Wishing you every success,
Cordially yours,
(Signed) Theo. T. Ellis.

The Telegram Gazette has 75,000 circulation

THE recent sale of the Detroit Journal to the News of that city, and its consolidation with this latter paper, places us in a position to add another strong newspaper to our list.

I have 26 men associated with me in the representation of the publications on our list. As I have not allowed the elimination of the Detroit Journal to affect the positions of any of my associates, each man is doubly anxious to do his share to look after the interests of the newspaper which might replace the Journal on our list.

I would be pleased to give to publishers interested complete information regarding our methods of newspaper representation and a record of our accomplishments for the publishers whom we have the honor to represent.

Paul Block

The above is the advertisement Mr. Ellis refers to in his letter

PAUL BLOCK INC.

Publisher's Representatives

New York — Chicago — Detroit — Boston

MAKE YOUR WINDOWS PAY DIVIDENDS BY USING THEM TO TELL YOUR STORY

Here Are a Few of the Hundred Ways They Can Be Made to Attract and Interest the Townsfolk from Whom the Newspaper Draws Its Revenue

By B. J. MUNCHWEILER

Salesmanship Instructor Philadelphia Y. M. C. A.

IT is hard to imagine a more willful and sinful waste in any business than found in the newspaper windows of the country.

The average newspaper office or plant window is used, as a rule, for bulletin board or baseball score announcements, but never to sell the public what the newspaper has for sale.

Let us take 100 newspapers located in 100 respective towns and cities of the country and place a value of but $1,000 per year on the unused window space. Thus we can get an idea of the appalling waste which takes place, and, if you do not think your window space is worth $1,000 per year, ask the leading merchants of the town if they will rent your windows for $1,000 a year. You will find they will jump at the chance.

If your windows are worth that sum to one outside the newspaper business, is it not safe and sane to assume they are worth many times that amount to you?

Of course, I am a layman, that is, I am not in the newspaper business. Still, if I were the owner or the business manager of a newspaper, I would at once put in a new background to my windows.

I would display old filed newspapers of days gone by, showing the news of the past, also display each day some of the processes which go to make a modern newspaper.

I would—once, anyway—place the copy reader in the window. Over his desk I would place a sign reading, "Every word which goes into print is subject to the most careful scrutiny, our motto is 'Be sure.'" And I would have the copy boy rush into the window at frequent intervals on his usual business.

By use of graphic charts, I would show the growth of the paper since its foundation, with circulation figures, and all this surrounded by photographs of the various buildings the paper has occupied since its inception.

I would also offer a prize for the oldest edition of the paper turned in by a reader, which would cause a skirmish in old trunks, chests and closets by old-time readers. The editions turned in would be displayed in the windows together with the person's name who submitted it.

In an effort to create additional goodwill I would offer a prize for the best editorial written by a reader covering a subject announced in the windows. For example, one week the window placard would read, "Prize for the Best Written Editorial Submitted by a Reader or Subscriber on the Subject of 'What Our Town Needs Most.'"

The editorials submitted would be displayed in the windows with a picture or photo of the writers. Each week something new, novel or attractive would go into my windows, for I know this will help sell goods, as I call newspaper circulation, and secure many new subscribers as well.

Many people have but a faint idea of just what newsprint is and what it consists of. Make arrangements with your paper house to exhibit paper from the pulp to the finished state, with a fitting explanation of each process. Pictures of the paper mills, the forest from which the tree was felled, the way the rolls are shipped and other interesting details would not be omitted, for I know the more attractive the windows can be made, the more "goods" I will sell and friends I shall make.

At night I would darken the windows and show a series of slides entitled, "The Making of a Newspaper." In fact, each week something that would cause people to stop, look and become interested would be my aim instead of allowing windows to remain idle.

A little thought, then a little action, plus a little labor would at once compel the average newspaper man to understand that to allow the windows of his plant or office to remain idle is a commercial crime that would not for one instant be allowed by any other class of merchants.

After all is said and done the merchandise a newspaper has to sell is sold to the same classes as patronize the store, the people whom Abraham Lincoln said, "God must love or he wouldn't have made so many of them."

Another attraction that would help create desire for the paper would be a photograph gallery of old-time subscribers and with each photo shown, the name of the subscriber, how long the paper has been taken by them, also the number of editions bought in the years the subscriber has been on the list. This could be supplemented at times by an exhibition of the oldest in years, the youngest, the one taking the paper from the furthest point in miles and other details of a like nature. The run of the press could be posted each day, together with a prize offering for the person who comes the closest to guessing the next day's run, something like the log prize aboard a steamer.

Yes, all it needs is a little thought and attention to make that unused, or but partially efficient, window pay a dividend far in excess of what you thought it was worth.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

"PRESS TIME"

I want to be back where the presses are humm-in',
A-hoppin' about in the bustle an' din;
I want to be there, where the "copy" keeps comin'—
An' everyone's hustlin'—busy as sin!
I want to be back, where the printers are pluggin'—
The ad-setter boys, an' the linotype men;
Where motors are whizzin', an' presses are chuggin'—
I want to be back on the old job again!

I want to be back, where the city room's swarmin',
With busy reporters a-hoppin' about;
The thought of it fills me with visions heart-warmin'—
The "boys"—and the paper they've got to get out!
The telephones ringin', an typewriters clickin';
The copy-boys runnin' about, to an' fro;
By golly, the thought of it makes my heart quicken—
Yep, back on the job—I am yearnin' to go!

'Way down in the press-room, the presses are feedin'—
A-eatin' up paper—a ton at a meal;
To give folks at breakfast, some breakfast-food readin';
The sad an' the bad—an' the good an' the real!
The pressmen are pluggin', to "run" the edition—
All covered with sweat, an' a coating o' ink;
To get out the paper on time, is their mission—
Just one little slip—an' things go on the blink!

I want to be back, where the night-shift is workin',
Beneath the white blaze o' the shimmerin' lights;
Where everyone's busy—an' nobody's shirkin'—
Gee! how my heart aches for those newspaper nights!
I want to be back, where the "copy" keeps comin'—
A-takin' my place with the type-settin' men,
Or hoppin' about, where the presses are humm-in'—
I want to be back on the old job again!

—JAMES EDWARD HUNGERFORD.

C. D. Jackson on Advisory Council

Clifton D. Jackson, secretary of the New York Advertising Club, has been appointed a member of the advisory council selected by Raymond T. Wilber, president of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Wilber is assistant to the general manager of the Commonwealth Steel Company of St. Louis. The other members of this council are Robert Condon, the American Telephone & Telegraph Company; Col. Reynolds, general secretary, the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, and J. H. Ihlder, the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Receiver Appointed for Paper

The Marshfield (Ore.) Southwestern Daily News has been placed in the hands of William Carver, a Salem, Ore., newspaper man, as receiver upon the application of Earl W. Murphy, manager of the paper acting in the interest of the stockholders.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

NEWS AND FEATURE SERVICES

Maintain Prestige—Create Circulation—Attract Advertising

NEWS SERVICES

(Via leased wire or laid down in New York, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Seattle, San Francisco or Los Angeles.)

PUBLIC LEDGER COMBINATION NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER FOREIGN NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER DOMESTIC NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER BUSINESS NEWS SERVICE.

FEATURE SERVICES:

FEATURE PAGES IN MAT: Daily—Human Interest Page. Weekly—Personality Page, Special Feature Page, Science Page, Short Story Page. COMICS: "Somebody's Stenog." (Hayward), Daily Strip and Weekly Page; "That Reminds Me" (Collins), "And Then He Changed His Mind" (Dunn), "Dumb-Bells" (Dunn), "The Crossing Cop" (John). CARTOONS: Sykes' Daily; "Follies of the Passing Show" (Hanlon), Weekly; "Children of Adam" (Rehse), Daily. FICTION: Daily and Weekly Detective and Mystery Serials; Hazel Deyo Batchelor's Daily Love-Problem Serials; Daily and Weekly Short Stories. RADIO FEATURE: "Radio in the Home" (Daily). MIDGET FEATURES of stick length: "Things You'll Love to Make," "Things for Boys to Make," "The Housewife's Idea Box," "What's What," "After-Dinner Tricks," "The Home in Good Taste," "How to Save When Shopping," "Cultivating Your Charm," "Famous Ghosts," "Favorite Recipes of Famous Women," "Sharpening Up Your Memory," "Guess Who?" "Pam's Paris Postals," "The Children's Hour," "History of Your Name," "Who-Why-What-When-Where?" "Human Curios," "What Are You Good For?" "Making More Money," "Daily Fun Hour," "Can You Tell?" "Correct English," "Read Your Character." HOME PAGE FEATURES: "A Daughter of Eve," "The Latest" (Paris Fashions), "Home Cooking," by Queen Victoria's cook, "As Woman to Woman," "Dreamland Adventures." SPORTS FEATURES: "The Sportfolio," "Wise Tennis Tips" (Tilden). PUZZLES, CUT-OUTS, TRICKS and MAGIC.

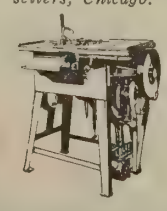
LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

51 Ludlows

Already in Use in Chicago Alone

YOU will be interested to know of the popularity of the Ludlow in its own home city. The Chicago market is "hard-boiled." Chicago buyers investigate, compile data, keep statistics, analyze and weigh the cold facts in the scale of business experience. Yet they do recognize new possibilities. When once convinced, they have the courage to buy.



Commercial Plants as Well as Newspapers

The Ludlow product gives the Daily News ad pages a decidedly improved appearance over hand composition. — Chicago Daily News.

We can set more type with $25 worth of mats than we can with $2,500 worth of foundry type—and in a great many cases we do away with electrotyping.—W. F. Hall Printing Company, Chicago.

We use it entirely for all display work in connection with our linotype. It saves us a lot of money each month.—W. H. Wilton, Chicago.

For our plant we consider the Ludlow an absolute necessity.—A to Z Typesetters, Chicago.

Small job shops, in every section of the city, are represented in this list. The Ludlow has found a home in the small job shop, without keyboard machines. They use it for all hand composition needs, including borders and spacing materials.

Big commercial printers are among our strongest supporters. Alongside a battery of keyboard machines and in the same shop with sorts casters, the Ludlow more than holds its own.

Big newspaper offices, like the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Daily News, find the Ludlow indispensable and use it for all-slug display. Five other newspapers in Chicago also use and recommend Ludlow equipment.

Trade composition shops, highly specialized and with facilities for judging, find the Ludlow a paying investment. In addition to heavy volume of usual work, they have dumped upon them all the freak jobs regular printers can't set. They set it and they sell complete composition out of the shop.

Manufacturers of tags, boxes, wall-paper, etc., use the Ludlow for imprinting their various products. Many more of these would find it a profitable investment.

The Ludlow is popular in its own home city; but there are few cities in the United States where installations are not in service.

Ask us, on your letterhead, for illustrated literature

Ludlow Typograph Company

2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago

Eastern Office: World Building, New York City

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION ABOVE 10 PT.

HEARST ADDS OAKLAND TO HIS LIST

Announced Purchase of Post-Enquirer on Aug. 26. With Charles S. Young as President of New Operating Company

Purchase of the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Enquirer by William Randolph Hearst from the Call Publishing Company was announced last Saturday by that paper, coincident with the appointment of Charles Sommers Young as its president, which was noted in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week. The entire second-section front page of the Aug. 26 issue was given over to announcement of the transaction; letters to Mr. Young from Mr. Hearst and John Francis Neylan, president of the San Francisco Call-Post, and former head of the Post-Enquirer; congratulations to Mr. Young from friends all over the United States; a list of the Hearst newspapers and magazines, and a cut of Mr. Hearst.

WILLIAM R. HEARST

The scond page was also filled with congratulations to Mr. Young, which were carried to fill the third page and another back page.

That the sale of the paper to Mr. Hearst's Star Holding Corporation of New York was a carefully-guarded secret until its publication is evidenced by the fact that not one of the congratulatory letters and telegrams to Mr. Young refers in any way to the new ownership of the paper. Mr. Hearst's letter to the new Post-Enquirer chief is dated at New York Aug. 25, but on that date the Hearst general management in New York declined to comment to EDITOR & PUBLISHER upon Mr. Young's appointment.

Mr. Young will be publisher of the paper as well as president of the newly formed Post-Enquirer Publishing Company, which pledges the city "an independent, and progressive American newspaper, devoted to the upbuilding of everything that is clean, wholesome and constructive in our civic life. From time to time there will be added to the Post-Enquirer's already attractive list of features many others which have helped to make the Hearst publications the most widely read in America."

The Post-Enquirer was organized last January, when the Post, owned by the San Francisco Call-Post interests, took over the Enquirer. It has been reported for many years that the San Francisco Call-Post and the Oakland Post were somehow connected with the Hearst group and this report was again circulated when the Enquirer was merged with the Post last winter. Hearst executives have refused to comment upon the report, however, and the paper has never been included in any published list of Hearst publications.

Their present roster is given in the Post-Enquirer of last Saturday as follows:

Six morning newspapers—New York American, Chicago Herald-Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Los Angeles Examiner, Boston Advertiser, Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Eight evening newspapers—New York Evening Journal, Chicago Evening American, Boston American, Detroit Times, Washington Times, Milwaukee Wisconsin News, Atlanta Georgian, Oakland Post-Enquirer.

Nine Sunday newspapers—New York American, Chicago Herald-Examiner, Boston Sunday Advertiser, San Francisco Examiner, Los Angeles Examiner, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Times, Atlanta Sunday American, Milwaukee Telegram.

Eight magazines—Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Hearst's International, Harper's Bazar, Motor Boating, Orchard & Farm, Nash's Magazine (London), Good Housekeeping (London), and Motor.

While the published list of magazines omitted Motor, the Hearst offices in New York state that the magazine is being published and that its non-appearance in the Post-Enquirer was through a typographical error.

HEARST PAPERS NOT BANNED

Windsor, Ont., Could Not Legally Bar Detroit Times

An attempt to bar Hearst publications, notably the newly acquired Detroit Times, from Windsor, Ont., failed last week, when the city council, asked to pass a banning resolution, was advised by the city's law department that such action would be illegal.

The Windsor finance committee, according to the Windsor Telegram of August 12, instructed the city clerk to take "necessary steps" to ban the Times from the Canadian city, which is directly across the river from Detroit.

The city clerk asked legal advice. He held that federal action would be necessary.

A letter from a James Oliver, addressed to the finance committee, was the cause of the attempt to ban the newspapers. Oliver charged that the Times published anti-British propaganda which "constituted a menace to Canadians."

Clubhouse for N. Y. Women Writers

The New York Newspaper Women's Club at a meeting several days ago decided upon permanent headquarters at 43 West 47th street. The club rooms were opened informally on the evening of September 1, when a number of members called to inspect their new quarters. The rooms are located in the same building with the Stage Door Inn, and the members use the restaurant operated by this organization.

Ahead of the "Flush" Year of 1920

In National Advertising

THE WASHINGTON TIMES

Washington, D. C.

Daily Evening Sunday Morning

Has not only beaten its 1921 record each month this year, but is far and away ahead of its 1920 record when all newspapers carried their largest volume of advertising.

During the first 6 months period of this year—compared to 1920—The Times showed a gain of 134,047 lines in National Advertising.

During the past 9 months—compared to the previous 9 months—The Times, in National Lineage, has shown a gain of 319,140 lines.

Local display advertising during the so-called "Slack" months of June and July, has shown bigger gains than during any of the 14 months previous period.

THE WASHINGTON TIMES

3c Daily, 10c Sunday

G. LOGAN PAYNE, Pub.

National Advertising Representative
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago, Detroit,
St. Louis and Los Angeles,

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH,
New York and Boston.

The Best Business Producer in Japan

First in News, Influence and Circulation Throughout the Far East

Morning and Evening Editions—Over a Million Copies

Established by the late Premier Okuma

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN

報知新聞

A Splendid Circulation

The Hochi Shimbun has had continuously since its establishment in 1872 the largest circulation in the Far East.

Oldest Evening and Morning Press

The Hochi Shimbun was the first newspaper in Japan to add an evening edition to its morning paper.

Advertising Rates

Per line	Y	1.25
Per Column	Y	170.00
Per inch	Y	12.50
Per page	Y	2,000.00

A Rich Field

There is no section of the Japanese buying community which is not reached by the Hochi Shimbun.

An Efficient Medium

The Hochi Shimbun is read extensively through Japan, Korea, Manchuria and Formosa, and is the foremost advertising medium.

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN SHA
TOKYO, JAPAN

THIS STORY WON'T INTEREST BIG CITY CLASSIFIED MANAGERS

At Least It's Not Written for Them—But It Tells the Small City Publisher How to Organize a Want-Ad Force and Create New Revenue

By C. L. PERKINS

Executive Secretary, Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers.

JUDGING from a letter recently received, perhaps the readers of this page of EDITOR & PUBLISHER who own or work on small daily newspapers have the idea that they are neglected because these articles have not dealt more specifically with the problem of developing want-ads in small communities. As a matter of fact the small publications have not been neglected, although not specifically mentioned, since the principle of developing want-ads is the same on all papers, regardless of size. The only difference is the smaller paper cannot carry on as extended operations as the classified departments in larger cities.

C. L. PERKINS

Now, to be specific, let's consider what the small daily newspaper could do to build the want-ad columns to an extent that would make them profitable from a cash-drawer standpoint and an asset as builders of reader-interest from the circulation standpoint.

Even the smallest daily can, beyond question, afford to have two people devoting their time to the development of classified. One person, perhaps a young lady spending all her time in the office, and the other acting as salesman on the outside.

Before starting this two-person organization certain things, however, should be done. One of these is to establish a fixed place in the paper for the want-ad columns. They should always appear in the same relative position in the paper so that readers may know where to find them. Probably the next to the last page of the paper is preferable as it is one of the four fixed pages and probably the only one on which it is possible to print want-ads.

Having determined on this page or a page, the next step should be determining the position of the want-ads on the page if they occupy les than a page. The best plan would be to make up the want-ads from the last column of the page and work toward the first column, particularly if the page selected for the want-ads is the odd-numbered page. Any portion of the page not filled by want-ads should not be given to display advertising but filled with news.

Another matter in which the smaller dailies are also very lax is their system of classifications. Of course, the paper in the smaller community and with only a page or less of classified does not need as many classifications as the mertopolitan daily. Some of the classifications used in large cities are products of large centers of population and would never be used in towns of a few thousand people. However, even the fewer classifications of the small paper should be logically determined and named and then arranged in a definite and proper sequence.

And under these headings the advertisement shoud be set in a definite style. This is not done on many of the smaller dailies. The word style used here does not refer to typography. but to composition of advertisements. A few years ago nearly all the papers started rental ads with the words "to rent," lost advertisements with the word "lost," for sale advertisements with the words "for sale," help wanted with the word "wanted," etc.

Today the tendency is to eliminate these unnecessary words, beginning lost advertisements with the name of the article lost, rental ads with the address of the property to rent, etc. This indexing together with the arranging of the advertisement in alphabetical order according to these index words is a great step forward in classified advertising and could be adopted by small papers as well as the large ones. Whether this method is adopted or not, some definite style should be consistently used.

Typography is another thing which should be given more consideration by publishers on small dailies. For want-ads they should use the smallest type available, thus getting as many lines to the column as possible, and increasing the revenue per column. A large percentage of the subscribers of the newspaper read all the news items and there is therefore a reason for setting them up in type that can be easily read. On the other hand, the average want-ad is unlikely to be read except by those people who want something, so the number of readers is comparatively few and the amount of reading each individual does is small, making it possible to use smaller type in the classified than the news column. While all may not agree on this subject, we hold the opinion that no paper, and particularly the small one, should break column rules or use cuts and large display type in its classified columns. However, certain advertisers wanting display can legitimately be satisfied without hurting the appearance or readability of the paper by using a light-faced type, two or three times as large as that used in the body of the want-ads. The paper setting its want-ads in 6-point, for example, could use twelve and eighteen point light-faced type without harming its columns.

Having done these things, that is, having a tangible definite service to sell, the next problem is the securing of orders. The small daily with a staff of two people, one inside and one out, has four channels of securing orders:

First—Direct personal selling by the man working outside.

Second—Telephone selling by the person working inside.

Third—Through circular letters, and,

Fourth—Through promotion advertising in the display columns of the paper.

The outside man can devote his time to those advertisers whose business warrants them in regularly using these columns, such as real estate dealers, used automobile brokers, and those who have services of various kinds to sell. On the telephone the operator can first call and seek renewals on ads that have expired. If there is a competing newspaper, she can also secure leads from that. In addition there is no reason why the small man should not profitably adopt a plan effectively used in large cities of calling frequently everyone in the telephone directory and explaining the use of the want-ad and suggesting ways whereby they can be made profitable.

The small daily can also profitably circularize everyone in its community frequently, perhaps once a month. The method of this direct-by-mail promotion cannot be set forth because it depends entirely upon conditions and circumstances.

The small daily certainly can use in as large a way as the metropolitan paper one method of want-ad building. That method is display advertising in its own columns. Publishers of small papers, as well as large, believe in the power of display advertising. They certainly sell it and tell their advertisers it will be profitable. They not only believe in it or should believe in it but they should also, being in the business, be experts in the use of space. Yet judging by the small amount of promotion space used to sell classified advertising, one might believe that the publishers of the small dailies, and the large ones too, do not believe in advertising. And judging from some of the promotion that appears one might judge that those who do believe in it do not know how to use it. It can and should be the greatest factor in the upbuilding of the want-ad section. The display columns of every paper should daily contain advertising setting forth reasons why people should buy and read want-ads.

All these things can be done and done profitably if the small publisher will realize that he can greatly increase his rate. Rates today on small papers are as a rule far too low. Publishers have determined their want-ad rates by the size of a paper's circulation rather than by the service want-ads render the advertisers. The small town want-ad that sells a thousand dollar used automobile, renders exactly the same service as a want-ad in a large daily which sells a thousand dollar used automobile. Therefore, rates should be increased to a point where the business is highly profitable and effort should be made to secure lineage.

45 YEARS OLD.

ON August 1, The Passaic Daily News celebrated the 45th anniversary of its birth.

From a precarious venture, with nothing but the unbounded faith of its founders to welcome it to its future, the paper has grown steadily and rapidly until this year it has surpassed every previous record of circulation and advertising lineage.

The Daily News today stands supreme in the esteem and confidence of the reading public and of the advertisers of Passaic and the surrounding territory.

OVER 10,000 NET PAID DAILY.

Passaic's Oldest Daily

DAILY NEWS

Passaic, New Jersey

ARCHITECTS WANTED

The publishers of a daily newspaper, which has just purchased a site for a new plant, have asked EDITOR & PUBLISHER to put them into touch with architects who may be able to help them secure the most efficient arangement of layout and equipment. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will be glad to forward to its inquirer any names submitted to it.

COURT ALLOWS RACING FORM

Michigan Judge Grants Injunction for Grosscup Publication

Entanglements about whether daily newspapers of Michigan can or cannot print racing results, which has been in several courts for the last few months, granting of an injunction restraining was given a new twist today with the police from interfering with Daily Racing Form, a race track publcation issued by Louis Grosscup.

The injunction will hold until the supreme court of this state rules on the constitutionality of a law prohibiting publication of race results, it is expected. Meantime newspapers are printing results and odds in full.

Lodi News Now a Daily

The Lodi (Cal.) News has been changed from a tri-weekly to a daily paper, with United Press service. Frank DeMille is the business manager and Delbert Rinfret the editor. It will be published six times a week.

C. M. PALMER

ANNOUNCES

THAT THIS DAY HE HAS ASSOCIATED WITH HIM

AS CO-PARTNERS

E. D. DEWITT

DEAN PALMER

UNDER THE FIRM NAME OF

PALMER, DEWITT & PALMER

WHO WILL CONTINUE THE BUSINESS OF

BUYING, SELLING AND APPRAISING NEWSPAPER

PROPERTIES WITH OFFICES AT

225 FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK CITY

New York, September 1, 1922

A. N. P. A. ISSUES RULES FOR PAPER SAVING

Conservation Committee Being Organized—Local Agreements Urged in Order to End Wasteful Competition

Organization of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association conservation committee is under way, under the direction of Chairman W. B. Bryant of the Paterson Press-Guardian, but no announcement of personnel will be made until the committee is complete.

Meanwhile the A. N. P. A. is urging its membership to reduce their consumption of newsprint and this week suggested several methods, in addition to the War Industries Board rules which it advocated making effective last week. It also presents statistics on the consumption and production of paper up to July 31, which have been given during the past few weeks by EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Its suggestions for paper conservation follow:

1. Discontinue the acceptance of the return of unsold copies.
2. Discontinue the use of all samples or free promotion copies.
3. Discontinue giving copies to anybody except for office-working copies or where required by statute law in the case of official advertising.
4. Discontinue giving free copies to advertisers, except not more than one copy each for checking purposes, and use tear sheets when possible.
5. Discontinue the arbitrary forcing of copies on newsdealers (i. e., compelling them to buy more copies than they can legitimately sell in order to hold certain territory).
6. Discontinue the buying back of papers at either wholesale or retail selling price from dealers or agents in order to secure preferential representation.
7. Discontinue publication of all extra editions—baseball and otherwise, except in most extraordinary events.
8. Discontinue free "write-ups" and eliminate the press agent.
9. Abolish use of premiums in canvassing or soliciting new subscribers.
10. Abolish prizes and contests as means of increasing circulation. Sell the paper on its merit of the best between the column rules—news, features and comics.
11. Secure local agreement on number of daily editions, also on time for first and last editions of both morning and evening papers.
12. Secure local agreement on uniform basis of allotment of news space daily and upon number of comic and magazine pages Sunday.
13. Systematic condensation of news so as to confine size to the least possible number of pages.
14. Standardize the page size for convenience in exchanging mats—column width 12½ ems pica, 8 columns to page, the A. N. P. A. standard, columns rules 5 point.
15. Refuse ads, or reduce their size, when their acceptance would necessitate four more pages in size of paper and making needless loose news space in consequence.
16. Reduce size of headlines, using fewer streamers.
17. Secure local agreement in each case when deviation from rate card rates is requested, for charity or any other purpose.
18. Keep records to show for every pound of paper used. This is of vital importance in keeping tab on waste.
19. Install a paper cutter and work up slabs of waste from rolls damaged in transit and turn this waste into a profit.
20. In unloading paper from cars, see that railroad representative signs for all rolls showing damage in transit, and collect for it from the railroad.

Drop in Canadian Paper Exports

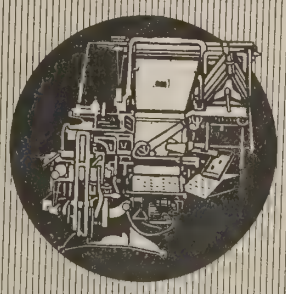
Canadian exports of pulp and paper during July of this year dropped to $9,738,252 as compared with $10,534,876 in June, according to a report just issued by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association. The figure, however, is still greater than that of July, 1921, which was $8,666,556.

TIMES SELLS TIDEWATER MILL

Perkins-Goodwin and Acer Syndicate Now Own Brooklyn Plant

Announcement was made this week of the sale of the Tidewater Paper Mill, Brooklyn, by the New York Times to a syndicate composed of the Perkins-Goodwin Company and the Acer Paper Sales Company, Inc. The sale is effective as of July 1, 1922. This mill was purchased by the Times in 1917 from the North American Pulp & Paper Companies, through the Perkins-Goodwin Company, as a safeguard against delay in deliveries of paper because of war-time emergencies, and has since been operated by the Times, turning out about 30,000 tons of newsprint a year.

Production above the Times' needs has been sold to other newspapers through the agency of the new owners and to their customers, whose future supply will be guaranteed under the present arrangement.



Active management of the mill will be in charge of John D. Coffin, vice-president of the Acer Paper Sales Company, and Arthur F. Allen will continue as manager of manufacturing. Finances will be in charge of F. W. Westlake, vice-president and treasurer of the Perkins-Goodwin Company. Sales will be handled by C. T. Rue of the Perkins-Goodwin Company, who will be vice-president and sales manager of the new organization. This company will be incorporated as a holding organization under the name of Tidewater Paper Mills Sales Corporation, and its officers, in addition to Mr. Rue, are:

President, J. D. Coffin; secretary, E. S. Pincott, of J. H. A. Acer & Co., Ltd., Montreal; treasurer, F. W. Westlake; chairman of the board, J. H. A. Acer, president of J. H. A. Acer & Co., Ltd., Montreal. These men, with Louis Calder, president of the Perkins-Goodwin Company, constitute the board of directors.

At the Times office it was stated that as Mr. Ochs was away no confirmation or denial of the sale would be made.

Haase Starts Own Service

Frederick Haase, until recently with the New York office of Nelson Chesman & Co., has opened a service agency of his own in New York.

INTERTYPE
"THE BETTER MACHINE"

See Our Page Next Week

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
805 Terminal Bldg., Brooklyn, N. Y.
548 Rand-McNally Bldg., Chicago
301 Glaslyn Bldg., Memphis
560-A Howard St., San Francisco
Canadian Agents:
Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.

Sell the Great State of Illinois with Daily Newspapers

Plan now to sell more goods in Illinois. The market is here ready and waiting.

Illinois daily newspapers are just like next door neighbors.

They are "home folks," regular visitors and are so neighborly that they are part of the daily life of the people of the community in which they are published.

Their advertising columns are read—and results are sure. Illinois people like to know of the new things and the old things too—and they like to know where those things are to be found.

Local merchants like to have their stores linked up with the merchandise they sell and a spirit of co-operation is generally produced by advertisers who go into a town via the home town newspaper.

These daily Illinois newspapers are doing great work for national advertisers every day.

		Circulation	Rate for 2,500 Lines	Rate for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	15,275	.055	.055
Bloomington Pantagraph	(M)	17,841	.05	.05
Chicago Herald-Examiner	(M)	395,861	.55	.55
Chicago Herald-Examiner	(S)	729,735	.85	.85
Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	117,483	.26	.24
Chicago Tribune	(M)	499,725	.70	.70
Chicago Tribune	(S)	827,028	1.00	1.00
*Moline Dispatch	(E)	9,165	.04	.04
*Peoria Journal-Transcript	(M&E)	30,993	.10	.09
Peoria Star	(E)	24,580	.075	.06
Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,022	.04	.04
Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,187	.03	.03

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

Adams-Pragoff Company, 24 Milk street, Boston. Reported will make up newspaper list in September for Minars Company, "Minards Liniment," Framingham, Mass.

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported will make up list of farm papers for James Vicks' Sons, seeds, St. Paul, Rochester and New York. Reported will make up list of farm papers in September for Dingee & Conard Company, plants, West Grove, Pa. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections for Armand Company, face powder, Des Moines, Iowa. Using 15 inches, across two columns, 6 times for Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Committee of the United States.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, 25 West 45th street, New York. Handling advertising for Kellogg's Products Company, "King Nut" butter, Buffalo, N. Y.

Thomas E. Basham Agency, Inter-Southern Life Bldg., Louisville, Ky. Making 5,000-line contracts for Axton-Fisher Tobacco Company.

George Batten Company, 381 4th avenue, New York. Making 8,064-line contracts for Elie Storage Battery Company. Making 52-time orders for Bell & Co. Will use New York City newspapers for Atlantic Macaroni Company, 295 Vernon avenue, Long Island City, N. Y.

Julian J. Behr, 12 East 6th street, Cincinnati. Making 5,000-line contracts for Burger Brothers.

Benson, Gamble & Slaten, Corn Exchange Bank Bldg., Chicago. Making yearly contracts for Parker Pens.

Thomas M. Bowers Company, 304 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Placing some advertising on the Morrison Hotel, Chicago.

Victor C. Breytspraak Company, 109 North Dearborn street. Reported will make up list of newspapers in September for General Laboratories, disinfectants, 950 South Dickinson street, Madison, Wis.

Emil Brisacher & Staff, Flood Bldg., San Francisco. Reported to be planning a newspaper campaign for California Health Company, "Zed" Cookies, San Francisco.

Chambers Agency, Maison-Blanche Bldg., New Orleans. Reported to be planning an advertising campaign in Southern newspapers for Van Antwerp Drug Corporation, "Soothe Skin Powder," Mobile, Ala.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Reported will make up list of newspapers in September for Goodform Manufacturing Company, Abdominal Supports, 1110 Locust street, St. Louis, Mo.

Witt K. Cochrane Agency, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Reported will make up newspaper list during September for Enoz Chemical Company, "Enoz" and "Vico" moth powder, 705 North Wells street, Chicago.

Critchfield & Co., Brooks Bldg., Chicago. Handling the following accounts: Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Cudahy, Wis., and Scolding Lock Hairpin Company, Appleton, Wis. Using 672 lines, once for Oldfield Tire Company.

D'Arcy Advertising Company, International Life Bldg., St. Louis. Making 2,000-line contracts with newspapers in selected sections for Brevard Light Company (Anderson Sales Company), Lighting System, St. Louis.

Dauchy Company, 9 Murray street, New York City. Reported will make up newspaper list in September for Kenyon & Thomas, "Dr. Hale's Household Ointment," Adams, N. Y. Will make up lists in September for the Genesee Pure Food Company, Le Roy, N. Y.

Dorland Advertising Agency, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Using 60 and 30 inches, 4 times in September for Tuxedo Tobacco.

A. E. Dupell Advertising Agency, 752 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Placing account for Dr. Charles Flesh Food Company, 752 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

George L. Dyer Company, 42 Broadway, New York. Making contracts and placing schedules with newspapers in various sections for A. Allen Company, hosiery, Kenosha, Wis.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Making yearly contracts for Graham Bros.' Soap. Making 7,000-line contracts for Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company. Making 5,000-line contracts for Barbasol Company. Will make up list for Reserve Remedy Company, Cleveland, "Musterole." Making 5,000-line contracts for Fairfield & Co., "Cleero."

Essex Rubber Company, Trenton, N. J. Places account direct and usually makes up list in Fall.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Reports will start newspaper campaign for Cushman's Sons, Inc., bakers, New York.

Richard A. Foley Agency, Terminal Bldg., Philadelphia. Sending out 24 schedules for 24-time orders to start in November for William H. Luden's Cough Drops.

Gardner-Glen Buck Company, 1627 Locust street, St. Louis. Making yearly contracts with farm papers for Fouke Fur Company.

A. O. Goodwin, Inc., 19 West 44th street, New York and Central National Bank Bldg., Richmond, Va. Reported to be planning an advertising campaign for the Owl Head Light Screen Company, Norfolk, Va.

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, 15 West 37th street, New York. Reported to be preparing newspaper campaign for Duz Company, Inc., "Duz" washing powder, 799 Greenwich street, New York and Miller Refining Company, "Miller's Prepared Chocolate," New York.

Grandin, Dorrance, Sullivan, Inc., 130 West 32nd street, New York. Making yearly contracts for the Studebaker Corporation.

F. A. Gray Advertising Company, Gray Bldg., Kansas City. Making 10,000-line contracts for Marathon Tire Company.

Guenther-Bradford & Co., Inc., 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Making 2,800-line contracts for George H. Mayr.

Gundlach Advertising Company, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Using 28 lines, 6 times for Heineman Brothers.

Hanff-Metzger, Inc., 95 Madison avenue, New York. Making contracts and sending out schedules for the Whistle Company of America.

Hanly Agency, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Has obtained account of General Box Corporation, Chicago.

Hewitt, Gannon & Co., 52 Vanderbilt avenue, New York. Reported will extend newspaper campaign in the New York district for J. Stern's Sons, "Insectago" and "Red Top," 301 East 94th street, New York.

Henri, Hurst & McDonald, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Handling account for Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Hill-Winston Company, 19 West 44th street, New York. Will make up lists in November for the H. Black Company, Cleveland.

E. T. Howard Company, 117 West 46th street, New York. Placing copy with newspapers in various sections for L. E. Waterman Company, "Ideal Fountain Pens," 191 Broadway, New York.

Hoyt's Service, Hanna Bldg., Cleveland. Placing accounts for Reznor Manufacturing Company, Mercer, Pa., Beaut Laboratories, Cleveland; Marshall-Gerken Company, Toledo, manufacturer of radio accessories.

Humphrey's Homeopathic Medicine, 156 William street, New York. Placing account direct and making up newspaper list.

Johnson-Dallis Company, Greenfield Bldg., Atlanta. Making 10,000-line contracts for the Southern Railroad Company.

Johnson-Read & Co., 202 South State street, Chicago. Reported will make up list of newspapers in September for Phillipsborn, Inc., clothing, 501 South Paulina street, Chicago.

Wylie B. Jones Agency, 107 Chenango street, Binghamton, N. Y. Making 2,800-line contracts for Norma.

Kirtland-Engel Company, 646 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will make up lists in September for C. E. Whitten & Son, Bridgman, Mich.

Lees Company, Inc., Sloan Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio. Placing orders with newspapers in various sections for Warren Refining & Chemical Company, "Warco" Motor Oil, Cleveland, and 291 East 137th street, New York.

H. E. Lesan Advertising Agency, 440 4th avenue, New York. Renewing some newspaper contracts for Swansdown Knitting Company, 349 Broadway, New York.

Lord & Thomas, Wrigley Bldg., Chicago. Reported will make up list of newspapers for C. A. Gambrill Manufacturing Company, "Pat-A-Cake," Baltimore, Md.

Lyddon & Hanford, 200 Fifth avenue, New York. Placing account for United Motor Products Company, "United Highway Special" auto truck, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Theodore F. MacManus, 82 Hancock avenue, East, Detroit. Making 1,000-line contracts for Hupp Motor Car Corporation. Making 2,800-line contracts for Maxwell-Chalmers.

Magin-Robinson Company, Lincoln Bldg., Louisville, Ky. Making 500-line contracts for Peaslee-Gaulbert Company.

Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Agency, 215 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Orders and contracts going out in Texas on the Premier Supply.

O. J. McClure Advertising Agency, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. Placing orders with some Middle West newspapers for Haskins Brothers & Co., "Petrolene" laundry soap, Sioux City, Iowa.

McJunkin Advertising Agency, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Have secured the account of the H. D. Saal Company, Chicago (Saal Oil Shooter).

Homer McKee Company, Kahn Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. Reported will use newspapers to back up local distributors for Real Silk Hosiery Mills, Indianapolis, Ind.

Robert M. McMullen Company, 522 5th avenue, New York. Making yearly contracts with farm papers for Products of Standard Milling Company.

Merrill, Price & Co., Wrigley Bldg., Chicago. Making 1,000-line contracts with newspapers for French Battery and Carbon Company, flashlights, Madison, Wis.

Paul Moffett Company, 303 Old Cassily Block, Canton, Ohio. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Gordon Tire & Rubber Company.

Morse International Agency, 449 4th avenue, New York. Making yearly contracts for Potter Drug & Chemical Company.

Mumm-Romer Company, 314 East Broad street, Columbus, Ohio. Reported will make up list of farm papers in September for Roderick Lean Manufacturing Company, farm implements, Mansfield, Ohio.

Mutual Service Corporation, 140 Cedar street, New York. Reported to be planning campaign for Michico, Inc., Michigan Grape Growers' Association.

P. F. O'Keefe Advertising Agency, 45 Bromfield street, Boston. Again placing orders with newspapers in various sections of Landers, Frary & Clark, hardware, New Britain, Conn.

Patterson-Andress Company, 1 Madison avenue, New York. Making 5,000-line contracts for the Franklin Automobile Company.

Harry D. Phillips, 19 West 34th street, New York. Handling account for J. A. Migel, Inc., "Moon Glo," "Migel," "Pieretts" and "Tally Ho" silks.

Potts-Turnbull Company, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Have secured acount of the Jones Dairy Farm. Campaign being planned to advertise "Jones Meat Products." Sending out orders and contracts on the Portland Cement Association.

Frank Presbrey Company, 456 4th avenue, New York. Making 10,000-line contracts for the R. & G. Corset Company.

Redfield Advertising Agency, 33 West 34th street, New York. Making 2,000-line contracts for American Lead Pencils.

Frank Seaman Company, 470 4th avenue, New York. Will make up lists in the Fall for the Mint Products Company, Port Chester, N. Y., "Life Savers." Making 1,500-line contract for E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co. Reported will make up lists of farm papers in September for Joseph & Feiss Company, "Clothcraft" clothes, 2149 West 53rd street Cleveland.

Russell M. Seeds Company, 330 University square, Indianapolis. Reported will make up list of newspapers in September for Milk Emulsion Company, Terre Haute, Ind.

Sehl Advertising Agency, 139 North Clark street, Chicago. Orders and contracts going out generally on Calumet Baking Powder Company.

J. William, Sheets, Inc., Central Bldg., Seattle, Wash. Placing readers with newspapers in selected sections for Golden Glint Shampoo.

Snitzler-Warner Company, 225 North Michigan Blvd., Chicago. Making 2,800-line contracts for the Glidden Nut Butter Co. Making 5,000-line contracts for R. L. Watkins.

Stack Advertising Agency, 29 East Madison street, Chicago. Sending out general orders and contracts on Swift & Co.

Stalker Advertising Agency, Nasby Bldg., Toledo, Ohio. Reported will make up list of farm papers in September for Rowe Sanitary Manufacturing Company, Detroit.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 242 Madison avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers that have rotogravure sections for Fleischmann Company, yeast, 701 Washington street, New York. Making 500-line contracts for Andrew Jergens Company.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 14 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts for Horlick's Malted Milk, Racine, Wis.

Tracy-Parry Company, LaFayette Bldg., Philadelphia. Making 5,000-line contracts for the International Proprietaries, Inc.

United States Advertising Corporation, 141 Madison, avenue, Toledo. Renewing some newspaper contracts for Willys Overland Motor Car Company, Toledo, Ohio.

Wade Advertising Agency, 37 West Van Buren street, Chicago. Will make up list for Keystone Steel & Wire Company, Peoria.

Wales Advertising Agency, 141 West 36th street, New York. Making 3,000-line contracts for the Crown Corset Company.

Wales Advertising Agency, 141 West 36th street, New York. Making 2,000-line contracts for Anderson Motor Company, Rock Hill, S. C.

Williams & Cunnyngham, Inc., 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Will make up lists in September for the Baker-Vawter Company, Benton Harbor, Mich.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Reported to be handling account for Cornell Wood Products Company, wall board, Chicago.

Williams & Cunnyngham Agency, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing orders on Lambert Pharmical Company.

Williams & Saylor, 450 4th avenue, New York. Making 5,000-line yearly contracts for the Sun River Company.

Beginning September 11

THE SCIENCE NEWS BULLETIN

will be

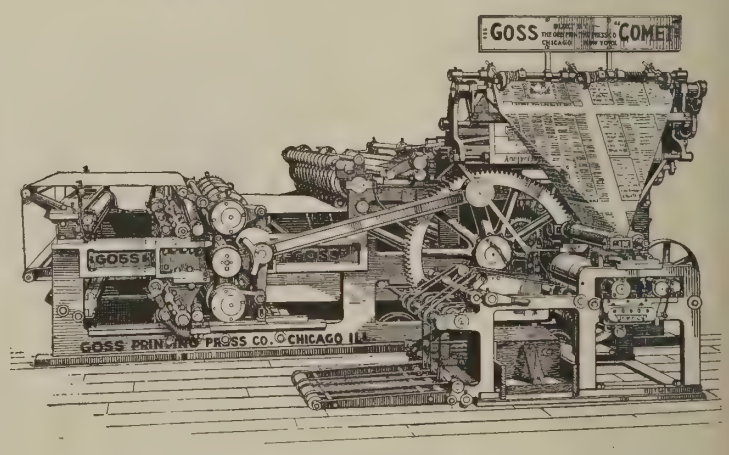
MAILED DAILY

instead of weekly

(with no increase in rates)

Forty Clients Now Receive This Service That Brings Science To

The Man In The Street



Wire for trial report

SCIENCE SERVICE

1115 Connecticut Ave., N. W.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

GOSS

COMET FLAT BED PRESS

Prints 4-6 and 8 Page Papers

From Type Forms and Roll Paper.
A 5 Horse Power Motor will drive it.

Now Being Built for Early Delivery

Write for Literature and Prices

THE GOSS PRINTING PRESS CO.

Main Office and Works: 1535 So. Paulina St., Chicago
New York Office: 220 W. Forty-second St.

HE'S ONLY A NEWSPAPER MAN, WHAT DOES HE KNOW OF BUSINESS!

Analysis of an Oft-Repeated Public Assertion Shows Newspaper Work Combines Every Element of Manufacturing and a Knowledge of Human Nature Besides

By JOHN LATHROP

IN a recent election nearby New York City, a personally respected newspaper man was nominated for a municipal office in which, if elected, he would have to do with the fiscal and other business of that municipality. Immediately he was nominated, his opponent, a successful merchant, declared that the other nominee was "only a newspaper man. What did he know of business?"

Hearing this declaration in a campaign meeting, I asked the newspaper man, after the close of the meeting, these questions:

"What is your function in newspaper work? Have you succeeded in your business? How long have you conducted it?"

"For twenty years," he replied, "I have been the publisher of my daily newspaper in this city. I have made it a profitable concern. I have paid every obligation. I have never had a note go to protest. My credit is good at the bank and with the supply houses."

It led me to some mental speculation as to this: What is a successful newspaper publisher? What is his business, when you take it to pieces and look at the several parts? Is it justified, after that process of analysis, to assert:

That the successful daily newspaper publisher is competent to claim classification among the men who speak with authority on national business affairs, on the basis of his experiences in his own business?

And, talking with various men high up in the daily newspaper publishing world, these were the conclusions:

I. The successful daily newspaper publisher is a manufacturer, with all of the problems that face any other manufacturer, and some that are peculiar to the publishing business.

II. He is compelled to possess a sense of literary values, in order properly to supervise the editorial department.

III. He is and must be always a correct judge of the state of the public mind, for upon that fluxing and flowing and mercurial thing his very business existence depends.

IV. He is and must be, according to his conceptions, a servant of the public good; for, unless he convince and freshen that conviction every day, in the minds of a given portion of the newspaper reading public, that he is conserving the public good, he will lose his following and his business will die the death.

V. He is a salesman who must find his clientele among the millions of mental fictions and opinions and prejudices and peculiarities of the people at large.

VI. He is, above all, day by day, the explorer of an unknown sea, the traveler across an unknown land, the analyzer of inter-relation of social forces which are a combination of a trillion of the minutiæ of humanity's component elements.

VII. He must be a diplomat, a statesman, an economist, patient but iron-rigid in determination, courageous yet not blustering, and persistent to a degree—for never may he lessen the intensity of his endeavor, the price of his success, no less than that of liberty, being "eternal vigilance."

VIII. And, above all else, the successful newspaper publisher, who through a cycle of years carries on with undiminished force and readjustment to the changing conditions, must be a man of vision—peering far into the future, sensing with keen intuition that which is to be, socially, politically, economically and from the standpoint of the patriot.

A Manufacturer? Each 24 hours, he utilizes tons of newsprint paper, bought in a changing market, which must be transported by rail or water, trucked through the streets, and arrive at the printing plant in just those quantities and at just those hours when they are needed—for he cannot store his paper supplies in a warehouse as may most other manufacturers.

He must bring this newsprint to his plant, accompanied by an adequate supply of inks, black and colored, which also must be bought in a changing market and be subject as to quality and time of delivery to all the vicissitudes of his own and the other manufacturers' troubles.

He must possess and maintain and operate a most expensive factory, into which every factor enters which makes up the operations of other manufacturers. This plant must be up-to-date, and maintained in that state of efficiency which will insure evenness of production—for time, tide and press-time wait on no man.

He must deal with labor in practically every branch—pressmen, machinists, compositors, stereotypers, electrotypers, engineers, firemen, paper handlers, engravers, mailers, drivers of trucks, bookkeepers, clerks, collectors and a dozen other kinds.

A salesman? He must sell every day on short time orders thousands and thousands of individual pieces of his product. He must get the product to his customers with such speed as no other manufacturer-salesman must attain. He must collect for his product from thousands of customers—agents and subscribers and the fleeting buyer on the street and in the public place.

But he sells more than the finished manufactured material product. For the newspaper publisher is a salesman of advertising space, which he must fit as to price to the cost of production and the ability of the other business man to pay. To do this, he must maintain a staff of keen, expert, efficient solicitors and "ad" writers, with such a man over them as is competent to judge as to what kind and how much of advertising space a

(Continued on page 33)

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Huber's ROTOGRAVURE INKS

Are free from Sediment

HUBER'S Colors in use since 1780

J.M. Huber

Main Office

65 W. HOUSTON ST., NEW YORK

It Pays to Huber-ize

One of the striking characteristics of West Virginia cities is the newness of everything. They are not made over cities. They are new. No reconstruction—rather construction. New buildings—new stores—new hotels—new pavements—new homes—and everything up to the last minute in up to dateness.

This is particularly noticeable to one who is accustomed to seeing remodeled things.

It is typical of West Virginia. Everything must be modern.

Such a territory is a good territory to sell modern merchandise in.

These West Virginia daily newspapers are reaching the modern thinking people in this splendid territory.

Use them to put your goods where they will sell.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
††Telegraph	(M)	10,183	.025
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	18,777	.06
*Gazette	(S)	22,359	.07
Clarksburg
†Exponent	(M&S)	7,879	.035
*Telegram	(E)	7,822	.035
*Telegram	(S)	18,042	.035
Fairmont
*Times	(M)	6,881	.03
Huntington
†Advertiser	(E)	10,635	.035
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	12,523	.035
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	12,559	.035
Martinsburg
†Journal	(E)	4,086	.03
Parkersburg
†News	(M)	5,568	.025
†News	(S)	6,366	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	6,419	.024

†Government Statement, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Report, April 1, 1922.

††Publishers' Statement.

EDITORIAL

RESPONSIBILITY OF LABOR

LAWLESS union labor received its biggest setback in England last month when the Newcastle Police Court gave judgment for twenty-five shillings agreed damages and costs against each of the ninety-seven members of the Typographical Association of Great Britain, who were defendants in an action brought by the Newcastle Chronicle, Limited, and the Mail and Leader, Limited, both morning and evening papers published in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Northumberland County, England, a city of about a quarter of a million population.

The decision is so seriously regarded by union labor that Mr. Robert Smillie, one of the real great labor leaders of Great Britain, is urging the labor movement to support the printers and carry the case to the High Court, for the issue involved is vital to their cause.

Briefly, the printers took advantage of a clause in their contract with the publishers for an appeal to the Industrial Court on the question of wages. The Court, contrary to expectations, reduced wages. The printers left employment without proper notice—in other words, joined the ranks of the vacationists. The court holds that they had no legal right to do this and gave agreed damages and costs against each defendant, holding that they were bound by the national agreement.

The questions at issue on appeal in Great Britain resemble, in some respect, the questions adjudicated recently by the unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court in the case of the United Mine Workers of America vs. Coronado Coal Company.

That celebrated decision is not generally understood. Contrary to general opinion it does not deal a death blow to unionism. It does not directly or indirectly prohibit strikes. It does not hold the unions responsible for all damages caused by strikes. But what does it accomplish, you ask? Does it hold the unions liable only when strikes are accompanied by acts of violence? Are any restrictions placed upon the right of the union to bring about strikes, to enforce the demands of its members as to wages, hours or working conditions, and if so, to what extent? Generally speaking, the decision does not answer these questions, but it does give added force and impetus to the "rule of reason" enunciated by the late Chief Justice White and it opens wide the doors of all of our Federal Courts to suits against labor unions in all cases where, by reason of the statute involved or diversity of citizenship, the Federal Courts have jurisdiction. It does mean that the unions are amenable to the law just as employers and citizens are amenable to the law. It does mean that they must answer to the law. It does mean that they are not above the law but on the contrary, subject to the law and must be law abiding. It is also probable that some of the State Courts influenced by the soundness of this new social policy will reach a similar conclusion.

The net result of it will be, let us hope, that labor unions, finding responsibility is no longer optional and cannot be escaped by remaining unincorporated, will seek the advantages of incorporation for much the same reasons that business men incorporate. A sharp line of distinction will then be drawn between union funds for benevolent purposes and funds raised for strikes, and the two funds will not be transferable. Unions' responsibility for the conduct of their strikes being determined, they will closely supervise and control them. The more responsible unions, and particularly the national organizations with large incomes and accumulated funds which are dependent on continued existence to preserve their prestige, will be obliged to exercise great care in the selection of officers to conduct their activities.

That is the virtue of responsibility and it may lead to the development of a better unionism.

JULY advertising statistics for 124 newspapers in 28 cities tell of a 5.9 per cent gain over last year. Only four cities fell behind their 1921 totals for the month. This is a decisive indication that the business trend is upward and that autumn demands for newsprint will foster a runaway market unless waste of paper is stopped from now on.

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

COMPILED BY CHARLES W. MILLER
Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald

O SING unto the Lord a new song; sing unto the Lord, all the earth. Sing unto the Lord, bless His Name; shew forth His salvation from day to day. Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad; let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice Before the Lord: for He cometh to judge the earth: He shall judge the world with righteousness, and the people with His truth.—(Ps. xcvi:1-2, 11-13).

HELPFUL SERVICE

THE value of the added service feature in last week's issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, in which the population, circulations, rates and lineage of 347 newspapers were visualized, has been at once appreciated by the space buyers in whose interest it was primarily prepared. It associates for the first time in one compilation the known factors that the space buyer weighs and evaluates, giving him a close-up, quick service view of the cost of a newspaper campaign in any or all of the cities listed and an appreciation of the service he will obtain through the use of the newspapers' advertising space. It makes it possible also for the space buyer to devote more of his time to the weighing of those intangible qualities of the newspaper and its market that need to be studied and carefully appraised if one would secure 100 per cent return on his newspaper investment.

The value of the feature to newspaper executives for comparative analysis and contrasts is apparent. A study of the figures discloses to what extent competition is controlling in the matter of rates and the policies of publishers with respect to their esteemed contemporaries.

We are grateful for the words of praise that have reached us this week in appreciation of the service EDITOR & PUBLISHER is performing and would respectfully request suggestions that our clientele may have to offer as to how we may make the next compilation of that character scheduled for the Year Book to be issued at the end of January, even more helpful and serviceable.

AMERICAN JAPAN EDITION

AMERICAN-JAPAN Edition of the Japan Advertiser, B. W. Fleisher's daily newspaper issued in Tokyo in English on the occasion of the visit to Tokyo of Secretary Denby's party, is a notable contribution to American-Japanese friendship and, as a bit of newspaper making, is superb. Attractively embellished with all of the latest art layout treatment of 120-line screen cuts, printed on super-calendered paper with a cover in colors, red, white and blue, it would do credit to any American printshop. But the achievement grows in importance as one considers that the composition was by native Japanese under American editorial direction.

The edition consists of 34 pages with 12 pages of paid advertising and 8 pages of pictures. Among the contributors of special signed articles were the Secretaries of State and the Navy, the American Ambassador, Judge Elbert H. Gary and Viscounts Kato and Shibusawa.

Among the American advertisers were Standard Oil, Ford Motor Company and the Philadelphia Public Ledger; the latter's page advertisement stated that the circulation of the Public Ledger had increased in nine years from 45,000 to 260,000 copies.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER congratulates most heartily Mr. Fleisher and the staff of the Japan Advertiser upon this noteworthy accomplishment.

THE INKY WAY

DIFFUSION of knowledge and intelligenc amongst the people was the primary purpos of the Congress in making provision for postage rate for newspapers and periodicals of penny a pound. That this policy was perfectl sound has been demonstrated in many ways. In deed, the high average of intelligence of ou people is due to their ability to secure neces sary and helpful information at a price they coul afford to pay for it and to the wisdom of the found ing fathers of the Republic who gave us freedo of the press, religious liberty and compulsory educa tion. But who could have imagined the tremendo development of the art of printing? Who could hav foreseen that the highway of intelligence and th market place of the nation would develop to suc a degree through the use of type and ink?

Every man, woman and child in the nation wi this year invest an average of $15 per head in new papers, periodicals, books, class, trade and technic journals, printed matter and stationery of all sort This is what the Inky Way means to the people as whole. Or if you prefer, let us put it in anoth way. Let us say that the per capita publicity ta of the people in the year 1922 will amount to $1 This small investment returns a handsome rate interest to the people in a multitude of ways that a at once altogether obvious. But at $15 per hea the sum invested in the Inky Way will this ye aggregate the enormous total of more than one a a half billions of dollars.

Roughly, newspapers will receive approximate $6 of the $15 or more than six hundred millions dollars. Book, stationery and job printing shops w also receive $6 of the $15 or more than six hundr millions of dollars, whilst magazines, periodica medical, technical and trade papers will receive a proximately $3 or over three hundred millions dollars.

FUNERAL OF LORD NORTHCLIFFE

FUNERAL services of Lord Northcliffe in Wes minster Abbey and the scenes in and arou the ancient cathedral are fully described pages 12, 13 and 14 of the London Times of Frid August 18th, that has just been received at t offices of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Page 12 is giv over to pictures of the funeral cortege, notables tending the services, and of the multitudes of pe ple at different points in the city paying a striki tribute to his memory by their attitude of reverer and respect. Pages 13 and 14 are devoted to editorial appreciation of his hold upon his pub and their admiration of him as well as a charc drawing of the scene in the abbey, a story of services and a description of the scenes along route of seven miles to the cemetery through a pr tically unbroken avenue of reverent spectators.

As early as eight o'clock in the morning, the Tim says, people gathered at the doors of the ancie abbey.

It is said to have been the largest crowd e seen in and around the cathedral—even larger th the war ceremonials. The list of senders of flo gifts occupied a column and a half in the Times.

POSTAL ESTABLISHMENT

THE latest available information regarding t postal establishment reveals that 252,756 peo are regularly employed and 80,485 persons indirectly connected with the business of mail d tribution.

There are 51,948 postmasters of all grades follows: First class, 834; second class, 2,808; th class, 10,407; fourth class, 37,899. The assist postmasters number 2,730; clerks, 56,118; city a village carriers, 40,591; post office inspectors, 4 substitute clerks, 11,283; substitute carriers, 10,7 special delivery messengers, 3,500; railway pos clerks, 19,659; substitute R. P. O. clerks, 2,419; mail employees, 345; rural carriers, 44,086; mo vehicle employees, 3,177; mail messengers, 13,1 star route contractors, 10,766; steam boat contract 273, and post office department proper at Washingt 1,917.

PERSONAL

ROBERT R. McCORMICK, co-editor of the Chicago Tribune, who has returned to Quebec from an inspection trip of the Tribune's timber limits on the Gulf of the St. Lawrence, announces that he intends going through to Chicago by airplane.

Herbert F. Gunnison, publisher of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, New York State's delegate to the Brazilian Centennial, and the party of Brooklyn Daily Eagle tourists, after spending a week in Buenos Ayres, has gone to Montevideo, Uruguay.

Dean Walter Williams and Frank L. Martin of the University of Missouri School of Journalism have collaborated on the preparation of a new book, "The Practice of Journalism," just published by the Missouri Book Company at Columbia, Mo.

Maj. Frank Knox, editor of the Manchester (N. H.) Union, was recently elected president of the New Hampshire Veterans' Association at its annual meeting.

William C. Reick, publisher of the New York Journal of Commerce, is in San Francisco on his first visit to the Pacific Coast.

Maj. C. E. Whipple, manager of the Hagerstown (Md.) Herald-Mail. is at the citizens' military camp at Camp Meade.

George V. Sheridan, former publisher of the Springfield (Ohio) Morning Sun, has been elected executive director of the Ohio State Council of Retail Merchants.

H. C. Adler, publisher of the Chattanooga Times and brother-in-law of Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, has recently been in the Pacific Northwest, returning to his home via California.

Pierce C. Starr, head of the Starr Service Corps, sailed recently to consult with London newspaper proprietors and publishers.

Val Peter, editor of the Omaha Tribune, and Mrs. Peter, have returned after three months spent traveling in Europe. They attended the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

FRANK SARTWELL of the Washington Post, who was seriously injured July 2 in an automobile accident near Frederick, Md., while attempting to overtake President Harding's party en route to Gettysburg, has virtually recovered. He still uses a cane, but his lameness will not prove permanent.

Riley W. Weaver, formerly editor of the Sedgwick (Kan.) Pantagraph, but recently a reporter on the Kansas City Star, has been made secretary of the Alumni association of the Kansas State Agricultural College, succeeding Cliff J. Sutton, who returns to the Topeka State Capital.

Wilson Hicks, of the Kansas City Star staff, has resigned and will sail for Sidney N. S. W. about the middle of September to join his brother, John W. Hicks, Jr., Australian managing director of the Famous Players-Lasky Film Corporation.

J. W. Durham, managing editor of the Spokane Spokesman-Review, spoke recently before the Intermediate Rate Association at Salt Lake City.

Ellis Holums, city editor of the Jacksonville Metropolis prior to its sale and merge of name to the Journal, has become state editor of the Miami (Fla.) Herald, succeeding J. C. Baskerville, who has joined the staff of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel as telegraph editor.

A. J. West is the new editor of the Windsor (Ont.) Telegram.

Thomas Fay has resigned as police court reporter for the Springfield (Ohio) Sunday News and has returned to New Orleans.

Miss Frances C. Boardman will return to the St. Paul Daily News Oct. 1 to resume drama criticism after a year spent on the Denver Express.

Sherman A. Cuneo, chief of the publicity department, Prohibition Unit, Internal Revenue, expects his book, "From Printer to President," a biography of President Harding, will be published by Dorrance & Co., Philadelphia, shortly.

Percival F. H. Winner, formerly of the staff of the Paris Evening Telegram, has returned to New York, where he was born and did newspaper work before going abroad.

Arthur E. Payne has resigned from the editorial staff of the Jamestown (N. Y.) Morning Post, to join the Foamite-Childs Corporation, Utica.

Ed Burns, who was a Chicago Tribune artist before the war, has rejoined the staff as a reporter. He was formerly on the old Chicago Herald.

Miss Mary McGoorty, daughter of Judge McGoorty of Chicago, is a new reporter on the Chicago Daily Journal.

John Steger, former copy boy for the Chicago Tribune, is now a photographer in that paper's photo-bureau.

Lawrence Eastman of the copy and art service section of the Chicago Tribune recently became the father of a baby girl, his second daughter.

William Stuart Hill, who formerly covered the Court House and politics for the Miami (Fla.) Herald, is now with the advertising department of the paper.

C. H. Johnson has been promoted to morning asistant city editor of the Detroit Times.

Horace F. Wulf, a reporter on the Sioux City (Iowa) Tribune, has been named a delegate to the Iowa State convention of the American Legion.

J. E. O'Phelan, formerly sports editor of the Regina (Sask.) Leader, has joined the copy desk force of the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Marvin Ferree, formerly of the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, is reading copy for the St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Cecil Lamont has left the Winnipeg Free Press to read copy on the St. Paul Dispatch.

Richard N. Heath, for five years a reporter for the Detroit Free Press, has resigned to become advertising manager of the "Square Deal" Miller jewelry store, Detroit.

Olaf A. Olsson, district man on the staff of the Lynn (Mass.) Item, and Miss Mildred G. Cochran have announced their engagement.

W. T. Stott, for many years in charge of Sunday features on the San Francisco Examiner, has left newspaper work to be head of publicity work for the National Paint, Oil and Varnish Manufacturers' Association.

Leroy F. Hennessy, for many years on the staff of the Chicago Evening American, has resigned to go with a Chicago picture studio.

Marvin Walker, formerly with the Tampa Tribune, has returned to the staff.

Frank Hale, formerly managing editor of the now defunct Winter Park Florida Post and lately of the staff of the Tampa Tribune, is now on the Fort Smith (Ark.) Times-Record.

Thomas R. Darden, of the Washington staff of the New York World, left the capital Friday for Prescott, Ariz., where he will enter a veteran's hospital for treatment. He commanded one of the first American tank squadrons to go into action in the war, was severely gassed and has never fully recovered.

David F. Perkins, former Portland (Me.) newspaper man, has been appointed exploitation director of the Black chain of theatres in New England.

Daniel E. Cushing, formerly of the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star, is now with the Toronto Financial Post.

George Leaker, formerly Windsor reporter for the Detroit Times, has joined the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star.

J. J. MacLellan, formerly of the London (Ont.) Advertiser, has joined the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star.

Kenneth M. Olson, of the Milwaukee Journal promotion department, has been appointed managing editor of the Madison (Wis.) Capital City Times.

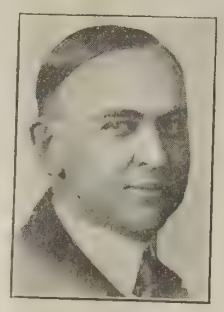
William Cuddy, who has been writing "The Poor Cuss" motor-tour articles for the Milwaukee Journal, is resigning to enter the advertising field.

Henry C. Dennis of the Milwaukee Journal copy desk, is now manager of the New Richmond (Wis.) News and Republican Voice, a semi-weekly.

Harold Linden, staff man of the Johnstown (Pa.) Tribune, has been placed in charge of publicity for the Greater Johnstown Industrial Exposition, which will be held in October.

Fred A. Cummings, formerly a member of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram editorial staff, the Lynn Item, and the Haverhill Gazette, and more recently with the Eastern Massachusetts Railway, has been admitted to the Massachusetts bar.

Dan J. Duval, sports editor of the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star has returned from the school of coaching, Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., where he took an intensive course in football, baseball and basketball as well as track.



Bruce Cole, managing editor of the Ames (Iowa) Daily Tribune, has purchased an interest in the Prophetstown (Ill.) Echo and is now its editor and business manager.

Malcolm MacLean has returned to the night copy desk of the Minneapolis Tribune, having sold his interest in the La Salle (Ill.) Post and resigned as managing editor of that paper.

Edward Franey, lately of the Eau Claire (Wis.) Telegram, has joined the night copy desk of the Minneapolis Tribune.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

W. E. BOWMAN, for the past two years Washington correspondent for the Detroit Journal, Newark Star-Eagle and Toledo Blade, will go to Newark September 18 as managing editor of the Star-Eagle. Bowman was born in Hartford City, Ind., and began newspaper work in his home town after leaving school. In 1914-1915 he was temporarily out of journalism, being engaged in publicity work for the Indiana Republican State Committee.

W. E. Bowman

In 1916 he went to the Detroit Journal as a copy reader, and later became telegraph editor and news editor. He shifted into editorial writing and after a year was sent to Washington to take charge of a bureau maintained in the capital by the papers owned by N. C. Wright, H. S. Talmadge and their associates. Bowman is 33 years old and has two small daughters. He will succeed John P. Coakley in Newark, and Coakley will go to Washington.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

JOSEPH A. SAVADEL, for 25 years business manager of the Fourth Estate and now a real estate broker at Stapleton, S. I., has been appointed publicity manager for the Staten Island Real Estate Board and the Home League of Staten Island.

Ernest K. Meredith, formerly advertising manager of the Iowa City (Ia.) Republican, has joined the advertising staff of the Des Moines Capital.

J. A. E. Evers who has been advertising solocitor for Successful Farming, has resigned to go into other business in Minneapolis.

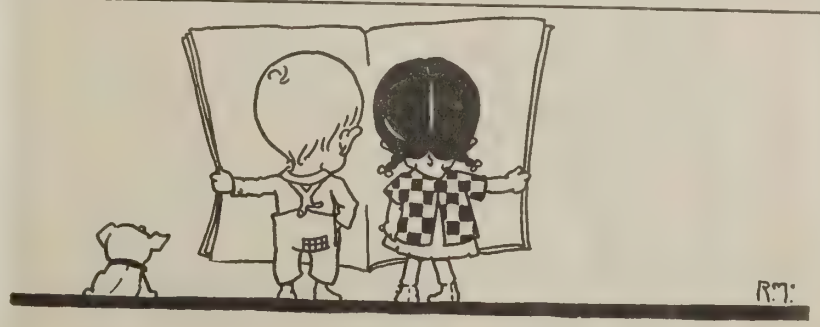
Robert Mullaney is a new member of the Chicago Tribune's classified advertising staff.

Roy T. Burke, of the publicity division of the Thomas A. Edison Company, has joined the display staff of the Minneapolis Tribune to specialize in advertising promotion work.

Earl Lawler of the Minneapolis Daily News has joined the display advertising staff of the Minneapolis Tribune in charge of the real estate department.

Miss Jacqueline Gilmore, of the advertising staff of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News, has had a story accepted by Youth's Companion.

C. M. Campbell, formerly of the circulation department of the Chicago Tribune's European edition, has joined the classified section of the advertising department.



Walter Andrews, city circulation manager of the Johnstown (Pa.) Ledger, is the father of a baby girl.

Fred D. Fowler, formerly on the Denver News-Times, the Kansas City Star and the Winnipeg Tribune, has been appointed country circulation manager of the Cleveland Commercial.

NOTES OF THE NEWS SERVICES

ORA L. JONES who has been head of the New Orleans bureau of the Associated Press, has been transferred to the staff of the Southern Division headquarters in Atlanta. U. L. McCall, formerly of the Kansas City office, is superintendent in charge of this division.

Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, who has been abroad for some time, has been spending this week in Holland and France.

If the little folks learn to Ask Haskin they will be wise when they grow up.

L. D. Mueller, Associated Press correspondent at Green Bay, Wis., has been transferred to the staff of the Chicago office. He has been succeeded by Paul R. Mickelson. Mr. Mickelson has been ill and Lawrence H. Selz of the Chicago office held down the job during his absence. Mr. Mickelson has now entirely recovered and is back at his post and Mr. Selz has returned to the Chicago office.

Walter M. Kinkade of the San Francisco office of the Associated Press has been transferred to Chicago as day coast editor.

R. T. Dozier, formerly of the Omaha World-Herald, has joined the Chicago staff of the Associated Press.

Charles Stephenson Smith, head of the Berlin bureau of the Associated Press, returned to the United States this week on the steamship "America" for a several months' vacation. He is contemplating a trip to Canada.

Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, was in New York this week en route to Washington for sevral days before returning to his summer home at Winter Harbor, Me.

Byron L. Abernathy, Associated Press correspondent at Jefferson City, Mo., has been transferred to Wichita, Kan., where he will be in charge of that office, succeeding Kenneth L. Clark, who has been transferred to the staff of the Kansas City office.

Thomas D. Root has been sent from the Kansas City office of the Associated Press to Jefferson City, Mo., where he will act as correspondent. His place has been filled by Arthur E. Crissey, formerly of the Kansas City Star.

George Barnard, formerly connected with the Extension Magazine, is now the editor of the picture page which the news service of the National Catholic Council will commence to send out early in September. It will have pictures of Catholic interest gathered from all over the world by the council's staff correspondents.

Arthur J. Richey of the Newspaper Enterprise Association bureau in Cleveland is in the New York office in the absence of Frank J. Ryan, whose wife is seriously ill.

MARRIED

MAJOR JULIUS OCHS ADLER, vice-president and treasurer of the New York Times and a son of Harry Adler, publisher of the Chattanooga Times, and Mrs. Barbara Stettheimer were married in San Francisco, August 27. Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the New York Times, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, also of the New York Times, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Adler were among the out-of-town guests at the wedding. Major and Mrs. Adler are sailing Sept. 2 for a wedding trip in Europe.

Miss Evelyn Obera Hester, society editor of the Boulder (Colo.) News-Herald, and Wallace H. Rawles of the Boulder Camera, were married Aug. 20.

Edward J. Stewart, of the business office of the New York Times, was married August 30 to Miss Madeline Murdock of Burlington, Vt.

Miss Marie Rose Langbein, secretary to the manager of the New York Evening Telegram and Charles Conrad Crosby, manager of the Telegram's Harlem office were married last week in the Adirondacks, where they were spending their vacation.

Albert DeLorme, formerly of the Fitchburg Daily News but now on the Worcester Telegram, and Miss Yvonne DeBonville were married recently.

Robert J. Johnston, of the Duluth News Tribune display advertising staff, and Miss Margaret Underwood were married there August 24.

Warren J. Hoover, deaf mute printer on the Xenia (Ohio) Herald, and Miss Odessa M. Holden, of Columbus, also a deaf mute, were married Aug. 27. The sign language was used in the marriage ceremony.

WITH THE AD FOLKS

FRANK W. ATHERTON has been appointed account manager and supervisor of all art work layout and typography of the Seelye & Brown Advertising Company, Detroit.

R. H. Hyman, for seven years in charge of the merchandising department of the Cole Motor Car Company, has been appointed director of advertising of the Stutz Motor Car Company of America, Inc.

Marcus F. Weinberg, vice-president of the Hicks Advertising Agency of New York, is in Denver, Col., visiting his parents. His daughter, Miss Mascha, will join him here, later on going to Italy to complete her music studies.

V. E. Kirven, for five years advertising manager of the Duff & Kepp store, Kansas City, Mo., has resigned to become director of publicity and sales manager for the Texon Oil and Land Company, New York.

R. W. Emerson, for seven years a member of the staff of the Chicago Tribune, has been made vice-president and sales manager of the American Chamber of Economics, with offices at 30 Irving place, New York. During the war he was chief of the division of publications, the war loan organization, the Treasury Department. Later he was assistant director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. For the past year Mr. Emerson has been vice-president of the Willard M. Kiplinger Agency, Washington, D. C.

J. Carl Zachow, formerly of the Zachow Advertising Agency, Kansas City but recently of the W. B. Finney Advertising Company, has opened a new office for the company in Wichita, Kan., in the First National Bank Building.

J. E. Lillis, formerly sales manager of the radio division of the Reynolds Spring Company, Jackson, Mich., has been appointed advertising manager and director of sales promotion of the Jackson Corset Company, of the same city.

The Sacks Company, Inc., New York advertising agency, has opened an Atlanta office in the Georgia Saving Bank Building. Charles J. Kelley has been appointed manager of this Southern branch.

The Direct Advertising Corporation, Indianapolis, has been placed in the hands of a receiver because when B. G. Saltzgaber, the treasurer, committed suicide the books were found to be in a very unsettled condition. An audit of the books has been ordered by the court.

Frederick Haase, recently with Nelson Chesman & Co., has opened his own service agency in the Bush Terminal Sales Building, New York.

When a space buyer reads EDITOR AND PUBLISHER he reads it for information about daily newspapers.

The fact that the spenders of over a hundred million dollars every year do read EDITOR AND PUBLISHER regularly gives you a convenient, inexpensive, psychologically correct medium in which to tell your story, and have it get to the right people at the right time.

He Calls It Mob Insurance

No paper in the country has paid more attention to church advertising than The Oakland Tribune. Special editions of sixteen pages or more with church news and ads are not infrequent.

The man responsible for this says he looks on church advertising as mob insurance, panic insurance and strike insurance. In other words, people who go to church are not the ones who are moved by the sudden gusts of crowd action which unsettle business.

The Oakland Tribune prints church advertising at a loss and expects to continue to do so. It is sure the best interests of Oakland—the paper's best interests—are served if the largest possible number of persons go to church.

Ever think of church advertising from this standpoint?

The Church Advertising Department is ready to distribute Series No. 3. Copy for 52 good size display ads covering all the special church events of the year.

Proofs have been mailed papers which ordered previous copy from this Department. Any paper may have the entire set on request. Use of the copy in space donated by your paper will stimulate more advertising by individual churches.

The price per week is only $1.40 for the largest papers; $15 a year for papers under 10,000 circulation.

Permission to use granted only one paper in a town.

SEND FOR PROOFS NOW.

Address Herbert H. Smith, 156 Fifth Ave.
New York City

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.

Editor and Publisher is thoroughly sold on church advertising. It donates this space.

Obituary

DAVID S. HASBROUCK, aged 72, associate editor of the Troy (N. Y.) Times and connected with that paper for 43 years, died Aug. 27. He was dean of the editorial writers of the Troy newspaper men. Beginning on the Times as telegraph editor, he gradually worked up to managing editor, which position he held until 1917. Since that time he had been associate editor.

RICHARD CLOYD LEE, for many years on the staffs of Pacific Coast newspapers, died August 18 at Portland, Ore.

SAMUEL M. CROCKETT, aged 58, for more than 25 years owner and editor of the Pocomoko City (Md.) Worcester Democrat, died recently following an operation.

MRS. MAUDE KEEBLER PAGE, for the last six years a writer for the Blaker Advertising Agency of New York, died Aug. 20.

WILLIAM F. DOBBS, owner and manager of the Dobbs Advertising Agency, Danbury, Conn., died Aug. 15. His agency will be carried on according to Mr. Dobbs' express wish under the same name, by Miss Lula M. Sniffen, his secretary and assistant.

J. B. MACK, traveling representative of the Sioux City (Iowa) Journal, died suddenly Aug. 15.

JOHN F. WIDDER, formerly credit manager of the Detroit Times, died in Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 22.

GEORGE S. WADSWORTH, aged 55, for more than 30 years president of the Gildreth & Rogers Company, publishers of the Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle and Tribune, died Aug. 26 after an illness of several months.

HARRY A. GREGG, veteran Michigan newspaper man and at one time reporter on the Detroit Free Press, died recently in Armstrong, Iowa.

I. L. PITLUK, aged 51, associated with his son in the Pitluk Advertising Company of San Antonio, Tex., died Aug. 24.

EUGENE E. KENDALL, aged 63, for many years a printer on the St. Paul Pioneer Press and the Globe, died Aug. 19.

MRS. S. G. PARKER, aged 51, wife of the editor of the Newport (Ark.) Citizen, died recently.

RICHARD C. LEE, for many years an active newspaper man in Philadelphia, San Francisco, San Diego and Portland, Ore., died Aug. 17.

JOHN F. SULLIVAN, formerly a member of the county staff of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram and later became sports editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, died recently.

LUCIEN H. BARKDULL, for many years a member of the executive department of Ward and Thomas, Chicago, and at the time of his death secretary of the Richardson, Briggs Company, Cleveland, Ohio, died Aug. 28.

JOHN L. SPONSLER, aged 57, at one time part owner of the Hutchinson (Kan.) News, and later associated with the Kansas City Journal from 1895 to 1898, died in hospital in Muskogee, Okla., recently.

EDMUND G. CONKLING, aged 75, brother of Clark Conkling, well known Kansas publisher, is dead after a lengthy illness.

S. DAVELER, aged 65, formerly foreman of the composing room of the San Francisco Bulletin, is dead.

MRS. BELLE ARMSTRONG WHITNEY, aged former Boston newspaper woman and fashion expert, recently died at Paris.

MRS. J. Q. HOWES, aged 71, mother of Joel Howes, Topeka correspondent of the Kansas City Star, died last week.

MRS. O. D. BACKUS, wife of O. D. Backus, editor of the Waverly (Kan.) Gazette, died last week.

J. H. COLEMAN, aged 69, father of Percy A. Coleman, managing editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon, died recently at his home in Shattuck, Okla.

MRS. MARY D. DIAMOND, aged 75, well known Kansas newspaper woman and editor, recently died at her home in Wichita.

MRS. CARMELLA PENQUE O'BRIEN, wife of John C. O'Brien, of the editorial staff of the Denver Post, died recently.

WILLIAM H. HAMILTON, aged 58, for the past seven years pressroom foreman of the Minneapolis Tribune, died Aug. 22.

LAURENCE G. MANLOVE, aged 39, who handled special-contract feature advertising for the Milwaukee Journal, died suddenly in the office of a physician where he had gone when taken ill while motoring.

ALFRED WINFIELD SWALM, United States Consul in Bermuda, and former owner and editor of the Fort Dodge (Iowa) Messenger, died Aug. 24.

JOHN L. CHIVINGTON, for 16 years city editor of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times and later editor of the American, a weekly political paper, committed suicide August 30. His health had been bad for several years.

SCHOOLS

THE University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill., will offer, starting this year, a full four-year course in journalism. During a week in February a "short course" in journalism open to all newspaper men of the state will be given.

Maurice E. Votaw, formerly professor of journalism at the University of Arkansas, will leave for China where he will work in the exchange department of a China newspaper.

The University of Denver (Colorado) has added to its curriculum a complete advertising course.

Clark H. Galloway, formerly with the Chicago Tribune, has been made an instructor in journalism at the University of Kansas, School of Journalism.

The summer school in the journalism department of the University of Wisconsin was attended, this year, by 202 students.

RADIO NOTES

THE St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently opened its radio broadcasting station. The official call is KSD.

The Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, during the county fair season, is broadcasting each evening an hour and a half program, using the University of Vermont station. Receiving stations are set up at the various fair grounds by a local radio dealer which receives the program sent out by the Free Press.

The Burlington (Iowa) Hawkeye recently joined with the Modern Electric Company in broadcasting radio concerts.

New Laredo Morning Paper

The Laredo (Tex.) Morning News has recently been established by Donald M. Bernard, business manager, and Walter F. Doney, managing editor. It has an Associated Press franchise.

26,000 last October—Now

150,000

DETROIT
Evening
TIMES

Dairy Products In Wisconsin

Wisconsin is famous as America's premier dairy state.

With 2,000,000 milking cows or 10 to each of Wisconsin's 190,000 farms, there were produced over 9,000,000,000 pounds of milk.

Dairy products alone produce wealth and prosperity that alone and unaided would make Wisconsin a fine place in which to advertise and sell your goods.

In mines, timber, quarries, manufacture and agriculture, Wisconsin is one of the greatest and most prosperous states. A large percentage of Wisconsin farmers own their own farms and in Wisconsin there are more silos than in any other state in the Union.

That means a solid, lasting, prosperous class of people — people who have the money to buy—people who read. And they read Wisconsin daily newspapers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 Lines
Beloit News	(E)	8,769	.045
*Eau Claire Leader-Telegram	(M&E)	8,586	.035
*Fond du Lac Reporter	(E)	6,326	.03
*Kenosha News	(E)	7,306	.04
*Madison (Wis.) State Journal	(E&S)	17,392	.05
Milwaukee Journal	(E)	114,676	.20
Milwaukee Journal	(S)	89,857	.20
Milwaukee Sentinel	(M&E)	78,973	.14
Milwaukee Sentinel	(S)	62,548	.14
*Superior Telegram	(E)	18,332	.055
†Superior (Wis.) Sunday Times	(S)	8,000	.045

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
†Publishers' Statement.

Features by
Irvin S. Cobb
Fontaine Fox
Hugh Fullerton
Rube Goldberg
Ed Hughes
Burns Mantle
T. L. Masson
O. O. McIntyre
Frederick Palmer
H. J. Tuthill
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

Jinx

can be eliminated by selling where there is real consumer demand for your product in the markets where you have distribution.

The Indianapolis News

New York Office: Dan A. Carroll, 150 Nassau St.
Chicago Office: J. E. Lutz, The Tower Bldg.
Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Manager.

The Standard of Influence
Discriminating readers and advertisers know that generations have found such power behind their favorite paper,
The Pittsburg Dispatch
the same year in and year out!
Branch Offices:
Wallace G. Brooke,
Brunswick Building, New York
The Ford-Parsons Co.
Marquette Building, Chicago, Ill.

THE
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL
has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America.

Few Papers — (if any) — surpass the TRENTON NEW JERSEY TIMES AS A Food Medium
A recent reader survey indicates that among the housewives of the city our Thursday Food Feature Department—upward of four pages devoted to food recipes and news and food advertising—is the best feature carried by the Times
Circulation 30,237 Member A. B. C.
KELLY-SMITH CO.
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

MAKERS-MONEY-SAVERS

This is a regular weekly department designed to answer questions, offer suggestions and generally help the man and woman of the smaller city dailies and weeklies. Your ideas on money making and for money saving are wanted, and for each idea published we will pay $1. When your idea appears clip it out and send it to the MONEY SAVER EDITOR, and payment will be made. Your ideas must be workable, told in as few words as possible, and new to this department. Contributions to this department will not be returned.

WHY not let the literature and composition classes of your local schools fill a column a week of your paper? The material used in this column might be news of the schools, short essays, verses, original jokes and skits and so on. The news of the schools shouldn't take up more than half the column. Such a department would not only clinch the interest of all the school children and of everyone who is interested in the schools but would also prove of great interest to all your readers.—F. H. W.

Some people are, of course, always trying to get into your paper in various departments. They want all their comings and goings chronicled and also want their opinions about various things printed as communications to your paper. Sometimes there is so much of this stuff that it tends to become a joke. When this is the case the best way to shut off the enthusiasts and still retain their friendship is by asking them to buy from five to a dozen subscriptions to your paper for friends or relatives who will be interested in reading about their doings, basing your request on the fact that you are constantly printing so much news about them. In most cases this will shut off the flow of stuff. In some cases, though, it will result in the people buying the subscriptions as suggested and in such a case you can afford to continue printing a large amount of stuff about the family.—F. H. W.

When space drops off, the advertising manager might with profit to the paper look through last year's files and show merchants what they run in a certain issue the year before. The actions of all of us are based more or less on precedent, and if an advertiser wants to drop out this year it is pretty hard for him to tell why when he advertised last year.—N. B. S.

Most country newspapers could with profit adopt a more aggressive and steady circulation policy. The editor should forever keep his eyes open for new prospects and once they are in the prospect file they should be circularized regularly and not dropped from the list until they have given positive assurance that they will not subscribe for the paper. Building up a circulation list requires hard plugging, but in the final analysis that is what brings in the money.—N. B. S.

The Hartford (Conn.) Courant has obtained a slightly different twist to a stunt which can be applied by the small town daily or weekly as well as by a paper in a fairly large city. The Courant has a regular department headed "feminine topics," marked "advertisements." The column is made up of short, chatty, gossipy items about merchandise for sale in various stores interspersed with purely straight paragraphs of reading matter. This is read with interest by the women folks and saves advertisers for you who wouldn't use space otherwise as well as gets extra space from regular advertisers. It also affords close contact with the merchant.—J. M. M.

Why not let the Ladies' Aid Society of your leading church get out one issue of your paper this fall or winter? They can get in an amount of advertising which is surprising and some of them show an ability at editing and writing which is unexpected. Such a number should be profitable for you and them and ought to make a hit.—J. M. M.

Start a column for advertising local stores carrying nationally advertised products, such as Arrow collars, Ivory soap, B. V. D.'s, Eastman Kodaks, Eversharp pencils, Kelly-Springfield tires, etc. The idea that people buy with confidence articles advertised nationally will help to sell the space.—H. J. W.

"Succeed with Des Moines," was the heading of a department which ran recently in a Des Moines paper. The ads were run for 5 weeks and each week several of the firms advertised in it were given a news write up, in a center space for that purpose. Such a section appeals to the pride of the merchants and helps to boost the city as well.—H. J. W.

In these days of woman's independence, nothing makes a bigger hit than a page or section, dedicated to advertising stores and shops conducted exclusively by women. It might be headed "Leading Business Women of ....," and feature somewhere there in a short write up on what women are doing, and how they have progressed in business during the last few years. —H. J. W.

A. P. FORMS THREE NEW SOUTHERN CIRCUITS

Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina Given State Services at Meetings Held in Atlanta and Raleigh—Virginia Next

Separate state circuits for Georgia and South Carolina were decided on August 24 at a joint meeting in Atlanta of the Associated Press members from the two states. The Georgia circuit, day and night, will be filled out of Atlanta and the South Carolina circuit, day and night, out of Charlotte, N. C., temporarily.

The members assembled on the roof garden of the Ansley Hotel at 11 o'clock with Clark Howell, editor of The Atlanta Constitution and a director of the Associated Press presiding. He outlined the general plan of the A. P. to provide improvements in the service to meet the wishes of the members and introduced U. L. McCall, superintendent of the Southern division, and Milton Gargas, of New York, chief of the traffic department of the A. P. They stated to the joint assembly the readiness and the desire of the A. P. to ascertain their wishes and explained similiar circuits which had just been voted by the members in Virginia and North Carolina.

Double trunk circuits, day and night, from Washington and Chicago, the members were told, will provide the general news of the world and the United States for the distributing centers at Richmond, Charlotte and Atlanta which will relay to the state circuits. In addition the regional news will be amplified and enlarged and will be supplemented by mail service from the various state capitals.

Mr. Howell and John S. Cohen, editor of the Atlanta Journal, entertained the visiting newspaper men at luncheon at the Capital City club. After the luncheon the South Carolina members organized themselves into the South Carolina Association of the Associated Press and elected B. H. Peace, publisher of the Greenville News, president. The Georgia members likewise formed themselves into the Georgia Association of the Associated Press and elected R. L. McKenney, news editor of the Macon News, president.

At a meeting of North Carolina members at Raleigh, August 19, a state organization to be known as the North Carolina Associated Press Club was formed. John A. Park, of the Raleigh Daily Times was elected president and The Associated Press correspondent to be appointed at Charlotte will be secretary. A state circuit similar to those for Georgia and South Carolina was decided upon.

It is proposed to hold a similar meeting of Virginia members at Richmond on September 5 at which time it is expected that a state circuit will be organized similar to those in North and South Carolina and Georgia.

Swanson Succeeds Winter

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER.)

MINNEAPOLIS, August 31.—Neil Swanson, publicity director of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, September 1, assumed the city editorship of the Minneapolis Journal succeeding C. B. Winter, who will do special work for the publisher of the paper.

Waterloo, Iowa
POPULATION 36,230
Waterloo Evening Courier
AND WATERLOO DAILY REPORTER
A. W. Peterson, General Manager
RATE 5c FLAT
Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY
The circulation figures, totaling over 15,000, tell a wonderful story for Waterloo, and emphasize Waterloo as an important and intelligent center for national advertisers. The big point about this circulation of the Waterloo Evening Courier is the fact that it is absolutely steadfast—8,000 in Waterloo and 7,000 outside. Look up the record for any previous year, and see if the Courier's circulation has ever slumped in any year, or ever increased radically. Just a steady increase. Careful examination will show no trace of premiums, cut rates, or anything else that leads in some measure to subscribers taking a paper which is not their real choice.

Does This List of Publications Carry Weight With You?
The Chicago Tribune—McCall's—Successful Farming—New York Times—Indianapolis News—Cleveland Plain Dealer—Omaha World Herald—Christian Science Monitor—a half hundred others, large and small, of prominence in their localities.
They all investigated the MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM, learned how it took care of every addressing, listing, checking, and mailing operation connected with their mail lists—how it would give their subscribers the desired delivery satisfaction. Today, they all use the MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM. It's adapted to all sizes of mail lists.
Write today for a descriptive literature.
The Speedaumatic Company
MANUFACTURING
THE MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM
817-825 WASHINGTON BLVD.
CHICAGO

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
LEADS ALL LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWSPAPERS IN TOTAL PAID CIRCULATION
Government statement for six months ended March 31, 1922
average 146,233 daily
New York
H. W. MOLONEY
604 Times Bldg.
Chicago
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
6 No. Michigan Ave.
Suite 401, Tower Bldg.

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 32,500 Average
Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston — New York—Detroit—Chicago

Science and Invention
A new daily feature by a popular science writer of high reputation.
THE INTERNATIONAL SYNDICATE
213 Guilford Ave., BALTIMORE, MD.

An Accounting and Federal Tax Service for Publishers

References on Application

CLIFFORD YEWDALL
33 West 42nd Street
New York City

FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE

The World
MORNING EDITION

The World and The Evening World have a combined circulation, daily, of 650,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. They carry more dry goods advertising; are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

Advertise in Newspapers by the Year

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Mailer's Building, Chicago
Ford Building, Detroit

The Pittsburgh Post

A newspaper of character, integrity and enterprise which has earned the confidence of the people of the world's greatest industrial district.

DAILY and SUNDAY

SPECIAL EDITION
Advertising
Develops
Regular Advertisers
ASK US HOW?
JOHN B. GALLAGHER Co.
SUITE 5945 GRAND CENTRAL TERMINAL BLDG.
NEW YORK

We can increase your business—ou want it increased.

ou have thought of press clipngs yourself. But let us tell you w prese clippings can be made a siness-builder for you.

BURRELLE
45 Lafayette St., N. Y. City tablished a Quarter of a Century

DOLLAR PULLERS

Advertising and circulation managers are always on the lookout for new ideas that will increase advertising receipts and win new circulation. Your idea for increasing advertising or circulation may not appeal to your manager, but it may be just the thing that some other manager wants. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each idea printed under this head. The fact that the idea is now being used in your city does not bar it from the department. Address your communication to the DOLLAR PULLER EDITOR. When they appear clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable ideas will not be returned.

MATERIAL decrease in the loss of subscribers has resulted from the policy of one newspaper in sending a member of the circulation department to interview all persons who order the paper stopped. Report is made to the central office by carriers or sub-station agents of all such cases, and the follow-up is as quickly as possible. When a person is quitting because they intend to move, efforts are made to induce them to continue and the interviewer makes all necessary arrangements for transfer of the account. Often, too, misunderstandings that led to the discontinuance are ironed out and the subscriber's good will and business retained.—B. A. T.

The Dallas News is building a "Home Beautiful" and "Electrical Paradise." In their opening announcement they state that their purpose is "to arouse an interest in home ownership and to promote better design and construction in the building of dwellings." And I believe we should take them at their word, although there is a commercial side to the proposition in that for two Sundays they have been able to connect up with the scheme more than two pages of advertising. When completed in every detail, including entire furnishings and draperies, complete electrical equipment, a radio-receiving station and grounds planted in grass and shrubbery, the "Home Beautiful" will be opened to the inspection of the people of Dallas every day for two weeks. At the conclusion of the two weeks' period, sealed bids for its purchase will be received. It is estimated that construction will require from eight to nine weeks, and the advertising from builders and dealers in furnishinge should continue until the house is opened.—J. T.

A shopping page describing the stops and purchases of a shopper never fails to interest women readers. Put illustration of shopper in center of layout and sell ads on all sides. The following is a suggested tour: Shopper starts at 8:30 a. m. with a stop at the drug store; then her appointment with the photographer at 9 o'clock; at 10 she is fitted for a new suit and at 10:30 selects a hat at a millinery; at noon she lunches at a restaurant and at 1:30 meets her banker; then a call at the optometrist, which enables her to enjoy the matinee at theatre; after the show, she stops at the jewelry store for a gift for her husband; then she buys some flowers from the florist; on her arrival at home she finds the evening paper and then calls the grocery for supplies, she ends the day eating Ice Cream.—R. B. M.

Several newspapers are running a "Hidden Check Page" one day each week. In each ad on the page there is a surplus word. Pick out these words—put them together so that they form sentences. You will find therein the location of the hidden check for five dollars. The check may be found after a designated hour the next day.—R. B. M.

The local Ford agent gave us a considerable amount of copy on a contest we "sold" him.—"How Many Fords Are There in This City?" Prizes of tires, horns, etc., were presented to the winners. He considered it a great success. —R. M. C.

There is a "dead man's curve" or crossing in your territory. Locate it, get something of its history of tragedy. Then use this as the central feature for a "safety first page" whch will carry advertisements of safety devices for use of the motorist, horns, chains, side-sway checks, and so forth.—R. F.

Do you get any business from towel supply companies? We didn't until recently. One of our solicitors drew up a 4 in. advertisement, showing a half-open towel-supply cabinet at the top and filled in with an admonition that clean hands are absolute essentials at all times. It was exactly what one company was looking for, something tangible, we sold it; got an order on full position.—R. M. C.

Teach your carrier boys the value of news. Many times they are stopped by inquiries as to what's in the paper. Nine times out of ten they don't know. Encourage them to read the paper they deliver by offering small prizes at weekly quizzes to those who make the best grade on what news has been carried during the past week.— B. R. A.

The Boston Daily Advertiser, Pictorial Tabloid morning newspaper, has just entered upon a new promotion and publicity campaign which, for the prizes awarded, is something unique. The advertiser Pictorial has chosen to use the fall line of Peggy Paige dresses for the awards. One Peggy Paige dress is being given away every day for fifty consecutive days, each day's women winner receiving an order to go to the local store handling the Peggy Paige line and select any Peggy Paige dress she desires up to a retail value of $100. The contest plan is telling fortunes by cards and sending a fortune chart, which is published every day, to the publication office.—C.

The circulation department of the Lewiston (Me.) Evening Journal believe in giving public notice of the completion of a year's good service by their carriers. The following is an example:

A Lewiston Journal
Newsboy Makes Good

Gerald Adkins of Winthrop has just completed a year's service with the Lewiston Journal.

During that time he has lost only four trips, and that was on account of sickness.

He began work July 26, 1921, with 58 copies. The subscriptions soon increased to 110 making it necessary for him to have some assistance. He finally thought best to give up part of his route to another boy, Hall Briggs.

He now has 64 regular subscribers with several extras on Saturday.

He has found the work pleasant and profitable.

He has bought a nice bicycle that he uses to deliver his papers with, and also has a nice bank account.—R. M. C.

"Car for Sale as advertised in the Minneapolis Tribune" are cards that are distributed to automobile dealers who advertise in that paper. Similar cards are distributed for placing in homes that are for rent, or for sale, as the case may be. The card saves the advertiser the cost of purchasing one and the newspaper benefits by the publicity.—S. K. D.

In the minds of the public at large there is but little conception as to the functioning of homestead associations, and so far, in but few instances, the associations have waited until the interested prospect came to the office before his mind was set right. A new Orleans newspaper has worked up a series of fairly large ads explaining the simplicity and the functions of the modern homestead association, and the copy is signed and paid for co-operatively by a number of the leading associations in the city. The copy is run Sundays in the Home Building section.—R. R. M.

While the people are agitated over a probable shortage of coal this winter (or next winter), get clothiers to advertise overcoats and furs, using the slant that if readers have lost out on the coal supply now is the time to make certain of having warm garments, at least. Same idea could be used also to secure advertising of blankets, oil stoves, weather strips, storm windows, and probably other articles.—R. E. D.

Next month have a "Quota Month" for your advertising staff. Find out the average amount of business each member of your staff is handling. Find out, too, how much business you had a year ago next month in each department. Then send a substantial quota for each member of your staff which will be higher than the average amount of business he has handled and which quotas will bring in more business than a year ago. There's nothing like having a mark to shoot at to stimulate business, particularly when this mark is personalized and individualized so that every worker has his own particular mark.—F. H. W.

Each month in your city there are gas meter readers and electric meter readers going from house to house taking readings. You could use this fact to get some extra advertising out of the local public utility companies by suggesting that just before the meter reading period these companies run ads in which they would use the photos of their meter readers and explain just why metered service enables the companies to give lower rates than would be the case if there were no meters. Any local points coming up in the experience of the companies with regard to meter reading could also be explained in these ads.—F. H. W.

Proved value to Advertisers

shown by following extract from letter of B. T. Babbitt, regarding a recent Boston campaign:

"We feel the services rendered by the BOSTON AMERICAN have contributed in large measure to our success and we wish to thank you for the splendid way you co-operated with us."

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND Sells at 3 Cents.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Reg'lar Fellers
by Gene Byrnes

A comic which appeals to youth and old age alike.

We can furnish full-page matrices, full color, black and red, or black alone, or as the first page of a printed comic section.

HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE
280 Broadway New York City

There's a Reason
Ask The Los Angeles Times

The Hollister Organization is now conducting its third circulation campaign for the Los Angeles Times.

Write or wire for more details of the circulation building plan that has repeatedly satisfied.

HOLLISTER'S CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
Largest in the United States
300 MERRITT BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Mount Vernon, N. Y.
DAILY ARGUS
carries more display advertising than any other newspaper in Westchester County.

This is an acknowledgement of its power that the advertiser should heed, if desirous of reaching the people of Mount Vernon.

GEO. B. DAVID & CO.
Foreign Representative
171 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

NEWS OF THE ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

PUBLISHING

THE New England Newspaper Alliance will meet early in September in New Bedford, Mass., as the guests of B. H. Anthony, proprietor of the New Bedford Standard.

Medill Building and Loan Association, conducted by the Chicago Tribune to finance the buying of homes among its employes, has elected the following directors: For one year, George Gunnison, stereotype department; William A. Strasburg, press room; Frank Racine of the engraving department. Two years, O. A. Mather, editorial department; William Sandamann, mailing room; Don Swinehart, composing room. For three years, W. J. Merrill, advertising department; E. M. Antrim, traffic department, and W. H. Whalen, general.

The Carolinas Advertising Managers' Association convention, which was to have been held at Asheville, N. C., August 28 and 29, has been postponed until February, 1923.

The National Publishers' Association, Inc., will hold its annual meeting in New York, September 19.

The Missouri Press Association has accepted the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce, Kansas City, Mo., to hold the annual meeting there in September.

The National Fraternal Press Association held its annual meeting in Montreal on August 28. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: president, Syrus K. Drew, editor of the Fraternal Aid Union Guide; vice-president, Mrs. Julia Ward Clingen, publisher of the Fraternal Leader; secretary-treasurer, Mary McEachern Baird, editor of the Women's Review; and executive committee, A. J. Martin, editor, the Protected Home Circle: D. W. Dunham, editor, the Friend and Guide, and Gilbert Howell.

The New York Newspaper Club and the Association of City Hall Reporters will have a clam bake and field day at Duer's Casino, Whitestone Landing, September 10.

The Perth and Huron Press Association held its annual meeting, August 18, at Milverton, Ont. Topics discussed at the afternoon meeting were "Newspaper Make-up and the Treatment of News," by William G. Colgate, the Wingham Times; "The Value of the Editorial Page in the Weekly Newspaper," by W. H. Robertson, the Goderich Signal; "Saving Time in the Job Room," John W. Vanatter, the Goderich Star; and "Some Reminiscences of 40 Years," W. H. Kerr, the Brussels Post. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: honorary president, John W. Eedy, St. Mary's Journal-Argus; president, W. H. Kerr, the Brussels Post; immediate past president, Malcolm MacBeth, the Milverton Sun; vice-president, John W. Vanatter, the Goderich Star; secretary, Alex Abraham, Stratford; executive committee: Malcolm MacBeth, William G. Colgate, the Wingham Times; J. W. Southcott, the Exeter Times, and H. D. Davis, the Mitchell Advocate.

The Midwest Circulation Managers' Association will hold their convention at the Broadmoor Hotel, Colorado Springs, Colo., September 6 and 7.

ADVERTISING

THE official record of the proceedings of the recent Milwaukee convention of the National Association of Newspaper Executives has just been sent out to members by Secretary Ralph Perry from the headquarters office at Fort Worth, Tex.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of Texas will hold their annual convention in Houston, Nov. 12, 13 and 14.

The Iowa Associated Advertising Clubs have postponed their convention to Sept. 12 and 13. The meeting place remains at Mason City.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

THE Decatur (Ind.) Daily Democrat, August 22, issued a special edition of 36 pages in six sections to celebrate the convention of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen which was held in Decatur.

The Mobile (Ala.) Truth-Advertiser August 26 issued its first anniversary number.

The Newton (Kan.) Kansan August 22 celebrated its fiftieth anniversary by issuing a 142 page special bound number 11 by 15¾ inches.

The Madison (Wis.) State Journal is publishing every Monday a farm newspaper, prepared by its own staff, illustrated by a staff photographer, which does not print propaganda or politics.

The Honolulu Star-Bulletin recently issued a special edition for the Shriners who visited Honolulu after the Shrine convention in San Francisco, giving a history of the organization in Hawaii and a brief history of the islands.

The Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise, August 15, published a 72-page special Progress and Development edition to mark the opening of a new hotel and a number of skyscraper buildings.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVERTISING RATES
in effect March 11, 1922

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

	Agate Lines	1 insertion	6 insertions within year	12 insertions within year	26 insertions within year	52 insertions within year
Full page	672	$200.00	$188.00	$175.00	$150.00	$125.00
Half page	336	113.00	100.00	94.00	88.00	75.00
Quarter page	168	60.00	56.00*	50.00*	47.00*	44.00
Eighth page	84	35.00	30.00*	28.00*	25.00*	23.00
Sixteenth page ...	42	20.00	18.00*	15.00*	14.00*	13.00

Less than sixteenth page transient rate 50 cents per agate line (minimum space 14 lines —1 inch).

All 52 consecutive-insertion contracts (see last column above) are based on consecutive insertions within the year. Extra space is charged at the 52-insertion rate, but contract is credited for one insertion only.

Half pages and full pages on 6, 12 and 26-time contracts may be used at the option of the advertiser within the twelve-month period.

*Quarter, eighth and sixteenth pages must be on definite copy schedule.

b. Contract advertisers are accorded the privilege of same insertion rate for larger space. For example: an advertiser under contract for twenty-six (26) quarter-pages at $47 per insertion is accorded the privilege of half pages at $88 and full pages at $150, but such advertisement is to be credited on contract as but one insertion of contract space.

c. Rate maker card—52 consecutive insertions—minimum space 28 agate lines—net rate 28c. per agate line. Extra space pro rata.

d. All rebates earned by advertisers using more than contracted space within life of contract are paid in advertising space to be used within one month after expiration of contract.

Classified Advertising

a. Help Wanted ..... .06 a word
For Sale ..... .06 a word
Situations Wanted ..... .03 a word
Business Opportunities ..... .06 a word

b. All advertisements inserted on a strictly cash basis, except on orders from contract advertisers.

c. No discount for frequency of insertion.

Reading Notices—(None.)

Commissions. Allowed to recognized agencies on other than publishers' advertising.

Preferred Positions

Front and back cover rates on application. Inside front and back covers 10% extra. All other positions 25% extra.

SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT
For Newspaper Making

For Sale
Sixteen seven-column steel chases; one book bundling press, also quantity 18x23 matrix and tissue paper. Address Box C-861, care Editor & Publisher.

Hoe 12-Page Web Press, printing papers six or seven cols, wide, 22¾ in. long, either 4, 6, 8, 10 or 12 pages, with stereotype outfit. Good machine at low price. Baker Sales Co., 200 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and Business bought and sold, American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

24-Page Potter Press For Sale or Will Trade for Goss Press to Fit Our New Equipment

This press is in fine running condition, does 2-color work, gives all sizes by two's in one signature up to 20 pages with single set of plates or two signatures of 12 pages each.
Can be seen in operation.
Delivery can be made about October 1st.
For further particulars address,
SUPERIOR TELEGRAM
Superior, Wisconsin

Take It To
POWERS
Open 24 Hours out of 24
The Fastest Engravers on the Earth
Powers Photo Engraving Co.
154 Nassau St., Tribune Bldg.
New York City

Newspaper Plant Equipments
Established in 1912
PECKHAM MACHINERY CO.
MARBRIDGE BLDG, 34th & Bway
NEW YORK CITY

24-page Scott Straightline, delivery and erection in month. Shown running until Aug. 15th.
Complete Newspaper Plant Equipment.
8 Linotypes. Model B Intertype. Head Letter Matrices, Molds, Liners.
2 Monotype Equipments with mats.

FLEXIDEAL
A Dependable, Uniform
DRYMAT
Better in performance than any other, and at a LOWER price. A trial will convince you.
Unlimited Stock on Hand at all Times
The Flexideal Company
15 William Street
NEW YORK CITY

USE NEWSPAPER PRESSES
FOR PROMPT DELIVERY
Scott Three Tiered Two Page Wide Press
Prints 4 to 24 pages.
Scott Quadruple Press Four Tiered Two Pages Wide
Prints 4 to 32 pages
Hoe Sextuple Press
Prints 4 to 48 pages
Hoe Double Sextuple Press with Color Cylinder also prints 4 to 48 pages.
WHICH PRESS INTERESTS YOU
WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
Plainfield, New Jersey
New York 1457 Broadway — Chicago 1441 Monadnock Block

WORLD SERIES BASEBALL PLAYER BOARDS
ORDER NOW
Next week may be too late. 47 newspapers will attest to it's superiority.
STANDARD MAGNETIC BASEBALL PLAYER BOARD
Geo. H. Reynolds, Treas.
New Bedford Mass.

NEWSPAPER PRESSES
FOR SALE
Two 32-page 4-plate-wide Duplex "Tubular" Presses. Now printing the Richmond News-Leader.
Also two Duplex Sextuples now printing the New York Tribune.
For particulars apply to—
R. HOE & CO.
504-520 Grand St.
NEW YORK, N. Y.
7 Water St., Boston, Mass. — 827 Tribune Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

For Prompt Service
TYPE
Printers' Supplies
Machinery
In Stock for Immediate Shipment by Selling Houses conveniently located
"American Type the Best in Any Case"
AMERICAN TYPE FOUNDERS CO.

Boston	Pittsburgh	Kansas City
New York	Cleveland	Denver
Philadelphia	Detroit	Los Angeles
Baltimore	Chicago	San Francisco
Richmond	Cincinnati	Portland
Atlanta	St. Louis	Spokane
Buffalo	Minneapolis	Winnipeg

Introduction to Employer and Employee

SITUATIONS WANTED

c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order. For ose unemployed one insertion (adv. not to ceed 50 words) FREE.

dvertising Assistant oung woman, five years' advertising experi- ce (classified, foreign, display), wishes as- stant to manager position. Salary $30 per ek. Address Box C-858, care Editor & Pub- her.

dvertising or Business Manager, fteen years' newspaper experience, holding in ccession positions of Circulation, Advertising d Business Managership. Thorough knowl- ge of mechanical and other departments. 36 ars of age, married, Protestant, best of ref- nces as to ability, character and habits. w seeking connection with opportunity for ger development as either Advertising Man- r or Business Manager. Box C-882, Editor blisher.

dvertising Executive esman and efficient copy service man eks connection (ON STRICTLY MAKE OD BASIS) with daily newspaper—pre- ably in Southern or Western State. enty years experience, unquestionable erences and a result record worthy investi- gion. Competent to take full charge of l largest department or would consider ablishing copy service department for blisher wishing to expand. For further de- ls regarding the writed address, C-843, Etor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager

wes to make change after September 1st. Seven years' experience. Successful. Best references. Address C-851, Editor & Publisher.

Circulation Manager

ften years' successful experience desires to ate in western or southern city of 100,000. Excellent record. Available immediately. Age 3(Box C-889, Editor and Publisher.

Circulation Man,

l years' experience on big city newspaper, de- sis change. Knows all phases of circulation rk, including promotion and advertising. N seeking a sinecure but post where ability w be appreciated. 29 years old. Northern ti preferred. Address C-878, Editor & Pub- ser.

Critic and Columnist

Dramatic critic and columnist, capable news- paper man, now employed, wants broader op- portunity. Other work in addition not objec- tionable. Excellent newspaper experience and re ability for this work. Address Box C-875, Editor & Publisher.

Editor

Experienced newspaper woman; feature writer, copy, manuscript and copy reader; makeup for ly nationally known magazines; now avail- ble. C-887, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor,

ve wire, years of experience and a producer f eal newspapers, desires to make a new con- ection for personal reasons. Would accept e editorship or other desk job which has a ute. Address Box C-863, care Editor & ublisher.

Managing Editor,

ld in charge of successful metropolitan daily, ishes to make change to another metropolitan el or to smaller, growing city. Executive ion. Thoroughly trained and experienced in ll branches of editorial department. Has full sponsibility and authority for directing char- ter and content of paper in present employ- ent. Married man, settled habits; initiative it sense of proportion and fitness of things. ddress Box C-862, care Editor & Publisher.

Boxing Editor and Writer.

rrent employer says, "A sporting editor who nows sports and writes about them in interest- ng and informative manner." Six years' ex- rience. What can you offer? Address Box 81, care of Editor & Publisher.

Salaried

dvertising position by former advertising anager of small paper, experienced in copy iting, layouts and foreign schedules. Refer- nce. C. R. S., Box 41, R. F. D. 1, Hamp- n, Va.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Newspaper Man

Fifty, good health, good habits, experienced, want permanent connection with daily paper in town up to 25,000, preferably in full editorial charge of publication, but would consider place as editor alone. Capable, efficient. Best of reasons for desiring change. Have good reputation in State where I am at present located as editorial writer on publication in larger town. Can furnish references, samples of work, etc. Can come at once or later. Will sign contract, or let work speak for itself. Address Box C-857, care Editor & Publisher.

Well-Known Artist Painter, with foreign academic education, wishes to be employed for half a day in the capacity of art manager for advertising, illustrating, painting of all sorts, interior decoration, theatre decoration, except fashion art. "Art Manager," 1482 Broadway, New York.

HELP WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Wanted

Circulation Manager for afternoon daily, except Sunday, in one of the best Michigan towns. This is an opportunity for a live wire to make a showing, and you can expect real co-operation from all departments. Write complete information regarding self, also give references. Ann Arbor Times News, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Working Foreman

in 6-machine plant on evening newspaper in growing city near New York; 10 to 16 pages daily. Union. Must be able to handle men, as well as a quick makeup, and produce results. Letter must give age, experience and salary expected. Good opening for energetic and resourceful worker. C-880, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted:—

Reporter for general street work; must be able to take Associated Press "pony" report on typewriter over telephone. State age, experience and salary expected. Daily News, Connellsville, Penn.

HE'S ONLY A NEWSPAPER MAN!

(Continued from page 25)

business man should buy to get 100 per cent results.

A judge of literary values? Some of the cynics will laugh at that—cynics of the class who drool away their time for days to produce often that which possesses no more genuine literary and social value than quite as often some bright young reporter dashes off at forced-draft speed in half an hour.

He must see that the editorial department maintains a level of merit in writing and gathering news and opinions and all of the multitude of specialties that make up the modern newspaper—and do it within the economic limit of the newspaper's financial resources.

For the man who sits at the fountainhead of authority in the making of a daily newspaper must keep always in mind the two essentials—a high-grade product and one which is to cost what the newspaper may afford to pay, as well as to find the money with which to pay for it.

A public servant? Again the little cynic may laugh. But recall the course of journalism—which every day has to lay before the whole world its completed work for the inspection and criticism of every man and woman, which cannot be hidden away in records of meetings and secret conferrings, but must in the very nature of his lifework report every 24 hours on what he does and thinks—and compare it with the course of any other section of the social body.

Who, seeing that, will truthfully question that, taken by and large, with exceptions here and there, the daily newspaper man, not only has to, but joyously is willing to, order his days and his activities so as to conserve that which he believes in his very heart is for the good of the people?

Finally, the newspaper of today? Yesterday, it is admitted, there were basic weaknesses, somewhat of pandering, much of narrow partisanship, sometimes less than 100 per cent honesty in reporting and printing what the world was doing.

Today—the lesson learned, the daily newspaper publisher reaches out into the rich field of fact, and redeems the public press in the confidence of the people by performing honest work and faithful recording of the current fact.

In your heart, Mr. Business Man Critic of the Newspaper Press, imagine you every 24 hours having to tell to the whole world the things you have done. Have you, Mr. Average Business Man and Mr. Average Citizen and Citizeness kept so closely to the line of rigid truth as you understood truth as this newspaper publisher who lays before you and all men his daily record? May you, justly and fairly, refrain from according to him that full meed of credit for sincerity which all honest men must manifest?

The newspaper man referred to in the beginning was not elected. Instead, a man of immensely lesser business experience got the office. But this defeat was not characteristic of the recognition of newspaper men in other important walks of life. During contact with the highest minds and most potent leaders of public concerns, lately, I have discovered that at least half of them have had some training in journalism. And one must confess that, in meeting these leaders in keeping track of large current events of national and international import, the task is easier and the result more satisfactory when the other man shall have been once "only a newspaper man."

For, if so, how human, how understanding, how broadly informed on what has been and what is that fellow proves to be who was in years gone "only a newspaper man!"

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

For Sale

Good paying Pacific Coast daily newspaper located in thriving city. Doing business of nearly $75,000 a year. Owner has other interests that demand his time. Will sell half interest to right party. Address C-876, Editor & Publisher.

For Quick Sale

Afternoon newspaper in city of 15,000. Operating at a profit. Fully equipped. Owns plant and real estate. Will sell at a sacrifice. C-879, Editor & Publisher.

NEWSPAPERS WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Michigan or Mid-West Daily Wanted

The buyer will pay $100,000 cash payment on satisfactory proposition up to $500,000. Wire National Newspaper Bureau, 203 S. Dearborn St., Chicago.

A. B. C. to Convene in Chicago

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Chicago, Aug. 30.—The eighth anniversary and ninth convention of the Audit Bureau of Circulation will be held at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, October 19-20, 1922, it was announced today. The divisional meetings on Thursday, Oct. 19, will be devoted to the consideration of matters affecting the interests of each of the six divisions of the bureau. The annual convention of all divisions will convene at 10 a. m. Oct. 20 to consider the recommendations adopted at the division meetings and to transact other business presented by the board of directors. On the night of Oct. 20, a dinner will be held in the Drake Hotel. The bureau suggests that those wishing to attend the gathering make reservations early. The bureau has made public in addition to the names of the leading advertisers and advertising agencies the membership roll of the A. B. C., which includes the "honor list" of publications of the country which have willingly conformed to the requirements established by the bureau.

Bogus Times Solicitor Wanted

An impostor going under the name of J. H. Tyson and representing himself as a representative of The New York Times is offering the Midweek Pictorial and The Times War Book for $7.80 on a forged contract in Western North Carolina, Eastern Tennessee and Southern Virginia. He is not employed by The Times. When he is apprehended he will be prosecuted. He is about 35 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs about 145 pounds and has dark hair, eyes and complexion. He has a strong clear voice and says he is an ex-service man.

Springfield Sun Adds Pictures

The Springfield (Ohio) Morning Sun has begun running a daily picture page.

Unusual Opportunities

Daily & Weekly
NEWSPAPERS
TRADE PAPERS

HARWELL & CANNON

Newspaper and Magazine Properties

Times Building, New York

Established 1910

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

NEWSPAPER BUSINESS MANAGER available—expert accountant, experienced in building circulation and foreign advertising, successful with union labor and mechanical problems. Publisher of 30,000 daily writes: "Master of every department except the editorial; can get further with less friction than any man I know." Our No. 1991-B.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

STARR SERVICE CORPS
UPBUILDERS of NEWSPAPERS
BROKAW BLDG···42ND and BROADWAY
NEW YORK

NEWSPAPER MANAGER

Evening newspaper in city of 75,000 wants man who has a thorough knowledge of all phases of newspaper work. Pleasant surroundings and an attractive opportunity. All correspondence strictly confidential. Address Box C-877, care Editor & Publisher.

The Buffalo Territory Offers Big Possibilities To National Advertisers

Twelfth American City; second in New York State, Buffalo, with over half a million people and the surrounding trade area with three hundred thousand more, affords a rich market to national advertisers. The effective medium to capture this desirable market is the big, popular, home newspaper—A. B. C. Net paid 105,958, 80% of English-Speaking Homes.

The Buffalo Evening News
Edward H. Butler, Editor & Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

"THE METROPOLITAN FOR FICTION"

Stories by these Authors Soon

Mary Roberts Rinehart
A. S. M. Hutchinson
Gouverneur Morris
Samuel Hopkins Adams
P. G. Wodehouse
George Kibbe Turner

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., General Manager
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK

When Seeking Facts

Librarians, business corporations, banking houses, writers, statisticians, reviewers, dramatists, critics, and others who need facts concerning events—national and international—state and municipal—and other information of particular interest—consult The New York Times Index. It traces the course of any event from its inception. The Times Index gives the date, page and column where desired information may be found in The New York Times.

THE NEW YORK TIMES INDEX
$2.00 a Volume $8 a Year
Issued Quarterly

The
Pittsburg Press
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURG
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St., New York
544 Fort Dearborn Bank Bldg., Chicago
A. J. NORRIS HILL, Hearst Bldg., San Francisco

WIRE NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspapers
International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

HUNCHES

Managing editors and city editors are always on the lookout for news; and feature ideas that can be used locally. Editor & Publisher will pay $1 for each hunch published under this head. The fact that the hunch is not being worked successfully in your city does not bar it from this department. Address your contributions to the Hunch Editor. When they appear, clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable hunches will not be returned.

"HOW Does Color Effect Your Moods?" is a series of interviews started by a middle-western paper. This is especially interesting to women because it embraces the subject of dress. Artists, interior decorators, actors, dress makers offer a good start but representation need not be confined to them because reporters will find a great many persons with opinions upon this subject.—H. D. K.

How much of your city's expense does each family in your city carry? How does 1922 compare with other years? The assessors can give all desired information and perhaps some of the city officials will make statements.—R. M. C.

Every town or city has enough musical talent or possibilities for developing musical talent to make a "Music Corner" feature a popular one for any newspaper. It can contain anything and everything musical—write-ups of musical concerts or programs, news items about certain bands or orchestras playing for some special occasion, news from music teachers, music news clippings from neighboring papers, music news clippings from music trade journals, interview articles of famous musicians playing in or near the town, items about the most popular sheet music, roll, and record for each month, anniversaries of musicians and music, new pieces by famous composers, write-ups of local musicians and short pithy articles from local musicians on popular musical topics. Music dealers, teachers, leaders of bands and orchestras, musicians and music-lovers will be only too glad to help maintain such a feature in a paper, assuring it much popularity from the start.—L. E. D.

Schools will soon be opening. Get boys and girls under twelve years old to write 100-word letters on "Why I Want to Start to School," by offering some small prize. Follow this up with a similar offer for the best article of same length on "Why I Don't Want to Start to School." Both series of letters will prove both interesting and amusing.— W. H. M.

A few weeks ago The American Magazine carried an article by H. G. Wells in which he attempted to choose the six greatest men in all history. He gave his opinions and reasons for his choice. Some newspapers have adapted the idea to their own use and are running interesting feature in which their readers determine "The ..... Greatest in ..... (city or state)." The Indianapolis News is asking its readers to submit names as the Ten Greatest Living Indianians and it is proving a most seccessful feature. The persons receiving the largest number of votes are automatically chosen. Reasons for the choice are sometimes given and this makes interesting reading.—Y. C. C.

All the world admires the man (and the woman) who keeps his temper under all provocation to lose it. Who in your town that meets large numbers of people daily—many irate—is a bear for equanimity? He may be some one at the post office, the "trouble" man of any of the public utility corporations, the superintendent of schools. (He may even be a city editor!) Whoever he is, there's a story in him. —D. M.

Nearly every person has had worries that after all have been needless and have amounted to nothing. Interview a number of people on "My Greatest Needless Worry and What Came of It." The interviews will be interesting and will prove helpful to many people.—W. H. M.

How many years will it be before the telephone company will have its lines and cables underground and rid the streets of the unsightly poles and wires. How much has been done in the past few years and how much does the local manager estimate will be done in the present year? It is bound to come and is only a question of time.—R. M. C.

Why not have a flower day once a week, when all people who so desire may bring flowers from their home gardens for distribution to hospitals and homes that do not have flowers. The plan is now is practice in Westchester County, New York, where flowers are brought into the Grand Central Terminal for distribution in New York City.—G. H. D.

"Husbands' Hall of Fame—Who are they and what do they look like, these husbands of prominent Chicago women?" is a daily photo and short biography feature started by the Chicago Herald and Examiner.—H. D. K.

"If they scrap 'Obey' in the marriage ceremony, why not scrap 'alimony' in divorce"? This is quoted in a press dispatch as being the view of a prominent Episcopal rector. Here is the basis for a colorful yarn with a chance for much humor interest and "sob" dope. Interview ministers and others. Get your readers to contribute their views. Play it up and you will start an interesting controversy.—F. C. D.

"Do you like your job? If so, Why?" Put that question to a representative list of employes in various industries and print the answers. It will provide a feature which will set your readers to arguing.—B. A. T.

What stand do the local temperance societies take on the prohibition laws? Are more stringent methods of enforcement favored or are various modifications desired? The local stand is much more interesting than the national poll now being conducted, and that is creating no end of conversation.—R. M. C.

Women readers establish a newspaper and it is well to play news to them. A small town daily offered a $5 prize for the best and quickest way to repair a dropped stitch in silk hose. The replies ran for a week and 200 new readers were put on.— B. R. A.

Walking encyclopædias are always interesting. Find an old collector who knows every street and alley in the town. Then get him to tell how the town has grown—what stood here and what stood there in the way of old landmarks and some of the experiences he has had.—B. E.

A St. Paul newspaper has running a series of short articles "Capitalized Hobbies" which have described hobbies of men in that city which have led to future life work. Many a man and woman has taken up a hobby or side line that has eventually led to full time work and a successful career.—G. S., Jr.

This world of ours has been teaching young girls not to go out auto riding with strange men. Now comes the Omaha Daily News with a feature on the same subject. A girl reporter was stationed at a prominent corner in Omaha as if she was waiting for a street car to town. The hour was the business rush hour to town in the morning. Out of 176 auto drivers, two asked her to ride, and they were personal friends. How is it in your city?—A. R. D.

The men who come nearest to knowing what the population of your city is going to be 10 or 20 years hence are the telephone company engineers. They make surveys to determine future equipment needs, and experience has shown their population estimates to be right to a remarkable degree.—E. C. L.

Tragedy and hope walk together at the general delivery window of the large city post office. There is the wayward son who has asked for money to come home and begin anew. Here comes the daughter who has forgotten the advice and prayers of her mother. Now she is just dying for a word from home. There comes a mother or father or son who are trying to trace each other through the channels of Uncle Sam's largest industry. Every letter sent or received at the post office has some kind of a sentiment attached to it. Women as well as men send and receive letters that they would not dare receive at home. Clandestine letters for and from both men and women make up a large part of the general delivery mail. Many human interest stories await the sympathetic reporter at the general delivery window of the post office. And the clerks know a lot too.—G. S., Jr.

About forty women from the ages of three to eighty years get their hair bobbed in Minneapolis every week according to a recent newspaper story. How many, and at what ages do the women in your city bob their hair? Why do they bob their hair? Have you any exclusive "bobber" shops in your city?—G. S., Jr

Your High-Class Readers Will Watch for
THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY.
The young lady across the way says her father and mother have had the same family doctor ever since they were married and he's getting to be quite a veterinarian in the service.

A Daily Two by Six
FOR
Those to Whom the Average Comic Does Not Appeal
THE McCLURE NEWSPAPER SYNDICATE,
373 Fourth Ave., New York City.

NEW ORLEANS STATES
ADVERTISING RATES AFTER OCT. 1
12c DAILY FLAT
15c SUNDAY FLAT
Daily over 51,000
Sunday over 63,000
PRESENT RATE
10c D. & S. on 2,000 Lines
Represented by
S. C. Beckwith, Special Agency
New York
John M. Branham Co., Chicago

Million Dollar Hearst Features
The World's Greatest Circulation Builders
International Feature Service, Inc.
New York

America's Best Magazine Pages
Daily and Sunday
Newspaper Feature Service
241 WEST 58TH STREET
New York City

DEVELOP YOUR BUSINESS IN THE SOUTH

The great purchasing power of the South is not limited to its agricultural resources. The South, through hard endeavor, has brought about a condition through which prosperous agricultural resources in timber and mining, and prosperous manufacturing has opened a most fertile field for National Advertisers and manufacturers of practically every class of necessities and luxuries.

The possibilities and opportunities are increasing every day, thus making the purchasing power greater not only of the South but of the entire nation.

The bank deposits have increased nearly ten times during the past twenty years until they have reached the stupendous amount of more than $6,000,000,000.

The South is producing nearly all the country's cotton, sugar cane, bauxite, barytes, turpentine and rosin, fuller's-earth.

It is producing over half of the country's petroleum, lumber, rice, cabbage, graphite.

Her mineral production exceeds two billion two hundred and eighty million a year.

The South wants and needs goods from the outside. Tell them what you have to sell in these daily newspapers. Right now the opportunities encourage heavy newspaper advertising.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA.
††Birmingham News .....(E)	65,152	.15	.15
††Birmingham News .....(S)	71,021	.15	.15
*Mobile News-Item .....(E)	10,392	.05	.05
*Mobile Register .....(M)	20,299	.07	.07
*Mobile Register .....(S)	32,442	.085	.086
FLORIDA.
Jacksonville Journal .....(E)	19,508	.07	.07
*Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville(M&S)	33,398	.08(9cS)	.08(9cS)
*Pensacola News .....(E)	4,795	.03	.03
*Pensacola News .....(S)	5,291	.03	.03
St. Petersburg Independent.....(E)	5,048	.023	.023
GEORGIA.
*Augusta Chronicle .....(M)	10,814	.045	.045
*Augusta Chronicle .....(S)	11,476	.045	.045
*Augusta Herald .....(E)	12,886	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald .....(S)	12,803	.05	.05
*Columbus Ledger .....(E&S)	8,789	.04	.04
*Macon Telegraph .....(M)	20,378	.06	.06
*Macon Telegraph .....(S)	21,837	.06	.06
*Savannah Morning News .....(M&S)	20,875	.055	.05
KENTUCKY.
*Lexington Leader .....(E)	15,621	.05	.05
*Lexington Leader .....(S)	15,566	.05	.05
Louisville Herald .....(M)	43,629	.09	.09
Louisville Herald .....(S)	55,572	.09	.09

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
NORTH CAROLINA.
*Asheville Times .....(E)	6,663	.04	.04
*Asheville Citizen .....(M)	10,280	.045	.045
*Asheville Citizen .....(S)	8,932	.045	.045
*Durham Herald .....(M)	6,495	.04	.04
Greensboro Daily News.....(M)	18,643	.05	.05
Greensboro Daily News.....(S)	26,112	.06	.06
*Raleigh News and Observer.....(M)	24,005	.06	.06
*Raleigh News and Observer.....(S)	28,190	.06	.06
*Raleigh Times .....(E)	8,203	.03	.04
SOUTH CAROLINA.
*Columbia State .....(M)	20,298	.06	.06
*Columbia State .....(S)	21,760	.06	.06
*Greenville News .....(M)	12,039	.04	.04
Greenwood Index Journal .....(E&S)	4,185	.025	.025
*Spartanburg Journal .....(E)	4,125	.04	.04
*Spartanburg Herald .....(M&S)	5,511	.04	.04
TENNESSEE.
*Chattanooga News .....(E)	20,731	.06	.06
*Chattanooga Times .....(M)	21,209	.07	.07
*Chattanooga Times .....(S)	23,053	.07	.07
Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(M)	83,113	.16	.15
Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(S)	110,907	.19	.18
*Nashville Banner .....(E)	41,700	.07	.07
*Nashville Banner .....(S)	42,931	.08	.08
VIRGINIA.
‡Bristol Herald Courier.....(M&S)	7,336	.04	.04
Danville Register and Bee.....(M&E)	11,992	.045	.045
Newport News Times-Herald.....(E)	9,041	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press.....(S&M)	6,051	.05	.05
*Roanoke Times & World-News.(M&E)	21,420	.07	.06
*Roanoke Times .....(S)	14,560	.07	.06

‡Includes Bristol, Tenn.

††Publisher's Statement for July, 1922.

ADVERTISERS

Advertise for Results

TO HEAR some of those who pretend to know something about advertising argue against the direct results produced through well-directed and properly timed newspaper advertising and in favor of mediums alleged to produce different effects must be disheartening to the man who pays for the space.

To the merchants doing a business running up from $9,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year—those who live and have built up their enormous traffic through local newspaper advertising—and who have admittedly reduced retailing to a successful science, the arguments of the sellers of space in general mediums must seem like childish prattle.

It is the retailers all over the country who are the natural distributing channels to the consuming public. These retailers have learned the power and direct action of newspaper advertising in moving stocks from their shelves.

For the manufacturer of any line to be sold to the public through retailers, newspaper advertising over local dealers' names is distinctly the best dealer help and a most powerful force in securing distribution.

Those advertisers who fight shy of using space in our Saturday newspapers on the ground that there is too long a carry-over until Monday, with Sunday papers intervening, are losing an opportunity. To make their appeal where it will be more readily seen, as in a Saturday paper, is being found very effective by some merchants who feel the strain of being compelled to use much larger space Sunday in order to have a chance of their ad being seen.

THE NEW YORK GLOBE

MEMBER A. B. C. JASON ROGERS, Publisher MEMBER A. B. C.

Chicago LORENZEN & THOMPSON, Inc., Special Representatives New York

THIS ISSUE: TO SANDY GRISWOLD, SPORTSMANSHIP'S THE THING

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.]

Vol. 55. No. 16 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

Tribune Milline Rates Decline

Chicago Tribune rates per line have not been raised in more than two years, but Chicago Tribune circulation has increased enormously.

524,746

was the net paid week-day circulation of The Chicago Tribune in August—the largest monthly average in our history. On week days (exclusive of Sunday) The Tribune now far exceeds all other papers in Chicago and suburban circulation—370,200 net paid in August. Two years ago the Milline rate for advertising in The Daily Tribune was $1.55. Today it is $1.33.

What Are Your Milline Costs in Other Mediums?

The Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

The Tribune's new Book of Facts on Markets and Merchandising will be mailed free to any selling organization requesting it on business stationery.

THE EMPIRE STATE
LEADS THEM ALL
IN 1922 INCOME TAX RECEIPTS

In the report for showing collections from income and profits taxes in the United States for 1922, New York State is shown to have paid the largest amount, $529,971,676, on a total receipt of $2,087,946,243 or over 25% of the whole. The next highest state paid only 11% of the whole.

New York is the true goal of mercantile conquest for every advertiser. The really big merchandising successes all obtained by going where the BIG money is—and here is why the Empire State is the successful National Advertisers' big money maker.

The merchandising organizations of the New York State newspapers guarantee co-operation that is safe, sane, sound in principle and certain to link the sales organization with the advertising endeavor so strongly that success is certain for merchandise of merit.

THESE ARE THE PAPERS WHICH WILL SELL YOUR PRODUCT

	Circulation	2,500 Lines	10,000 Lines
*Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(M)	31,950	.09	.09
*Albany Knickerbocker Press.....(S)	47,041	.11	.11
Auburn Citizen .....(E)	6,702	.04	.035
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle.....(E)	61,561	.20	.20
*Brooklyn Daily Eagle.....(S)	75,566	.20	.20
*Buffalo Courier and Enquirer...(M&E)	85,857	.18	.18
*Buffalo Courier .....(S)	120,554	.27	.22
*Buffalo Express .....(M)	38,099	.12	.10
*Buffalo Express .....(S)	58,205	.18	.14
*Buffalo Evening News .....(E)	104,958	.21	.21
*Buffalo Evening Times.....(E)	85,006	.15	.15
*Buffalo Sunday Times .....(S)	102,809	.15	.15
*Corning Evening Leader.....(E)	7,364	.04	.04
Elmira Star-Gazette .....(E)	23,792	.09	.07
Geneva Daily Times .....(E)	5,432	.04	.04
*Glens Falls Post-Star.....(M)	7,324	.03	.03
*Gloversville Leader Republican.....(E)	6,295	.03	.03
Gloversville Morning Herald.....(M)	5,717	.035	.03
Hornell Tribune-Times .....(E)	6,874	.035	.035
*Ithaca Journal-News .....(E)	7,454	.04	.04
*Jamestown Journal .....(E)	7,030	.025	.025
*Jamestown Morning Post.....(M)	9,525	.05	.03
*Middletown Times-Press .....(E)	6,721	.03	.03
*Mount Vernon Daily Argus.....(E)	8,056	.04	.04
Newburgh Daily News.....(E)	10,378	.05	.05
New Rochelle Daily Star.....(E)	3,900	.02	.02
*New York Globe.....(E)	149,882	.40	.38
*New York Evening Mail.....(E)	147,760	.41	.40
New York Evening Post.....(E)	35,006	.32	.25
The New York Herald.....(M)	177,629	.48	.45
The New York Herald.....(S)	177,629	.48	.45
The Sun, New York.....(E)	180,442	.48	.45
New York Times.....(M)	344,596	.65	.6305
New York Times.....(S)	542,039	.75	.7275
*New York Tribune.....(M)	137,011	.40	.36
*New York Tribune.....(S)	141,973	.40	.36
New York World.....(M)	351,309	.60	.58
New York World.....(S)	601,108	.60	.58
New York World.....(E)	280,727	.60	.58
*Niagara Falls Gazette.....(E)	14,196	.06	.05
*Olean Times .....(E)	6,227	.03	.03
*Poughkeepsie Star and Enterprise..(E)	11,340	.05	.05
Rochester Times-Union .....(E)	64,388	.20	.18
Saratoga Springs Saratogian.....(E)	8,224	.04	.04
*Staten Island Daily Advance.....(E)	8,782	.04	.04
Syracuse Journal .....(E)	45,014	.10	.10
Troy Record .....(M&E)	22,647	.05	.05

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Auditor's Report, April 1, 1922.

YOU CAN CASH IN ON NATIONAL BETTER HOMES WEEK

OCTOBER 9th TO 15th

The Better Homes Movement is sweeping the country. If there has not yet been a Better Homes Exposition or Institute in your town there will be. Better Homes Week has the endorsement of President Harding, Vice-President Coolidge, Secretary Hoover, the Governors of almost all the States, Educators and the Clergy generally and all sorts of Civic Organizations. Ten thousand Women's Clubs will observe Better Homes Week with appropriate programs. These folks expect their newspapers to take some special notice of Better Homes Week.

SO DO THE RETAIL FURNITURE DEALERS EVERYWHERE

WE CAN SHOW YOU HOW

To Take Full Advantage of This Advertising Opportunity

BETTER HOMES SERVICE meets every imaginable newspaper need for Articles and Features, Illustrations, Advertising Layouts and Designs suitable for use for Better Homes Week.

This Service is not merely a collection of pretty pictures and trite "household hints" warmed over by hack writers. It is fresh and authoritative in every line. The authors are experts in furnishing, interior decoration, domestic science, architecture and design. Many of them are regular contributors to the foremost women's magazines. The illustrations, like the text, are up to the minute and practical. Everything shown in them is current merchandise that every dealer can supply or that is otherwise commercially available, yet these photographs and drawings are absolutely non-commercial works of art, specially grouped and drawn by artists of merit for this Service.

This Service Includes

1. Text and illustrations for a Better Homes Department, Section or Supplement of any size up to 24 pages.
   Text supplied in either proofs, mats or plates as desired. Cuts supplied in photographs, mats or plates.
   Full pages in mats or W. N. U. plates.
2. Advertising Designs and Layouts suitable for all classes of furniture and house equipment advertisers.
   Supplied either in mats or mortised stereo plates.
3. Complete program of special features and "stunts" which you can develop to give local color to Better Homes Week in your town.

The Cost Is Nominal

Newspapers equipped with BETTER HOMES SERVICE can approach their local Retail Furniture Dealers, Interior Decorators, Piano and Phonograph Dealers, Art Dealers, Electrical Supply Houses, Carpet and Rug Houses, Housefurnishing Equipment Concerns, Building Supply and Material Men, Contractors—every line that has to do with the building, furnishing, equipping and decorating of the home—with full confidence that the quality of co-operation which the newspaper is thus enabled to offer its advertisers will be appreciated to the utmost.

At the same time, newspapers using this Service have the satisfaction of knowing that they are giving their readers precisely what they know that they need, in practical, interesting information, advice and suggestions for the improvement of the home in all of its aspects, social and moral as well as material.

Better Homes Service can be had on an Exclusive Limited Territory basis if desired.

For Proofs, Prices and Terms Write or Wire

BETTER HOMES SERVICE

Division of American Homes Bureau

714 Monadnock Building, 53 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago

What home life in Philadelphia means to you

In Philadelphia there are 400,000 separate homes. Of this great number, 175,000 are owned by the families which reside in them.

Thus a large portion of Philadelphia's population of workers has a pride of possession which is justified by the fact that, structure for structure, homes in Philadelphia surpass those of other cities.

Belief in home life is inherent in Philadelphia. In the "City of Homes" the family circle holds thousands of individuals who value highly the things that add to the comfort, the convenience and the enjoyment of life.

To manufacturers who produce articles that make home life more attractive—furniture, carpets, musical instruments, and scores of other things —Philadelphia now holds out big openings for profitable business.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Bulletin

A. B. C. report of net paid daily average circulation for six months ending March 31, 1922—494,499 copies a day.

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
681 Market Street

LONDON
M. Bryans,
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
J. J. E. Hessey,
5 rue Lamartine (9).

(Copyright 1922, Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 6,300

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday preceding the date of publication—by the Editor and Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Branch Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 55 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1922 No. 16

TO GRISWOLD, SPORTSMANSHIP'S THE THING

Veteran of the Sport Desk Whose Work Has Carried Through from the Fight of Sullivan and Ryan In 1882, Finds Music in the Murmur of a Brook.

By BASIL G. RUDD

WHERE is there another active sports writer who has sat at the ringside of more great battles than Sandy" Griswold?

Since the days of bare knuckles and pikes, Sandy has been turning in copy. And now at the age of 73 he is still flashing a pencil—for he has never learned to use a typewriter—as sports editor of the Omaha World-Herald.

But Sandy is more than a veteran sports writer. He is a sportsman as much at home in forest, field and stream as he is at any sporting event. Perhaps that explains why he looks and acts like a 33-year-old rather than as a man over three score and ten.

"Since the most callow days of my youth," he said in his column the other day, "the rustling of the winds through trees, the murmur of brook or stream, the note of bird or animal has been an invitation to join them and get a little of that rest that Mother Nature always vouchsafes her children."

It was in the woods around Marion, Ohio, wher he was born, that Sandy, christened Samuel Girard Veals Griswold, caught faint glimpses of the text that nature has been expounding to him ever since.

Mr. Griswold comes of a family distinguished in letters, art and science. It is not strange that when 15 years of age he started writing gratuitous sketches. In 1873 he joined the staff of the New York Sun. Within a year his work attracted the attention of Francis S. Street of the New York Weekly. While working with the latter publication, Mr. Griswold entered the field of dime novel writing.

Dead broke one day he sat in his room on lower Broadway and batted out between 4 p. m. and 10:30 a. m. the next day the thirty-thousand word dime novel, "Border Fugitives." For his work he got $100. In the seventies he produced sixty-five such novels. Among his contemporaries in that realm of literature were men like Sylvanus Cobb, Ned Buntline, Edward S. Ellis, Hamilton Myers, Captain Prentiss Ingraham and Emerson Bennett.

Later Sandy became city editor of the Toledo Commercial. From there he went to the Cincinnati Enquirer. In 1886 he came to Omaha, Nebraska, to work for the Omaha Be as sports editor. A few years later he accepted the position of sports editor of the newspaper now known as the World-Herald. And he works at his job with the World-Herald now with a vigor and enthusiasm that is not surpassed by his much younger assistants.

Sandy can take one back to the fight of Sullivan and Ryan in 1882. That was his first big assignment in the ring. Since then he has reported more big scraps at the ringside than any active newspaper man. Cast your eye over this list:

Sullivan and Kilrain in 1889.
Fitzsimmons and Black Pearl in 1891.
Fitzsimmons and Peter Maher in 1892.
Corbett and Sullivan in 1892.
Fitzsimmons and Jem Hall in 1893.
Corbett and Mitchell in 1894.
Fitzsimmons and Choynski in 1894.
Fitzsimmons and Corbett in 1897.
McCoy and Choynski in 1890.
Jeffries and Fitzsimmons in 1899.
Jeffries and Corbett in 1900.
Fitzsimmons and Ruhlin in 1900.
Fitzsimmons and Upham in 1900.
Fitzsimmons and Sharkey in 1900.
Jeffries and Ruhlin in 1901.
Jeffries and Fitzsimmons in 1902.
Jeffries and Corbett in 1903.
Jeffries and Munroe in 1904.

And so the list grows up to and including the Dempsey-Carpentier contest.

Though Sandy is cognizant of great changes in the evolution of sport, he still believes that the savage in us demands to see a scrap. It is the fight in us that makes sports such a prominent feature of the news, he says. "Men love to watch a contest between the brain and muscle of a man with another, and between a team of men with another. Civilization demands that danger to life be eliminated, and rightly so. But so long as there is red blood in us, we shall enjoy to watch a scrap."

Throughout the section covered by Omaha newspapers, Sandy's dope, his nature stories and his opinions on all kinds of sports, both indoor and outdoor, are sought by thousands of readers. By means of the written word, he has established a personal journalism on the sports page like unto that which characterize some of the great editorial writers of a few decades ago.

While talking of his vocation, the eyes of Sandy wandered to a giant tree shading the side of his apartment. And the dean of sports writers wandered into reminiscences about the "little creatures of the wild" upon which he keeps "devoted espionage."

"Men don't kill birds as they used to," he mused. "Even scientists, who used to kill strange specimens, study them alive now." And here he recalled the "salad days" in the late Sixties when he saw wild pigeons in Ohio so thick that waves of them would obscure the heavens.

"A big bag was the ambition of sportsmen those days. Now there is not a wild pigeon left," he said regretfully. "But sportsmen are more thoughtful now. They are contented with the joy of the great outdoors and a reasonable bag of game."

Comparing sports writers of modern times with those of the old days of Langdon Smith, "Right Cross" Armstrong, P. J. Donahue, Howard Hackett, Nelse Innes, Joe Campbell, Bill Blunt and Macon McCormick—all now silent—Mr. Griswold was chary with his comment. With delight he recalled their work as that of "men of culture, refinement and rare intellection."

"They were probably no more brilliant nor capable than many of those of the present time. And yet," he mused, "they stood out in bold relief that is difficult to attain in these days of countless, splendid and graphic pictorial writers, simply because in those times there were fewer of them than there are today. Those writers obtained distinction for accuracy, a stickling for truthfulness in detail and for the picturesque construction of their stories. Rare as he was, the old day sporting editor was certainly a god of the realm among the rabid admirers that fairly swarmed to his colors.

"Today," Mr. Griswold thinks, "there is less opportunity among the numerous sport scribblers to attain the heights of fame and popularity that was accorded them a few decades ago. Yet there are many of them in the public eye today even more gifted and more versatile in their general characterization than there were in Auld Lang Syne."

Sandy has contributed considerably in quickening interest in nature among persons of all ages in this middle west. Some twenty years ago when Theodore Roosevelt and John Burroughs attacked stories that William J. Long had written for study in schools, Sandy made a vigorous defense in behalf of the accuracy of Long's stories. And since that time Sandy has been writing columns each week for the daily press of the hints at a larger life out with nature.

"I found," he writes, "much at variance with the mandates of man in the lives of the little folk of the wood and field and stream—always striving to understand their common life, as well as my own, and always endeavoring to be fair and generous and cherful about it. And you must admit the doctrine still holds good, as the sun goes down upon mellowing old age, much better than falling into the depths with Schopenhauer, and finding no good in anything."

Those lines give one a glimpse of the soul of this virile, poetic, kindly, picturesque and prolific sportsman and sports writer. He is a sportsman first. He has found the fountain of youth. And he journeys hopefully and joyously in the belief that "the best is yet to be."

Blood of the true sportsman tingles in the veins of Sandy Griswold and he accepts the note of a bird or the rustling of wind through the trees as an invitation for the quiet and rest that Mother Nature vouchsafes her children.

HEARST'S ROCHESTER DAILY STARTS; SYRACUSE PAPER, SEPT. 27

Rochester Journal Had 16-Page First Issue Sept. 12—Rush Plans in Syracuse for Evening and Sunday American—Binghamton and Albany Mentioned for Future Papers

NEW YORK State publishers in several cities are looking forward to invasion of their fields in the near future, as the result of the start this week of the Rochester Evening Journal and the announcement that the Syracuse American, evening and Sunday, would be on the streets Sept. 27. Despite Mr. Hearst's recent statement, printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of August 26, that he would not enter small city fields, there have been persistent reports this week that he has been endeavoring to purchase the Binghamton Sun from Congressman William Hill, or failing in that, that he would establish a new daily in that city. Albany is also mentioned as included in Mr. Hearst's plans.

The Rochester Journal appeared Monday, with a 16-page edition. Its make-up follows the general line of the New York Evening Journal and it carries the usual Hearst features. The pages are eight columns wide, with 12-em columns. In addition to city, vicinity, telegraph and sporting news, the paper carried a full page of cartoons, two pages of New York Journal features and the editorials on the last page, in accordance with the Hearst custom. In addition to a double-page advertisement of the Cosmopolitan Magazine and considerable advertising of the new paper, about 20 columns of other advertising was carried in the first edition, which is stated to have had a circulation of about 30,000.

The daily is being produced under the direct supervision of E. C. Rogers, formerly business manager of the Washington Times. Mr. Rogers is listed as publisher, with Shirley Olympius as general manager. Harry Gray, formerly of the New York American, is managing editor, and Lawrence D. Gehrig, formerly of the Rochester Post-Express, is advertising manager.

The average Sunday circulation of the Rochester Sunday American, which started June 24, is given as over 45,000, and the paper claims an average local display advertising in excess of other Rochester Sunday papers. To date the average advertising carried by the Sunday American figures over 160 columns, according to its officials.

The Rochester paper has an editorial staff reputed to cost in excess of $2,000 weekly. It is headed by Morris Adams, as city editor. He was formerly managing editor of the Rochester Democrat & Chronicle. The staff includes C. Ray Remington, sports editor, formerly at the same desk for the Rochester Herald; Miss Ruth Chamberlain, Raymond C. Ghent and William Costello, formerly of the Democrat & Chronicle; Willis Broadbrooke, formerly of the Rochester Picture Play News, and others.

In a special article in the Wednesday edition of the Rochester Journal, a number of officials of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce and other organizations expressed their approval of the Journal. Up to Wednesday each edition contained 16 pages.

The Rochester Sunday American and Evening Journal will be represented in the foreign advertising field by Payne, Burns & Smith, Inc., in the East and the G. Logan Payne Company in the West.

The record set for installing a newspaper plant when the Rochester Sunday American was started will be broken in the Syracuse preparations, it is believed. Workmen started September 12 to prepare the two-story brick building purchased from the Firestone Tire Company for $125,000 cash last Saturday. The pressbeds were laid Monday and the press is now on the way to Syracuse. Five carloads of machinery have been unloaded and it is believed that the plant will be in operating condition in time for the first issue on September 27, the day before the Democratic State convention opens in that city. This is pointed out by local newspaper men, despite Mr. Hearst's repeated denials that politics have nothing to do with his newspaper enterprises. It is also reported that Mr. Hearst during the summer tried to purchase one of the local afternoon papers, but was unsuccessful.

The rumor has again been revived that Mr. Hearst was negotiating for the purchase of the Albany Times-Union, now owned by former Gov. Martin H. Glynn. This rumor was given out several weeks ago by William J. Connors, proprietor of the Buffalo Courier & Enquirer, but was denied both by Mr. Hearst's representatives and by Mr. Glynn.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER received Thursday the following telegraphic message from Mr. Glynn: "There is no foundation to the persistent rumors that I have sold the Times-Union. The stock, bonds and real estate are held absolutely and solely by myself and members of my family and staff."

"NOT FOR SALE," SAYS HANNA

Hearst Purchase of Cleveland News-Leader Denied

Reports that William R. Hearst had purchased or was endeavoring to purchase the Cleveland News and Sunday News-Leader were denied this week by Dan R. Hanna, Jr., vice-president of the Cleveland company. Mr. Hanna told EDITOR & PUBLISHER "there is no truth in the rumor of Hearst's purchase of the News-Leader. In fact there have been no negotiations. The Cleveland News and Sunday News-Leader are not in the market."

It is believed that the report gained currency following a recent visit to Cleveland by Arthur Brisbane and references in his column in the Hearst newspapers and others to the character of Cleveland office buildings and their architecture.

HEARST PAPERS ON 12-EM BASIS

Using 70-Inch Instead of 72-Inch Paper, at Saving of 3 Per Cent

All Hearst newspapers are now using an eight-column page, 12 ems to the column, and have reduced their newsprint rolls from a 72-inch to a 70-inch basis. Column widths have been reduced half an em and margins have been reduced very slightly from their former widths of one inch in the center crotch and five-eighths of an inch on the side.

The new size, which was instituted on the Hearst Pacific Coast newspapers six months ago, permits a paper saving estimated at 3 per cent. The New York papers, which use somewhat less than half of the annual Hearst consumption of 200,000 tons of newsprint, were the last to change their make-up. The money saving possible under the new size is theoretically about $400,000, less expense of altering chases and presses to accommodate the new pages.

The chief difficulty, it is stated, has been to induce the paper mills to change their machines to the 70-inch sizes, due to lack of market for the extra trim.

Roto for Democrat & Chronicle

The Rochester Democrat & Chronicle has added an eight-page rotogravure section to its Sunday edition.

Times-Union Starts Sport Extra

The Rochester Times-Union has started a six o'clock evening sporting edition, consisting of a green cover extra for the usual financial edition. It contains all baseball scores, racing results and telegraph and local news received too late for the regular editions.

I. T. U. LIKELY TO O. K. APPEAL ON "BOGUS"

Convention Politics Favor Syracuse Union—Kellogg Says I. T. U. Has No Jurisdiction, as Matter Has Been Decided

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 14.—With the conservative forces firmly in the saddle it is considered probable that the convention of the International Typographical Union, now in session at the Hotel Ambassador here, will sustain the appeal of Syracuse Union No. 55 from the decision of the Executive Council on the question of the arbitrability of the reproduction of foreign advertising.

The matter is now in the hands of the Appeals Committee and it is expected that a report will be made on the floor of the convention either tomorrow morning or afternoon. Nothing could be learned this evening on the nature of the report to be made by the committee, but if it is unfavorable to the Syracuse union and sustains the Executive Council, it is believed that the conservatives in the convention will muster sufficient strength to carry it over the report of the committee.

The convention's action in the Syracuse matter will have no weight in the settlement of the dispute, however, according to H. N. Kellogg, chairman of the special standing committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who holds that the entire proceeding is under the International Arbitration Contract and that no other body or court than the International Board of Arbitration has jurisdiction or the right to rule on it.

Mr. Kellogg outlined the position of the special standing committee in a bulletin to members dated Sept. 9, as follows:

"Immediately after the ruling of the International Board of Arbitration at its meeting in June, 1922, in the matter of a decision by the chairman of the special standing committee and the president of the I. T. U. concerning the arbitrability of a demand for the resetting of foreign matter, that the local parties proceed at once to local arbitration, as provided in the arbitration contract, the publishers requested the union to join them in such procedure.

"The union notified the publishers it would not comply, and that it would appeal its case to the convention of the I. T. U. The publishers immediately sent a protest to the chairman of the special standing committee who in turn submitted it to the president of the I. T. U. The president forwarded a copy of the publishers' appeal to the union. During the early part of the proceedings the union, after presenting its first counter-proposal to the publishers' proposition, desired the publishers to consider a second counter-proposal, which the publishers refused to do.

"About August 13, President McParland received a communication from the union in which the organization stated that it maintains its right to have consideration of its so-called 'counter-proposal' given by the publishers and that 'this is what should be done, for our proposition contains all the elements of a mutual agreement, or its acceptance or its rejection.'

"The chairman of the special standing committee was advised of this by the president of the I. T. U. and the chairman wrote the publishers suggesting that they write the union and say that if the organization would give its written assurance that it would arbitrate, if the publishers gave consideration to the union's second 'counter-proposal' and rejected it, the publishers would be willing to proceed along those lines. The union, however, refused to give any assurance to arbitrate and stated the 'publishers are without justification in asking a condition precedent to recognition of the union's right to an answer.'

"It is quite evident that the uni purpose throughout this whole matte to delay proceedings as long as poss In any event, whatever decision is m by the convention of the I. T. U. have no bearing on the matter, so fa the publishers are concerned, because executive council of the I. T. U. and I. T. U. convention have no jurisdic whatever in the case.

"The joint letters outlining subj that are arbitrable in the proposit of the publishers and the union w written by the chairman of the sp standing committee and the presiden the I. T. U. under authority veste them by the arbitration agreement. International Board ruled at its J 1922, meeting that the local parties r proceed to arbitration; the entire ceeding is under the International bitration Contract, hence no other b or court has jurisdiction or the r to rule on the matter."

James M. Lynch, a former presider the International and a member of Syracuse union, is directing the against the decision of the executive c cil and the subject has received n attention from the delegates outsid the convention itself. President McParland is expected to take charg the progressive forces.

In the first test of strength, which curred over the appointment of the peals committee, the conservatives by a large majority. In other ma when conservatives and progressives fer the former had continued to keep same lead.

It is the contention of the Syra union that the question is not arbitr but is covered by international law that the executive council in refe it to the International Arbitration B was acting without warrant. Wi representative of the American New per Publishers' Association on the Art tion Board, they alleged that the acti the executive council was "playing the hands" of the employers.

President McParland, on the hand, whose decision in the case later upheld by the Arbitration B claims that the point at issue was trable and to send it from the exec council to the Arbitration Board wa proper step for which there have many precedents.

This question is the only matte come before the convention to the pr time in which relations with the A P. A. have been mentioned.

THREATEN STRIKE IN MONTR

Situation Improves Over Night—P ful Settlement Possible

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISH

MONTREAL, Sept. 14.—In all proba the typographical staffs of the G and Herald will be on strike tomo The Star and La Presse are in ne tion now and a breach may be av J. F. Brady of Vancouver, I. T. U resentative, arrived here today and sulted with local union regarding ne tion with the newspapers. The want $42 for a week of 46 hours. papers are believed to be offering

The wage question is not so imp with the Gazette, the main point at there is the right of the firm to u newspaper force for job printing in of pressure.

This the union is not prepared to cede, as the job printers are on str

No shops have ceased work toda

Active work has been in progres some time with the support of the U Typothetæ of America, training printers, and it is possible that in where a rupture takes place, an will be made to run with non-labor.

MONTREAL September 15.—The ing situation has distinctly improved night. The Gazette appeared as this morning, immediate action h been staged and negotiations for ment of differences are in progress newspaper printers are at work morning and it is hoped that a settlement of all questions in disput be reached without stoppage of w

IO GREEN OLIVES REMAIN IN SPAIN AFTER U. S. NEWSPAPER CAMPAIGN

Importers Co-operated in Purchase of Newspaper and Magazine Space, Filled It With Tempting, Appetizing Copy, and Seville Sold New Crop and Hold-Overs

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

EDITORIAL NOTE.—This is the ninth of a series of articles by Mr. Franklin on important uses of creating sales through newspaper advertising, based on studies of methods and results of current successful local sectional and national users of newspaper advertising. Readers of EDITOR & PUBLISHER who know the facts behind noteworthy efforts are invited to send them to Mr. Franklin, care of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Suggestions and comments are invited. The next article of the series will appear in an early issue. Look for it.

THIS year Spanish green olives were advertised for the first time by the association known as the American Importers of Spanish Green Olives. Newspapers were depended upon almost entirely to carry the responsibility for the success or failure of the co-operative effort.

This dispatch from New York tells what happened as to sales:

'Spanish olive prices have been again advanced all along the line and stocks are hard to obtain. The steamship "Ortega" has arrived with a fair cargo, but it is understood that practically all have been sold 'to arrive.'

'Stocks in Seville are practically depleted, the 1921-1922 crop of 1,530,000 metric tons having been moved in addition to the carry-over of 1920-1921 crop goods. In the local market it is not so much a question of price as it is of obtaining the goods, so great is the scarcity."

This statement, made after careful study by the New York Commercial, authority on market conditions, contains food for thought.

A limited district around Seville, Spain, furnishes Queen olives. Manzanilla olives also grow there in abundance. In fact, no other section of the world so far has succeeded in growing green olives of the proper size, texture and flavor for marketing except from within about 25 miles of this Hispanic city of ancient times.

The delicious flavor of the Spanish green olive is by no means a natural one. When it is picked, it is exceedingly hard, rough-skinned and very bitter. A favorite joke of the growers is to hand a freshly gathered olive to a watching tourist who happens to be present and then observe his discomfiture with glee. The formula, which has been transmitted from generation to generation, is used to cure the olives. Then they are washed in fresh water brine and permitted to ferment in the sun. After several weeks of this fermentation, the olive has become a softer and crisp product, with the appetizing flavor which is familiar.

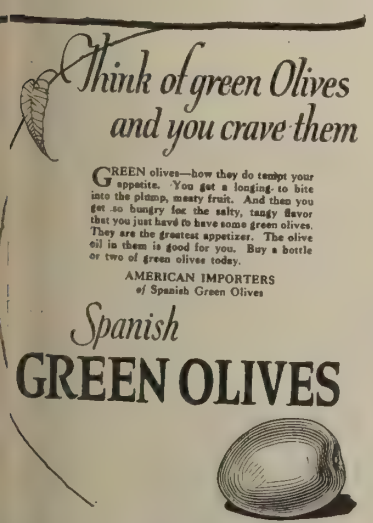
Apart from having a flavor which developed to make the olive more popular than it was, it was found that the fruit had an important food value. The Department of Agriculture announces that Spanish green olives yield 975 calories to the pound, more than twice that credited to potatoes or whole milk, and much higher than pork tenderloin, lean ribs of beef, eggs or cream.

This is due to the fact that the curing and storing in brine stores in the green olive a liberal amount of olive oil. This oil, with cottonseed oil and refined lard, heads the list of common foods in calorie value per pound.

The Queen and Manzanilla olives both are transported to this country, where under the existing strict sanitary laws, they are bottled by the importers. It is customary, however, for the Manzanillas to be stuffed in Spain. A bit of pimiento usually is used to fill the space formerly occupied by the pit. The contrast of the red with the green of the olive has made an unusually eye-compelling window display for many grocers.

Capers, pickled celery, pieces of Queen olives, anchovies and sometimes a mince of several delicacies are made use of for stuffing sometimes, but pimiento alone is the main stuffing used.

The green olive growers and importers both rather pride themselves on the fact that, although a hue and cry was raised over poisoning from olives several years back, there has never been an instance of poisoning from bulk, canned or bottled Spanish green olives known.



Green olives have been imported into the United States for 80 years. Stuffed olives, however, were not known until 1893. Because of its saltiness, the green olive has been found to blend well with bacon, tomatoes, eggs, cheese, pecans and lettuce. An olive club sandwich has come into increasing vogue. Formerly, olives were used principally in occasional sandwiches and salads and as an appetizer at course dinners. They now are made the basis of a number of sauces, dressings, savories, more salads and many of the most delicate and delicious hors d'oeuvres.

"The association known as the American Importers of Spanish Green Olives is not a new one," an executive of N. W. Ayer & Son, Philadelphia, the agency in charge of the account, pointed out when asked to give the essential facts behind and results from this co-operative advertising effort for EDITOR & PUBLISHER readers. "In 1914 several of the most prominent importers organized it for the purpose of bettering shipping conditions from Spain, standardizing containers and improving transportation facilities of bottled green olives in this country. Advertising was thought of for several years, but it was not until 1922 that a campaign was finally put on.

"Before the campaign started, the annual consumption of Spanish green olives in the United States was 3,337,954 gallons. These figures looked large and yet the per capita consumption amounted to but 12 olives per day, or one a month.

Appetite advertising in the newspapers sold out the hold-over from last year and this season's Spanish green olive crop, too.

This copy shows what business men can do cooperatively when they get together in newspaper advertising for the greatest good of all.

Wouldn't this make you hungry for olives? It did thousands of women reached by the newspapers.

The association desired to increase the consumption of olives generally as well as educate the American public to look upon green olives as an all-the-year-round food rather than a seasonable one to be eaten only during the summer."

The copy was designed, first of all, to tease the appetite. The nutrition idea was kept secondary. Nearly every piece of copy showed one or more large green olives almost "good enough to eat" in itself as printed on the newspaper page. The three words, "Spanish GREEN OLIVES," were featured in each advertisement.

The use of an olive branch with leaves on it in various ways in each piece of copy of the series made the advertising distinctive and in every case caused the eye to run unconsciously from the heading at the top to the olives themselves and the name, Spanish Green Olives.

In one piece of copy, the heading aims to tempt mouth-watering this way: "Think of green Olives and you crave them," and follows it up thus:

"Green olives—how they do tempt your appetite. You get a longing to bite into the plump, meaty fruit. And then you get so hungry for the salty, tangy flavor that you just have to have some green olives. They are the greatest appetizer. The olive oil in them is good for you. Buy a bottle or two of green olives today."

Another piece of copy bears the headline, "A salty, tangy flavor all their own."

"Something makes you think of green olives. And immediately you get hungry for the salty, tangy flavor.

"You want to bite into the firm, meaty fruit,—to enjoy the keen delight that green olives bring to your taste. And you just have to have some.

"You can eat one after another—and they are good for you. For the olive oil in green olives is wholesome and healthful. And there is no better appetizer for indifferent appetites. At America's most famous dinners green olives are a part of the menu.

"In salads and sandwiches—as garnishes—or by themselves, green olives are individual and delightful in flavor. Keep them on your table. Buy a bottle or two today."

People are urged to eat all they want and do it often in another advertisement, headed, "You crave that salty, tangy flavor."

Another piece of copy showed the bottle of Spanish Queen Olives put out by the association members and contained the head, "Never packed in anything but glass," thus counteracting any tendency

(Continued on page 36)

BREAKING THROUGH TO THE HUMAN SELF IN THE PERSONAL INTERVIEW

Marcosson, Prince of Interviewers, Before Sailing for Germany Gives His Golden Rules for Securing Material on Which to Build Page-1 Stories

By HAROLD BUTCHER

"I have interviewed celebrities all over the world. I have just cleaned up Japan and China, and there is nothing more to do."

Whereat Isaac Frederick Marcosson, Prince of Interviewers, sighed for more worlds to conquer when he himself was interviewed Saturday morning at his apartment, 18 West 25th street, three hours before he sailed by the White Star liner Olympic, for Germany to investigate conditions. He has interviewed kings and presidents, princes and premiers, earls and generals, Wall Street magnates—even authors and newspapermen!—and now he is going to find out how Germany is facing up to her colossal post-war task of upbuilding broken fortunes.

As an English reporter—I choose the simple word that Marcosson believes covers everything in writing—I have long been interested in the great American interviewer, and before calling on him knew him intimately, so it seemed, from a careful study of his "Adventures in Interviewing."

When I pressed the button of the electric bell by his apartment door the only response, for a few moments, was the continued clicking of a typewriter within. I rang again and then Marcosson himself appeared and with easy courtesy greeted me.

He looked just like the well-known picture in which he stands by the side of the late Lord Northcliffe, but physically he was smaller than I expected. I observed, however, that he was stocky, vigorous and intensely energetic—as he ought to be, for he is in his prime—45 this week, on Wednesday, the 13th. He was the embodiment of alertness, but his keen eyes were almost hidden behind heavily horn-rimmed spectacles. He gave the impression of doing everything by a system, and of finding time to do many things a less occupied man would say could not be done.

"You have caught me when I'm very busy," he said, as he glanced at the serviceable typewriter at which his secretary was finishing some articles and letters for him. "I have to go to Germany this afternoon. What can I do for you?"

Now those words, "What can I do for you?" are a lead. Marcosson, the interviewer, knows exactly what to do when some ruler, boss or statesman asks him that question. One of his maxims is that the interviewer must know exactly what he wants—no vague generalities will do—and must be ready to say immediately, "That is what I want."

So I produced a list of questions. "I knew this would have to be a lightning interview," I explained, "so I came prepared."

He smiled knowingly, took the list, and sat down with it at his desk. His pipe was comfortably settled in the corner of his mouth. He was wearing a Palm Beach jacket over his shirt, which, despite his reputation for startling designs—on account of which Lord Northcliffe dubbed him, "The Shirt King"—was of a quite ordinary blue. I asked him during the interview whether clothes made any difference—thinking of Sir Philip Gibbs, who says they must fit the occasion—but he didn't think that what a man wore was worthy of consideration. I wish I could express the exclamation of disgust with which he dismissed the notion.

"Did you become an interviewer by choice or chance?" Marcosson wrote in pencil his answer to that first question, "By necessity."

"Owing to my father's financial difficulties," he went on, "I had to get out and work when I was sixteen years old. I am illiterate—that is to say I had no public school education such as you would have in England. All that I know I had to acquire myself by practical experience, which is the kind of education that counts."

Perhaps he was thinking of those early days as a cub reporter on the Louisville Times, of the rough and tumble, the poignant pathos, the human tragedies, revealed by his run of the police stations, the hospital, the coroner's office and the morgue. He had six weeks of that for 0 dollars 0 cents per week, and such was the state of the family exchequer that when he threw up a safe job at five dollars a week in exchange for this apprenticeship to journalism it was a serious step that had to be taken with a full consciousness of the risks involved! However, at the end of his six weeks he emerged a fully-fledged reporter and has never looked back since.

The walls of Marcosson's study are covered with pictures of the people he has interviewed. Lloyd George, Northcliffe, Clemenceau, Cardinal Mercier, Winston Churchill, H. G. Wells and J. M. Barrie—to mention but a few—are there.

"He was my great friend," said he as his eyes travelled to Northcliffe's autographed picture.

"Which interviews have you most enjoyed?" I asked.

"Those with Northcliffe and Lloyd George," he answered without hesitation.

"And the most difficult?" I thought he would say, "The Prince Regent of Japan," whom he met only after the most elaborate preparations, but he replied.

"Hugo Stinnes, the German industrial magnate, who had never been interviewed and has never been interviewed since. It took me six weeks to get him and then I almost lost him. At length I had only two hours before catching a train. Hugo Stinnes came round to my hotel—I do not go round begging for interviews now—but I had just gone out to get some flowers for a friend, and the clerk did not tell him where I was. When I returned I found what had happened and thought the opportunity had gone. I tore about till I tracked him down, and he left a meeting and talked with me for an hour. The interview was published far and wide and caused a sensation."

"Have you any golden rules for interviews?"

"Now that's a question in which I am very much interested. First, find out all you can about your man. Get to know his work, his interests, his hobbies. Let him talk on his favorite subject and play the game squarely with him. Never betray a confidence even if it means success. That kind of success is never permanent.

"Don't take notes. That is where you English reporters make a mistake. Taking notes interrupts the smooth flow of a man's conversation. He is never so free and easy when he sees a notebook in front of him. You can remember what he says without notes by picturing his actions at the time, and when you recall these afterwards you will recall also his words."

"How do you manage to discover secrets and awkward truths?" I inquired.

"By being honest and frank," he answered.

Find out all you can about your man.

Get to know his work, his interest and his hobbies.

Let him talk on his favorite subject and play the game fairly with him.

Never betray a confidence, even if it means success. That kind of success is never permanent.

—Isaac Marcosson

"True," I admitted, "but many a time a man realizes that he would not like to see published all that he has said, and asks the interviewer to leave it out."

Marcosson was ready for that objection.

"The more important a statement the more casual the interviewer must become," he declared. "He must not show any excitement; he must not get up suddenly and go away otherwise his man is sure to ask not to be quoted. He must learn that interviewing is an art, and that at the root of it is human nature. He must know human nature and so arrange that by this knowledge he may steer clear of requests to treat certain remarks as confidential. Once he makes a promise he must keep it.

"In this connection I always think of Henri de Blowitz, who was the Paris representative of the London Times for many years. His advice was that when a man gives a correspondent an important piece of news he must stay on and change the conversation. He must not think of leaving till the talk becomes trivial."

Near Marcosson as he spoke was a copy of the Saturday Evening Post, upon which he served as financial editor from 1907 till 1910. This was after his four years under Walter H. Page (who became American Ambassador to Great Britain) on The World's Work, which he joined in 1903 when spending, as usual, his summer vacation in New York with the novelist, James Lane Allen, author of "The Choir Invisible" and "A Kentucky Cardinal." It was on The World's Work that he first had experience of big interviewing, an experience that led to the discovery of those qualities which a first-class interviewer must possess.

"He must have character, patience and resource." Marcosson was quite definite about those qualities, and he wrote them down. "He must inspire confidence when he goes to interview a p character. Nothing is so importar character."

He was right to include patience resource. During the Great War he was constantly travelling bet America and Europe, when he i viewed men on land and sea and i air, when he knew what a fierce s at sea can mean, when he went in of his life from submarines, whe had to break down the barriers o lence surrounding generals and ticians, he needed patience and res —and courage—for even his great and friend Lord Northcliffe coul little more than secure valuable i ductions for him.

He had half-a-dozen appointr with Lloyd George, for example, they all had to be scrapped, and i end he had to travel in the same as the Premier from London to B and interview him on the way bac

Sir J. M. Barrie, the creator of Pan, was another hard nut to c because his shyness made him flee an interview. But he fell to Marcos persistence, and the reason was be Marcosson applied another of the ciples he finds so useful—the san he employed on Stinnes. He finds after a long period of persistent se the thing to do is to force the iss dramatic fashion. Thus on the e his departure from England he graphed to Barrie that he MUS him before he left the country, and wherever he was he would go to Barrie could easily have said, unfortunate Then we shall never Instead, he went to Marcosson they became firm friends.

Another question I put to the of Interviewers was: "If you h survey and epitomise the work of in a week how would you set abou

"I would see the average people said. "They are the sum of the Most prominent people are the mo informed people in the world. Y to know the life of a city by mi with the ordinary people whose and enterprise are running it."

As I was leaving he handed o other piece of advice to interviewe

"Remember," he stated, "that w busy man gives you fifteen minut means fifteen minutes. If you go b that you will be encroaching on hi and will make yourself unpo God-bye and good luck!"

And I left him to his typewrit articles, his pictures of celebritie pipe and his sighing for more wor conquer. What will he do if h lives to repeat himself?

It is high time that someon covered that the moon or Mars habited, and that Isaac Marcos included in the first expedition planetary liner to interview the M the Moon or one of Wells's Marti

GILBERT DID IT

Philadelphia Correspondent Admi Wrote "Mirrors of Washingto

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Wha been an open secret for months in ington newspaper circles,—that W. Gilbert, correspondent for the delphia Evening Public Ledger author of the "Mirrors of Washir has been announced to the world P. Putnam's Sons. The announ was made in connection with G latest volume,—"Behind the Mi brought out anonymously recently the author of the "Mirrors."

For a short time after the publ of the "Mirrors," Washington respondents engaged in free- guessing contest, for it was appar once that the author was a Wash newspaper man, or one very cl the newspaper game as it is pla the capital. Through a process of nation which was carried on by down the anecdotes and incidents in the book, Gilbert was soon fixe and forced into tacit acknowled of the authorship.

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

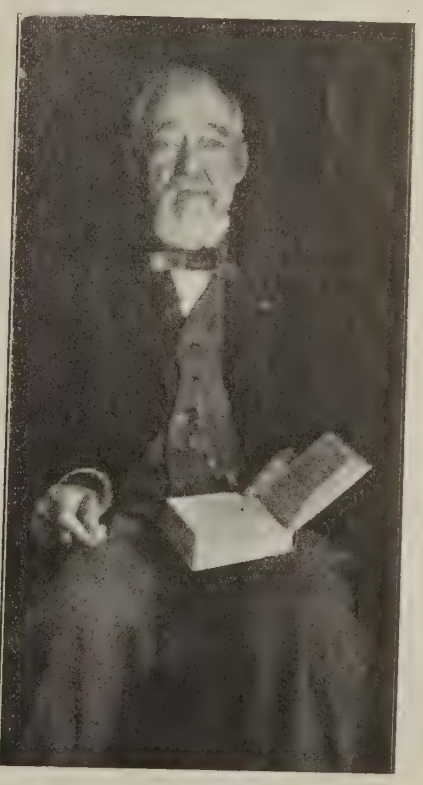

Photo by P. & A.

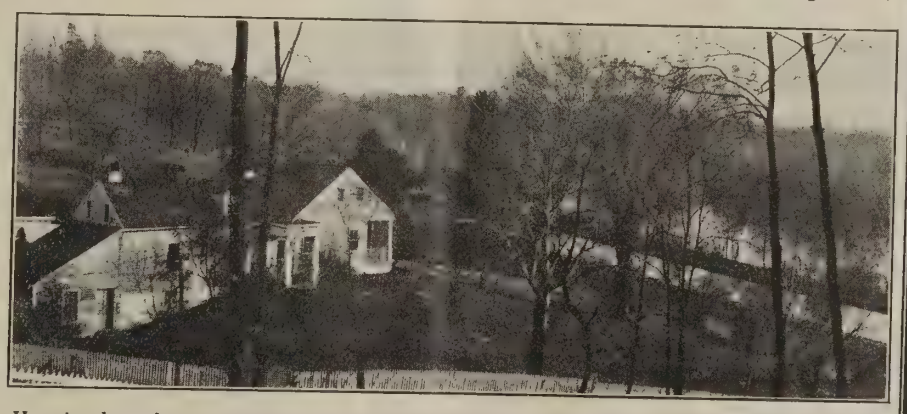
These have been trying days for newspaper men on the White House run. "Slightly better; crisis passed" brought general relief to the men who have kept close vigil since Mrs. Harding became seriously ill. This group has just received a bulletin from the attending physicians.



Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze, Chinese Minister to the United States, and his family have been at their summer home at Wood's Hole (Mass.) for the last few months. What should be more natural than for the Minister to consent to go down to New Bedford (Mass.) and present medals given by The Standard, to school children of non-English speaking parentage. Miss Minna Littman, Society Editor of The Standard, went there to discuss plans for the visit of the family of Dr. Sze to the home of Publisher Benjamin H. Anthony. Naturally, tea was served.

There are a lot of people that wonder where the "krum" comes from in Morkrum, that electric transmitter and recorder of news that is fairly well known in the newspaper field. Permit us to present Andrew J. Krum, age 95, and probably the oldest living practical printer. He was born at Utica (N. Y.), 1827, last worked on the Democrat at Madison (Wis.), and is still a resident of that city. The inventor of the Morkrum is his grandson.

Looks like a good time. C. Earl Whipple, general manager of the Hagerstown Mail and Herald, is musing upon the chicken dinner being at the club. Other members of the party, left to right, are Miss Janette Lyon, Miss Sadie Lowry, Anthony Hankey and Edgar Phillips.

Here is where the men and women who get the Herald-Mail publications at Hagerstown, Maryland, and members of their families enjoy their week-ends and vacations bass fishing, bathing and tramping through those historic hills. This old Colonial home, which overlooks the Potomac and Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, is one of the few individual outdoor newspaper clubs in America.

As an educator it is pretty hard to get over his it to 'em by word of mouth. As one of the executive editors of the New York Times, Dr. John H. Finley has every opportunity of telling with the printed word, but doesn't him.

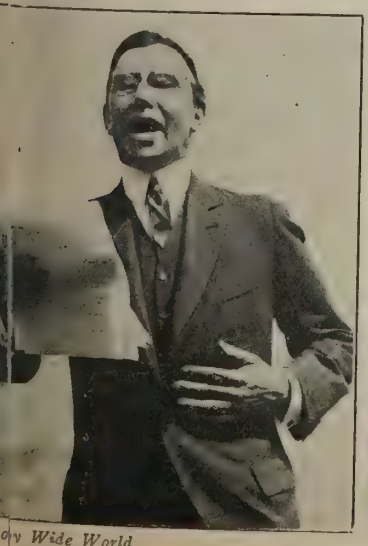


Photo by Wide World

The first Newspaper Institute of the East (below) was held at Rutgers College this week under the auspices of the New Jersey Press Association and was attended by men and women from every part of the State.

NEW YORK USING 27 PER CENT MORE NEWSPRINT THAN IN 1920

Circulations Greater and Drop in Advertising Offset by Loose Newspapers—17 Dailies Consumed 231,429 Tons from January 1 to August 31, This Year

TWELVE of the seventeen Greater New York daily and Sunday newspapers are using more newsprint now than they used in 1920, according to EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S circulation and advertising records covering the first eight months of the year.

Of these twelve, only two printed more advertising between January 1 and August 31 of this year than they did in the same months two years ago. Neither of these two have as large an average circulation for the six months ending April 1, 1922, as they had for the period ending April 1, 1920. None of the five papers whose 1922 paper consumption is within the 1920 figure has exceeded the 1920 advertising volume or circulation.

On the opposite page are printed tables showing calculations, total pages printed, approximate newsprint tonnage used and its value at market prices for the years when it was consumed. The last two totals are estimated for the January-August period in 1922, 1921 and 1920. These tables supplement those on advertising volume for these periods and its relation to the size of the papers which were printed last week, and are reprinted on this and the next page for purpose of convenient comparison.

Outstanding totals of the new compilations may be given as follows:

WEEKDAY CIRCULATION

April 1, 1922—3,571,609 copies per day
April 1, 1922—3,154,945 copies per day
April 1, 1920—3,334,030 copies per day

This circulation, which is the total distribution (including net paid and unpaid), shows an increase for 1922 over 1920 of 7.1 per cent and for 1922 over 1921 of 13.2 per cent.

SUNDAY CIRCULATION

April 1, 1922—3,157,389 copies per issue
April 1, 1921—3,240,594 copies per issue
April 1, 1920—2,701,573 copies per issue

Sunday circulation for 1922 shows a loss of 3.1 per cent from last year, but a gain of 16.1 per cent over 1920.

TOTAL PAGES PRINTED

	Weekday	Sunday	Total
Jan.—Aug., 1922	79,874	26,528	106,402
Jan.—Aug., 1921	70,282	22,886	93,170
Jan.—Aug., 1920	69,474	21,811	91,285

The total for 1922 up to September 1 is 16.2 per cent above that for 1920 and 14.2 per cent ahead of the same period last year. Weekday issues this year had 14.9 per cent more pages than in the same months of 1920 and 13.6 per cent over the total for the 1921 period. Sunday papers show a gain for 1922 over 1920 of 21.6 per cent and over 1921 of 15.9 per cent.

ESTIMATED NEWSPRINT CONSUMPTION (Stated in Tons)

	Weekday	Sunday	Total
Jan.—Aug., 1922	145,238	86,191	231,429
Jan.—Aug., 1921	119,546	73,867	193,413
Jan.—Aug., 1920	113,426	67,881	181,307

Recall that circulation, 1922 against 1920, shows an increase of 7.1 per cent for the six-day total and 16.1 per cent for Sunday, and that total pages for the January-August period increased 14.9 per cent weekdays and 21.6 per cent Sundays. Then note what these increases mean in newsprint tonnage:

Total consumption for the January-August period increased, 1922 over 1920, 27.7 per cent, and over 1921, 19.6 per cent. Weekday tonnage increased 1922 over 1920, 28.0 per cent, and over 1921, 21.5 per cent. Sunday tonnage increased, 1922 over 1920, 26.9 per cent, and over 1921, 16.6 per cent.

ESTIMATED TOTAL VALUE OF NEWSPRINT

Jan.—Aug., 1922	$16,198,630
Jan.—Aug., 1921	20,094,952
Jan.—Aug., 1920	20,556,260

Despite an increase in tonnage used of 27.7 per cent, the drop of newsprint prices from the post-war peak has reduced the estimated cost of paper for the January-August period, 1922 against 1920, by $4,357,630, or 21.2 per cent. Reduction in cost for 1922 from 1921 for the eight months is $3,896,322, or 19.3 per cent.

It should be noted here that these prices are based on the average of all contract prices covering the full years 1922, 1921 and 1920 for the product of the principal newsprint mills. For 1922, the rate taken is $70 per ton; for 1921, the price was $104; for 1920, it was $110. The figures are purely arbitrary, so far as individual papers are concerned, as EDITOR & PUBLISHER does not feel free to use in a discussion of this kind any information it has regarding costs of individual publishers.

Tonnage was determined on the basis in common use among those who weigh newspapers in bulk—that 1,000 eight-page papers weigh 128 pounds, that there are 62.5 pages to the pound, or 125,000 pages to the ton. No allowance has been made for the weight of ink in the printed papers. Neither has any deduction been made for rotogravure stock or special paper for magazine sections. Tabloid pages have been counted as half-pages in computing the tonnage and in listing the total pages in all tables. The one exception to this rule is the Daily News. Its pages have counted as full pages in the total pages column, but as half-pages in computation of tonnage. No additions have been made to tonnage for white and printed waste, which in large pressrooms in the city runs from one to two per cent of the white paper.

The figures for the respective periods are therefore conservative as regards newsprint consumption. Statistics of past years show that about 64 per cent of the year's lineage is carried in the January-August period, but that percentage will probably not hold for this year if early September indications are reliable guides to the volume of advertising for the next four months. The advertising art director of one New York newspaper group was hailed one night this week going home for a late supper. He threw up his hands at the "How goes it?" question and replied:

"The barrage came down the day after Labor Day and it's getting heavier every day. No sign of a let-up."

"Is business running much ahead of August?" asked the EDITOR & PUBLISHER man.

"Far ahead—and August was a whale That's the situation on several of the newspapers, especially those which have been getting the heavy run of the year's business so far and which have been using larger quantities of newsprint. And it is the reason that EDITOR & PUBLISHER believes its estimated newsprint consumption for the January-August period is conservative. Its figures for that period are well below 64 per cent of the estimated 1922 tonnage of several of the New York and Brooklyn newspapers which have supplied their figures. It is evident that the publishers are providing for an expected increase in advertising volume during the autumn which will carry the 1922 total lineage to the level of 1920, if not above it.

The largest New York consumers of print paper—with the exception of the Hearst group—the American and the Evening Journal—have been adding about one page of news or features for every additional page of advertising over last year's total. The Hearst papers are giving their readers an even larger measure of text matter in proportion to increased advertising, and their newsprint consumption for this year has been 37 per cent of the city's total.

Their increases in tonnage are the largest of any in tons and in percentage of any of the papers except the Daily News, which was in its first year in 1920 and did not start its Sunday edition until May, 1921.

The Journal and the Sun were the only papers which printed more advertising so far this year than they did in 1920.

The Herald and the Telegram, which with the Sun are owned by Fran Munsey, used less paper this year they did in the January-August p of 1920. The Munsey trio used 2 tons in the first eight months o boom era of two years ago, but used in the same period this year 22,542 tons, according to the estir Other newspapers which have re their tonnage are the Globe, the Ev Post and the Evening World, a which have less circulation in their six-month statements than they ha years ago. They sold then for 2 on the street, against 3 cents at pr

Besides the newsprint table, the site page also has interesting con sons of advertising lineage and th of the papers for the January-Jul riod in 1922, 1921, and 1920, as w a separate table for August sta These were all printed last week, the August Sunday figures, which not tabulated in time for the Sept 9 issue. This record makes the f ing points:

New York City newspapers p 40,761.41 pages of advertising in th seven months of 1922.

They printed 41,427.22 pages of tising in the same period of 1920.

The loss of advertising for that in those years is 665.81 pages, of cent of the 1920 total.

These same papers in the first months of 1922 printed a total of pages.

In the first seven months of 192 printed 80,709 pages.

The gain in total pages was pages, or an increase of 16 per cer the 1920 amount.

There it is in a sentence—adve dropped 1.6 per cent, but for ever of advertising that was lost, 20 pa text were added during the seven n

It is also shown that in the firs months of 1920, the average pro of advertising to text was 51.3— better than the fifty-fifty basis th the old loosely-kept standard.

In the first seven months of th the proportion had dropped to 43.

Both of these proportions are h many of the papers listed, the being brought up by newspapers maintain their advertising at 50 p or more of their total space. Eve papers, however, with their prese margins, are printing less adverti ratio to their total pages than t last year or two years ago.

Last year's statistics for the period are also given, even thou advertising volume was considera than in 1920 or this year. The to the spot where the present t toward papers overweighted wit and features originated—the spur petition in maintaining a "front" size of the papers, when the sup advertising was lacking. Statemer the newspapers were overbalanc advertising in the 1920 boom and relaxation had to be made if th to hold their readers are not bo by the three-year comparison.

Sunday advertising and spa which a separate analysis is mad ing the seven months in the thre shows about the same proportio cline in ratio of advertising to tot and larger increases in the nur pages.

August statistics for the thre are also presented. The month i which advertising is normally at point of the year. It is also a n which demands on news space usually heavy in New York pa that its figures do not have the that the seven-months' totals ca

It is interesting to note, in the all these factors, that the total August showed an increase of cent over August, 1921, and 17 over August, 1920; that adverti the month maintains about the sa slightly smaller, loss against the in 1920 and that the proportion o tising to total pages was 38.7 this year, against 44.3 per cent As was to be expected, the pape more loosely constructed in Aug in the average of the seven p months.

SUNDAY ADVERTISING AND TOTAL PAGES JAN.-JULY, 1922, 1921, 1920

Name of Paper	Total Pages, Jan. 1-July 31 22-21-20 Sunday Only			Total Pages of Advertising Sunday Only Jan. 1-July 31, 22-20			Per Cent. Sunday Adv. to Total Pages Jan. 1-July 31, 22-20
	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920
American	3,494	3,006	2,724	1,701.17	1,635.20	1,517.00	48.7	54.3	55.6
Brooklyn Eagle	2,760	2,464	2,393	1,332.03	1,239.87	1,253.44	48.2	50.3	52.3
Brooklyn Times	848	640	248††	182.32	160.01	98.16	21.5	25.0	39.5
Telegram	680	636	610	236.28	226.66	243.03	34.7	35.6	39.8
Herald	3,078	2,736	2,568	1,189.11	1,275.01	1,266.18	38.6	45.8	49.3
Daily News†	1,480	552*	....	233.85	82.32*	.....	15.8	15.0	...
B'klyn Standard Union	1,402	1,416	1,528	445.85	415.70	543.18	31.8	29.3	35.5
Times	3,948	3,566	3,524	2,295.49	2,115.49	2,310.40	58.1	59.3	65.5
Tribune	2,490	2,418	2,414	812.80	866.71	920.14	32.6	35.8	38.1
World	3,546	3,020	3,162	1,910.26	1,718.61	1,932.74	53.8	56.9	61.1
Totals	23,726	20,454	19,171	10,339.16	9,735.58	10,084.27	43.5	47.6	52.6

*May 1 to July 31 only. †Tabloid. ††March 1 to July 31 only.

SUNDAY ADVERTISING AND TOTAL PAGES, AUGUST, 1922, 1921, 1920

Name of Paper	Total Pages, August, 22-21-20, Sunday Only			Total Pages of Advertising, Sunday Only August, Each Year			Per Cent of Sunday Adv. to Total Space August, Each Year
	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920
American	374	364	358	184.79	183.18	158.62	49.4	50.3	44.3
Brooklyn Eagle	326	280	336	148.34	134.99	165.27	45.5	48.2	49.1
Brooklyn Times	100	82	84	20.74	18.60	23.36	20.7	22.6	27.8
Telegram	80	66	86	26.72	20.00	31.41	33.4	30.3	36.4
Herald	372	306	370	138.99	132.81	180.25	37.3	43.4	48.7
Daily News*	192	160	...	28.40	20.90	.....	14.8	13.0	....
Standard Union	160	160	220	51.91	38.02	70.02	32.4	23.7	31.8
Times	480	412	538	257.61	221.09	311.62	53.7	53.6	57.9
Tribune	316	274	350	87.29	77.60	116.36	27.6	28.3	33.2
World	432	330	484	229.86	180.89	257.67	53.2	54.8	53.2
Totals	2,832	2,434	2,826	1,174.69	1,028.08	1,314.58	41.4	42.2	46.5

*Tabloid: Roman—morning papers (weekday issues); italic—evening papers (weekday issues). Evening Telegram is issued Sunday evening.

ADVERTISING LINEAGE, CIRCULATIONS, PAGES PRINTED, NEWSPRINT USED, AND ITS COST, JANUARY 1—AUGUST 31, 1922-1920, IN NEW YORK PAPERS

Name of Paper	Total Average Daily Distribution As of April 1, Each Year			Total Pages Printed Jan. 1-Aug. 31, Each Year			Estimated Tons of Newsprint Used Jan. 1-Aug. 31, Each Year			Estimated Value, Newsprint at Average Market Price for Each Year 8 Months' Consumption
	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920
merican (6 days)	356,127	300,966	293,552	5,224	3,898	3,782	14,880	9,385	8,890
(Sunday)	1,092,713	1,048,203	952,551	3,868	3,370	3,098	33,813	28,260	23,608
Total	.....	.....	.....	9,092	7,268	6,880	48,793	37,645	32,498	$3,408,510	$3,905,080	$3,574,780
urnal (6 days)	655,963	650,894	714,185	6,938	5,224	4,652	37,209	27,202	26,579	2,604,630	2,829,008	2,923,690
rooklyn Eagle (6 days)	62,846	57,530	49,997	5,746	5,040	5,038	2,889	2,328	2,015
(Sunday)	76,577	71,156	67,691	3,086	2,744	2,719	1,891	1,562	1,472
Total	.....	.....	.....	8,832	7,784	7,757	4,780	3,890	3,487	334,600	404,560	383,570
rooklyn Times (6 days)	46,987	46,897	43,280	3,182	2,382	2,014	1,201	894	697*
(Sunday)	46,987	46,897	43,280	948	722	348*	356	271	120*
Total	.....	.....	.....	4,130	3,104	2,362	1,557	1,165	817*	108,990	121,160	89,870
ommercial (6 days)	11,833	12,081	11,413	3,148	3,018	2,854	298	292	260	20,860	30,368	28,600
aily News (6 days)	444,402	338,225	123,339	5,064	4,302	2,112	8,913	5,770	1,042
(Sunday)	270,479	405,591	.....	1,672	712	.....	1,809	1,155	.....
Total	.....	.....	.....	6,736	5,014	2,112	10,722	6,925	1,042	750,540	720,200	114,620
obe (6 days)	151,626	165,442	180,280	4,084	3,718	3,916	4,954	4,921	5,651	346,780	501,784	621,610
erald (6 days)	176,082	200,259	212,020	4,648	4,252	4,818	6,557	6,812	8,172
(Sunday)	196,103	220,118	234,398	3,450	3,042	2,940	5,352	5,357	5,513
Total	.....	.....	.....	8,098	7,294	7,758	11,889	12,169	13,685	832,230	1,265,576	1,505,350
ail (6 days)	148,663	156,054	158,082	3,846	3,638	3,480	4,574	4,542	4,401	320,180	472,368	484,110
st (6 days)	35,933	39,986	35,008	3,958	4,406	4,552	1,138	1,409	1,275	79,660	146,536	140,030
n (6 days)	181,862	191,311	206,454	5,024	4,258	4,224	7,309	6,517	6,976	511,630	677,768	767,360
legram (6 days)	105,389	106,352	133,899	3,818	3,696	4,120	3,219	3,145	4,413
(Sunday)	121,369	126,640	137,491	760	702	690	738	711	759
Total	.....	.....	.....	4,578	4,398	4,810	3,957	3,856	5,172	276,990	401,024	568,920
mes (6 days)	346,764	329,065	329,118	6,864	6,076	6,356	18,802	15,995	16,735
(Sundays)	545,276	507,999	501,892	4,428	3,978	4,004	19,316	16,135	16,077
Total	.....	.....	.....	11,292	10,054	10,360	38,118	32,130	32,812	2,668,260	3,341,520	3,609,320
ribune (6 days)	138,364	143,715	121,988	4,330	4,110	4,138	4,792	4,708	4,038
(Sunday)	143,471	144,210	115,863	2,806	2,692	2,730	3,221	3,106	2,530
Total	.....	.....	.....	7,136	6,802	6,868	8,013	7,814	6,588	560,910	812,656	722,480
orld (6 days)	353,199	349,137	326,969	5,240	4,434	5,362	14,806	12,385	14,026
(Sunday)	602,359	624,678	593,287	3,978	3,350	3,594	19,169	16,741	17,058
Total	.....	.....	.....	9,218	7,784	8,956	33,975	29,126	31,084	2,378,250	3,029,104	3,419,240
orld (6 days)	282,910	315,300	335,233	5,116	4,552	4,570	11,579	11,481	12,256	810,530	1,194,024	1,349,160
ooklyn Standard Union (6 days)	72,659	67,031	59,213	3,644	3,278	3,486	2,118	1,760	1,651
(Sunday)	42,055	45,102	55,120	1,562	1,576	1,688	526	569	744
Total	.....	.....	.....	5,206	4,854	5,174	2,644	2,329	2,395	185,080	242,216	253,550
Totals (6 days)	3,571,609	3,154,945	3,334,030	79,874	70,282	69,474	145,238	119,546	113,426
(Sunday	3,137,389	3,240,594	2,701,573	26,528	22,888	21,811	86,191	73,867	67,881
Grand totals	.....	.....	.....	106,402	93,170	91,285	231,429	193,413	181,307	$16,198,630	$20,094,952	$20,556,260

*March 1 to August 31 only; May 1 to August 31 only; Average of contract prices, f. o. b. North American mills for entire years used as basic price—1922, $70 per ton; 1921—$104 p ton; 1920—$110 per ton; Roman—morning papers; italic—evening papers.

ADVERTISING AND TOTAL SPACE, NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS, JAN.-JULY, 1922, 1921, 1920

Name of Paper	Seven-Day Total Pages Jan. 1-July 31, 1922, '21, '20			Increase or Decrease Jan. 1-July 31, 1922 vs. 1921, 1920				Agate Lines Per Page	Seven-Day Totals Pages of Advertising Jan. 1-July 31, '22, '21, '20			Eight Months, Each Year Percentage of Advertising To Total Pages
				1921		1920
	1922	1921	1920	Pages	%	Pages	%		1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920
erican	8,038	6,450	6,136	1,588	.24	1,902	.31	2,212	2,924.65	2,718.77	2,978.30	36.3	42.1	48.5
oklyn Eagle	7,826	6,900	6,869	926	.13	957	.13	2,180	4,086.70	3,599.79	3,652.82	52.2	51.6	53.2
klyn Times	3,630	2,708	2,000†	922	.34	.....	..	2,380	842.20	792.79	622.45†	23.2	29.2	31.1†
mmercial	2,758	2,638	2,506	120	.04	252	.10	2,352	670.19	776.64	874.88	24.3	29.4	34.8
rnal	6,148	4,652	4,192	1,496	.32	1,956	.46	2,240	2,943.43	2,786.96	2,489.36	47.8	59.9	59.4
il	3,428	3,210	3,100	218	.06	328	.10	2,400	1,412.57	1,496.75	1,568.92	41.2	46.6	50.6
st	3,494	3,888	4,010	394§	.10§	516§	.12§	2,352	975.25	1,501.23	1,351.94	27.9	38.6	33.7
n	4,436	3,786	3,756	650	.17	680	.18	2,380	2,293.64	2,255.46	2,174.14	51.7	59.5	57.9
egram	4,052	3,896	4,284	156	.04	232§	.05§	2,352	1,697.99	1,650.35	2,052.09	41.9	42.3	47.9
orld	4,490	4,064	4,080	426	.10	410	.10	2,240	2,248.44	2,299.47	2,503.37	50.0	56.5	61.3
Globe	3,640	3,286	3,516	354	.10	124	.03	2,394	1,717.49	1,669.67	2,035.67	47.1	50.8	57.9
Herald	7,172	6,490	6,948	682	.10	224	.03	2,380	2,860.81	2,992.67	3,228.16	39.8	46.1	46.4
Daily News‡	5,912	4,318	1,644¶	1,504	.35	.....	..	1,015	1,838.26	1,280.45	412.45	31.0	38.4	25.0
Brooklyn Standard Union	4,598	4,292	4,568	306	.07	30	.007	2,380	1,843.75	1,650.85	2,119.01	40.0	38.4	46.3
Times	9,976	8,948	9,150	1,028	.11	826	.09	2,352	5,844.88	5,285.02	5,917.96	58.5	49.0	64.6
Tribune	6,298	6,046	6,068	252	.04	230	.04	2,360	2,277.23	2,333.69	2,507.31	36.1	38.6	41.3
World	8,096	6,934	7,882	1,162	.16	214	.03	2,240	4,283.93	4,165.62	4,938.39	52.9	59.9	62.6
Totals	93,992	82,504	80,709	11,488	.14	13,283	.16	....	40,761.41	39,256.18	41,427.22	43.3	47.5	51.3

*No Sunday edition. †March 1 to July 1, only. ‡Tabloid. §Decrease. ¶May 1 to July 1, only. Roman—Morning papers. Italic—Evening papers.

ADVERTISING AND TOTAL SPACE, NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS, AUGUST, 1922, 1921, 1920

Name of Paper	Seven-Day Total Pages Aug., 1922, '21, '20			Seven-Day Totals Increase or Decrease Pages Aug., '22, Over '21 and '20				Agate Lines Per Page	Seven-Day Totals Pages of Advertising Aug. 1922, '21, '20			Seven-Day Totals Percentage of Advertising To Total Pages
				1921		1920
	1922	1921	1920	Pages	%	Pages	%		1922	1921	1920	1922	1921	1920
rican	1,054	818	744	236	29	310	41	2,212	352.54	308.00	328.11	33.5	37.6	44.1
rklyn Eagle	1,006	884	888	122	14	118	13	2,180	486.94	429.17	448.34	48.4	48.5	50.4
rklyn Times	500	396	362	104	26	138	37	2,380	105.11	120.97	119.03	21.0	30.5	32.8
mmercial	390	380	348	10	02	42	12	2,352	87.86	93.21	116.29	22.5	23.0	33.4
rnal	790	572	460	218	28	330	71	2,240	310.77	277.37	231.83	39.3	48.5	50.4
il	418	428	380	10‡	02‡	38	10	2,400	143.39	155.79	165.71	34.3	36.4	43.5
st	464	518	542	54‡	10‡	78‡	14‡	2,352	96.22	159.02	131.30	20.7	30.7	24.2
n	588	472	468	116	24	120	26	2,380	248.73	201.85	229.62	42.3	42.7	49.0
egram	526	492	526	34	07	.....	..	2,352	211.48	196.06	218.69	40.2	39.8	41.5
orld	626	488	490	138	28	136	28	2,240	222.39	227.39	248.53	35.5	46.6	50.7
Globe	444	432	400	12	03	44	11	2,394	179.88	188.41	180.47	40.5	43.6	45.1
eld	926	804	810	122	15	116	14	2,380	331.67	315.07	365.37	35.8	39.2	45.1
a News§	824	696	468*	128	18	356*	76*	1,015	219.98	186.51	121.39	26.7	26.7	25.9
rklyn Standard Union	608	562	606	46	08	2	..	2,380	229.67	208.01	265.56	37.7	37.0	43.6
rs	1,316	1,106	1,210	210	19	106	08	2,352	688.73	576.69	707.92	52.3	52.1	58.5
ime	838	756	800	82	11	38	04	2,360	250.72	235.10	279.82	29.9	31.0	34.8
cd	1,122	850	1,074	272	32	48	04	2,240	582.99	431.23	612.81	51.9	50.7	57.0
Totals	12,410	10,654	10,576	1,756	16	1,843	17	.....	4,709.47	4,309.85	4,770.79	38.7	40.4	44.3

*No Sunday edition. §Tabloid. ‡Decrease. Roman—Morning papers. Italic—Evening papers.

AMERICAN FIRMS SEEK JAPAN'S TRADE THROUGH NATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS

Name Which Are Household Words in United States Bring New Touch to Vernacular Press With Familiar Pictures Under Japanese Copy

By JOHN R. MORRIS

Far Eastern Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

TOKYO, Aug. 16.—This morning's edition of the Jiji Shimpo illustrates in a manner which will surprise many American readers the extent to which American products are being advertised in the vernacular press of Japan. Cuttings from this issue, reproduced here, furnish also an idea of the form taken by typical Japanese copy.

which are handled in Japan by large American importing firms. The appropriations for both campaigns came from the manufacturers in the United States.

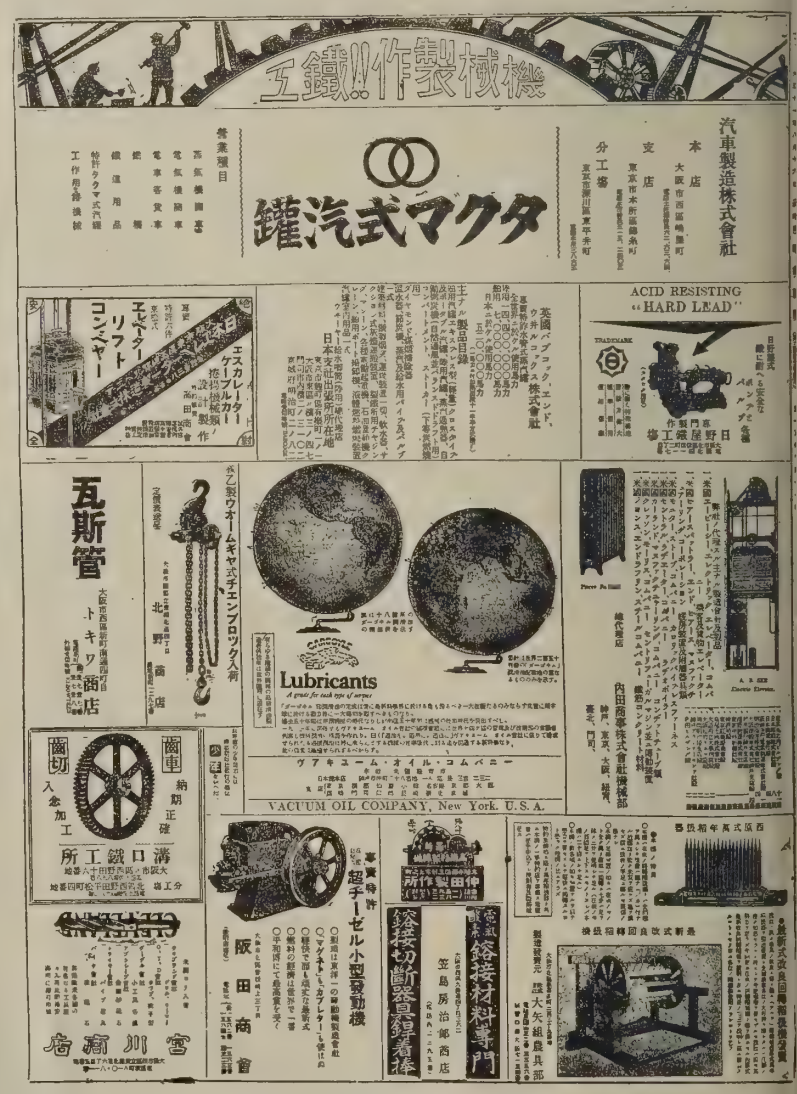
The accompanying reproduction of the Jiji's front page illustrates the Japanese practice of devoting this entire space to advertising, at rates from 15 to 50 per cent. higher than space on ordinary pages.

The Jiji offers unquestionably the best examples of American advertising in Far Eastern vernacular and in this issue have bunched their American ads in a way which makes quite a showing without piecing in cuttings from several parts of the paper.

The Jiji admittedly stands high in the best class of Japanese newspapers and its wide influence in business circles makes it one of the most effective mediums for the American advertiser in this field. The large amount of space devoted to foreign advertising in the Jiji therefore does not imply that American advertisers are using all other Japanese newspapers as liberally. Four Tokyo newspapers, among the vernaculars, carry practically all of the foreign advertising. They are the Jiji, Asahi, Hochi and Nichi-Nichi. Outside of this list, the total space devoted to advertising foreign products is extremely small.

The issue of the Jiji referred to is its regular morning edition, but it carries no less than seven advertisements of American products. All seven occupy what is considered fairly large space in Japan (for advertisements in this country generally do not run as large as in the United States) and two of them are the largest occupying preferred front-page position. These two consequently are the highest-priced advertisements in the paper and they advertise the Hupmobile and the National Cash Register, both of

The two large American advertisements are readily distinguished by the blocks (furnished by the advertisers) which make their central designs pictures of the products advertised. At the bottom of the page and next to the Hupmobile advertisement on the left is a smaller one announcing the agency for an American-made power-hammer, and one removed from this, skipping over a musical instrument advertisement, is an advertisement of an American system for generating electricity.



The second-page reproduction shown here is a full page of industrial advertising which appeared in the same issue of the Jiji under an appropriate banner design which suggests the character of the advertisements appearing below. The Jiji carries more advertising of this nature, both foreign and domestic, than any other newspaper in Japan and long ago inaugurated the practice of running special pages for this as well as for certain other lines of advertising.

In the center of the industrial page for today is an advertisement of motor lubricants manufactured by the Vacuum Oil Company of New York. Directly to the right is the advertisement of a Japanese importing firm which handles American elevators and heating equipment, and other similar lines enumerated in the advertisement.

In the lower left-hand corner of the same page is an advertisement of Cleveland drills, sold in Tokyo by a Japanese agent. This advertisement presents a good example of the difficulty experienced in introducing English into Japanese advertisements, for here the trade-mark has been inverted by the make-up man, to whom the well-known sign of the manufacturers looked as well from one side as from the other. When it is considered that foreign advertisements receive at least as careful and expert attention in the Jiji as in any other native newspaper plant in Japan, some idea of the obstacles to be encountered is conveyed.

In this case, according to information just received, the copy and a perfect proof had been approved by a man familiar with English, but later when the advertisement was in the forms a make-up man changing its position had dropped the trade-mark and placed it back in reverse position.

The other advertisements on the page are those of Japanese firms and foreign manufacturers other than American—among them British and German organizations. The space immediately above the Vacuum Oil advertisement is that of Babcock & Wilcox, the British manufacturers. This one is almost solid reading matter and is entirely without illustrations.

Signs of American influence on advertising copy in Japan are easily found. Illustratio notably have improved, although they are yet a long way from American standard due to many natural problems.

American advertising campaigns conducted in Japan have had considerable influence on the ad copy of this country. Effective illustrations were first stressed here by American advertisers, but the "missionary work" along this line has yet some distance to go before being carried to its logical conclusion: that of bringing advertising copy in Japan up to a standard which compares with the standards of American newspapers.

Improvement in this respect (as regards the advertisements of Americ products in Japanese newspapers) cann be effected individually by either the a vertiser or the Japanese copy writer. must be brought about by co-operati between the two. The Japanese co writer who reads English—and it is u fortunate there are so few—will tell y that American advertising copy, wh probably reaching the nearest point perfection in the world, is not suitable f publication in Japan. At best, it must altered to suit the market here and t is by no means unnatural.

The advertising psychology of Jap requires a long story in itself, but sig of American influence on advertising co in Japanese newspapers are easily fou They are the natural results of the creased volume of foreign advertisi which the leading Japanese newspap have carried in recent years.

SETTLING NORTHCLIFFE ESTA

Rothermere Expected to Acquire But the Times

The London News of the World serted September 9 that Lord Rotherm will acquire all or part of Lord Nor cliffe's estate's interest in the Lond Daily Mail and other papers wh Lord Northcliffe owned. The mana ment for Lord Rothermere will be in

THE BIRTHPANGS OF AN EMPIRE

A Series of Sunday Articles by

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr.

The Japanese dream of Empire depicted in a new and amazing light.

THE SERIES INCLUDES:

Japan's Program of Conquest
Japan Since the Washington Conference
Dr. Sze as Premier of China
The "Twin of Rapallo"
The Proposed Racial Conference
Japan's Folly If It Should War with America
One Year After the Arms Conference
Japan and Its Foreign Relations
The Question of Racial Assimilability
Hypothetical War in the Pacific

(Five More to Be Announced Later)

The articles are based on a minute study of problems confronting Japan and the development of Nipponese history before, during and in the wake of the Washington Arms Conference.

Mr. Vanderbilt covered the Arms Conference as a reporter. An admonition by Lord Northcliffe, the late great British publisher, to Vanderbilt suggested the young millionaire writer's study of the Orient. Vanderbilt is convinced, and shows his convictions in an unbiased way, that Japan is pregnant with events which may spell a new and startling world history in the coming decade.

His articles serve as a warning to America of the vital import of affairs in Asia.

Territory has been closed for the following cities:

New York City; Harrisburg, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.; Jackson, Detroit, Mich.; Boston, Mass; Washington, D. C.; Chicago, Ill.; Seattle, Wash.; Elmira, Buffalo, Schenectady, N. Y.; Los Angeles, San Jose, San Francisco, Riverside, Santa Rosa, Calif.; New Brunswick, N. J.; St. Louis, Mo.; Havana, Cuba.

OCTOBER 8—FIRST RELEASE—OCTOBER 8

Wire for Terms in Territory Not Taken

C-V NEWSPAPER SERVICE

52 VANDERBILT AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

WASHINGTON, D. C. SEATTLE, WASH.

MANY PITFALLS AWAIT THE PUBLISHER ON "CHANCE" ADVERTISING

All Copy of This Kind Should Be Submitted to Postal Authorities for Judgment Before Acceptance—Two Examples of Thoughtlessness and Neglect

THE need of publishers to obtain complete legal advice on or to submit to the postal authorities any advertisement given them for publication when it pertains to chance drawings, endless chain enterprises, prize contests, coupon schemes, guessing or estimating contests, etc., before accepting it, is emphasized by a case just brought to attention of EDITOR & PUBLISHER by one of its readers, who asks the question:

"Can you tell us whether or not advertising like the copy herewith enclosed is permissible in newspapers? Do you know of any court decisions or have you printed any decisions or Post Office rulings on the subject? We took the advertisement from an exchange and wonder whether or not it is within the law?"

The advertisement in question follows:

Here's another car to be given away. This cozy Overland Sedan will be presented to one of our customers without one cent of cost.

Because so many customers were pleased with our last automobile drawing, we have decided to give away another car. This time we have selected a 1922 model Overland Sedan; a car that anyone would be proud to own. Tickets are now ready and are being given with every dollar purchase.

Mr. ..... Wins Ford. The Ford car given away last month was won by....., a son of ...., formerly of .... Co. The drawing was conducted by customers who were present at the drawing and in the presence of hundreds of ticket-holders. This car will be given away in like manner.

Who Will Win Sedan? Everyone who has seen this beautiful car is delighted with it. It stands now on our Main floor, where all may see it. In addition to the car, an insurance policy insuring the car against fire and theft will be given by Mr. ....., the insurance man. Remember that every ticket you hold makes you a possible winner of this splendid gift. Get, therefore, all the tickets you can.

Advertising Stunt. Hundreds of customers have asked: "How can you afford to do this?" In answer we explain that we are using money in this way that would ordinarily be used in other forms of advertising. Remember that in a business of this size many forms of advertising are used. In a case of this kind, we simply will not use some of the usual methods of advertising, but divert the money to this use. Remember, too, that such forms of advertising so increase the sales of merchandise that the cost of advertising is insignificant. In this "stunt" then, we are simply giving to our customers a part of our advertising allowance.

How to get the tickets. You will be entitled to one ticket on the car with every dollar you spend. If clerks fail to give you the tickets, please remind them that you want them. Also a ticket will be given with every dollar paid on account. This applies to all old balances as well as current charges. Tickets given when payments are made.

Tickets at No Cost. Remember that the tickets cost you absolutely nothing. The same low prices apply on all purchases whether you take the tickets or not. And in order that everyone might have an interest in this affair we are eager that everyone who is entitled to them shall have tickets with every dollar purchase.

Prices Still Low. You will find that all prices are as low as they would have been had this advertising plan not been adopted. We fully expect to sell two dollars' worth this month where we would have sold but one had not this unusual offer been made. We wish to explain that no one connected with our store in any way will be permitted to participate in this drawing. Clerks and members of the firm do not expect, and will not be allowed to hold tickets. Everyone present at our last drawing was pleased and satisfied with the fair and clean manner in which it was conducted. This drawing will be conducted exactly as was the last.

The newspaper carrying this advertisement is violating the lottery laws and is amenable to punishments therein provided, according to an opinion rendered by Postmaster E. M. Morgan of New York, to whom EDITOR & PUBLISHER submitted the question. Mr. Morgan said:

"An advertisement reading according to the enclosed copy, which refers to a drawing for an automobile, would be unmailable, as would be also all other matter relating to such scheme. Under Section 482, Postal Laws and Regulations, drawings are lotteries and the mailing of matter relating to any lottery is prohibited by law."

The Postal Laws and Regulations, referred to by Mr. Morgan, as covering lottery schemes, endless chain enterprises, prize contests, coupon schemes, guessing or estimating contests, etc., follow:

SEC. 482. No letter, package, postal card or circular concerning any lottery, gift enterprise or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance; and no lottery ticket or part thereof, or paper, certificate or instrument purporting to be or to represent a ticket, chance, share, or interest in or dependent upon the event of a lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance; and no check, draft, bill, money, postal note or money-order, for the purchase of any ticket or part thereof, or of any share or chance in any such lottery, gift enterprise or scheme; and no newspaper, circular, pamphlet or publication of any kind containing any advertisement of any lottery, gift enterprise, or scheme of any kind offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, or containing any list of the prizes drawn or awarded by means of any such lottery, gift enterprise or scheme, whether said list contains any part or all of such prizes, shall be deposited in or carried by the mails of the United States, or be delivered by any postmaster or letter carrier. Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited, or shall knowingly send or cause to be sent, anything to be conveyed or delivered by mail in violation of the provisions of this section, or shall knowingly deliver or cause to be delivered by mail anything herein forbidden to be carried by mail, shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both; and for any subsequent offense shall be imprisoned not more than five years. Any person violating any provision of this section may be tried and punished either in the district in which the unlawful matter or publication was mailed, or to which it was carried by mail for delivery according to the direction thereon, or in which it was caused to be delivered by mail to the person to whom it was addressed.

SEC. 483. The term "lottery," as used in Section 482, embraces all kinds of schemes, general or local, for the distribution of prizes by lot or chance, such as gift exhibitions or enterprises, concerts, raffles or the drawing of prizes in money or property at fairs.

2. Section 482 applies to any letter, ordinary or registered, if it concerns any lottery, gift concert or scheme described in said section, and to lottery tickets, checks, drafts, bills, money, postal notes or money-orders for the purchase of lottery tickets, or any share or chance in a lottery or gift enterprise, and to the list of the drawings at any lottery or similar scheme.

3. The law prohibits the mailing of "lottery" matter by citizens to lottery concerns and their representatives as well as the mailing of such matter by lottery companies to their customers and other persons.

The following extract on the same subject, is taken from the U. S. Official Postal Guide:

Attention * * * is directed to Section 482 of the Postal Laws and Regulations by the provisions of which newspapers or other publications of any kind, circulars and pamphlets, containing advertisements of lotteries, gift enterprises or similar schemes offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance, or lists of the prizes awarded in pursuance of such schemes, and all other matter relating to them, are declared to be unmailable. The terms "lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme offering prizes dependent in whole or in part upon lot or chance," as used in that section, include "guessing" or "estimating" contests for prizes, as well as drawings and raffles of every kind, whether general or local, whether for private gain or in aid of charitable, educational or religious objects, and whether the consideration for chances be money or other thing of value. Enterprises in which prizes are distributed among purchasers of merchandise in stated amounts, or among subscribers for publications, or for shares of corporate stock, through the medium of drawings or guessing contests, are lotteries within the meaning of that section. Publications, circulars, cards or pamphlets containing advertisements of such enterprises, or notices or other information of any kind relating to them, should be withdrawn from the mails and treated in accordance with Sections 547, 574 and 593 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

"Endless chain" enterprises designed for the sale or disposition of merchandise or other things of value through the circulation or distribution of "coupons," "tickets," "certificates," "introductions" and the like, are held to embrace the elements of a lottery, and also to be fraudulent. Matter of every kind relating to such enterprises should be excluded or withdrawn from the mails, and treated in accordance with Sections 547, 574 and 593 of the Postal Laws and Regulations.

An idea of how easy it is to get into trouble through advertising copy involving the element of chance is furnished by the action just taken by the Post Office Department against the Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kan., which operates one of the largest publishing businesses in the United States. A Post Office order, brought about by a Haldeman-Julius advertisement, last week tied up for twenty-four hours the mailing of 27 magazines, prevented the sale of 7,500,000 volumes of Shakespeare as planned, and requires the return of all money sent to the company as the result of $60,000 worth of advertising.

The predicament is brought about solely because of admitted thoughtlessness of the lottery laws by one of the heads of the advertiser firm and carelessness by the publications that accepted the advertisement without obtaining competent legal advice on its lawfulness.

The September numbers of 27 monthly magazines carry an advertisement offering a complete set of Shakespeare for $2.35. In the advertisement appeared this paragraph, an afterthought, Mr. Julius says, which had little to do with the "pulling power" of the advertisements:

"FREE TRIP TO EUROPE. Twelve readers of Shakespeare will be given a trip to England to Shakespeare's birthplace and other points of interest in England and France, with all expenses paid. Each set of Shakespeare contains full information as to how, without selling effort or solicitation, you will automatically become a contestant."

The little notice loomed large to Solicitor John Edwards, of the Post Office Department. An order immediately was issued to the magazines that the advertisement constituted an infringement against Federal laws covering the operation of lotteries, and that the magazine could not be circulated through the mail.

An attorney for the Haldeman-Julius Company hurried to Washington. He was informed that the law prohibits the publication of notice of a contest without simultaneous publication of the conditions of the contest. Twenty-seven magazines were held up 24 hours while the company's attorney explained the conditions. The result was a promise to return all money received as a result of the advertisement.

(Continued on page 37)

BALTIMORE

with a population of 750,000 people, 62 per cent of whom own their own homes, is a tryout market of unusual merit.

Your request for specific information will be given individual attention by the Service Bureau of The Baltimore Sun.

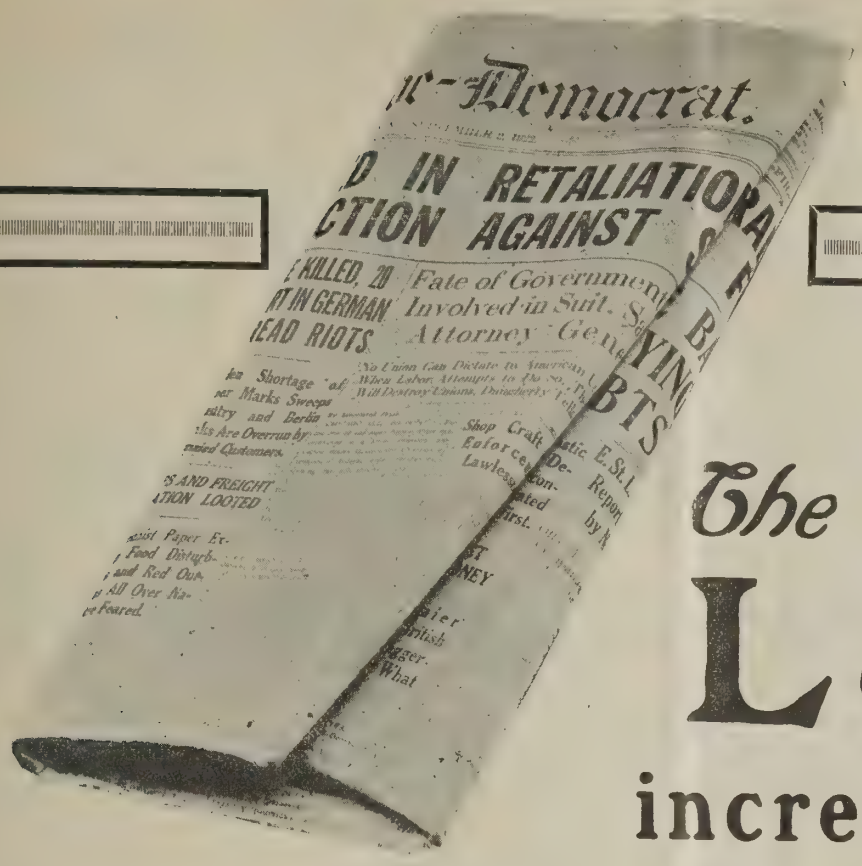
Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

The Detroit News

Consolidated — Detroit Journal — July 22, 192



Over 275,000

Net paid circulation

The Greatest Circulation Bargain In America

Today The Detroit News circulation is many thousands over above stated figure.

Announcement of actual net paid circulation will be made after sufficient time has elapsed for complete stabilisation.

The Leader increases the LEAD

ST. LOUIS' Largest Daily gained nearly 50,000 in circulation during the year closing August 31.

These gains widened the gap between the Globe-Democrat and the runner-up, whose gains were less by 10,500.

Globe-Democrat	Daily Average August, 1922	221,377
Second Daily	Daily Average August, 1922	186,557
Globe-Democrat's Advantage,		34,820

(These figures give circulation after deducting all unsold papers, spoiled in the press room, left over, unaccounted, registered on the presses but not delivered to the mail room.)

The Globe-Democrat covers not only St. Louis and suburbs. It covers the St. Louis trade area (radius 150 miles) as no other paper even claims to do.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat

St. Louis' Largest Daily

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES:

F. St. J. Richards, NEW YORK
Guy S. Osborn, CHICAGO
J. S. Scolaro, DETROIT
C. George Krogness, SAN FRANCISCO

Dorland Agency, Ltd., London
Associated American Newspapers, Paris

NINE AMERICAN DAILIES TELL EUROPE ABOUT U. S. MARKETS

Associated American Newspapers, With Offices in London, Paris and Berlin, Offer Foreign Manufacturers Entry to Gigantic Sales Fields

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT

London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

IF there is one characteristic in American life that has been apt to puzzle the Britisher it is the readiness of the U. S. business man to join hands with competitors for the benefit of all. The British business man is getting over this puzzlement to a degree and is gradually coming to see that in combination with men of allied interests there exists a power and influence that individual effort could never provide; it is taking the form of industrial associations and unions of manufacturers.

But up to now he has not appreciated to any noticeable extent the possibilities of actual trade development by combination, the co-operation in his associations being extended rather in the direction of mutual protection and safeguard.

For that reason, considerable interest has been created by the establishment of a European office representing nine American newspapers intent upon developing trade in Europe. The idea is something new to the British mind.

Associated American Newspapers is the name of the undertaking, and it embraces the active interests of the Chicago Tribune, New York Times, Philadelphia Bulletin, Boston Herald-Traveller, Washington Star, Pittsburgh Post and Sun, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Minneapolis Tribune, and St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mortimer Bryans is in charge of operations and from him I was able to obtain some interesting details of the working of this eminently practical plan for the cultivation of the American market for European goods and the European market for American goods through the medium of advertising.

Mr. Bryans is operating in Great Britain from the London office of Associated American Newspapers at 125 Pall Mall, and is linked up with a branch in Paris at 5 rue Lamartine, and in Berlin with R. A. Washburn as representative for the Continent. The association of these nine journals for the one purpose came about through the efforts of Mr. Bryans and his colleague, Mr. Hessey, both of whom, having studied conditions in Europe during the war and during some years' residence in England, decided that there was a big opportunity for developing British business in the American markets.

The idea was placed before the heads of the various newspapers and at once approved. Some of the journals had previously been represented separately in Europe, but under the scheme of associated interests it was felt that a great deal more could be accomplished by offering the British merchant or manufacturer facilities for adequately covering the most important markets in America, as against single markets singly exploited. Representation of the chain is on the advertising side only; the news arrangements are unaffected.

Asked whether he though much more could be done by unified efforts as evidenced in this co-operation scheme than by individual propaganda and soliciting, Mr. Bryans said:

"It is of course apparent that more can be done by unity, inasmuch as the United States represents a series of connected selling fields or markets, and no one newspaper could adequately cover such a field. It gives an opportunity of offering these markets either as a group or singly, in any instance where one market is better suited to a purpose than another, thereby serving the advertiser to the best advantage and developing him for all of the markets ultimately.

"Our plan of campaign is primarily to interest British merchants and manufacturers in developing their business in America, but we are also endeavoring to develop the interest of the various railroads, hotels and resorts in approaching American tourists through the medium of these American newspapers. We are using various means of publicity for accomplishing this purpose, as may be seen from the type of advertisements we are running. Our campaign has actively commenced."

One of the points made by Mr. Bryans in his publicity for the A. A. N. is that if one picks up a copy of any representative American newspaper there will be found direct reference to European-made merchandise in the retailers' advertisements. This indicates the fact that merchandise made in Europe is recognized by American retail merchants as a strong selling argument. The reputation that has been created for European merchandise in the United States, Mr. Bryans claims, is a solid foundation on which merchants or manufacturers can develop their business in the most desirable market in the world today.

To the question whether any success has been achieved to date, Mr. Bryans replied:

"Practical results have already been achieved, but I do not care to name them specifically. One of the largest manufacturers in his line in Great Britain is prepared to follow our plan. Considerable interest has been shown by various British advertisers, and particularly advertising agents. But we do not confine our efforts solely to existing British advertisers, and are endeavoring to develop all possibilities."

Mr. Bryans has a sound and intimate knowledge of American marketing conditions and his method of "Selling America" to British manufacturers is both practical and convincing. He was, as is well known, associated with the Chicago Tribune for a number of years, having gone through the various advertising departments, and the merchandising service department of that institution when it was first started. He was also associated with the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Philadelphia North American, and other newspapers, which he represented in various cities in America in an advertising capacity.

Mr. Bryans came to London in 1915 as the representative of the Vanadium Corporation of America, with which he remained for some five years. The reason for his choice of his present work is because he naturally felt that there was a great opportunity for developing this field through such an association of powerful American newspapers, and his present go-out-after-it activities suggest that it is likely to work out just as he planned.

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE MOVES

Leaves Old Building for Modern Home —Whole New Linotype Battery

The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, the control of which was obtained by Harry W. Brown in March, 1919, will move commencing September 17 from its old building at 528 Walnut street, which it recently sold, to new quarters. A four story fireproof building at 408 to 422 Pioneer street has been leased for a term of years as a new home for the paper. By city ordinance the name of this location will be changed to Commercial Square.

While the removal is in process, ty will be set by the Commercial Tribu and the paper printed by the Times-Sta The presses, which were purchased r cently will be taken down and moved the new building, where foundations a pits have already been constructed. T linotype machines in the composing roo will not be moved but will be replac by a battery of 24 new machines. R moval will be completed by September

BECK AND SIMONS RESIGN

Succeeded as A. B. C. Directors Stone and Youngreen

The directors of the Audit Bureau Circulation, at their recent meeting the Hotel Biltmore, New York, accept the resignations of E. W. Simons, of t James Manufacturing Company, Fort A kinson, Wis., and Thomas Beck of t Crowell Publishing Company, New Yo

Their places were filled by C. Youngreen, advertising manager, the I. Case Works, Racine, Wis., and F. Stone, of the Review of Reviews, N York. Messrs. Youngreen and Stone w hold office until the annual meeting the bureau in Chicago October 20.

Starts New York Local Weekly

The Fordham Times, a new New Yo neighborhood weekly, has been est lished, T. C. Odum, formerly publish of a Brooklyn weekly local paper, is publisher and S. S. Coine, recently of advertising staff of the Brooklyn Citiz is business and advertising manager.

SLOW ACCOUNTS ARE A MILL-STONE ABOUT THE NECK OF ANY NEWSPAPER

The Best Evidence of the Value Your Readers Place Upon—

Our Insurance Service Plan

Is Their Prompt Payment of Subscriptions to Insure Continuous Protection of the Policy.

HICKEY-MITCHELL COMPANY

(Builds and Holds Circulation)

U. S. MGRS.—NATIONAL CASUALTY CO.—NEWSPAPER DEP'T

PIERCE BLDG. ST. LOUIS

The Washington (D. C.) Star and Financial Advertising

Those concerned with the sale of reputable securities will find in the National Capital a public with the inclination and the resources for investment—and in The Star the most direct medium for reaching them all.

Knowing, as all Washingtonians do, the strict censorship exercised by The Star, they accept with confidence the integrity of the advertisements appearing in its financial section.

The Evening Star

WITH SUNDAY MORNING EDITION

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Write us direct or through our

New York Office
Dan A. Carroll
150 Nassau Street

Paris Office
5 Rue Lamartine

Chicago Office
J. E. Lutz
Tower Building

AGAIN!

Universal Service First By Twenty-four Hours With News of Rail Strike Settlement

ONCE more Universal Service delivered to its client newspapers the most important news of the day before all other news agencies carried a line of it. An exclusive dispatch from Chicago, carried by Universal Service clients on Wednesday morning, September 6th, announced the impending settlement of the Railway Shopmen's strike. Full details of the peace terms were included. This copyrighted story positively announced that B. M. Jewell, head of the shop crafts union had called a meeting to settle the strike. For twenty-four hours, other news agencies were unable to confirm this exclusive news, and so denied the authenticity of Universal's information. The next day full admission was made of Universal's Big Scoop.

Universal Service established such a remarkable record throughout the developments of the rail strike that railroad officials, union executives and newspapers alike acclaimed in messages of congratulation its extraordinary enterprise and achievement.

Send for sample copy of exclusive news feature report

UNIVERSAL SERVICE

M. Koenigsberg, President George T. Hargreaves, Editor and Manager

New York City

SAVE READERS' TIME BY STATING PRICES IN CLASSIFIED ADS

A New York "Cave Dweller" Protests Against Omission of Rent Asked by Apartment Advertisers—Want Ad Users Asked to Help Keep Columns Clean

By C. L. PERKINS

Executive Secretary, Asscciation of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers

MANY times in this column classified managers have been urged to conduct campaigns for the purpose of educating classified advertisers to state prices in their copy. The man who has $100 to spend for a certain thing cannot afford the $200 grade, and does not want to look at an article he cannot buy. A want-ad reader seeking a $200 per month apartment oftentimes applies to advertisers who have $400 apartments, merely because the reader was not told in the advertisement that the apartment cost $400. This wastes not only the time of the realer but also of the advertiser. That readers object to have their time wasted and do not like to read advertisements without prices quoted is shown by the following letter recently written to the New York Times and printed on their editorial page:

"To the Editor of the New York Times:

"I have had occasion to scan the columns of 'Apartments to Let—Unfurnished' and am struck by the number of advertisers who omit to mention the most essential factor, viz., 'rent asked.' Is it that they are asking too much and know it, or have they the erroneous idea that the question of price is only of secondary importance?

"If a column were devoted to offers 'with prices' only, such classification would receive the attention of those interested. Does this voice anyone else's viewpoint?

"A CAVE DWELLER."

* * *

THE St. Paul Pioneer Press & Dispatch, A. Levich, classified manager, has always been an advocate of clean classified advertising, realizing fully the importance of building up and maintaining reader confidence.

At the present time it is running a very comprehensive and intelligent campaign, capitalizing the fact that it carefully censors all want-ads.

The following is taken from a half-page advertisement, one of a series:

THE VALUE OF TRUTHFUL WANT-ADS

Naturally when persons refer to the want-ads of their favorite newspaper, they do so for a specific reason. Perhaps the reader is seeking a used automobile, a new home, a furnished apartment, a good used piano, a desirable lot for building purposes, farm land; perhaps he has lost something of great value to him, and is looking to the want-ads for recovery of same; or it may be a score or more of other things the reader desires to buy or sell.

Regardless of the occasion for reference to the want-ad section of the newspaper, the average person wants to have the assurance that whatever is listed in this section of the newspaper is honestly described, properly classified, and of a dependable nature.

The more care a paper exercises with regard to the character of its classified advertising, the more confidence will its readers place in every individual advertisement that is published, and the more quickly and readily will they respond. The Dispatch-Pioneer Press takes every precaution possible to guard against the insertion of any classified advertising which would appear to be deceptive or misleading in any way. Every ad is subjected to the strictest censorship before it is allowed to appear in print.

QUESTIONABLE CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING AMOUNTING TO HUNDREDS OF DOLLARS

is refused every month by the Dispatch-Pioneer Press to protect the interest of its thousands of advertisers who have honest offers to make—and to protect the interest of its thousands of readers who respond to the large volume of classified advertising appearing in the Dispatch-Pioneer Press daily.

The strict censorship of every want-ad appearing in the Dispatch-Pioneer Press increases materially the volume of honest advertising inserted in these newspapers by advertisers who realize that the appearance of their want-ad in this clean classified medium stamps it as being dependable—and your offer will inspire reader confidence by reason of its appearance in these great newspapers.

YOU ARE CONFERRING A FAVOR WHEN YOU

Report Information Regarding FRAUDULENT ADVERTISING

appearing in the classified columns of the Dis-Patch-Pioneer Press to the classified department.

Brewer Sells Gazette and Times

The Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Gazette and Times, which were consolidated last Fall, have been sold by Luther A. Brewer to a syndicate composed of Col. W. G. Dows, president of the Iowa Railways & Light Company; Ike Smith, vice-president of the same company; W. G. Haskell, president of the Haskell Coal Company; and H. W. Havner, former attorney general of Iowa, they will take possession October 1. It has not been announced who the new editor of the paper will be but, it is understood, he is now connected with the journalism department of the state university.

SUPPLEMENT CASE HEARD

Decision of Interstate Commerce Commission by November 29

The Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the abolishment of baggage rates for the transportation of rotogravure sections from special printers to newspapers was held September 11, in the assembly hall of the Merchants' Association, New York, before Examiner Gerry. It was completed in one day. Both sides have until October 11 to file briefs with the Commission. The final decision of the Commission will be handed down on or before November 29, 1922.

General Baggage Agent McVail, of the Pennsylvania system, one of the witnesses called by the railroads, in the course of cross-examination, stated that it was tr that the railroads had been considering general increase in baggage rates for newspapers.

Charles M. Galloway, appearing f the Art Gravure Company, the Washin ton Post, the Philadelphia Public Ledg the Buffalo Express, the Rochester Dem ocrat & Chronicle, the Providence, a the other papers for which the Art Gr vure Corporation prints, was in charge the case for the newspapers. He w assisted by G. E. Mahaneey, represent the Buffalo Times, and L. H. Axma representing the Hearst newspapers.

The witnesses called on behalf of t newspapers were W. C. Shelton, t Washington Post; Allison Stone, t Providence Journal; William F. Lat the Philadelphia Public Ledger; G. Zippel, general baggage agent the Lack wanna Railroad, and Hugh O'Donn the New York Times.

A. A. A. A. to Meet Oct. 11 and 1

The annual meeting of members of American Association of Advertisi Agencies will be held at the Hotel A bassador, New York, on October 11 a 12. This meeting will be preceded by regular quarterly meeting of the execut board of the association.

Reg'lar Fellers
By Gene Byrnes

The Quincy, Ill., Whig Journal is the new paper this week.

They are still coming.

Furnished full page matrices, black alone, black and red and black and three colors; or, as the first page of a printed comic section.

HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE
280 Broadway New York City

TRADE LINOTYPE MARK

No Make-Shifts
No Evasions

Every part of the Linotype is there because the machine is better for it and every part fits into the big scheme of simple operation

The illustration shows the operator of a Model 9 Linotype shifting magazines. Multiple distribution gives him instant command of as many as eight different faces.

This advertisement composed entirely on the Linotype ...RAIL PEACE ...

...ERTY'S IMPEACHMENT DE...
...WORLD LAUDED IN SE...TE

...e Committee Hea...
...s Senator ...
...at He Institu... Ac-
...st Attorn... Gen-
...udge Wilker...

...ERAL STA... E
...D BY INJUN... N

...Speech, Pres... d
...e Infringed ...d
...ts Are Made ...c-
...f Crime of Un...on
...It is Asserted...

...of Attorney Ge...ral
...of Federal J...ge
...dicago, who s...ed
...ike injunction, was
...ram sent yesterday
Senator Borah by
...airman of the Cen-
...ittee for the rail-this district. This

...,000 railroad shop-
...n the New York
we urge upon
...essity for the ...y General
...l Federal
...unction

...STILL DIG TO SAVE ... CALLS ... INJUNCTION...

The World and Mr. Daugherty

(Special to The World.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.

In the course of a speech in the United States Senate this afternoon criticising the Daugherty injunction, Senator Robinson (Dem., Ark.) said:

The New York World, under date of Sept. 2, in an editorial entitled "Daugherty's Injunction" discloses the sham, the pretense and the injustice underlying the injunction in the shopmen's strike.

This morning's Washington Post quotes the Attorney General as saying that the decent press of the United States, which includes 90 per cent. of the newspapers published in America, supports his action, the inference being that The New York World and all the newspapers edited by men who have the courage, in the face of unpopularity, to stand for the Constitution of the United States and the principles of human freedom are indecent.

No newspaper that I have read has denied in an editorial, but, on the contrary, by implication, the editorials have admitted, that the injunction, out of what they term public necessity, goes too far.

The United States and our people enjoy the services of a great many newspapers which have devoted their columns to right, justice and the honest impartation of news. No newspaper in the United States has more certainly, in the judgment and presentation of public questions, earned the title and all that goes with it of an honest, fearless newspaper than The New York World.

It is a matter of common knowledge that so eagerly is that newspaper read by Senators that within an hour after the Senate has assembled it is difficult, if not utterly impossible, to procure one of the four copies of that paper kept upon the table in the reading room for Senators.

It is read more by Senators than any other two papers which come upon that table. Why? Because when officers of the United States Government are willing to prostitute their powers and their positions to the procurement of illegal process from the courts, that paper and others of equal courage stand up for life, stand up for law.

The Attorney General, by impliedly branding The New York World and other papers which in this controversy have spoken for justice and right and liberty and in the name of humanity, cannot destroy their reputation for honesty and fairness nor can he give to them a reputation for indecency.

The New York World editorial to which I have referred will be printed in the Record following my remarks. It points out the Administration's efforts to obtain political advantage through a belated and questionable use of the injunction.

...mit
...et
...n
...
...oat
W... Af
T...
T... De W
...eme
...etur
...ght
...wel

A...nou... issued fo...
...eral Cha...
crafts st...
posals night by Railway
the Am...
probabl...
In w... said th...
settlem...
that th...
rate s...
ce...tain
...s.
...lr
...sfu...
...op ...
Separa...
the u...
all ...

STILL SETTING A PACE THAT'S HARD TO BEAT

THE EVENING TELEGRAM
TORONTO

HEAD OFFICE:
CORNER BAY AND MELINDA STREETS

ESTABLISHED 1876
BY J. ROSS ROBERTSON

REPRESENTATIVES
VERREE & CONKLIN
NEW YORK, 200 MADISON AVENUE
CHICAGO, STEGER BUILDING

July 24th. 1922.

Mr. H. V. Ball,
Messrs. R. Hoe & Co.,
MONTREAL. QUE.

Dear Mr. Ball:-

Please do not overlook the foundation plans for our new superspeed press. You might also advise us how the work on it is progressing, and just when you expect to make delivery.

Enclosed find another months press report from our Uptown superspeed press which I thought might interest you for you see we used our spare unit on two occasions forming a 6 roll press with a single pair of folders, thereby having a straight cut of 44 pages. This is a better output than our previous one, so you can see the Telegram is still holding the record.

Yours very truly,
THE EVENING TELEGRAM

A. T. Cockburn

ATC-AF. Business Manager.

Hoe Heavy-Design Presses Equipped with the Hoe Superspeed Rotary Camless Folder, Hoe Patented Automatic Ink Pump System of Distribution and other exclusive Hoe Features, give a Greater Net Output with Less Paper Wastage than machines of any other kind.

Hoe Presses are Designed and Built to do the Best Work in the most Efficient and Economical Manner—Not Merely to Sell at a Price

FIGURES THAT SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES AND ARE POSSIBLE ONLY WITH

HOE SUPERSPEED PRESSES

TABULATED STATEMENT OF UPTOWN PRESS
DAILY RUNS, UPTOWN BRANCH
650 DUPONT ST.

SUPERSPEED NO 5, PRESS

May	Pages	Printed	Minutes	Average per Hour
1.	28. x	26800.	60.	26800.
2.	36.	26900.	60.	26900.
3.	32. x	26700.	51.	31411.
4.	40.	27800.	54.	30888.
5.	40.	27000.	56.	28928.
6.	40.	27700.	80.	20775.
8.	30. x	27000.	52.	31153
9.	36.	27000.	56.	28928.
10.	36.	26900.	55.	29345.
11.	40.	26900.	58.	27758.
12.	44. #	36500.	80.	27375.
13.	40.	27600.	67.	24716.
15.	30. x	27900.	58.	28862.
16.	36.	26800.	51.	31529.
17.	36.	26800.	62.	25935.
18.	40.	26800.	54.	29777.
19.	44. #	36400.	84.	26000.
20.	40.	27300.	56.	29250.
22.	32. x	26900.	54.	29888.
23.	36.	27000.	58.	27931.
25.	36.	26700.	57.	28105.
26.	36.	26900.	57.	28310.
27.	36.	27600.	58.	28551.
29.	26. x	28000.	70.	24000.
30.	32. x	27300.	50.	32760.
31.	32. x	27100.	53.	30679.

Average as Octuple Press 29,156 per hour
" " 5 Roll " 27,712 " "
" " 6 Roll " 26,670 " "

x Equals Octuple Run
" 6 Roll "
Blank Equals 5 Roll Run

NET OUTPUT IS WHAT COUNTS IN NEWSPAPER PRESSROOMS. WHAT IS THE NET OUTPUT OF YOUR MACHINES?

R. HOE & CO.

7 Water Street, BOSTON
827 Tribune Bldg., CHICAGO
504-520 Grand St.
NEW YORK CITY
109-112 Borough Road
LONDON, S. E. 1, ENG.

The Best Business Producer in Japan

First in News, Influence and Circulation Throughout the Far East

Morning and Evening Editions—Over a Million Copies

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN

Established by the late Premier Okuma

報知新聞

A Splendid Circulation

The Hochi Shimbun has had continuously since its establishment in 1872 the largest circulation in the Far East.

Oldest Evening and Morning Press

The Hochi Shimbun was the first newspaper in Japan to add an evening edition to its morning paper.

Advertising Rates
Per line.....	Y 1.25
Per Column..	Y 170.00
Per inch....	Y 12.50
Per page....	Y2,000.00

A Rich Field

There is no section of the Japanese buying community which is not reached by the Hochi Shimbun.

An Efficient Medium

The Hochi Shimbun is read extensively through Japan, Korea, Manchuria and Formosa, and is the foremost advertising medium.

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN SHA
TOKYO, JAPAN

GENUINE AUTO NEWS WILL BE PRINTED

W. A. Bermingham of Chicago Post Tells Motor Advertising Men How to Get Publicity Into the Newspapers

Automobile men received expert advice on how to get reading matter into the columns of the daily newspapers that will be of value to the entire industry as well as the firm sending it out, from Walter A. Bermingham, automobile editor of the Chicago Evening Post, who put it in the form of an address to the Motor & Accessory Manufacturers' Association advertising conference at Buffalo September 14.

Mr. Bermingham did not approve newspaper policy which forbade the mention of an automobile firm's name in news matter, but he advised the motor advertising managers to put their publicity into the hands of trained newspaper men, who knew news values and space-values and the advantage of "saying it with pictures." He pointed out that automobile manufacturers benefited even from a page of good roads news, accident prevention hints, and routes for tours, which did not mention the name of individual cars or manufacturers. He portrayed the development of automobile publicity from the days when any statement about the "horseless carriage" had a ready audience among newspaper readers until the present, when cost of production of newspapers forces editors to eliminate everything which does not interest a wide circle of readers.

"The public became more interested in the live events and daily happenings of the motor world than in the news of the trade itself," continued Mr. Bermingham, "and the publicity men who failed to capitalize that interest lost out.

"Some of them, in their shortsightedness, failed to appreciate the value to the industry in general of news that was not merely a puff for his employers or a description of the new model in production.

"But is it not a fact that the entire trade profits from an automobile page even if it contains no personal mention of individual firms or cars, but deals with subjects like good roads, week-end or transcontinental tours, or accident prevention? Not an inch of disguised advertising matter, and yet publicity of the best kind.

"I don't wish to be misunderstood. While some newspapers have excluded trade and shop news altogether, including mention of firms and machines, there are still some who continue the old policy, and I am inclined to believe that they are right.

"Suppose one firm has sold a million cars. Naturally, the majority of owners are enthusiastic on the subject of this particular car. They rave about its pick-up, its smooth running qualities, its hill-climbing ability. Here is a good-sized audience interested in a certain machine. They will read any item in which the name of their favorite car is mentioned. Editors who realize this will still give space to the trade item

"But the problem of obtaining free publicity is becoming more and more difficult. Editors, are—and have to be—discriminating. Readers of the automobile pages are seeking not mere piffle; out-and-out praise of this or that product, but real news and constructive news. They want enlightenment on automotive subjects—information that will help them solve their mechanical problems; information about roads; news of club and associations; of racing, touring, record-breaking, or of some odd happening.

"The up-to-date publicity man is no longer a space-grabber. He is a trained newspaper man, alive to the interests and desires of the reader.

"The publicity director of today has analyzed the various newspapers and has studied their respective policies. Thus he does not waste effort, time, and material with publicity matter that is doomed to the waste-basket before it leaves his office.

"One newspaper will specialize [illegible] good roads; another on accident prevention; another on tours; and another on the personal gossip of the trade.

"It has always been my contention that the automobile has deserved the co-operation it has received on the part of the press because it has helped to educate the public to the use and maintenance a necessary article. Motion pictures have progressed along the same lines as the auto, although the newspaper space devoted to them seems to me out of proportion to their merit. Just now radio is receiving a good deal of attention, and radio departments in the newspapers have sprung up all over the country. While the radio is an innovation it is just as much a trade proposition as the motor car.

"Automobiles and accessories deserve the same amount of attention as professional baseball. Some astute sporting editors, I notice, have begun to see the fallacy of giving everything for nothing and handing the owners of professional baseball teams page after page of free publicity.

"My final word to the publicity man in the automobile field, then, is one of encouragement. The game is just as good today as it ever was. If you have something of news interest to say, and are able to dress it up in such a manner that it will appeal to the editor, you will find your scrapbook growing despite the apparent conspiracy against you on the part of the newspapers."

DEMAND BETTER TRAIN SERVICE

Interstate Circulators Ask P. O. to Investigate Railway Conditions

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher*)*

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 13.—The Interstate Circulation Managers' Association met at Pittsburgh Sept. 12, with an attendance of over 50. President R. W. Weiler, Allentown Morning [illegible] presided.

As a result of reported bad railway mail service in certain sections of the territory covered by the association a resolution was passed appealing to the postmaster general to investigate conditions and restore discontinued service.

Twenty-two new members were elected as follows: Harry W. Cullis, Chester Times; Hilda Larson, Tarentum News; George E. Evans, Charleston Daily Mail; Frank W. Hurst, Lebanon Daily News; W. H. Childs, Clarksburg Telegram; H. Long, Hanover Record-Herald; Howard C. Lee, Philadelphia Enquirer; F. G. Lane, Monessen Daily Independent; M. S. Lunn, Pittsburgh Post and Sun; L. E. Lauer, Oil City Derrick; C. Perry, Pittsburgh Press; Campbell March, Washington (Pa.) Observer-Reporter; Paul Sergent, Baltimore News and American; Dave Trimble, Connellsville Daily News; Edmund B. Crane, Paterson Press-Guardian; E. H. Bell, Asbury Park Press; James Sherman, Greensburg Record; H. C. Comstock, Sharon Telegraph; John S. McIlvaine, Beaver Falls Tribune; A. W. Ambler, Trenton Times; Phillip Meyer, Jr., Branch Record; Walter G. Andrews, Johnstown Ledger.

Baltimore was selected as the next meeting place in March.

It was decided to print the proceedings of the convention, including all papers and addresses, and furnish each paid member a copy.

One member told how his paper had won a fight to prevent subsidization of a leading department store advertiser. Another told how he had spent over $75 a year for premiums.

One member told how he would give his papers free to out-of-town readers if stands if necessary to gain representation, while another was on an absolute returnable basis.

New angles for the surest way to get service from railway mail clerks on newspaper mail were explained.

Texas Daily Enlarging

An extension to the quarters of the Cuero (Tex.) Daily Record is being built for the paper's pressroom.

EIGHTH DISTRICT BROKEN UP

ach State to Have Own A. A. C. W. Organization Hereafter

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MINOT, N. D., Sept. 14.—The annual ighth district convention of the Asso- ated Advertising Clubs of the World, ow in session in Minot will be the last strict meeting of the organization be- use the district association will be dis- lved and instead each state will have an dividual organization of its own, ac- rding to an announcement by Vice- esident C. G. Ferguson of Minneapolis. legislative committee was named today draft a bill, to be presented to the xt session of the North Dakota legis- ture, asking for finances to promote a vorable advertising campaign for the lickertail State."

A committee was appointed to stimu- e interest in the 1923 Atlantic City rtional convention of the A. A. C. W.

9H DISTRICT A. A. C. W. FORMED

wa Associated Ad Club Succeeded by Iowa-Nebraska Organization

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MASON CITY, Iowa, September 13.— e Associated Advertising Clubs of wa no longer exists. Its place has n taken by the Associated Advertising bs of the Ninth District, which com- ses both Iowa and Nebraska. This or- ization was formed in convention held e September 11 and 12. Joe Langford Davenport, Ia., became the president the new organization. J. R. Kriedke, of Lincoln, Neb., was elected vice-president representing Nebraska and James A. King, Mason City, vice-president for Iowa. Mr. Langford is also vice-president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World representing the Ninth district.

Louis Holland, president of the A. A. C. W., was a guest at the annual banquet Tuesday night. Carl Hunt, general manager of the A. A. C. W., spoke for the "big brother" movement.

The ninth district organization adopted a program for building up struggling ad clubs in its territory by sending out speakers to co-operate in increasing the membership of such clubs. Monthly bulletins will be sent to all clubs so that they may be kept in touch with developments.

Davenport was selected for the 1923 meeting of the Ninth district clubs. The Des Moines Register and Tribune silver cup was awarded to the Davenport Ad Club for rendering the best services to advertising during the year.

A Correction

Through an advertising copy error in EDITOR & PUBLISHER for September 16, it was stated that the newspaper series "Forty Winning Plays in Football" was being handled by the Science Service Inc., whereas it is one of the features of the International Syndicate, Baltimore.

Gilman Adds Albertan

Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman, New York, Boston and Chicago, have been appointed foreign representatives of the Calgary Albertan, effective September 1, 1922.

The Ludlow

For Profitable Job Printing

YOUR low-priced competitor does get the jobbing business. He may be losing money, or maybe he has a Ludlow. You can tell by watching the character of his work. If he prints in all new faces, in series, and makes free use of italics, without broken letters; if he frequently makes long runs of 42, 48, and 60 point, bold and extended faces—it's a Ludlow! You can't undersell him, but you can match him. You can use a Ludlow, too.

He Can Make Money, Where You Lose It

With no distribution of used forms, he saves, in cold cash, what you pay for this item. He can set matter out of one font all day and all night, yet his cases are always full.

He never buys type, because he never needs any. Ludlow matrices do not wear. He can always set an abundance of new type matter in any font. Yet he needs no sorts caster or type storage.

His all-slug method saves time on make-up. Slugs handle like cuts. They never pi. He even uses the Ludlow for spacing material.

He saves electrotypes by casting each line twice or more, and making up multiple forms at slight expense—and without waiting upon the foundry.

He saves press work by recasting lines for enough forms to fill the capacity of his press.

His presses are busier because little makeready is required. Ludlow slugs are remarkably accurate in height-to-paper.

No work-ups or broken letters occur with Ludlow slugs. Letters can't work up, and letters can't break.

He keeps standing forms without limit and without running out of sorts or spacing materials. And alterations for reprints are made without patching plates.

Before the installation of the Ludlow achines I was com- lled to employ ex- a men on Sunday distribute display pe for use on Mon- y. Since their in- llation I have done vay with this non- oductive work.— Paso Herald.

I can say in all ankness that the dlow is adapted to y work that can be ndled with foun- y type, no matter w complicated, as ll as many things possible to do with e.—Liberal (Kan- s) Democrat.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
Eastern Office: World Building, New York City

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION ABOVE 10 PT.

IN ST. LOUIS THE STAR

Daily and Sunday, in August

GAINED 195,375

Agate Lines in

Total Paid Advertising

—An Increase of More Than 40%

Over the Same Month Last Year

The Star's gain in Total Paid Advertising was greater than the gains of all other St. Louis newspapers combined.

The Star's gain represents 55% of the total increased lineage placed by advertisers in St. Louis newspapers.

CIRCULATION GAINS

The Sunday Star	30,193
The Star, Daily	8,291

August, 1922, Compared With August, 1921

don't say "Paper"—say "STAR"

Trade Mark Registered

National Advertising Representatives

Story, Brooks & Finley

New York Chicago Philadelphia Los Angeles San Francisco

BENJAMIN SHERBOW DEAD

Was Author and Authority on Typographical Matters

Benjamin Sherbow, typographic consultant and author of several works on the general subject of type display, including "Making Type Work" and "Effective Type Use," died September 1, at Patchogue, N. Y., where he had gone for a rest.

Mr. Sherbow was born in Germany in 1878 and came to this country when eight years old. He first worked for the Curtis Publishing Company and later joined the Calkins & Holden Advertising Agency staff as typographer, probably the first person to have such a position. A number of years ago Mr. Sherbow started his own business as a typographic consultant which he maintained until the time of his death.

Obituary

MRS. EMILY NORTON COLEMAN, wife of Charles M. Coleman, managing editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligence, died at Pasadena last week.

MRS. KATE FRENCH WHEELOCK, aged 86, widow of Joseph A. Wheelock, for 45 years editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, is dead. She was the mother of Webster Wheelock, who succeeded his father as editor of the Pioneer Press.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, colored, aged 74, editor of the St. Paul Appeal, a negro paper, was struck by an antomobile and killed, Sept. 3.

S. H. COTTRELL, father of Jesse S. Cottrell, former Washington correspondent and now minister to Bolivia, died Sept. 10.

CHARLES THORPE, aged 34, foreman of the Newark (N. J.) Ledger composing room, died Sept. 9.

GEORGE SAUNDERS, aged 63, correspondent for the London Times who served as Berlin correspondent of the London Morning Post from 1888 to 1897 and Paris correspondent of the Times from 1897 to 1908, died Sept. 9.

W. F. BISBEE, aged 60, editor and publisher of the Benjamin (Tex.) Post, died Aug. 27.

GEORGE READ MAGOWAN, aged 32, at one time on the Philadelphia North American advertising staff and recently eastern representative of the National Stockman and Farmer, died Sept. 7, following an attack of appendicitis. He is survived by a widow and a 3-year-old son.

ALFRED ELLSWORTH, formerly on the editorial staff of the Jamestown (N. D.) Alert, died recently.

MRS. CHARLES H. LUDINGTON, wife of the vice-president and treasurer of the Curtis Publishing Company, died Sept. 7, at her summer home at Saranac Lake, N. Y.

AARON JACOBS, aged 62, next to the oldest pressman of the Boston Globe, died recently.

DR. HAROLD C. ERNST, prominent writer on medical subjects, editor of the Journal of Medical Research, died recently.

WILLIAM F. WOODS, aged 63, editor of the Tacoma (Wash.) Globe before he went to Chicago 30 years ago and since then on various papers there, died of heart failure on the Jackson Park golf links last week. At the time of his death he was secretary of the Chicago Law Bulletin Company.

COL. MARION MACQUEAN OGDEN, aged 63, formerly city editor of the Oakland (Cal.) Chronicle, died Sept. 2. He is survived by his widow, who is the present city editor of the Chronicle.

THOMAS WILLIAM MATTINGLY, aged 61, former business manager of the Little Rock (Ark.) Daily News, died recently.

W. WYNN JOHNSON, who retired as advertising manager of the Portland (Ore.) Telegram about 15 years ago and who prior to that was connected with the advertising departments of papers in San Francisco and Los Angeles, died recently in Dallas, Ore., where he has been a prune grower since he left newspaper work.

MISS DORRIS LUND, aged 20, an employee of the Nebraska City (Neb.) Daily Press, was killed in an automobile accident Sept. 7.

JOSEPH S. GLICK, aged 66, founder of the Pittsburgh Volksfreund, died Sept. 8. He was active as editor and publisher until July 1, last, when he retired from the editorship.

AMOS MCCONNELL, founder and for many years editor and publisher of the Vernon (Tex.) Record, died last week.

T. H. COLEMAN, aged 69, father of Sidney Coleman, managing editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon, died last week.

FRANK P. CRAVENS, aged 60, first business manager of the Waco (Tex.) Examiner and, at different times connected with newspapers in Austin, Dallas, and Houston, died in Los Angeles, Cal., recently.

DUNCAN MCEWAN, sales and promotion manager of the Paramount Knitting Company, Chicago, died in that city September 6.

L. P. HILL, editor and publisher of the Ensley (Ala.) Enterprise, a weekly publication, and pioneer citizen of Birmingham, died September 4. The coroner attributed his death to an acute attack of heart failure.

MRS. MARTHA NELSON BEATON, wife of Kenneth C. Beaton, "K. C. B." of the Hearst newspapers, died in Los Angeles September 8 after a long illness.

Boston Advertiser Moves Want Staff

The want ad department of the Boston Advertiser has been moved to the street floor of the Little building, 82 Boylston street.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

NEWS AND FEATURE SERVICES

Maintain Prestige—Create Circulation—Attract Advertising

NEWS SERVICES

(Via leased wire or laid down in New York, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Seattle, San Francisco or Los Angeles.)

PUBLIC LEDGER COMBINATION NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER FOREIGN NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER DOMESTIC NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER BUSINESS NEWS SERVICE.

FEATURE SERVICES:

FEATURE PAGES IN MAT: Daily—Human Interest Page. Weekly—Personality Page, Special Feature Page, Science Page, Short Story Page. COMICS: "Somebody's Stenog." (Hayward), Daily Strip and Weekly Page; "That Reminds Me" (Collins), "And Then He Changed His Mind" (Dunn), "Dumb-Bells" (Dunn), "The Crossing Cop" (John). CARTOONS: Sykes' Daily; "Follies of the Passing Show" (Hanlon), Weekly; "Children of Adam" (Behse), Daily. FICTION: Daily and Weekly Detective and Mystery Serials; Hazel Deyo Batchelor's Daily Love-Problem Serials; Daily and Weekly Short Stories. RADIO FEATURE: "Radio in the Home" (Daily). MIDGET FEATURES of stick length: "Things You'll Love to Make," "Things for Boys to Make," "The Housewife's Idea Box," "What's What," "After-Dinner Tricks," "The Home in Good Taste," "How to Save When Shopping," "Cultivating Your Charm," "Famous Ghosts," "Favorite Recipes of Famous Women," "Sharpening Up Your Memory," "Guess Who?" "Pam's Paris Postals," "The Children's Hour," "History of Your Name," "Who-Why-What-When-Where?" "Human Curios," "What Are You Good For?" "Making More Money," "Daily Fun Hour," "Can You Tell?" "Correct English," "Read Your Character." HOME PAGE FEATURES: "A Daughter of Eve," "The Latest" (Paris Fashions), "Home Cooking," by Queen Victoria's cook, "As Woman to Woman," "Dreamland Adventures." SPORTS FEATURES: "The Sportfolio," "Wise Tennis Tips" (Tilden). PUZZLES, CUT-OUTS, TRICKS and MAGIC.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE NEW BOOKLOVERS' PICTUREGAME ANNOUNCED FOR SEASON 1922-1923

Prior to the war the Booklovers' Picturegame was a sensational success for over five years with 132 newspapers in the United States. Since 1917 it has been allowed to rest and we believe the territory is now ripe for this high class circulation and revenue feature. It will produce Paid-in-advance New Subscriptions or can be used as a high class editorial feature. The Picturegame can be fitted to any condition for any newspaper and will pay for the prizes and advertising space used in promoting same. Nearly every newspaper that used it before the war ran two or three Picturegames, which speaks for its results. The Evening Mail of New York City has used it consistently for eleven years. THE ROCHESTER TIMES UNION WILL START THE NEW PICTUREGAME ON SEPTEMBER 15th.

Write us for full details and particulars of the plan without obligation or expense to yourselves.

BOOKLOVERS CONTEST CO.
32nd FLOOR
WOOLWORTH BUILDING

'RESS CANNOT OUTSTEP HUMAN KNOWLEDGE

Can Print All Big News, But It Cannot Make People Read and Understand It, Declares Dr. Bleyer

Dr. Willard G. Bleyer, head of the epartment of Journalism at the Uni-rsity of Wisconsin was the speaker of a round table discussion of problems of newspaper making at the Wamsutta Club, New Bedford, Mass., Sept. 8. Dr. and Mrs. Bleyer and the Standard editorial staff were guests at dinner of Managing Editor George A. Hough.

r. Willard Bleyer

"We may say that a certain cable from a Cnoa conference is big news and put it o the first page," said Dr. Bleyer, "but ds doesn't make people read it. We 're got to find some way to link this ghering abroad to our readers. The ference is to have a vital effect on lise readers' lives eventually. The task o interpret or present the event now that the readers will appreciate the nnection and, prompted by selfish in-st, assimilate the news."

he speaker readily admitted the diffi-ty of doing this. The nearness of tariff or the bonus to individuals ened to the whole party to be easily onstrated. The difficulty of awaken-interest in such a news event as the oa conference was suggested by a ndard man who told of seeking in-iews on the importance of the Genoa erence to America from the leading ness men and manufacturers of ngfield. He had to give up the task use he couldn't find a handful of who knew the subject well enough iscuss it.

r. Bleyer called attention to Walter mann's recent book "Public Opin-r and summed up Mr. Lippmann's pres-tion of the immense burden society as upon the newspaper today.

"Unconsciously the theory sets up the le reader as theoretically omnicom-nt, and puts upon the press the en of accomplishing whatever rep-ntative government, industrial organ-on and diplomacy have failed to mplish," Lippmann wrote in the ge which Dr. Bleyer paraphrased. ing upon everybody for 30 minutes hours, the press is asked to create ystical force called Public Opinion will take up the slack in public in-tions . . . Institutions, having l to furnish themselves with instru-s of knowledge, have become a le of 'problems,' which the popula-as a whole, reading the press as a e, is supposed to solve."

. Bleyer agreed with Mr. Lippmann all this is expected of the news-r and that the newspaper is failing eet such a requirement. But the Dr. Bleyer stressed, is not that of ewspaper. This brought the discus-directly back to his first point—that one thing to print significant news another to make the newspaper read it. In short, he showed that ore is expected of the newspaper is possible of accomplishment.

Bleyer discussed the importance e reporter, the responsibility and gnity of his work. He emphasized pportunity for public service in gently gathering and presenting described the labor turnover on apers and suggested that there are reasons why a reporter should re-small salary increases as induce-to frequent jumps from city to nd devote himself for a consider-eriod to mastery of the community and the particular problems or news fields in which he specialized. Dr. Bleyer admitted the importance of the financial consideration, but insisted that the opportunity for service as well as the opportunity for the individual's own development must be considered.

RECEIVER FOR LANSING NEWS

B. N. Garstin Has Left City and Old Heads Are in Charge

(By Telegraph to Editor & Publisher)

Lansing, Mich. Sept. 12.—The Capital News, an afternoon daily established about a year and a half ago, is now operating under a receivership. C. Donald Call, who has been connected with the paper since its inception, was appointed receiver Saturday by Judge Leland W. Carr in Ingham Circuit Court. The petitioners for the receivership, according to the formal statement of the paper, were the minority stockholders.

Bert N. Garstin, who last May bought sufficient stock in the company to take control, is no longer with the paper and nothing can be learned here of his whereabouts. Edward M. Lucas and Arthur L. Francis, who helped found the paper but whose stock Mr. Garstin bought, have again been named managing editor and advertising manager, respectively. The paper has gone back to its original style and policy, which were modified by Garstin. A hearing of creditors has been set for October 21 and until that time it is understood that an effort would be made to continue publication. Further plans have not been divulged by the management.

It is known that Francis and Lucas recently made a payment down on certain equipment of the Port Huron Press, another Michigan daily which failed in its infancy, and it is rumored that they plan to start an entirely new paper here should it be decided definitely to abandon the News venture.

NEW PATERSON DAILY

Company to Launch Democratic Morning Paper Soon

Plans for starting a Democratic morning paper in Paterson, N. J., between October 1 and 15, have been announced by the Passaic County Publishing Company, just incorporated. The title has not yet been decided upon. It will be the only paper in the city pledged to the Democratic party. The Call, the only morning paper now, being Republican, and the Press-Guardian and the News, the two evening papers, being independent. Business offices have been established at 13 Prince street, where equipment is being installed.

Directors of the new corporation include Frank J. VanNoorte, mayor of Paterson; John J. O'Rourke, secretary to the mayor; John J. Downey, Jr., city comptroller; Charles A. Roemer, city attorney; Peter J. McGinnis, former state senator; John Quigley, building inspector; L. M. Neikrug, a printer; Samuel Geldziler, a retired business man, and Ellsworth Lee, an architect.

New York Ad Agent Bankrupt

The William J. Bryan Company, advertising agency, 110 West 40th street, New York, filed schedules in bankruptcy September 12, listing its liabilities as $18,955 and its assets as $5,938. The principal creditors include the Vogue Publishing Company, $2,037; Harper's Bazaar, $1,908; William L. Bands, $2,250; the New York American, $789; and the House Beautiful Publishing Company, $757.

Bluefield Telegraph Starts Soon

The Bluefield (W. Va.) Daily Telegraph will commence publication shortly as an afternoon paper serving Bluefield, Princeton and the neighboring towns and coal fields. It has applied for Associated Press membership. The printing of this paper will be done by the Princeton Printing Company.

OAKLAND-CALIFORNIA

THE POST-ENQUIRER

WHERE RAIL AND OAKLAND WATER MEET

BEGINNING today, The Post-Enquirer is the property of the Star Holding Corporation of New York, which is owned and controlled by William Randolph Hearst.

Within the last ten days, the Star Holding Corporation has purchased from the Call Publishing Company all of the stock of The Post Publishing Company and of the Oakland Enquirer Publishing Company. A new corporation, already formed, known as The Post-Enquirer Publishing Company, will publish this newspaper in the future.

It is the determination of the new owner of The Post-Enquirer to give to the City of Oakland an independent and progressive American newspaper, devoted to the upbuilding of everything that is clean, wholesome and constructive in our civic life. From time to time there will be added to The Post-Enquirer's already attractive list of features many others which have helped to make the Hearst publications the most widely read in America.

The time has come when the City of Oakland, with its teeming population, its marvelous development, and its assured future as a great city, should have the finest newspaper service and newspaper features that are to be obtained.

With this in mind, no expense will be spared and no energy conserved in making The Post-Enquirer an agency for the intelligent exploitation and upbuilding of the community.

Every officer of The Post-Enquirer Publishing Company will be a resident of Oakland, or of a transbay region.

Charles Sommers Young will be president of the new corporation and the publisher in active charge of The Post-Enquirer.

—from an editorial announcement in The Post-Enquirer, Oakland, California, August 26, 1922

EASTERN REPRESENTATIVES

Cone, Hunton and Woodman Advertising Agency

225 Fifth Ave. New York
72 W. Adams St. Chicago
142 Lafayette Blvd. Detroit
Victor Building Kansas City
404 Constitution Bldg Atlanta, Ga.

Although an Agricultural State has crept up to tenth state in the Union by the volume of its products.

WISCONSIN

Agriculturally Wisconsin is adapted to a large variety of crops and products. She is first in America in such special crops as canning peas, dry peas, clover seed; second in cabbage; third in tame hay; fourth in oats, rye and potatoes and fifth in barley.

Wisconsin makes the most delectable of cheeses, infinite in variety, butter of the most delicate flavor, and condensed milk of matchless richness—the production of which calls for the highest intelligence and skill.

The people of Wisconsin are free spenders, but your appeal must be to their intellects. They are well trained to think before they buy. You must get your goods before them by newspapers with the "reason why." You must use these dailies to reach the buying class.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 Lines
Beloit News	(E)	8,769	.045
*Eau Claire Leader-Telegram	(M&E)	8,586	.035
Fond du Lac Reporter	(E)	7,000	.04
*Kenosha News	(E)	7,306	.04
*Madison (Wis.) State Journal	(E&S)	17,392	.05
Milwaukee Journal	(E)	114,676	.20
Milwaukee Journal	(S)	89,857	.20
Milwaukee Sentinel	(M&E)	78,973	.14
Milwaukee Sentinel	(S)	62,548	.14
*Superior Telegram	(E)	18,332	.055
†Superior (Wis.) Sunday Times	(S)	8,000	.045

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
†Publishers' Statement.
Publishers A. B. C. Report, Sept. 1, 1922.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Titular Editors on American Newspapers

LOUISVILLE, Ky., September 4, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Taking the death of Charles R. Miller of the New York Times as the text for his remarks, a writer in a recent issue of the New Statesman discourses at some length on American journalism in that London weekly. He is very fair in his treatment of the daily newspapers of this country, comparing them, especially those of New York, with those of Great Britain.

Speaking of Miller he said that although he was called the editor-in-chief, actually his province was the editorial page alone. The New York Times affords, he declared, an illustration of the secondary position of the titular editor. The power lies in the hands of the management and the managing editor, who together have command of the news pages and the policy governing the display of news.

This is, on the whole, the governing fact of American journalism, in the opinion of the writer in the New Statesman. It explains why the present generation in the United States has seen no editor of the great old school. A daily that is a unit—as Horace Greeley's was, or the Manchester Guardian is—would be almost impossible in present day America. This fact explains, also, to some extent, the contradiction which every English journalist remarks in the American editorial page: namely, its imposing look and its general weakness. An American daily does not give less space than an English daily to leading articles. Often it gives more, but they are apt to be of little account; first, because the "lead" is not there, and secondly, because the editorials are frequently written by one whose equipment is inferior to that of the special writer.

There are, of course, noteworthy exceptions. Speaking of the New York World the Englishman says its staff includes a group of clever writers at present unequalled in America, while the Globe enjoys the services of the ablest and best informed company of young editorial writers on the evening press.

The critic of the New Statesman doesn't refer to the Hearst papers further than to say that a whole volume would be required to deal with them. In conclusion he sums up as follows: "In certain respects the American journalistic situation is, perhaps, somewhat more hopeful than our own. Three in particular may be noted. First, the increasing thought and practical effort that are being devoted to the consideration of the press as a liberal profession and a public service—as illustrated by the rapid growth of university schools of journalism. Secondly, the energetic movement toward the establishment of independent news service, especially in the economic field. Thirdly, the wide and varied opportunities that America provides for the special correspondent and commentator on affairs, even if his opinions are unpopular. In the United States it is the rarest thing for a well known descriptive writer or publicist to be unemployed."

JAMES C. MOFFET.

An Answer to Mr. Richardson

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 7, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Mr. Richardson, of the Vick Chemical Company, has presented an interesting argument on the advertising commission system, as presented editorially in your issue of August 12. It does not, however, reflect on the known value of the reputable advertising agency to its clients.

Advertising agents, especially in New York City, and other large cities, are essential. It would be impossible for publishers to maintain staffs sufficiently large to afford service to the great number of advertisers. The duplication and waste of effort would be enormous—out of all proportion to the cost that such advertising could bear.

Advertising agencies give service to all publishers according to the requirements of their client's business. While each publication must maintain a large staff, advertising agents make it possible that this force be largely of service men.

I believe more credit is due to advertising agents for the development of new business and the increment of old business than to any other instrumentality. The advertising agents are in a sense representatives of publication. Theirs is a representation based on close personal contact with the business of their clients that would be impossible to the representative of each publication. It is inconceivable that any business executive would permit a close analysis of his business plans, his business policies, his business secrets by the representative of each publication. Such analyis is essential to productive advertising and is given in confidence to advertising agents.

It is, nevertheless, true that the agent must first please the client without regard to the pleasure of the publication. He must write copy that is definitely productive and use mediums the result from which can be readily determined; otherwise the account will be lost to him.

I can imagine only chaos in publication offices if there were no advertising agencies. The client, in attempting to place his own copy direct, would upset the policies and rules of the publication he intended to use. It is beyond the capacity of the average business executive to determine not only his manufacturing and distribution policies, and to attend also to the details inherent in an advertising campaign.

The great development of newspaper advertising is a source of particular gratification to newspaper publishers. This development is due largely to advertising agencies. Their studies of the products to be advertised has resulted in text, drawings and layouts which are up to the best artistic standard and which bring satisfactory results to their clients.

Advertising, like every other great force, has developed its specialists; and out of this has grown the profession now practised by the advertising agents. By the practise of this profession the agent has done for the manufacturer what the latter could not do for himself. The manufacturer's interest naturally lies first in the production of his product. It is physically impossible for him to thoroughly analyze and digest the selling conditions throughout the entire country, although upon them his distribution plan must be based. The advertising agency does this work for him and thereby develops and fosters the growth impossible to the manufacturer working alone.

If one compares the advertising of twenty years ago with that of today the evidence of specialization is so striking that it needs no comment. The copy, art work, typographical layout, are all due to the specialization of the advertising agency and impossible, except in a few instances, to the manufacturer. The artistic talent brought to advertising has been the result of the activity of the advertising agent; this applies as well to the distinguished writers who have from time to time written advertising copy.

Many large agencies now charge their clients a fee for the preparation and placing of copy and remit all commissions and cash discounts to the advertiser. While this may indicate that the agency commission could be abolished, it would put out of business a great many of the smaller agencies handling the accounts of new and very valuable advertising manufacturers. I believe experience shows that where a direct advertiser has endeavored to build a completely organized advertising department he finds it is either insufficient, or more expensive than carrying on his campaign through an agency. There are, of course, exceptions to the rule, and it may be that the Vick Chemical Company is one of them.

There has been a notable improvement in advertising agencies since the organization of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, increasing their efficiency and elevating their standards. The A. A. A. A. now insists upon the financial responsibility of its members, and to that end exacts a thorough financial statement from each. This benefits both client and publisher. The code of ethics and standard of practice of the Association have improved agency morale, and its standard order blank and standard rate card have helped much to improve their service.

The advertising agent has made the advertising profession what it is today. He has developed small concerns of intrinsic value into well organized institutions. Because of a specially selected personnel he has been able to educate the public to a degree that would have been impossible to the direct advertiser, intent solely on personal profits. The agency in many well-known instances has fostered growing concerns by giving them service based on long eperience. Certainly these services warrant consideration.

LOUIS WILEY,
Business Manager New York Times.

B. H. Anthony Host to Alliance

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., September 14.—Benjamin H. Anthony, publisher of the New Bedford Evening Standard and Morning Mercury, was host to the New England Newspaper Alliance at its regular September meeting Wednesday. It was largely social in character. The executive session was held in the afternoon at Hixbridge, following a morning devoted to serial events and a clam bake. Twenty-five members and guests were present. T. T. Ellis, publisher of the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram and Gazette, presided at the meeting. The other papers represented were the Fall River News, the Manchester Union, the Taunton Gazette, the Providence Tribune, the Waterbury American-Republican, the Brocton Enterprise, and the Lynn Item.

Publisher Writes Book

Ambrose E. Gonzales, publisher of the Columbia (S. C.) State, which, with his brother, the late N. G. Gonzales, he founded in 1891, is the author of "The Black Border," just off the press. The book is a collection of 42 short stories of gullah negroes. These negroes, who live on the sea islands fringing the South Carolina coast, are descended from the earliest slave cargoes brought from the west coast of Africa.

Bergen Record Opens New Home

The Hackensack (N. J.) Bergen Evening Record held a house warming of its new home September 15. It opened at one o'clock with a reception, followed with an inspection of the composing room, a demonstration of its new 32 page quadruple press, and a general tour of the building.

CHAIN PAPERS MENACE FREE PRESS—SEITZ

Their Rise Encourages Regulation, He Tells New Jersey Newspaper Institute at New Brunswick

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 13.—Competition is a healthy state for newspapers, Don C. Seitz, business manager of the New York World, told 92 New Jersey editors gathered at Rutgers College here Monday and Tuesday for the Newspaper Institute of the New Jersey Press Association. Newspaper combinations require big financial backing, he pointed out, which lays the press open to the public fear and suspicion that it is controlled in the interest of those whose money is invested.

He decried the growing sentiment among publishers for chain newspapers, saying this he was not in accord with the views of many of those present. Mr. Seitz concluded by warning his audience that the present cry for censorship and regulation of all human affairs by law must be fought by the newspapers, or freedom of the press will be only history.

The country weekly of the future may develop into a chain proposition in the opinion of Prof. M. V. Atwood of Cornell University, who spoke on this subject. Prof. Atwood told of what is being done at Cornell to develop greater appreciation of the editor and his work in small communities. He said that the country weekly is so close to its readers that it holds a place which the big city paper never can fill, but that too few editors realize their field and work it to the best advantage.

Following a suggestion from Prof. Atwood that there might be better profits in newspapers in the chain system, Mr. Seitz said:

"I see in the chain system and the increased tendency of newspaper ownership to concentrate in a few hands, the danger of restriction of the liberty of the press by legislative action. It will not be well with the notion of so doing, but it is time to protect the public from the horrors of such a situation. That is to say, under the guise of guarding the liberty of the press its liberties will be 'regulated' just as everything else is being regulated, under a theory of protection to the public.

"I am not altogether certain but it may be possible to eliminate the guarantee of freedom of the press from the constitution itself, should some William Allen Ryan rise up and start a crusade. What has already been done in the way of subsidizing its freedom through the powers of the post office. The legislation that governs the advertising as against reading matter, that requires a statement of circulation and one of ownership are all steps in the direction of complete current.

"Now it can be argued that a newspaper which alone of all industries publishes its deeds on its face, can be regarded as mysterious and dangerous, I do not know. But that is the attitude in which it is placed by the postal laws. The worse is to come if the competitive principle is destroyed. Without that principle in operation there can be no progress and no progress in the world."

The institute proved so successful in arousing interest in "shop" topics that directors voted unanimously to make it an annual event. One of the features of the first meeting was a newspaper exhibit which covered the walls of the auditorium. About 100 weekly and daily front and editorial pages were displayed with special classes for agricultural pages, country correspondence, boys' papers and special editions. There was no competitive judging of exhibits but much favorable comment from out-of-state authorities.

The point of attendance the institute was a great success. The publishers and editors were not only registered but they attended all the sessions, nearly 100 being present at all times.

Chief among the conclusions that the newspaper men and women went home with was that editors don't read their own newspapers closely enough; that follow-up possibilities were often missed. Another conclusion was that the newspapers are practically neglecting school news, despite its value as interesting news and in building circulation among a large part of the newspapers' potential field.

Robert Lane of the Newark Evening News told his fellow publishers at the opening session that he considered it a newspapers' duty to record the news and not to make it. He warned against carrying crusades so far that the public loses faith in all the matter printed in the paper. He urged more use of the human interest story but said that if it cannot be handled well it should be left alone.

T. H. Alvord of the Livonia (N. Y.) Gazette spoke on "The Cost of Producing Advertising in the Country Weekly." He showed that as a job of printing most weeklies do not pay the owner enough profit.

The need of a definite educational program for the New Jersey publishers was pointed out by Ross W. Kellogg, director of the Empire State School of Printing at Ithaca, N. Y. Mr. Kellogg quoted figures from a survey which he has made of the newspaper plants of New Jersey showing that the ratio of apprentices to journeymen printers in the weeklies is 1 to 4; on the dailies it is only 1 to ten. The ratio for the industry as a whole, he found to be 1 to 7. He said that unless a ratio of 1 to 5 is maintained a shortage of printers will result.

President E. A. Bristor said that the New Jersey Association would consider not only the education of printers but also the education of newspaper writers and managers.

Edward P. Howard was emphatic in his statements that no newspaper publisher is getting enough margin on advertising at 25 cents an inch. He advised country weeklies to do away with cheap national advertising, to find out their true financial status and to charge a blanket rate for advertising, so that they will be self-supporting without job work.

The institute was unanimous that unsigned communications should not be printed and that letters dealing with politics should be treated with regard to a limit on the quantity of controversial matter.

Among other speakers were: Prof. James Melvin Lee, New York University; Robert Lane, Newark Evening News; M. V. Atwood, Groton (N. Y.) Journal and Courier; U. McClinchie, Clinton Weekly; Frank L. Moreau, Freehold Transcript; W. A. Haffert, Sea Isle City Times; Charles Alvord, Livonia (N. Y.) Gazette; J. G. Lipman, director New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station; Robert Towne, American Newspaper Corporation; Merton E. Burke, formerly of the New York Daily News.

Round table discussions were led by J. P. Logan of the Newark Sunday Call; J. L. Clevenger of the South Amboy News; C. H. Bateman of the Somerville Unionist Gazette, and E. H. Carpenter of the Woodbury Democrat.

The Institute wants regional conferences held among publishers of New Jersey throughout the year to discuss problems of editing policy, advertising, etc. E. A. Brister, editor of the Passaic Herald and president of the New Jersey Press Association; J. E. Clary, Madison Eagle, and Earl R. Woodward were instrumental in starting the institute movement here.

Ad Women to Hold Dinner

The New York League of Advertising Women will hold its first dinner-meeting of the season, September 19, at the Advertising Club. The president, Miss Helen M. Hill, will preside and the honor guests will be C. K. Woodbridge, president of the Advertising Club of New York; H. H. Charles, district vice-president of A. A. C. of W., and Carl Hunt, business manager of A. A. C. of W.

WEST VIRGINIA'S PLACE AMONG THE STATES IS 40th IN AREA AND 27th IN POPULATION

But it is first, second or third by very many comparisons.

Only one state exceeds it in total tons of coal produced annually, in tons of coke manufactured, in the number of its glass factories.

It leads them all in its available bituminous coal, white sand petroleum of the Pa. grade, natural gas marketed, production of carbon blacks and glass sand available.

It has the largest number of home owners per capita of any state in the Union.

Also do not overlook the fact that it ranks second state in the value of its mineral production while remaining primarily a farming territory.

It is a "market by itself" and can be economically influenced your way by these newspapers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Bluefield
††Telegraph	(M)	10,183	.025
Charleston
*Gazette	(M)	18,777	.06
*Gazette	(S)	22,359	.07
Clarksburg
†Exponent	(M&S)	7,879	.035
*Telegram	(E)	7,822	.035
*Telegram	(S)	10,042	.035
Fairmont
*Times	(M)	6,881	.03
Huntington
†Advertiser	(E)	10,635	.035
*Herald-Dispatch	(M)	12,523	.035
*Herald-Dispatch	(S)	12,559	.035
Martinsburg
†Journal	(E)	4,086	.03
Parkersburg
†News	(M)	5,568	.025
†News	(S)	6,366	.025
*Sentinel	(E)	6,419	.024
Wheeling
*Intelligencer	(M)	11,536	.0325
*News	(E)	13,569	.05
*News	(S)	17,314	.07

†Government Statement, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Report, April 1, 1922.

††Publishers' Statement.

EDITORIAL

VOTE FOR THE AMENDMENT

AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS was formed by the publishing and advertising interests of America to supply the "scales" with which to "weigh" circulation, to apply the "yard-stick" to quantity of circulation, and to "certify" the facts, thereby placing the stamp of authority—"sterling mark"—of the Bureau upon the known factors of circulation.

For eight years the attention of directors, auditors and managers of the Bureau has been concentrated almost entirely upon an effort to devise ways and means—"rules and regulations"—to obtain accurate and dependable information as to NET PAID circulations. In this period circulation records and forms have been standardized and all avenues of distribution have been charted so that the space buyer may ascertain by a glance at a Bureau report the amount of NET PAID—city, suburban, country, bulk sales, etc. In addition to which file copies, free copies, unpaid and service circulation has been segregated.

To such an extent has the passion gone for NET PAID circulation that some space buyers, following the campaign of the Bureau to its logical conclusion, refuse to consider or give credit to any publication for anything but NET PAID circulation.

This raising of standards has been a good thing for the publishing business. On the whole it has proved beneficial and helpful all around. But are these standards to be thrown overboard now that the Bureau is firmly established and enjoying a large income with adequate cash reserves?

Are these ethical standards of the Bureau to be lowered, now that the Bureau has grown great and powerful, to oblige a small, but clever minority of its members, who desire that the Bureau give aid and comfort to publications of free circulations?

Certainly not. But there is grave danger that this may be accomplished at the annual meeting of the Bureau at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, on October 20th next, if the real friends of the Bureau are not present or represented by their affirmative votes on that occasion. Indeed, it will require a two-thirds vote of all the members present and voting and a two-thirds vote of all proxies to maintain present Bureau standards. The amendment to the by-laws eliminating from membership all publications of free circulations should carry by an overwhelming vote.

Newspaper proxies may be sent to Mr. W. A. Strong, of the Chicago Daily News, or Mr. E. R. Shaw, Power Plant Engineering, Chicago. Both of these gentlemen are members of the Board of Directors of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and have maintained a consistent attitude during this past year at all meetings of the Board of Directors in advocacy of the elimination of all such publications from membership in the Bureau.

STRAIGHT TALKING WINS

SENATOR LAFOLLETTE, consistent opponent of secrecy and the old order of politics that has as its basis government of the many by the few, has received an overwhelming vote of confidence from his own people in Wisconsin.

In his victory there is more than one worthwhile lesson for the professional politician if he cares to stop to study causes; there is also a cause that played an important part in the final result that is deserving of the serious consideration of American editors who are seriously concerned about the secret of winning public confidence.

Whether we agree with LaFollette in his political beliefs is immaterial; but of one thing, namely, that ours is a government with the consent of the governed, he has been a fearless exponent.

He has not only preached "this government belongs to all the people," but he has won the hatred of political partisans and opponents by ripping aside veils of secrecy and exposing the operation of the public's business to the public's view.

In other words, while many others have only preached, LaFollette, in the full belief that the American people are worthy of being trusted if given all the facts in matters of their concern, has refused to play the game of political bicker and trade behind closed doors that holds half-truths as its chief ally.

It is true that LaFollette's course has not won him popularity with his Senatorial colleagues, but to him that is certainly immaterial, for among them he is the only one this year who can boast of a public trust that was spoken with a 200,000 majority.

Regardless of what we may think of LaFollette's political acts, he has been a good reporter. In a speech before the United States Senate on July 7 and 8 he gave a better report of the tariff experiences of this Government since the passage of the McKinley Bill than the newspaper men assigned to cover Washington made of that speech. It is a scathing arraignment of back-stairs tariff-making that is disclosed in a reprint from the Congressional Record of a part of that speech in the searchlight for July 31.

At no time has LaFollette forgotten his obligation to his constitutency and never has he failed to report to it on the meaning of business transactions in Washington.

It was because of his ability as a reporter that LaFollette was not made a Republican member of the committee that drafted the present tariff bill, a place that rightfully belonged to him under party rules.

LaFollette has never admitted the right of executive sessions in the transaction of public business and he has always maintained himself under the accepted practices of gentlemen by giving due notice before entering such meetings that he would make a complete report of what occurred. For this reason LaFollette is not considered a safe man where any trading is to be done at the people's expense.

LaFollette is a good example of what a newspaper reporter should be if he wishes to win and hold public confidence in the times of his newspaper's greatest trials.

Some Washington correspondents—as well as newspapers—should profit from the example of LaFollette in giving the public all the facts as they have found them and reap the rewards of public confidence.

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

COMPILED BY CHARLES W. MILLER
Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald

ONE generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth abideth for ever. All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full; unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again. The thing that hath been, it is that which shall be; and that which is done is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun. Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? it hath been already of old time.—(Eccl. i: 4, 7, 9, 10).

ADVERTISING NOT A COMMODITY

EVERY now and then someone raises his voice in praise and admiration of the advertising agent and the helpful service he performs in the production and placing of national advertising or in condemnation of present day universal practise in allowing an advertising agency commission.

Mr. Louis Wiley's letter, to be found in another column, is of more than ordinary interest to advertising people as it presents a point of view with respect to the part the agent plays in advertising that is undoubtedly the consensus opinion of the publishing world.

The letter of the business manager of the New York Times is in reality an answer to the statement of the case of the direct advertiser by Mr. H. S. Richardson, of the Vick Chemical Company, referred to editorially in the EDITOR & PUBLISHER for August 12th.

Mr. Wiley wastes no time in a consideration of the ethical standards involved in the payment by publishers of a commission to advertising agents on advertising produced and placed by them. To Mr. Wiley the question is a practical one. He says the advertising agent is an essential factor in advertising, performing a helpful and necessary service to the entire satisfaction, at least of the newspaper publisher.

Mr. Wiley holds that the advertising agent is the representative of publication. Theirs is a representation, he says, based on close personal contact with the business of their clients that would be absolutely impossible to the representative of each publication. On the other hand, Mr. Wiley believes that only chaos in publication offices would result if Mr. Richardson's views were carried to their logical conclusions and the advertising agencies were eliminated.

Mr. Wiley does not discuss the question raised by Mr. Richardson, but not stated, as to whether or not advertising is a commodity, subject to regulation by the Federal Trade Commission.

That question seems to us to have been disposed of by the United States Supreme Court in the case of the Blumenstock Brothers vs. Curtis Publishing Company. The Supreme Court held in that case that a business conducted by an advertising agency in placing advertising for manufacturers and merchants by contracts with publishers in magazines which are published and distributed throughout the United States is not interstate commerce. Although the circulation and distribution of the publications themselves be such.

NEW YORK PRINT SITUATION

AS the great Daniel Webster once remarked it is well now and then for the mariner to stop, look and listen, consult his compass and barometer, ascertain the prevailing winds and study the depth, direction and speed of currents.

So it is equally important for the newspaper owner, editor, publisher and executive to stop now and then in the midst of the rush of present day accomplishment, reflect on the errors of his course and study the tendencies of these present-day trends on the seas in which he navigates.

In the spirit, therefore, of an humble servant EDITOR & PUBLISHER this week visualizes, for the information of the New York City newspaper owners and executives, the factors that must be weighed and studied in the present newsprint situation. The tables on pages 10 and 11 of this issue show clearly and distinctly the known factors of circulation, advertising lineage, total pages printed, tons of newsprint consumed of the week-day and Sunday issues of the 17 New York City newspapers for the period January to August, inclusive, for the years 1920, 1921 and '22.

Briefly, DAILY circulations of these 17 newspapers, 6 days a week, at April 1, 1922, show an increase of 416,664 copies per day over April 1, 1921. Pages show an increase in 8 months in 1922 of 9,592 pages over the first 8 months of 1921. Advertising shows an increase in the same period 1,164 pages. Newsprint consumption is shown to have been 25,692 tons more in eight months of 1922 than in same period 1921.

The comparisons for SUNDAY are as follows: Total circulation as of April 1, 1922, shows a decrease of 103,205 copies per Sunday, as compared with the total as at April 1, 1921. Pages for the 8 months, 1922, as compared with eight months 1921, show an actual increase of 3,640. Advertising shows an actual increase of 840 pages in the period of 8 months, 1922, as compared with 8 months, 1921, whereas, newsprint consumption in the 8 months period covering the years 1921 and 1922 for the Sunday only show an actual increase of 12,324 tons.

The morning, evening and Sunday papers combined show a total circulation at April 1st, 1922, of 6,708,998, as compared with 6,395,539, with an actual increase in total circulation of 313,459. The pages for 8 months, 1922, was 106,402, as compared with 93,170 for 8 months 1921; an increase in 1922 of 13,232. Advertising shows an increase in 1922 of 1905 pages. Newsprint consumption for the first 8 months 1922 totaled 231,429 tons, as compared with 193,413 tons for 8 months in 1921, or an increase in consumption of newsprint, 1922, of 38,016 tons, or $2,661,120 figured at present contract prices.

PERSONAL

ILTON A. McRAE left Detroit September 12 for San Diego, Cal., re he will, following his usual custom, id the Winter.

ert L. Kuhn, who has been editor of Shanghai (China) Daily Star, has e to Honolulu to vecome editor of Star-Bulletin.

V. D. Eaton, said to be the dean of a newspaper men, having served 61 s in the editorial rooms, has sold his r, the Clinton (Iowa) Mirror, to k Neumann.

uce W. McCarty, who established Eagle Lake (Tex.) Headlight 20 s ago and has served as its editor published continuously, has retired sold his interest to F. A. Norman D. S. Taylor, who have taken ge.

Douglas Williams, general manager in e United States for Reuter's News cy, sailed on the Majestic Septem- 6. During his absence Isroy Norris charge.

Cle Orwig, publisher of the Napoleon o) Northwest News, is now mak- n extensive tour of the Far East.

Crson Taylor, publisher of the Ma- (P. I.) Daily Bulletin, has returned Islands after a vacation of several ns spent with his family in Los An-

N THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

CS PEABODY SWIFT of the Chicago Tribune Foreign News e is now in Vienna, but will re- shortly to Berlin, rejoining Mrs. there. During the past six months covered operations for the Chicago ne in England, Ireland, Serbia nd, Germany and Czecho-Slovakia.

rton E. Burke, managing editor of ew York Daily News, has resigned een succeeded as acting managing by Philip A. Payne.

is F. Dow, telegraph editor of the gton (Vt.) News, will be the edi- the University of Vermont Alumni ly this year, in addition to his other succeeding James R. Jennings, who signed to go to the Gas Age, New old E. Rockwell, who has resigned rts editor of the Burlington (Vt.) will be in charge of the publicity of the University of Vermont, he will also take the pre-medical mas Dawson, who has been Wash- correspondent for the Christian e Monitor of Boston for the past nths, has resigned and will return former position of curator of the do Historical Society. Mr. Daw- ho expects to be back in Colorado r 1, will leave Washington next His successor as head of the ir bureau has not been announced.

k P. Stockbridge, formerly man- editor of the New York World, itor of the New York Globe, and of Mechanics magazine, has been ed director of information of the an Home Bureau.

larry Ferris, formerly a member staff of the Boston Transcript, different times employed by ston American and papers in ter, Mass., and New Haven, has joined the staff of the Bur- (Vt.) Free Press as a special h Tendler and Arnold Darsch members of the Chicago Evening portorial staff.

Keefe, formerly of the St. Paul News, New Orleans Picayune and American, has returned to St. here he is doing publicity work kelstein & Ruben. His cousin, eefe, late of the New Orleans also in St. Paul acting as press or the Orpheum.

Perry, recently city editor of Centro (Cal.) Press and formerly with the Seattle (Wash.) Times, has gone on the copy desk at the San Diego (Cal.) Union.

J. Harvey Whitney, formerly of the Jacksonville Times-Union, but who served during the war as executive secretary to the Florida food administrator and later as secretary of the Florida Hotel Men's Association, has joined the staff of the Tampa Times.

Robert Knoff has resigned the editorship of the Monroe (Wis.) Times to go with the tour department of the Milwaukee Journal.

Thaddeus Preuss, formerly a reporter for the Kuryer Polski and the Milwaukee Sentinel, has been admitted to practice in the United States court district.

William Sunde, formerly connected with the Winona (Wis.) newspapers, has become a member of the staff of the Milwaukee Journal's Retail Journal.

Morris O'Brian, picture page and feature editor of the Buffalo Evening News, has resigned is succeeded by Herbert Peters, who has been chief of the copy desk. Charles Taylor, former assistant city editor, is now copy chief. William G. Hippler, former managing editor of the Buffalo Commercial, is a new member of the News' copy desk.

Rondo Hatton, police reporter for the Tampa Times, is subbing on the telegraph desk, pending the return from vacation, of Mrs. Irene Rovira, the regular telegraph desk executive. He succeeds Raymond B. Nixon, who is returning to Emory University, Atlanta.

Irwin Gordon has just resigned as assistant city editor of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger to become director of publicity of the Philadelphia Welfare Federation. He has been succeeded by Arthur St. J. Joyce, who has at various times been connected with the North American and the Public Ledger, and until recently was in the copy department of the Donovan & Armstrong Advertising Agency. The Evening Public Ledger staff gave a dinner for Mr. Gordon last Wednesday.

Paul J. Pierce, Minneapolis newspaper man has been appointed Western advertising manager of the Popular Monthly.

S. Deane Wasson, San Antonio, staff correspondent for the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle at San Antonio, has moved his office to 527 Gunter Building.

L. E. Leigh, 71 years old, a former newspaper man and now a banker and insurance man of Little Rock, Ark., has been accepted as a special student in philosophy by the University of Colorado.

Harry L. Sexton, for several years foreman of the composing room of the Brownsville (Tex.) Herald, is now managing editor of that paper.

John V. A. Weaver, literary editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, and Miss Peggy Wood, star of "Marjolaine," have announced their engagement.

Edward D. Wilder, formerly financial editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Post, has accepted a position as secretary of the Jacksonville (Tenn.) Association of Commerce.

Harry Stringer, formerly of the Washington bureau of the Universal Service, has been attached to the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. During the 1920 pre-convention campaign Stringer handled publicity for Senator Poindexter's boom for the presidential nomination, and during the campaign was with the Republican National Committee at Chicago.

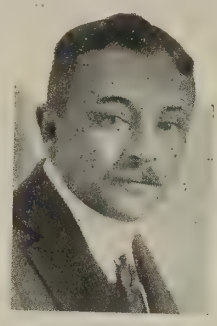
Willard E. Hawkins, for several years connected with the editorial staffs of the Denver Times and Rocky Mountain News, has been made editor of the Rocky Mountain Hotel Bulletin and the American Greeter.

Edward R. Padgett, for the past four years Sunday editor of the Detroit News, has gone to the Baltimore American to be its Sunday editor.

Harry Fridinger, sports editor of the Hagerstown (Md.) Morning Herald, has resigned and will go into business in Hagerstown.

Leonard Poffenberger, of the news staff of the Hagerstown (Md.) Daily Mail, has resigned and been succeeded by Elmer Jackson.

Bernard Kaufman has left the Rochester (N. Y.) Post-Express staff to go with the Rochester American. He was formerly engaged in newspaper work in the Far East as a special correspondent for the Northcliffe publications.



Carl Wise has resigned from the local staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening to finish a course at the University of Delaware and has been succeeded by G. M. Dwyer of Springfield, Mass.

Ralph D. Casey, since the first of the year on the publicity staff of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, goes to the University of Oregon this month to become a member of the journalism faculty and will take charge of its press bureau. He is succeeded at the Seattle Chamber of Commerce by Edwin H. Ford, recently night correspondent of the Associated Press at Seattle.

W. Hanny, at one time cartoonist on the St. Joseph (Mo.) News-Press, has been named art editor of the St. Paul (Minn.) Dispatch.

NEW N. Y. GLOBE EXECUTIVES

JOHN C. COOK returned to newspaper work in New York a few days ago after a year as vice-president of the Haring Paper Corporation. He is now business manager of the New York Globe. Another new executive is O. O. Scattergood, until recently with the Detroit Journal, who is now circulation manager of the Globe. H. H. Knickerbocker resigned last week as business manager and has not yet announced his future plans. S. P. Booth, who resigned as circulation manager after a long term of service, will devote all his time to the Interborough News Company and the News Distributing Company, city circulation organizations which he has been conducting for some years. John Tole, who has been assistant business manager, also resigned last week and reached for a statement of his future no successor has been appointed. Julius Stolz remains as city circulation manager.

JOHN C. COOK

William Hughes, a former Milwaukee newspaperman, has succeeded to the British courtesy title of Lord Roberts. He becomes a peer at the death of his father, also Lord Roberts.

Dan Ruggles, formerly telegraph editor of the Houston (Tex.) Post, is now telegraph editor of the Dallas (Tex.) Morning News.

Douglas Hawley, Dallas (Tex.) newspaper man, is advertising manager and director of publicity for the Texas State Fair, to be held in Dallas in October or November.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

MAURICE LEVY, business manager of the Cincinnati Post, found his desk decked with flowers, September 8, which was the 26th anniversary of his association with that paper.

L. J. Luckett, formerly Cincinnati advertising manager of the Westinghouse Company, has joined the advertising staff of the Cincinnati Post.

Daniel Henderson has resigned as promotion manager of the New York Evening Post to become associate editor of the People's Home Journal.

R. B. Clark, formerly of the advertising department of the Los Angeles Examiner, has just arrived in Manila to joni the Bulletin Staff.

A. J. Wesselman, for several years on the Cincinnati Post business staff, on September 11 became classified advertising manager of the Evansville (Ind.) Press.

P. J. Crystal, formerly advertising manager of the Winnipeg Tribune, has joined the advertising staff of the Cincinnati Post.

Sherman H. Hill, for the past three years business manager of the Kingston (Ont.) Standard, has resigned.

H. H. Brown, of the Charlotte (N. C.) Observer staff, has become advertising manager of the Rock Hill (N. C.) Herald.

Peter J. Sullivan, for several years connected with Ralph R. Mulligan, publishers' representative, has joined the advertising staff of the Long Island City Daily Star. Mr. Sullivan will represent the Star locally in New York and Brook-

(Continued on page 30)

VISITORS TO NEW YORK

ROBERT L. EWING, New Orleans Daily States.

B. H. Peace, Greenville (S. C.) News.

Parke M. Walker, Fort Smith (Ark.) Southwest American.

Homer E. Moyer, Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot-News.

The Editor

who uses the free information bureau conducted by

FREDERIC J. HASKIN

provides a special representative in Washington for every one of his readers.

lyn, with Manhattan offices in the Longacre Bldg.

NOTES OF THE NEWS SERVICES AND SYNDICATES

MISS WANDEN MATHEWS, for several years society editor of Vogue, has become art director of the C-V Newspaper Service.

William M. Sweets, formerly with the United Press Association's New York and London bureaus, has become managing editor of the Ashland (Ky.) Daily Independent.

George R. Holmes, chief of the Washington Bureau of the International News Service, is the father of a 10-pound baby girl.

James Nourse, Senate man in Washington for the Universal Service, has announced the birth of a son.

C. Colton Bingham, at one time connected with the New York Herald, is now director of sales of the C-V Newspaper Service.

Mauritz A. Hallgren, formerly on the staff of the Cincinnati Times-Star, has joined the Chicago bureau of the Associated Press as wire editor.

J. A. Rawlings, chief of the Associated Press bureau at Omaha, is spending his vacation in New York.

Allen M. Dalrymple, formerly on the staff of the Indianapolis News and the Frankfort (Ind.) Times, has joined the Indianapolis bureau of the Associated Press as day pony editor, succeeding Joseph H. Shea who has been promoted to night editor.

Joseph A. Fox, who has been day editor in the Detroit bureau of the Associated Press, has been transferred to the Richmond (Va.) bureau.

Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, after a business trip to Washington and New York has returned to his summer home at Winter Harbor, Me.

MARRIED

E. L. OGILVIE, publisher of the South St. Paul (Minn.) Daily Reporter, and Mrs. Alice Maude Stone were married on September 4 at Winnebago, Minn.

Thomas F. Mulhern, of the circulation and classified advertising departments of the Brooklyn Eagle, and Miss Dorothy Dyhynska were married recently.

Frank Reis, a former member of the advertising staff of the Brooklyn Eagle and now on the advertising staff of the New York Telegram, and Miss Marie E. Haynes, formerly of the business office staff of the Eagle, were married August 20.

Arthur Cayo, a member of the composing room force of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, and Miss Rhea Patno, of the news staff of the Free Press, were married September 2.

G. Prather Knapp, vice-president in charge of advertising, for the Bankers' Service Corporation, and previously publicity manager for the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis, and Miss Lucy Norvell, daughter of Saunders Norvell, chairman of the Board of McKesson & Robbins, wholesale druggists, New York, were married recently.

William M. Hatch, city editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union, and Miss Edith F. Wood were married recently.

Willard Cope, of the editorial staff of the Atlanta Georgian, and Miss Marjorie Mathis, formerly a reporter on the Galveston News, were married last week.

Henry J. Prentiss, Jr., of the editorial staff of the Des Moines Register, and Miss Marion V. Chase, were married September 2.

WITH THE AD FOLKS

CHARLES J. O'MALLEY, president of the O'Malley Advertising and Selling Company, Boston, recently arrived in Switzerland.

The Adva Talks Company, Dallas, Tex., general advertising agency, has been organized with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are Mark A. Powers, R. J. Powers and F. N. Watson.

E. F. Voss, a member of the Davenport (Iowa) Ad Club, recently won the $100 prize offered by the Spokane Spokesman-Review for the best letter commenting merits of the paper's method telling of its field to advertising and circulation people.

Miss Anita Lindsey Weathers, formerly connected with the advertising department of James McCreery & Co. and recently advertising manager of Stern Brothers, has been made manager of the local service department of the Ferry-Hanly Avertising Company, New Orleans.

Allan Herrick, advertising manager of the Banker's Trust Company of Denver, Colo., has returned after a four months' trip in Europe.

Mrs. Edna Dunlop, president of the Milwaukee Women's Advertising Club, and Misses Louise Block, Mary Curran and Barbara Dunlop are motoring to New York, carrying the club pennant attached to the windshield.

Earl B. Stone, formerly district sales manager and advertising manager of the Cleveland Tractor Company, joined the staff of Cleveland office of Hoyt's Service, Inc., Sept. 1, as assistant to H. R. Van Pelt, the manager.

William M. Stedman, formerly of E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., Inc., is now with Sweeney & Price, publishers' representatives, Boston.

Herbert M. Morgan, a former director and first vice-president of the financial division of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, has resigned as an officer of the St. Louis Union Trust Company to accept the vice-presidency and treasurership of Johnson, Read & Co., Chicago advertising agency. He has also been chosen as lecturer and director of the advertising course of the School of Commerce, Northwestern University. Mr. Morgan has been a director of John Read & Co. for a number of years.

Ben D. Jennings has resigned as account executive with the Power, Alexander & Jenkins Company, Detroit, to join the western staff of Grandin-Dorrance-Sullivan, Inc.

Charles F. Burns and E. D. Wolaver have incorporated the Burns-Wolaver Company as a general advertising agency and opened offices at 5005 Euclid avenue, Cleveland.

A. C. Clay, formerly with the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon in advertising department, has opened an advertising agency in the offices of the Brooks Letter & Addressing Co., North Main street, Wichita, Kan.

JOIN WASHINGTON TIMES

G. Logan Payne Adds Waldron, Bull and Morrissey to Staff

G. Logan Payne, publisher and general manager of the Washington Times, has just announced the addition of three new executives to the advertising staff of that paper.

E. W. Waldron, for some years advertising manager of the Washington Post, has resigned and joined the staff of the Times as director of the service and promotion bureau of that paper.

Norman E. Bull, for a long time advertising manager of the Washington Herald, has also gone to the Times to be in charge of the advertising for the Sunday Times. George Morrissey likewise has joined the Times advertising staff, resigning from the staff of the Post to specialize in financial advertising and to handle some of the larger local accounts for the Times.

Butte Post in New Home Dec. 1

The Butte (Mont.) Daily Post expects to move into its new building, now in course of construction about December 1.

Value of Ten Leading Alabama Crops Show Over Sixty Million Dollar Increase in 1922 Over 1921

F. W. GIST

State and Federal Agricultural Statistician's Report Issued September 9th Is as Follows:

Crop prospects in Alabama on September 1st, computed as a whole, were better than a year ago; reduced to value, they promised an increase of 45 per cent over last year. The value of ten leading crops, calculating the value of prospective production on the basis of present prices, amounts to $193,463,000 compared with a value of $133,407,000 for the same ten crops harvested last year. These ten crops constitute about 75 per cent of the harvested crops of the state.

These crops at present prices, would bring the values given below, compared with the values stated for 1921:

	1922	1921
Corn	$45,814,000	$38,844,000
Cotton	97,468,000	50,800,000
Peanuts	6,015,000	5,082,000
Hay	11,424,000	12,380,000
Sweet potatoes	14,145,000	8,870,000
Irish potatoes	7,675,000	4,080,000
Sorghum sirup	2,816,000	3,213,000
Sugar cane sirup	3,987,000	5,413,000
Oats	3,719,000	4,404,000
Wheat	300,000	321,000
Total value ten crops	$193,463,000	$133,407,000

(Signed)—F. W. GIST,
Agricultural Statistician

Do you want Alabama Money? If so, use—

ALABAMA FARM FACTS

Alabama's only farm paper devoted exclusively to Alabama Farmers.

Circulation over 40,000

Advertising Rate 25c. per line

ALABAMA FARM FACTS

Members of A. B. C.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA

REPRESENTATIVES:

E. Katz Special Advertising Agency, New York, Chicago, Atlanta, Kansas City, San Francisco

URGES HISPANIC AID FOR PRESS CONGRESS

Dr. Beteta, Executive Committee Member, Tells of Congress' Plans at Luncheon Given by El Universal of Mexico City

Dr. Virgilio R. Beteta, member of the executive committee of the Press Congress of the World, representing the Hispanic newspapers, who is now in Mexico engaged in organization work, was recently the guest of honor at a luncheon given by El Universal in Mexico City. In the course of an address, Dr. Beteta outlined the purposes in mind in starting the Press Congress, what it has accomplished to date, its plans for the future and the special importance the Congress bears to the Hispanic race. Dr. Beteta said:

DR. V. R. BETETA

"The next Congress will be held next year in Europe, possibly in Seville, and the subsequent one will be held in Santiago, Chile, as we have been invited already by Dr. Augistin Edwards, the proprietor the El Mercurio of that city to meet there in 1927 to commemorate the centennial of El Mercurio. If, as it is expected, the next two general meetings of the Congress will take place in Seville and in Santiago, respectively, it is obvious to state that our race will have the chance of its life to advertise its accomplishments throughout the world.

"Our race, our Hispanic America, has its hopes in the Press Congress, and Mexico, the country that has given to the world such a brilliant roll of intellectuals, well known in art, in philosophy, in journalism, and in literature, should also identify itself with this great movement of culture and human solidarity. Mexico should come with energy and with enthusiasm to the Congress. The intellectual relations and especially the journalistic relations between Hispanic-Americans, as many other relations, are today only a myth.

"The truth is that we do not know each other at all. In cable news, the fact that the Press Congress intends to do to move the world, the Hispanic-American has done very little. Only the very large newspapers have correspondents in one or two of the larger capitals. But the net of intercourse of news which will improve the mutual knowledge is to uninitiated. All the news with respect to Hispanic America is obtained from foreign sources, biased by foreign psychology in the offices of the foreign agencies that, journalistically speaking, live upon us. We can say as much of the writer who is still tied up to the old spirit of journalism, the newspaper man who may be able to say something about his own country but who is altogether ignorant as to the things that are happening in the big world outside are happening outside his frontiers.

"The Press Congress will have some of an intercontinental organism that will create the newspapers with respect to the other nations of the world than their own. Thus the Congress will be the instrument to bring about a close acquaintanceship and better relations between the sons of the American continents and the other nations of the world, and in the intercourse Hispanic America will find for the first time in its history an opportunity to be known, to be heard, and to be judged with respect to its national necessities and its national aspirations."

Tunks Goes to Vancouver World

W. C. Tunks, manager of the Portland (Ore.) Daily News for the past 10 years, has resigned and on September 1 became general manager of the Vancouver (B. C.) World.

NEWS WRITING SUGGESTIONS

HALF a dozen news writing suggestions, included in recent service orders sent out by the Associated Press to its correspondents, should prove helpful to all other newspaper workers, as well. They are:

Use care in cutting stories that contain direct quotes. The context of a direct quote should never be changed.

In handling radio stories, remember that the past tense of the verb "broadcast" is "broadcast" and not "broadcasted."

Observe the rule of good grammar that provides for the use of the definite and the indefinite article. Omission of the article often affects the meaning of a sentence and offends good taste.

Be at all times prepared to carry stories correcting improper or libelous statements.

When referring to the head of the Supreme Court, remember that his correct title is "Chief Justice of the United States," not "Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States."

Look out for that word "strike-breaker." It is associated in the public mind with the bully or thug supplied by professional strike-breaking agencies, and should not be used to describe men who act individually in accepting positions.

EL UNIVERSAL RESUMES

Armed Union Reporters and Syndicalists Drive Employees Out

El Universal, Mexico City, resumed publication September 13, under government guarantee provided by Governor Gasca of the Federal district, by direct orders from President Obregon, after suspension since September 9, when members of the Graphic Art Syndicate and the recently organized Reporters' Union drove out all of the employees of the paper at the points of guns and destroyed all of the papers which had just been printed.

The statement issued by the Compania Periodistica Nacional, of which Senor Palavicini is the president, said:

"Because of lack of guarantees for work, this company had decided definitely to suspend the publication of all its periodicals, confident that some day it will be able to resume its labors when liberty of the press is maintained."

All the machinery, the stocks of paper and other equipment of the plant of El Universal were placed under an embargo by the National Paper and Type Company, an American concern, as a measure of protection both for the company and for Senor Palavicini.

This was the culmination of charges and countercharges between the editor and his supporters and the syndicalist leaders. Senor Palavicini asserted that a strike did not exist, inasmuch as the employes of El Universal had no grievances and were prepared to work. A memorial to that effect was prepared by them and presented to the Chamber of Deputies, September 9. The memorial precipitated a lively debate, which ended when the deputies gradually departed from the chamber, leaving it without a quorum.

Official intervention thus far has been confined to the placing of armed police at the entrance to the building of El Universal "to prevent any disorders."

Rumors that similar action by the syndicalists was to be taken against the Excelsior led that paper to request a police guard.

Pittston Daily Press Delayed

Publication of the Pittston (Pa.) Daily Press, which was to have begun immediately following Labor Day, has been deferred to October 1. Lateness of machinery in arriving is the cause, W. H. Hughes, its business manager, informs EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

$5,874,000,000

Worth of Products Annually In Illinois

With an income like this, added to the income derived from 237,000 farms valued at $6,666,767,000 (the second highest farm value of any State in the Union) Illinois is deserving of first consideration from any National Advertiser.

But the National Advertiser must think daily newspapers as the media to carry his message.

Illinois daily newspapers are representative—and localize national advertising so that with the co-operation of local merchants, who get their business through their home town daily newspapers, national advertisers get action commensurate with their expenditures.

		Circulation	Rate for 2,500 Lines	Rate for 10,000 Lines
*Aurora Beacon-News	(E)	15,275	.055	.055
Bloomington Pantagraph	(M)	17,841	.05	.05
Chicago Herald-Examiner	(M)	395,861	.55	.55
Chicago Herald-Examiner	(S)	729,735	.85	.85
Chicago Daily Journal	(E)	117,483	.26	.24
Chicago Tribune	(M)	499,725	.70	.70
Chicago Tribune	(S)	827,028	1.00	1.00
*Moline Dispatch	(E)	9,165	.04	.04
*Peoria Journal-Transcript	(M&E)	30,993	.10	.09
Peoria Star	(E)	24,580	.075	.06
Rock Island Argus	(E)	10,022	.04	.04
Sterling Gazette	(E)	5,187	.03	.03

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

Aitkin-Kynett Company, 1328 Walnut street, Philadelphia. Making contracts and placing schedules for 21 insertions with newspapers in various sections for G. H. P. Cigar Company, "W1 Producto" cigars, Philadelphia.

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Reported will make up list of newspapers during October for Charles E. Hires Company, Hires Rootbeer and Ginger Ale, 206 South 24th street, Philadelphia. Again placing schedules for Joint Coffee Trade Publicity Bureau, 74 Wall street, New York.

Barton, Durstine & Osborn, 25 West 45th street, New York. Handling account for The Knox Hat Company, New York, and Dunlap Hat Company, New York.

Brandt Advertising Company, 5 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Placing orders with newspapers in Middle Western and Central States for Condensed Blueing Company (Little Boy Bluing) and (Little Bo-Peep Ammonia), Chicago.

Bromfield & Co., 45 West 34th street, New York. Reported will make up list of newspapers in October for W. Atlee Burpee Company, seeds, 485 North 5th street, Philadelphia.

George Batten Company, 381 4th avenue, New York. Renewing contracts for Bell & Co. Reported will begin newspaper campaign for Armstrong Cork Company, Armstrong Linoleum, Lancaster, Pa. Has secured the following accounts: Atlantic Macaroni Company, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Smalley, Kivlan & Onthank, Boston.

Berrien Company, 19 West 44th street, New York. Sending out orders for George P. Ide.

Blow Company, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Renewing newspaper contracts for S. Glemby's Sons Company, "Jean Hair Nets," 12 East 22nd street, New York.

Birch-Field Company, 110 West 40th street, New York. Again placing schedules with newspapers for J. C. Roulette & Sons, R. A. Underwear, Hagerstown, Md.

Campbell-Ewald Company, Marquette Bldg., Detroit. Making 7,000-line contracts for General Motors Corporation.

Chambers Agency, Maison-Blanche Bldg., New Orleans. Using Southern newspapers for Crazy Wells Water Company, Mineral Wells, Tex. Using Southern newspapers for the Van Antwerp Drug Corporation, Mobile, Ala. (Van Antwerp's Skin Powder).

Nelson Chesman & Co., First National Bank Bldg., Chattanooga, Tenn. Renewing newspaper contracts for Cattanooga Medicine Company.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 27 East Monroe street, Chicago. Making 1,000-line contracts for Val Blatz Brewing Company.

Churchill-Hall, 50 Union Square, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in Eastern and Central states for Gordon-Pew Fisheries Company, Gordon Cod Fish, Boston.

Corman Company, 19 West 44th street, New York. Placing account for Murphy Varnish Company, Newark, N. J.

Critchfield & Co., 223 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Have recently secured the account of the Scolding Locks Hair-pin Company, Appleton, Wis.

J. H. Cross Company, 214 South 12th street, Philadelphia. Making 2,800-line contracts for Vitamon Corporation.

George S. DeRouville, Albany County Savings Bank Bldg., Albany, N. Y. Making 1,000-line contracts for Jacques Capsules Company.

Robert H. Dippy, Denckla Bldg., Philadelphia. Making contracts with some Middle Western newspapers for H. G. McFaddin & Co., "Emeralite" lamps, 38 Warren street, New York.

Erwin, Wasey & Co., 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Making 10,000-line contracts for the Forhan Company (tooth paste). Making 5,000-line contracts for the Reserve Remedy Company.

Evans & Barnhill, 10 East 43rd street, New York. Reported to be placing orders with some New York state newspapers for Banana Specialties Company (Banana Crystals), Brooklyn, N. Y.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts for Moody's Investors Service. Using 500 lines in one year for Tim's Caps. Sending out fall copy for Corning Glass Company (Pyrex), Corning, N. Y.

Richard A. Foley Agency, Terminal Bldg., Philadelphia. Placing schedules for 24 insertions for North East Electric Company, Lighting and Ignition Systems, 355 West 52nd street, New York.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 623 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts for Cooper Pharmacal Company.

Fuller & Smith, 1501 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, Ohio. Making 3,000-line contracts for Glidden Company.

Gardner-Glen Buck Company, 1627 Locust street, St. Louis. Making 6,280-line contracts for the Ralston Purina Company.

H. H. Good Agency, 45 Murray street, New York. Sending out orders for Carter Medicine Company and Dr. Tutt Manufacturing Company.

Gray Advertising Agency, Gray Bldg., Kansas City. Making 3,000-line contracts for Barbo Manufacturing Company

Charles C. Green Advertising Agency, 15 West 37th street, New York. Sending out fall schedules to New England newspapers for C. F. Mueller Company (Mueller's Food Products. Sending out schedules to New York and Virginia newspapers for the General Chemical Company (Sofos).

Green-Fulton-Cunningham, Inc., Free Press Bldg., Detroit. Placing account for C. H. Wills Company, automobiles, Marysville, Mich.

Hill-Winston Company, 19 West 44th street, New York. Placing account for Goetz Silk Manufacturing Company, 185 Madison avenue, New York. Placing account for Parker Hosiery Mill & Dye Works, "Parkernit," Portsmouth, Va.

E. T. Howard Company, 117 West 46th street, New York. Making 2,800-line contracts for Phillips-Jones Corporation, Van Heusen Collars.

Hoyt's Service, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Placing accounts for Harder Manufacturing Company, Albany, N. Y., Kleen-Kold Refrigerators; Milton-Bradley Company, Springfield, Mass.; Dunham Mills, Inc., Hartford, Conn.; E. J. Wilkins Company, Gloversville, N. Y.

James Advertising Agency, 120 West 42nd street, New York. Making plans for fall campaign for Sloan's Liniment. Will use rotogravure newspapers in a few cities for Richard Hudnut.

Johnson-Read & Co., 202 South State street, Chicago. Preparing copy for Phillipsborn, Inc., Chicago.

Kendall Products Corporation, 709 6th avenue, New York. Preparing to open fall newspaper drive in Boston for Ken, a soap product made from corn.

Knight Advertising Agency, 137 South La Salle street, Chicago. Have sent out copy on Benzel Chemical Company.

Philip Kobbe Company, 208 5th avenue, New York. Will use daily and Sunday newspapers in the Metropolitan district for the Warde-Landsboro Homes Corporation, operating the Warde-Landsboro System for financing and building of homes.

Charles D. Levin, Inc., 158 West 45th street, New York. Making contracts with some Mid-West newspapers for Carbona Products Company, cleaning fluid, 302 West 36th street, New York.

Littlehale Advertising Agency, 175 5th avenue, New York. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Moth-K Company, moth destroyer, 175 5th avenue, New York.

Manternach Company, 983 Main street, Hartford, Conn. Will make up lists in October for the Stanley Works, New Britain, Conn.

Martin & Davidson, Los Angeles. Reported will start newspaper campaign in Northern Ohio and Western New York for Citrus Soap Company, San Diego, Cal.

McKenna-Muller, 290 Washington street, Brooklyn. Placing orders with newspapers in selected sections for Postal Telegraph Co., New York.

Robert M. McMullen Company, 522 5th avenue, New York. Reported will make up list of farm papers in October or November for A. R. Mosler & Co., spark plugs, 50 Railroad avenue, Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Merrill, Price & Co., 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Placing some copy on the French Battery Carbon Company, Madison, Wis.

Newell-Emmett Company, 120 West 32nd street, New York. Placing copy with some Pacific Coast newspapers for American Chicle Company, Long Island City, N. Y. (Flavory Four.)

Newell-Emmett Company, 120 West 32nd stret, New York. Will make up lists in October for Western Electric Company, 110 William street, New York.

Charles F. W. Nichols Company, 20 East Jackson boulevard, Chicago. Has recently secured account of the Stillman Cream Company, Aurora, Ill.

Nuway Advertising Agency, Atlanta. Making up lists for A. U. Valvout Company, Atlanta, auto accessories. Preparing copy and lists for Anydayte Calendar Company, Atlanta.

Patterson-Andress Company, 1 Madison avenue, New York. Making 2,800-line contracts for the Franklin Automobile Company.

Peck Advertising Agency, 347 5th avenue, New York. Placing the following accounts: Cadet Knitting Company, Philadelphia, and F. Ad. Richter & Co., Anchor Pain Expeller.

Pepsin Syrup Company, Monticello, Ill. Placing copy direct twice a week until May 28, 1923.

Peruna Company, Columbus, Ohio. Making 3,000-line contracts direct.

Harry C. Phibbs, 440 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Placing copy on National Bureau of Analysis.

Harry Porter Company, 15 West 44th street, New York. Sending out schedules for fall copy for Baume Bengue.

Porter-Eastman-Byrne Company, 22 West Monroe street, Chicago. Sending out 34 and 25-time orders for Black Silk Stove Polish Works.

Potts-Turnbull Advertising Company, Gates Bldg., Kansas City. Sending out 42 and 21-line copy to farm papers for the U. S. Farm Sales Company.

Redfield Advertising Agency, 34 West 33rd street, New York. Again making contracts with newspapers for Sonora Phonograph Company, 297 Broadway, New York.

Joseph Richards Company, 9 East 40th street, New York. Placing account for J. B. Williams Company, Glastonbury, Conn., shaving soap and toilet preparations.

Rose-Martin, Inc., 1400 Broadway, New York. Will make up lists in October for Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Company, Hartford, Conn.

Sacks Company, 116 West 32nd street, New York. Repotred will make up newspaper list in October for Raybestor Company, Brake lining, Bridgeport, Conn.

L. A. Sandlass, 217 West Saratoga street, Baltimore. Making 2,800-line contracts for the Resinol Chemical Company.

Russel M. Seeds Company, 330 University Square, Indianapolis. Sending out 52-time orders for Pinex.

Saxe Advertising Agency, Inc., Boylston street, Boston. Distribution in Greater Boston being obtained for the Pepsinic-Seltzer Company, Worcester, Mass., for Pepsinic Seltzer (Amelotte), a product which gives stomach relief. Newspaper advertising will begin when distribution is secured.

Sehl Advertising Agency, City Hall Square Bldg., Chicago. Making 4,200-line contracts for Calumet Baking Powder.

Snodgrass & Gayness, 489 5th avenue, New York. Placing 98-line, double column, twice a week for three months with newspapers within a radius of 30 miles of New York for William Crane Company, 16 West 32nd street, New York (Vulcan Gas Heater).

Staples & Staples, Mutual Bldg., Richmond, Va. Will make up lists in October for T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va.

Suedhoff-Ross Company, Shoaff Bldg., Fort Wayne, Ind. Will make up lists in October for J. C. Hutzell, Fort Wayne, manufacturer of "Ovelmo," treatment for skin diseases.

Thomas Advertising Service, Graham Bldg., Jacksonville, Fla. Placing 30-inch orders twice for Advertising Committee, City Council of Jacksonville, Fla.

J. Walter Thompson Company, 244 Madison avenue, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts for Penick & Ford. Again placing schedules with newspapers for Andrew Jergens Company (Woodbury Facial Soap), Cincinnati, Ohio.

Thresher Advertising Service, 136 Liberty street, New York. Placing orders with farm papers and a try-out campaign in Binghamton, N. Y., dailies for American Molasses Company (Amolco molasses), 111 Wall street, New York.

Vanderhoof & Co., Ontario and St. Clair streets, Chicago. Placing account for Illinois Moulding Company (Narcissus Mirrors), Chicago. Planning to use newspapers for the Gold Furniture Company (Rex Sanitized Upholstered Furniture), Chicago. Using trade papers and planning national campaign for Perfection Gear Company (Perfection Silent Timing Gears), Chicago.

Wales Advertising Company, 141 West 36th street, New York. Placing 12-time orders with newspapers in various sections for Crofton Corset Company (Rengo belt corset), 295 Fifth avenue, New York.

Williams & Saylor, 450 4th avenue, New York. Placing schedules with newspapers for Sun River Chemical Company (Sun River Ointment), 1914 Broadway, New York.

Keefe Receiver for Riteservice

Judge Mack has appointed Harold F. Keefe receiver for the Riteservice Advertising Agency, Inc., 621 Broadway, New York, which was placed in bankruptcy recently. The receiver gave $10,000 bond. It is stated that the liabilities are about $37,000 and assets about $20,000.

Join the Pioneers

Scores of papers have joined the pioneer effort to move people to church through display advertisements in space donated by the paper. Why not yours?

We have the copy, at a ridiculously low price. Show it to churches if you prefer to sell the space. Other papers use it as part of a special display with each individual church ad loaded with enough to cover the cost of the general announcement.

Send for proofs of 52 ads and get your solicitors busy.

ADDRESS

HERBERT H. SMITH, 156 Fifth Ave., New York

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT

A. A. C. W.

This department has no regular income. The Presbyterian Church donates time to write this copy, and James Wright Brown donates the space. Join the pioneers!

Publishers' Co-operation puts added value in advertisers' space

HARVEST WITH SEAL OF SERVICE
THRESHER
SERVICE ADVERTISING
Formerly
Williams Agency
Founded 1891

136 Liberty St., New York
Phone Rector 7880-1-2
Cable Address "Flailad"

INTERTYPE
"THE BETTER MACHINE"

See Our Page Next Week

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
805 Terminal Bldg., Brooklyn, N. Y.
548 Rand-McNally Bldg., Chicago
301 Glasiyn Bldg., Memphis
560-A Howard St., San Francisco
Canadian Agents:
Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.

Fall Business will be Great for the newspapers

Find the right men to create and handle the new accounts through

Editor & Publisher
Help Wanted Advertisements

NEWS OF ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

EDITORIAL AND PUBLISHING

TWO baseball games enlivened the clambake of the New York Newspaper Club and the Association of City Hall Reporters, held September 10 at Whitestone, N. Y. The first game, between teams captained by John H. Gavin, city editor of the New York World, and William H. Egan, station agent at the Pennsylvania station, resulted in a victory for the Gavins by a score of 13 to 12. The second game, between teams captained by Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, and State Senator James J. Walker, ended in a tie, 6 to 6. After the bake there were four exhibition boxing bouts.

The Texas Women's Press Association convention will be held in Fort Worth, Tex., in November.

The Blue Pencil, the official publication of the Miami (Fla.) Press Club has made its appearance. It is a single sheet about 12 x 16 inches, printed on one side.

The Business Editors' Association of Chicago started their season September 12 with a luncheon at the City Club, P. L. Ford, of the American Lumber, is now chairman of the organization.

The meeting of the Society of Midland Authors which has been held September 29 and 30 has been indefinitely postponed because of general railway situation.

The Tri-City Press Club held a meeting at Moline, Ill., August 31. The next meeting of the club will be held at Davenport, Iowa, in September.

The Black Hills Press Association will hold a special meeting at Rapid City, S. D., on Armistice Day, November 11.

ADVERTISING

THE Poor Richard Club of Philadelphia will hold its first Long Table Luncheon of the fall season on September 21.

The New England Advertising Clubs will hold its convention in Providence, R. I., November 16, 17 and 18.

The question of newspaper advertising was considered at the second annual Progressive Business Congress held recently in St. Paul. Retail merchants from all parts of the northwest were in attendance. Fred P. Mann, president of the North Dakota Retailers' Association, gave an address on "Successful Retailing," using newspaper advertisements to illustrate his points. He referred to the necessity for newspaper advertising in retailing. T. K. Kelly of Minneapolis advocated the use of specifically descriptive newspaper advertising. "Advertise religiously and continually," he urged. "The farther you go into detail in describing your merchandise the greater will be the number of sales."

The annual outing of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club was held at The Pines, on Saturday, September 9. John Harman was chairman of the entertainment committee and was assisted by Joseph J. Vigneau, Roy Hoover, Andrew W. Crawford, Vinton H. McClure, J. A. Cullison, J. F. Allen, William B. Akin, E. S. Craighead and John L. Marshall.

The Sherman (Tex.) Advertising Club has launched a publicity campaign to boost the Red River Valley Fair to be held in Sherman September 26 to 30. The club voted to have the line "Meet me at the R. R. V. Fair" set on linotype slugs and furnished in quantity to all the newspapers in the district to be used in display advertisements inserted in their papers by merchants and others. Committees will enlist the newspapers and also the merchants to see that this line appears in every display advertisement published until the opening of the fair.

The Lantern Club, composed of Boston newspaper and magazine representatives and advertising men, will hold its annual golf and tennis tournament Sept. 20 at Concord, Mass.

The first luncheon of the season of the New York Advertising Club will be given September 20. Floyd Parsons will speak on "Coal." The golf tournament for the Presbrey cup will be played at Shackamaxon, L. I., September 27.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of Texas will have its convention November 13 to 15. This date was decided upon at a meeting of the executive committee in Fort Worth recently, E. W. Bateman of Dallas, president of the state organization, presiding. Following the meeting of the executive committee, its members were guests of the Fort Worth Advertising Club at its weekly luncheon.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

CONFESSIONS OF A PINCH HITTER
Enterpe

OUR muse used to be a nice, well-behaved girl. She never was brilliant or beautiful or even stylish. Yet apart from a slight metrical limp that you didn't notice after you knew her and a fondness for rhyming moon and June, vain and pain and fire and desire, she was all right, as muses go.

She was staid and unobtrusive. She had none of the wild yearnings of the present generation for bobbed hair and vers libre. She was just a quiet, respectable, modest, Presbyterian muse. We liked her.

And then they made us edit a column.

Our muse used to be plump. She is wan and haggard now, and her joints stick up like those of an emaciated cow. She used to be placid and self-contained. If she sees us as much as look at a typewriter, these days, she bursts into sobs. She was once affectionate and trustful. Now, when she sees us coming, she goes and sticks her head into a corner, like Bill Sike's dog.

She was built for comfort. Her true sphere was the verses to be put with presents in the Christmas stockings. We have used her for speed. For forty-odd weeks she has been inspiring our lyrics, three and four a week. That's why she looks that way. That is also why they sound that way.

We have employed our kind, helpful, obliging, flivver-runabout muse for heavy trucking and sprints. We have nicked our gears and cracked her crankcase and bent a radius rod. We have tried to get her up Parnassus on high. We have bumped her over sonnets; urged her through ballades; driven her smack into rondeaux. The wonder is that she didn't simply fall to pieces long ago.

And now that we are through with her, we are going to follow the traditional masculine method and cast her off. She has given and given and given. We have been amazed to find what she could do when you treated her rough. Now we are going to toss her aside like an old glove. Not that we do toss aside our old gloves. We give them to our wife, who wears them at night after cold-creaming her hands. But, anyway, we're through with her—the muse, we mean.

But there is this much to say in extenuation of our conduct. We're not jilting her for any one else. We're through. From now on we're celibate. The next muse that comes and hangs around our house can wait for employment until our three-year-old son has his first love affair.—F. P. A. in The Tower of the New York Tribune on the occasion of his retirement as a column conductor from the time of the going of F. P. A. to the coming of Don Marquis.

Lord Riddell's Book Out

Lord Riddell, publisher of the London News of the World and close personal friend of Lloyd George, is the author of a book entitled "Some Things That Matter," which has recently been published by the George H. Doran Company, New York.

Ahead of the "Flush" Year of 1920

In National Advertising
THE WASHINGTON TIMES
Washington, D. C.
Daily Evening Sunday Morning

Has not only beaten its 1921 record each month this year, but is far and away ahead of its 1920 record when all newspapers carried their largest volume of advertising.

During the first 6 months period of this year—compared to 1920—The Times showed a gain of 134,047 lines in National Advertising.

During the past 9 months—compared to the previous 9 months—The Times, in National Lineage, has shown a gain of 319,140 lines.

Local display advertising during the so-called "Slack" months of June and July, has shown bigger gains than during any of the 14 months previous period.

THE WASHINGTON TIMES
3c Daily, 10c Sunday
G. LOGAN PAYNE, Pub.

National Advertising Representative
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Chicago, Detroit,
St. Louis and Los Angeles,

PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH,
New York and Boston.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business-builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

WORLD SERIES PLAYER BOARD

Seven more available

WIRE

STANDARD MAGNETIC BASEBALL PLAYER BOARD
Geo. H. Reynolds, Treas.
New Bedford Mass.

The Pittsburgh Post

A newspaper of character, integrity and enterprise which has earned the confidence of the people of the world's greatest industrial district.

DAILY and SUNDAY

Features by
Irvin S. Cobb
Fontaine Fox
Hugh Fullerton
Rube Goldberg
Ed Hughes
Burns Mantle
T. L. Masson
O. O. McIntyre
Frederick Palmer
H. J. Tuthill
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

An Accounting and Federal Tax Service for Publishers

References on Application

CLIFFORD YEWDALL
33 West 42nd Street
New York City

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
LEADS ALL LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWSPAPERS IN TOTAL PAID CIRCULATION
Government statement for six months ended March 31, 1922
average 146,233 daily
New York
H. W. MOLONEY
604 Times Bldg.
Chicago
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO
Suite 401, Tower Bldg.
6 No. Michigan Ave.

The
Pittsburg Press
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURG
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St New York
544 Fort Dearborn Bank Bldg., Chicago
A. J. NORRIS HILL, Hearst Bldg., San Francisco

"The African World"
AND
"Cape-to-Cairo Express"

Published every Saturday in London.

MAKERS-MONEY-SAVERS

This is a regular weekly department designed to answer questions, offer suggestions and generally help the man and woman of the smaller city dailies and weeklies. Your ideas on money making and for money saving are wanted, and for each idea published we will pay $1. When your idea appears clip it out and send it to the MONEY SAVER EDITOR, and payment will be made. Your ideas must be workable, told in as few words as possible, and new to this department. Contributions to this department will not be returned

THE postoffice department's blank for your "Statement of Ownership" will reach you soon. As the publisher of a weekly newspaper, will you stand on your prescribed rights and fail to answer the question about your average circulation, which the daily newspaper is required to answer? Here's a fine opportunity for the publisher to go on record with a sworn statement of his circulation figures. Don't you ever believe that people are going to pass this statement unread, even if the make-up man does bury it in some out-of-the-way corner. They all have enough curiosity to want to know a little of the inside affairs of the newspaper; you should take advantage of it.—J. T.

Do the front windows in your newspaper office serve any good purpose for the business? Frequently they do not. But let's look around and borrow a few ideas from others, and I think you will then agree that window space is valuable for advertising and publicity purposes even to the country newspaper. The city newspaper bulletins the news on its windows, and a crowd is usually congregated there in consequence; then, why shouldn't the country editor bulletin local news on his windows? The exact figures on election returns, particulars of accidents, fires and thefts, announcements of births, marriages and deaths, jury decisions, baseball and football scores—in fact, any real news that street gossip is unlikely to handle authentically—may be bulletined on a neat board in one of the windows. Such a policy would give the newspaper the reputation of being an alert news medium. Turing to the advertising side of your business, we find another opportunity to profit by the example of the city papers. Some of them are utilizing their windows for exhibits of merchandise on sale by the local retailers; of course, these displays are usually in conjunction with advertising campaigns being run by national advertisers in the newspaper's columns. You can do the same; devote your window space to displays that will help your retailers, thereby assuring yourself of their good will and the favored end of their advertising expenditures. In connection with the job printing side of your business there are two opportunities to use your windows. Either use them for a neat bulletin board on which you will post all the sale bills, window cards and other public announcements, or use them for displaying samples of your job printing. Perhaps you have done the latter; but did you leave the samples in the windows until they were faded, fly-specked, dusty and disarranged? Now, let's turn to the possibilities of using the windows for publicity purposes. Have you ever visited the office where the linotype machine was placed in the front window space? I know this near-human machine will attract much attention, and quite a few of those who stop outside to watch it perform will drift inside the office for a better look. In our office the policy is for someone to take this visitor in charge immediately, make him feel welcome, explain the linotype machine to him and have the operator cast a line with the visitor's name on it, after which take him back in the office and show him the presses and other equipment. They always appreciate the attention, even though not so much interested in all the machinery. Our last suggestion is borrowed from the banker, who, by the way, is running a "service" institution fundamentally the same in principle as our own business. He uses the extra space in the bank lobby and windows for exhibits of farm products raised in the neighborhood. That is a good-will winner for him; why schouldn't it be for us? It will profit you to urge the farmers to bring in samples of grain, fruit and vegetables of which they are proud, and then to take some extra pains in displaying them with neat cards attached in your windows. But, whether or not you deem it worth while to take advantage of any of the six ideas I have advanced, don't make the mistake of letting your windows get dusty, fly-specked and smoke-stained, for you and your business may be judged by the appearance of the front of your building.—J. T.

Late copy, always to be expected in a weekly newspaper office, is just about the hardest nut for the publisher to crack. It ought to help the situation a little to send out a notice to your advertisers, reading something like this: "You know, in your own business, what it would be if all your day's customers waited till ten minutes of closing time and then squeezed in and demanded instant and perfect attention. It's exactly like that when advertisers squeeze their copy into our office at the last minute and then expect the same results as if they'd given the composing room boys enough time to turn it into snappy layouts. You do your best by your advertising only when you give us time to do our best by it."—J. T.

The Monterey (Cal.) Peninsula Daily Herald worked up much community interest and got out a big edition by staging an industrial show. A vacant lot was secured free, and sufficient space rental was charged to cover actual costs with no profit. The paper sponsored the idea, it caught fire; result, an ordinary eight-page daily got out a 24-page for three days while the industrial show was running. Find out the main industries of your territory and sponsor a similar show. Circulation will increase and considerable advertising revenue may be built up in an "off" month.—A. B. F.

Have you a stencil-cutting machine in your plant? If you have, use it for making slides for your stereopticon which will now have a little use during the political season. We used some fairly light cardboard, made our stencils out of that, and the results were gratifying—the reflections were legible, constant, easy to read, and the crowd stood by.—R. M. C.

DISCUSS PAPER IN TEXAS

Chief Topics at Publishers' Meeting in Galveston This Week

(By telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 12.—The regular semi-annual meeting of the Texas Newspaper Publishers' Association was held at the Galvez Hotel, Sept. 11. The print paper situation was the subject of much discussion and earnest consideration on the part of the members. Complete reports of labor negotiations and conditions in the various cities were presented to the meeting, together with a report of the present status of arbitration negotiations.

National collective advertising of Texas as a market and the menace of billboard advertising received consideration and committees on these were appointed.

Walter A. Dealey, assistant general manager of the Dallas (Tex.) Morning News and the Dallas Journal, vice-president of the association, presided. G. I. Palmer, of Houston, special commissioner of the association, was also present.

The Galveston Daily News and the Galveston Tribune were hosts to the visiting publishers and their ladies for luncheon. Present at the meeting were: W. A. Dealey, G. J. Palmer, J. L. Mapes and Alfred Jones, Beaumont Enterprise and Journal; Frank M. Huntress, San Antonio Express and News; John H. Payne and J. L. Everett, Houston Press; Charles H. Newell, Dallas Dispatch; A. L. Shuman, Fort Worth Star Telegram; J. L. Greer, Denison Herald; Harry I. Cohen and A. L. Perkins, Galveston Tribune, and John F. Lubben, Galveston News.

Glass Made Chairman

Maj. Powell Glass, editor of the Lynchburg (Va.) News and Advance, has accepted the chairmanship of the committee on the Washington and Lee Memorial School of Journalism of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association. It is the aim of this committee to re-establish the school of journalism which was founded by Gen. Robert E. Lee at Washington and Lee College and which was abandoned 8 years after his death because of lack of funds. At the S. N. P. A. 1922 convention the matter was brought before the organization again and a number of publishers headed the subscription list with $1,000 contributions. The complete committee will be announced shortly.

NEW ORLEANS STATES
ADVERTISING RATES AFTER OCT. 1
12c DAILY FLAT
15c SUNDAY FLAT
Daily over 51,000
Sunday over 63,000
PRESENT RATE
10c D. & S. on 2,000 Lines
Represented by
S. C. Beckwith, Special Agency
New York
John M. Branham Co., Chicago

The Buffalo Territory Offers Big Possibilities To National Advertisers

Twelfth American City; second in New York State, Buffalo, with over half a million people and the surrounding trade area with three hundred thousand more, affords a rich market to national advertisers. The effective medium to capture this desirable market is the big, popular, home newspaper—A. B. C. Net paid 105,958, 80% of English-Speaking Homes.

The Buffalo Evening News
Edward H. Butler, Editor & Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

FIRST

In eight months of 1922 the Rotogravure-Picture Section of The New York Times published 507,386 agate lines of advertising—a greater volume of rotogravure advertising than any other publication.

THE NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL
has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

Punch

can be put in your selling in Indianapolis by supporting your distribution with advertising in the newspaper that clearly dominates the market.

The Indianapolis
News

York Office: Dan A. Carroll, 150 Nassau St.
icago Office: J. E. Lutz, The Tower Bldg.
Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Manager.

FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE

The World
MORNING EDITION

The World and The Evening World have a combined circulation, daily, of 650,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. They carry more dry goods advertising; are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combination.

Advertise in Newspapers by the Year

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
aller's Building, Chicago
Ford Building, Detroit

There's a Reason
k The Los Angeles Times

he Hollister Organization is w conducting its third circulan campaign for the Los Angeles mes.

rite or wire for more details of circulation building plan that s repeatedly satisfied.

HOLLISTER'S CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
Largest in the United States
300 MERRITT BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Proved value
o Advertisers

n by following extract from of B. T. Babbitt, regarding a t Boston campaign:

"We feel the services rendered the BOSTON AMERICAN e contributed in large measto our success and we wish thank you for the splendid y you co-operated with us."

EST EVENING CIRCULATION W ENGLAND. Sells at 3 Cents.

STON AMERICAN

DOLLAR PULLERS

Advertising and circulation managers are always on the lookout for new ideas that will increase advertising receipts and win new circulation. Your idea for increasing advertising or circulation may not appeal to your manager, but it may be just the thing that some other manager wants. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each idea printed under this head. The fact that the idea is now being used in your city does not bar it from the department. Address your communication to the DOLLAR PULLER EDITOR. When they appear clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable ideas will not be returned.

FALL planting will soon be in order. Why not get up a special page devoted to the bulbs or seeds best suited for fall planting, the care of the garden during the winter, the construction of cold frames, etc. Then get seedsmen, gardeners, and lumber concerns to advertise on this page.—G. H. D.

Perhaps interesting and valuable data could be obtained for the merchant if the newspapers would question the buying public especialy in the rural districts, "Why They Buy from the Mail Order Houses Instead of the Home Town Merchants?" And another question to ask is "Why They Prefer Trading at the Old Home Town Instead of Buying from the Mail Order Houses?" All letters accepted for publication by the editor on both questions could be paid for at the rate of $1.00 per letter. This no doubt would tell the merchant what was wrong with his policy.—V. B. N.

An "Emergency List" appears daily in an Indiana newspaper. This is made up of one-inch advertisements, properly classified, of various professional or other persons whose services might be desired in a hurry. The list included plumbers, electricians, nurses, etc.—B. A. T.

The Oakland (Cal.) Tribune gained considerable circulation among radio enthusiasts with a "bandit" chase. A car driven by a member of the automobile department of the paper and a State speed officer was painted with a broad checkered band around the middle. Fifteen minutes after it was driven from the Tribune building a fleet of private cars, all equipped with radio receiving apparatus started after it. Everyone who saw the car was requested to 'phone its location to the Tribune radio department. At 15-minute intervals reports were broadcasted from the Tribune tower both by radiophone and wireless telegraph to the pursuing automobilists. The "bandit" car was captured one hour and forty-five minutes after it had started; it having covered more than 100 miles. Interest was worked up in this novel stunt for three weeks, prizes being offered the captors.—A. B. F.

The publisher of a daily in the East found that music meant a great deal to many of his readers so he conceived the idea of starting a record and piano roll review department in his paper. He found that many of the manufacturers of records and rolls were more than willing to send him one each of their new releases every month. After they were reviewed he would sell them at a discount to a local dealer and thus turned a new department into a revenue producer. Some advertising also came as a result. Sheet music was later added with equal results.—R. R. V.

A good motor-page stimulator is to offer a casing to the car owner who identifies his own car. The staff camera man snaps busy corners with motor cars and the owner identifies his car from these pictures when reproduced in the newspaper. The stunt is good publicity for the advertising tire dealers and arouses interest of motorist readers.—B. R. A.

Why not an "Advertising Editorial"? Write one for your editorial columns advising your readers to read the advertisements as well as the news. Explain to them how they can be really benefitted by doing this. Cite specific examples, if possible, of instances where reading the advertisements resulted in profit to someone.—D. R.

Auto accessory dealers will grab space on an "accessory page." Allow each dealer to advertise but one accessory, and permit no duplication in advertisements. Make the page complete so that the car owner, Ford or Packard, can secure complete equipment without consulting other than the advertisement.—B. A. T.

Many newspapers are running a department of "New Arrivals," in which they chronicle the coming of new inhabitants. Of course they get the names and addresses of the newcomers from the chamber of commerce, the water and light offices, the gas company, the real estate board, or some such source, and the department makes an interesting feature for the paper's readers. But I wonder how many circulation managers are cashing in on this feature. In many places it would be entirely practical to sample copy these new residents, and from personal experience I know that the newspaper which the newcomer reads during the first three or four days of his coming is likely to be the paper he will read thereafter. I suggest that sample copies be sent to them for three days, and then have your carrier or district man call for a subscription.—J. T.

The Ames (Ia.) Tribune boosted its circulation considerably this summer at little cost by announcing that instead of paying a subscription solicitor a salary, it was going to give its readers the benefit of the cost of securing new subscribers. "Some of your friends and neighbors aren't taking the Tribune," the announcement read. Talk to them about it, and for each new subscription you bring it at $5 a year we will extend your own subscription three months, allow you $1 on your renewal, or pay you $1 in cash."—B. C.

Help some merchant to advertise his special sale days in a more distinctive way than that of listing his bargains under the stereotyped headline "Specials for ————" Have him call them "Clover Days." Use the slogan "Good Luck for Everybody." Have him link up his window displays with the advertising by using an abundance of artificial clover in window-trimming. And as a final touch he should have his window cards, counter cards and price tickets in clover designs and printed in green ink.—J. T.

The Hyde Park Herald (Chicago), serving a high-grade residential section of Chicago, supplies its advertisers with a poster for window display on which the advertisement in each week's edition of the paper may be pasted. The poster is headed in large type "Our Advertisement Appears Weekly in The Hyde Park Herald."—P. M. H.

The Muskogee Times-Democrat has been using on alternate days a "Find the $10 in Gold" contest that has excited considerable interest among advertisers and the public. A page of ads from a dozen firms is used as the basis for the contest. Extra letters are scattered through the ads. When these extra letters are arranged correctly, they spell about eight words showing just where the $10 in gold is hidden—always at the place of business of one of the advertisers, however. The first one there gets the money, but others aren't far behind and it all helps the business man.—E. H. J.

In Philadelphia, the rapid transit company is advertising "trolley hikes." Interesting places or picturesque scenery is described; the itinerary is prepared, and directions are given as to the car to be taken, at the end of the hike, back to the starting point. All this information is presented in a series of newspaper advertisements. Perhaps the street railways, or even the bus lines, will be prospective advertisers for a similar campaign in your paper.—G. H. D.

In the fall is the busy season for photographers with Christmas pictures coming on. Why not induce these fellows to have cuts made of some of their best work and have them printed in their ad in place of the usual appeal to "Do Your Christmas Picture-Taking Early." Some of these cuts also might be of use to the paper at some time and it could help pay the cost of them.—E. H. J.

Photographs of the men at the head of various local stores were printed in double-page advertisements, paid for by the merchants were printed in one issue of an Ohio newspaper. Readers were asked to name the men and state their business connection. Prizes were awarded for the most complete replies. The advertisements were secured by urging the "personal touch" on the merchants.—B. A. T.

The Nashville Tennessean has recently inaugurated a puzzle picture game which is proving a good circulation getter. The contestants compete for a list of special prizes by making up the largest list of words starting with a certain letter, naming objects illustrated in the picture. Three sets of prizes are offered. The first prize if no subscriptions accompany the answer is to be $30. If one subscription accompanies the answer, the winner receives $350 and if two subscriptions accompany it, the prize is $1,000.—R. L. S.

Do Your Papers Always Reach Subscribers On Time?

For 14 years we have been studying the causes for papers delayed or undelivered. We have found that 90% of the causes are due to improper, incomplete, illegible addressing—to addresses coming off, being mutilated, or covering reading matter—to delays in complying with request for changes or corrections in the mail list.

All such complaint-causes are impossible where the MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM is used. A complete understanding of it might be the first step in solving your mail list problems. Let us send you full information. Write us today sure.

The Speedaumatic Company
MANUFACTURING
THE MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM
817-825 WASHINGTON BLVD.
CHICAGO

26,000 last October—Now

150,000

DETROIT
Evening
TIMES

The Mount Vernon, N. Y.
DAILY ARGUS
carries more display advertising than any other newspaper in Westchester County.

This is an acknowledgement of its power that the advertiser should heed, if desirous of reaching the people of Mount Vernon.

GEO. B. DAVID & CO.
Foreign Representative
171 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

45 YEARS OLD.

ON August 1, The Passaic Daily News celebrated the 45th anniversary of its birth.

From a precarious venture, with nothing but the unbounded faith of its founders to welcome it to its future, the paper has grown steadily and rapidly until this year it has surpassed every previous record of circulation and advertising lineage.

The Daily News today stands supreme in the esteem and confidence of the reading public and of the advertisers of Passaic and the surrounding territory.

OVER 10,000 NET PAID DAILY.
Passaic's Oldest Daily

DAILY NEWS
Passaic, New Jersey

NO GREEN OLIVES LEFT IN SPAIN

(Continued from page 7)

which might exist for women to look upon bulk green olives as in the same class with the standardized, advertised product.

"You will always find this finest of appetizers packed in the finest of containers—glass," it was explained. "For glass is the cleanest, most attractive and most sanitary of containers—the most satisfactory in which to pack Spanish Green Olives.

"In these delightfully transparent bottles, the salty, tangy fruit stands out to delight your eye, and later to pacify your taste. Choose either the plain olives or those that are stuffed with delicious Spanish sweet peppers. Both are equally delicious.

"Plain or stuffed, they are Spanish Green Olives. Or, as they are more generally known, Spanish Queen Olives. For every queen olive is a green olive.

"Spanish Green Olives are good for you. The olive oil in them is healthful and nourishing. Children may eat all they want.

"Spanish Green Olives make wonderful salads and sandwiches. Use them as garnishes, too. Or serve them by themselves. Either the plain or stuffed Spanish Green Olives would be a welcome delicacy at dinner tonight. Buy a bottle or two today."

The advertising has been and is being carried on in several women's magazines, which appeal particularly to dieticians. But the main power of the campaign has been derived from the use of newspapers where the copy appeared usually on the women's page.

"About the only problems encountered were those which are the common experience of all associations," EDITOR & PUBLISHER was told. "That is the difficulty of getting a number of men in the same business to look at things in the same light; to realize the advantage to each one of deriving a common benefit from concerted action; and converting the various members to the policy of concerted action to the point where proportionate contributions to the expense would be made.

"Advertising was placed with many of the metropolitan dailies located in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, St. Paul, San Francisco and other large cities.

"Both ten-inch and 30-inch newspaper copy was used and advertisements were scheduled to appear from three to eight times a month in the various papers. The copy, as may be observed, is appetizing copy, although the food value is featured also.

"We shall not attempt to estimate just how much the advertising is responsible for the apparent depletion of the 1921-1922 crop in Spain. Our client, however, feels well satisfied with the results of the advertising."

POTTSTOWN LEDGER SOLD

The Roths, Who Have Been Operating Paper, Are Its Buyers

The Pottstown (Pa.) Ledger has been purchased outright by P. Quinn Roth, Earl R. Roth and H. E. Roth, who have been operating the paper for the past year with the option of purchase. P. Quinn Roth, who will continue as general manager, becomes the president of the Ledger Company, while Earl R. Roth, editor of the paper, becomes secretary of the new holding company.

P. Quinn Roth, before coming to Pottstown, was for nearly a quarter of a century identified with the Norristown (Pa.) Times. Earl R. Roth began newspaper work with the Bristol Times and was later managing editor of the Bristol (Pa.) Courier and publisher of the Ridgefield Park (N. J.) Review.

The publishers have appointed S. G. Lindenstein, Inc., 118 East 28th street, New York, as special foreign advertising representative, and George A. Lessig, local advertising manager.

The Ledger is in its 50th year as a daily paper, and has a history of more than 75 years as a weekly. The entire capital stock and equipment is involved in the deal.

ENDORSES ADVERTISED GOODS

Chicago Electrical Development Society Tells Members of Advantages

The Society for Electrical Development issued a bulletin in Chicago during the past week, advising its members to buy and sell advertised goods. Goods constantly advertised, says this bulletin, have the following advantages, prestige established; more rapid turnover; increased profit caused by more rapid turnover; general willingness of the consistent advertiser to stand behind his wares; faith of the consumer in the advertised article.

"Any manufacturer who does not advertise in some form or other has insufficient faith in his product," it says further. "Why, then, should you, pin your faith on and invest your money in merchandise produced by such a manufacturer? The soundest advice we can give our members is: Buy and sell advertised goods for the benefit of their customers and their own advantage."

J. R. Williams Controls Herald

J. Roy Williams, for about five years owner and publisher of the McAlester (Okla.) News-Capital, has acquired a substantial interest in the Anaheim (Cal.) Daily Herald and became editor and manager of the paper September 1. He will be assisted by Blaine Gibs managing editor, and Stanley Curt advertising manager, both of whom h become stockholders. Oscar Conklin no longer connected with the paper S. S. Conklin has resigned as mana but will remain a director.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVERTISING RATES
in effect March 11, 1922

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

	Agate Lines	1 insertion	6 insertions within year	12 insertions within year	26 insertions within year	52 insertions within year
Full page	672	$200.00	$188.00	$175.00	$150.00	$125.00
Half page	336	113.00	100.00	94.00	88.00	75.00
Quarter page	168	60.00	56.00*	50.00*	47.00*	44.00
Eighth page	84	35.00	30.00*	28.00*	25.00*	23.00
Sixteenth page	42	20.00	18.00*	15.00*	14.00*	13.00

Less than sixteenth page transient rate 50 cents per agate line (minimum space 14 lines —1 inch).

All 52 consecutive-insertion contracts (see last column above) are based on consecutive insertions within the year. Extra space is charged at the 52-insertion rate, but contract is credited for one insertion only.

Half pages and full pages on 6, 12 and 26-time contracts may be used at the option of the advertiser within the twelve-month period.

*Quarter, eighth and sixteenth pages must be on definite copy schedule.

b. Contract advertisers are accorded the privilege of same insertion rate for larger space. For example: an advertiser under contract for twenty-six (26) quarter-pages at $47 per insertion is accorded the privilege of half pages at $88 and full pages at $150, but such advertisement is to be credited on contract as but one insertion of contract space.

c. Rate maker card—52 consecutive insertions—minimum space 28 agate lines—net rate 28c. per agate line. Extra space pro rata.

d. All rebates earned by advertisers using more than contracted space within life of contract are paid in advertising space to be used within one month after expiration of contract.

Classified Advertising

a. Help Wanted ..... .06 a word
For Sale ..... .06 a word
Situations Wanted ..... .03 a word
Business Opportunities ..... .06 a word

b. All advertisements inserted on a strictly cash basis, except on orders from contract advertisers.

c. No discount for frequency of insertion.

Reading Notices—(None.)

Commissions. Allowed to recognized agencies on other than publishers' advertising.

Preferred Positions

Front and back cover rates on application. Inside front and back covers 10% extra. All other positions 25% extra.

SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT
For Newspaper Making

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and Business bought and sold, American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Used Newspaper Presses for Early Delivery
HOE SEXTUPLE PRESS
with two folders and extra color cylinder. It will print a 4, 6, 8, 10 or 12 page paper at a running speed of 48,000 per hour and 14, 16, 18, 20, 22 or 24 pages at 24,000 per hour. Printing an extra color on the first and last pages.

SCOTT QUADRUPLE PRESS
four deck two pages wide prints seven or eight columns to the page. Prints 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 or 16 pages at 24,000 per hour and 20, 24, 28 or 32 pages at 12,000 per hour.

THE HUDSON OBSERVER, Hoboken, N. J., are running this press every day in the week. Go over and see it.

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
Plainfield, New Jersey
NEW YORK 1457 Broadway. CHICAGO 1441 Monadnock Block

24-Page Potter Press For Sale or Will Trade for Goss Press to Fit Our New Equipment

This press is in fine running condition, does 2-color work, gives all sizes by two's in one signature up to 20 pages with single set of plates or two signatures of 12 pages each.
Can be seen in operation.
Delivery can be made about October 1st.
For further particulars address,
SUPERIOR TELEGRAM
Superior, Wisconsin

Take It To
POWERS
Open 24 Hours out of 24
The Fastest Engravers on the Earth
Powers Photo Engraving Co.
154 Nassau St., Tribune Bldg.
New York City

FLEXIDEAL
A Dependable, Uniform
DRYMAT
Better in performance than any other, and at a LOWER price. A trial will convince you.
Unlimited Stock on Hand at all Times
The Flexideal Company
15 William Street
NEW YORK CITY

Wanted
Good used Duplex 12-page flat-bed press. dress at once The Leader, Great Falls, Mont stating best price and terms.

PRICES SMASHED
10 Days FREE Trial World's best makes—Underwood, Remington, Oliver—at big saving. Every machine fully rebuilt to look and work like new. Guaranteed for 10 years. Send no money—big free catalog shows how to save money on typewriters. Easyterms. Write today.
INTERNATIONAL TYPEWRITER EXC.
177 N. State St., Dept. 931, Chicago

Newspaper Plant Equipments
Established in 1912
PECKHAM MACHINERY C
MARBRIDGE BLDG, 34th & Bwa
NEW YORK CITY

24-page Scott Straightline, deliv and erection in month. Shown r ning until Aug. 15th.
Complete Newspaper Plant Equ ment.
8 Linotypes. Model B Interty Head Letter Matrices, Molds, Lin
2 Monotype Equipments w mats.

Huber's ROTOGRAVURE INKS
Are free from Sediment
HUBER'S Colors in use since 1780
J. M. Huber
Main Office
65 W. HOUSTON ST., NEW Y
It Pays to Huber-ize

Everything in Steel Equipmer for the Composing Room
We are now located in our New Factor
3724 S. Rockwell Street
Chicago
With approximately 50,000 squa feet of space and the best equi ment of metal working machine in the country, we are now position to give you prompt ser ice as well as goods of the ve highest quality.
Chicago Metal Mfg.
3724 South Rockwell Stree
Chicago, Ill.
Phone, Lafayette 5754

Introduction to Employer and Employee

SITUATIONS WANTED

A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order. For unemployed one insertion (adv. not to ed 50 words) FREE.

rtising Manager wire, energetic and clean cut, with a d of accomplishments. Age thirty, mar- unquestionable reference. Fifteen years' rience in newspaper game; thoroughly rd in writing, planning and selling adver- g. Know how to make friends for my- und paper and hold them. Can deliver goods and get maximum results from tors. Fifty dollars a week to start and arn it. Southeast preferred, but will go here, if the opportunity is right. Write ire, "Advertising Man," P. O. Box 534, abus, Georgia.

rtising Manager or Solicitor resent employed on large Eastern news- ; desires change for greater opportunity. ears' newspaper experience. Demonstrated y to increase lineage through own efforts results from staff. Clean record; mar- thirty years old. A former employer , "Not only space seller but a creator of ess." C-916, Editor & Publisher.

tising Solicitor

ven ability, who has made good with New publications, desires connection with pro- ve publication. Can write copy and make s. Excellent references. C-932, Editor blisher.

ale Editor

riter employed in present position twelve desires change about October 1. Now tive on afternoon paper city of 100,000, iddle west. Age 36, married. Prefer on metropolitan daily Pacific Coast or but will go anywhere if salary is satis- y. For particulars address Box C-902, Editor & Publisher.

cation Manager references as to ability and integrity. worker. Understands circulation game every angle. Address C-922, Editor & her.

fied Manager-Solicitor to connect with progressive paper. continuous service, trained space builder, good character. Address C-906, Editor blisher.

my Is the Order of the Day—

why I am worth $7,500 a year to the her who wishes to reduce expenses with- pairing his earnings. Twelve years' hard ence in keeping costs at a minimum in tising, Circulation, Editorial and General Now holding position as Business er on Paper with 20,000 Circulation, but change to larger Organization. Address -928, Editor & Publisher.

r or Managing Editor n years on best metropolitan papers. writer, organizer and executive. Op- ity to grow with paper more important mmediate salary. Box C-898, care Editor blisher.

ewspaper Manager

ou use young circulation manager, 31, rd, who began his newspaper career at has worked every phase and angle of tion work to circulation manager for 6 Will consider city or country circulator n. I want permanent location. I know know how to manage boys—office details, ion work, etc. Hard and conscientious . Salary is not my object; a position is hat I want. Highly recommended. Ad- C-923, Editor & Publisher.

n Wanted as Advertising Manager

enced both morning and evening news- -a fighter from the word "go"—prefers mpetitive field. Capable of writing and more space than any man on his staff. nd retail advertising expert. A manager ows how to get space and can impart that ige with "red-hot" enthusiasm to his Has good position now, but wants bigger Excellent references. Age 39, married. s C-929, Editor & Publisher.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Newspaper Man

Young, energetic reporter and desk man with daily and weekly experience wants combination on daily or large weekly. Can come at once. S. Lieberman, Westwood, N. J.

Position Wanted

By ex-service man, able, experienced Merchandiser and editor of successful advertising producing Merchandising monthly of daily Newspaper. My articles widely quoted by Metropolitan Merchandising papers. Able as executive, have original ideas and copyright on best grocers collective advertising proposition. Reasonable salary for first six months. Address C-914, Editor & Publisher.

Stenographer-Secretary

A real helper for busy executive in publishing, advertising or newspaper work. Thorough knowledge of English, well-read, well bred. Know printing, type, proof-reading and book manufacture. Best of references. C-919, Editor &Publisher.

Three Things

make most newspapers unprofitable. Competition is not one of them. Am soliciting job as manager of an unprofitable daily paper in city of no less than 20,000 population, surrounded by good territory. Can give proof of success on paper established 63 years, never paying, deep in debt. In four years I increased advertising revenue 200%; circulation 400%. Have now disposed of property with profit to owners. Will be at liberty November 1st. Address C-915, Editor & Publisher.

What Publisher Can Use This Experience?

Ten years in advertising—writing national and local copy, directing campaigns, making plans, handling dealer co-operation with advertisers and agencies—selling space on publications. Believing thoroughly in the efficiency and too often undeveloped possibilities of the home paper, ready, at 32, to settle for keeps in a good town—25 to 75,000 preferred—where tangible results will open the way to participation in the property. C-927, Editor & Publisher.

You May Need Me

Ten years' newspaper and magazine experience; age 29, college education. For several years in contact with large accounts of America. I sell space and am open for a position on or before November 1. Prefer executive in West or Middle West. References. Write Box C-911, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Two Young Newspaper Executives, holding important positions on metropolitan daily desire to take charge of newspaper where experience, enthusiasm and integrity will earn dividends. Highest credentials. Share in profits. Particularly interested in paper not on a paying basis in city of 25,000 or larger. Box C-920, Editor & Publisher.

FEATURE ARTICLES

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Feature Syndicate

wants human interest inspirational editorials 400 words long. Address Box C-921, care Editor & Publisher.

NEWSPAPERS WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Wanted to Lease

Want to retire? A young man, 25, university graduate, with news and business experience on weekly and dailies, wants to assume active management of Central West county seat weekly on percentage basis. N. A. Thatcher, 1011 W. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio.

Wanted to Buy

Evening paper. State price, circulation, rate, terms. Confidential. C-917, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Advertising Solicitor

and copy writer, experienced, by eastern newspaper of 20,000 circulation. Opportunity for man who takes interest in his work. Write Box C-913, Editor & Publisher.

Leading Daily Paper

in city of 100,000 within three hours of New York, has vacancy in news department for experienced reporter, who could qualify on copy desk eventually. Paper usually employs local men only and makes few changes. Scarcity of men willing to learn news reporting compels us to look for an experienced man. Address immediately, giving age, references, salary expected, etc., Box C-931, Editor & Publisher.

Live Newspaper

in good southwestern town of 35,000 wants to get in touch with a circulation manager who knows the business and not afraid of work. C-925, Editor & Publisher.

Six-Day Evening Paper

in city of nearly 200,000 has opening for first class circulation manager. Address, giving details as to experience and initial salary requirements, C-904, care Editor & Publisher.

Wanted

experienced news composing room foreman with executive ability; evening paper; reference required. Times, Chester, Pa.

Wanted

Advertising solicitor by old established New York newspaper special agency. Experienced man of 30 to 36 years of age. Address for interview, Box C-930, Care Editor & Publisher.

PITFALLS AWAIT PUBLISHER IN "CHANCE" ADS

(Continued from page 14)

In the meantime 7,500,000 volumes of Shakespeare are in storage. Until all chance of returns from the advertisements which have appeared is gone the books are so much waste paper.

"The offense against the law was purely a technical one," the head of the company says. "There was no intent to violate any law. The conditions of the contest, which merely provided the trip to the 12 who gave us references through which the greatest number of books were sold, were to have been mailed as soon as the order was received."

The Post Office Department gives two points of advice on all matters of this kind which should be closely adhered to. They are:

Persons who contemplate the use of the mail in the operation of prize competitions, contests or schemes are advised to ascertain whether matter relating thereto is mailable under the law, and should submit to the Post Office Department specimens of any advertisements, offers or literature with full particulars relating to the project.

Publishers are cautioned against the printing of advertisements or announcements of enterprises of the character referred to before ascertaining whether the matter is mailable, as publications containing matter relating to schemes which are not in conformity with the law are unmailable at any rate of postage.

Care to avoid violations of the lottery laws is as necessary in the editorial departments as in advertising. Reporters should be made thoroughly acquainted with the regulations, for a news article is just as liable at any time to bar an edition from the mails and bring punishment down on the publisher as is an advertisement. Items referring to prize drawings for charity, benevolent and organization purposes, occurring so often, should bear special watching.

Hall Star-Eagle Circulator

Karl F. Hall, formerly circulation manager of the Detroit Journal and prior to going to Detroit assistant circulation manager of the Toledo Blade, becomes circulation manager of the Newark (N. J.) Star Eagle, September 18.

Sales Appraisals

Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer

Newspaper Properties

225 Fifth Ave. New York

Unusual Opportunities

Daily & Weekly NEWSPAPERS

TRADE PAPERS

HARWELL & CANNON

Newspaper and Magazine Properties

Times Building, New York

Established 1910

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

WANTED—Experienced advertising men for classified and display positions now open with leading newspapers in New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Michigan, Texas and California. The salaries offered are attractive. Cover qualifications in first letter. Registration is free.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.

THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

STARR SERVICE CORPS

UPBUILDERS of NEWSPAPERS

BROKAW BLDG—42ND and BROADWAY

NEW YORK

Donations But No Ads for Charity

"Charity Advertising" has been placed under the ban by retail merchants of Amarillo, Tex. Advertising matter placed in programs, souvenir folders and other publications regarded as valueless are included, and a vigorous campaign is being conducted to induce Amarillo merchants to discontinue such advertising altogether. Merchants declare they are willing to contribute to all worthy causes, but that they prefer to make outright donations, and not under the guise of buying something.

New Press for Lewiston Journal

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal is installing a new double width Duplex Press.

EXPERIENCED EDITORIAL MAN

After four years in the Far East, first as news editor of he Japan Advertiser and then as editor of the Trans-Pacific, conomic magazine, I have returned with my family to nake our home again in the States. Having had several ears' previous experience in feature and Sunday work on he Kansas City Star, I am eager to give my best services s editor or member of such department. Please address I. H. Kinyon, care of the Trans-Pacific, 120 Broadway, New York City.

We Have Never Had A Discontinuance

on

Sir John Foster Fraser's "Weekly London Letter" of Literary, Theatrical, Social and Political Happenings.

Springfield Union
Cincinnati Times-Star
Indianapolis Star
Brooklyn Eagle
London Free Press
Wheeling News

are among those using it.

Write for Samples

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate

373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Million Dollar Hearst Features

The World's Greatest Circulation Builders

International Feature Service, Inc.
New York

Few Papers — (if any) — surpass the TRENTON NEW JERSEY TIMES AS

A Food Medium

A recent reader survey indicates that among the housewives of the city our Thursday Food Feature Department—upward of four pages devoted to food recipes and news and food advertising—is the best feature carried by the Times

Circulation 30,237 Member A. B. C.

KELLY-SMITH CO.

Marbridge Bldg. New York — Lytton Bldg. Chicago

America's Best Magazine Pages

Daily and Sunday

Newspaper Feature Service

241 WEST 58TH STREET
New York City

WIRE NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

HUNCHES

Managing editors and city editors are always on the lookout for news; and feature ideas that can be used locally. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each hunch published under this head. The fact that the hunch is not being worked successfully in your city does not bar it from this department. Address your contributions to the HUNCH EDITOR. When they appear, clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable hunches will not be returned.

WE pad up scraps news print and print each sheet "Jot It Down for the Post." We leave these pads in the stores, banks, post office, garages, depot and telephone exchange and get a lot of news that might otherwise be missed.—H. J. W.

What makes a traffic cop sore is a good freak topic for any sizeable town. Traffic officers interviewed in one California town laid their grouches to society women visiting when cars are stopped for a moment at crossings; arguments because one's car has been tagged; not paying attention to whistles, etc. Much interest may be attached to the interview through questions asked these traffic mentors. During the course of a day, most of them supply information to visitors on everything from the closest restaurant to the best show in town.—A. B. F.

Do you notice how much fewer the flies are in your city this year than they used to be five or ten years ago Some scientists claim that the fumes from automobiles keep the fles down. Why not ask some local scientists and doctors about their opinion on this subject and then tell some of the health benefits due to fewer flies. You might also tell what fly swatting is doing to keep down the flies and could likewise get some data from local hardware, grocery and drug stores as to the number of swatters sold in your city this year.—H. H. W.

In almost every city there are a large number of people who are deeply interested in birds. These people keep records of the various species of birds they see during the summer time, the time of arrival and departure of the robins, and so on. It would be an interesting feature story to get in touch with these people, tell some of the most interesting things they know about local birds and give the names and addresses of the most enthusiastic of the local bird lovers.—F. H. W.

The Springfield News reviewed the history of the local police department, showing how the telephone, automobile, etc., all had been important inventions for police work. Besides furnishing a good feature, it tickled the police department, and it's always good policy to be on their good side.—B. A. T.

The "schatchen," or marriage broker, still flourishes, a staff reporter on the New York World found recently. Yiddish newspapers may have the clue to one or more in your city. (Usually the ads are in English, although in a Yiddish paper.) One in New York makes 50 matches a year. See what the local end is.—J. M. M.

A boys' page feature, or one, which if successfully handled, would be strong enough to stand by itself, would be "Kid Hobbies." Have readers send in brief descriptions of their most enjoyable and practical hobbies as boys. Or have a reporter interview prominent business and professional men. The life work of many men and many a great business enterprise have been determined by boyhood hobbies.—P. M. H.

The Daily Ypsilanti (Mich.) Press publishes a daily humorous column entitled "Listening in with A. J. T." Each day some simple subject is treated in a humorous manner, and the names of well-known local persons are brought in as if they had made the observations and the paper were simply reporting it. One day the subject might be "Gardens," another day "Chairs," etc. It would seem that dailies in small cities where people are fairly well known to each other might profitably run something of this sort, as it causes amusement and creates interest. Nearly everyone will read it to see who is mentioned and what silly observations are credited to each.—C. E. L.

As a feature for your church page, find out who have been Sunday School teachers for the longest time. Miss Rachel Pollock has been a teacher in the Pine Street Presbyterian Sunday School of Harrisburg, Pa., for more than 55 years. Miss Maria York has been a teacher in the smae school for more than 41 years.—G. H. D.

The Virginia (Ill.) Republican-Gazette each week prints the boyhood picture of some prominent resident of the city. The first person mailing in an identification gets a year's free subscription.—L. G. S.

Do members of the "Golfing fraternity," the boys who chase the small elusive resilient spheres around the greens, like to see the accounts of their brilliant shots in black and white? They most certainly do. The Lowell (Mass.) Courier-Citizen instituted a knightly order of their own on their sporting pages for fortunate ones. The order was dubbed "Exalted Order of Lucky Guys," and qualifications for admittance specified that the initiatee must make a hole in one—the ambition of many a "golfer."—R. M. C.

I know a successful newspaper correspondent who says that a feature story can be worked over in most cases at some future date, creating just as much interest as it did the first time it was run. That is, the subject that you use for a feature story today will be good again a year from now, five years from now or perhaps ten years from now. This suggests that the editor should have someone run the files for local features, run at some time in the past, which might be rewritten, added to and changed, in such a way that they will appear absolutely fresh. To prove the soundness of this idea, the writer might call attention to the fact that the Dallas News is reprinting poems written by their staff poet in 1908. Of course these are run without a change, and they're evincing just as much interest as they did when they were originally run.—J. T.

There is probably a doll hospital somewhere in your city with an interesting old man running it. He has interesting experiences which would make a live story, with a photograph.—J. M. M.

A story that will be widely read and will create a good deal of interest is one on why certain well-known men of your community do not own an automobile. For example, Governor B. W. Olcott of Oregon has traveled in Alaska by dog-team, makes frequent trips by airplane and hydroplane and is a good horse-back rider, but he does not own an automobile. The same thing will be found true of many of your well-known men. Get a story from them to see why they do not own a machine.—F. L.

Does the modern housewife still follow the iron-clad rule of washing on Monday, ironing on Tuesday, etc.? An interview with persons of social prominence who do their housework but still have considerable time to devote to social functions, will be not only interesting but helpful. Their housework schedule will furnish food for thought. However, in selections for the interviews, choose women who are known for their ability as good housekeepers. Those articles would be of especial value on the woman's page.—A. K.

What about the mentality of man and woman with respect to age? In other words, is a man 24 smarter than a woman 30, or visa versa? Opinions of the city's leading educators prove interesting.—L. D. H.

Marguerite Martyn of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch staff recently wrote a feature story for the Sunday edition of that paper from an interview with a man who has been for the past forty years the principal of a certain public schocl in St. Louis. This educator with fifty years' experience in the public schools says his experience has showed him that girls of high-school age might "make up" less if they were segregated away from the boys. He believes that the "co-ed" system is not practicable for various reasons in the "prep school" years. What do your local educators think about this problem? Here is the subject of a mighty interesting story, in view of the fact the younger generation is accused of being "loose" by the older generation.—D. R.

Girls are taking to rifle shooting, especially with the small bore rifle. Recently a girl's rifle team from Washington, D. C., won the Astor cup in one of the National Rifle Association matches, defeating three military schools and a large number of other teams to do it, winning only after shooting off a tie. About three-fourths of all the medals awarded by the Winchester Junior Rifle Corps to Colorado boys and girls when the last awards were made went to girls. Are the girls in your town shooting? If not, why not?—E. A. H.

WHY WORRY?

When You Can Get

HOMER BALMY

to Solve Your Problems?

Adviser to Great Men, The New Humorous Character

By L. H. ROBBINS

Writes Every Week

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK CITY

Beginning September 11

THE SCIENCE NEWS BULLETIN

will be

MAILED DAILY

instead of weekly

(with no increase in rates)

Forty Clients Now Receive This Service That Brings Science To

The Man In The Street

Write for trial report

SCIENCE SERVICE
1115 Connecticut Ave., N. W.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

New Haven Register

is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 32,500 Average

Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any othe TWO New Haven papers COMBINED

New Haven Register

The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston — New York—Detroit—Chicago

FOOTBALL

Every wide-awake Sporting Editor will want to use ou "40 Winning Plays In Foot ball" by Major Earnes Graves and John J. McEwan

THE INTERNATIONAL SYNDICATE
213 Guilford Ave., BALTIMORE, MD

Tried and Found True

Whether as a household necessity fo the family or a productive salesma for advertisers

The Pittsburg Dispatch

has stood the test for generations.

Branch Offices:
Wallace G. Brooke,
Brunswick Building, New York
The Ford-Parsons Co.
Marquette Building, Chicago, Ill.

IT HAS COME INTO ITS OWN

The South has come into its own, the people have been brought to the realization of the possibilities of their land.

The new South is of modern construction. It is now established upon a firm foundation of diversified production and trade.

Its fields are fertile with many products. Its mines are opened with richness. It has water power to turn the wheels of its factories, ports to dock the shipping of all oceans.

Transportation facilities of the South are greater in proportion to population and area than the United States as a whole.

The South has nearly one-third of the total railroad mileage or 9.2 miles of railroad for every hundred square miles compared with 8.5 for the whole country.

Highway construction throughout the South is greater than was ever known. Other construction work in hotels, schools, churches, office and bank buildings has aided in its rapid industrial advancement.

The South is a fertile and profitable market for manufacturers who tell by advertising in the daily newspapers what they have and where to get it.

Get your product asked for by name. This list will do it for you.

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
ALABAMA.
††Birmingham News .....(E)	65,152	.15	.15
††Birmingham News .....(S)	71,021	.15	.15
*Mobile News-Item .....(E)	10,392	.05	.05
*Mobile Register .....(M)	20,299	.07	.07
*Mobile Register .....(S)	32,442	.085	.086
FLORIDA.
Jacksonville Journal .....(E)	19,508	.07	.07
*Florida Times-Union, Jacksonville(M&S)	33,398	.08(9cS)	.08(9cS)
*Pensacola News .....(E)	4,795	.03	.03
*Pensacola News .....(S)	5,291	.03	.03
St. Petersburg Independent.....(E)	5,048	.023	.023
GEORGIA.
*Augusta Chronicle .....(M)	10,814	.045	.045
*Augusta Chronicle .....(S)	11,476	.045	.045
*Augusta Herald .....(E)	12,886	.05	.05
*Augusta Herald .....(S)	12,803	.05	.05
*Columbus Ledger .....(E&S)	8,789	.04	.04
*Macon Telegraph .....(M)	20,378	.06	.06
*Macon Telegraph .....(S)	21,837	.06	.06
*Savannah Morning News .....(M&S)	20,875	.055	.05
KENTUCKY.
*Lexington Leader .....(E)	15,621	.05	.05
*Lexington Leader .....(S)	15,566	.05	.05
Louisville Herald .....(M)	43,629	.09	.09
Louisville Herald .....(S)	55,572	.09	.09

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
NORTH CAROLINA.
*Asheville Times .....(E)	6,683	.04	.04
*Asheville Citizen .....(M)	10,280	.045	.045
*Asheville Citizen .....(S)	8,932	.045	.045
*Durham Herald .....(M)	6,495	.04	.04
Greensboro Daily News.....(M)	18,643	.05	.05
Greensboro Daily News.....(S)	26,112	.06	.06
*Raleigh News and Observer.....(M)	24,005	.06	.06
*Raleigh News and Observer.....(S)	28,190	.06	.06
*Raleigh Times .....(E)	8,203	.03	.04
SOUTH CAROLINA.
*Columbia State .....(M)	20,298	.06	.06
*Columbia State .....(S)	21,760	.06	.06
*Greenville News .....(M)	12,039	.04	.04
Greenwood Index Journal .....(E&S)	4,185	.025	.025
*Spartanburg Journal .....(E)	4,155	.04	.04
*Spartanburg Herald .....(M&S)	5,511	.04	.04
TENNESSEE.
*Chattanooga News .....(E)	20,731	.06	.06
*Chattanooga Times .....(M)	21,209	.07	.07
*Chattanooga Times .....(S)	23,053	.07	.07
Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(M)	83,113	.16	.15
Memphis Commercial Appeal.....(S)	110,907	.19	.18
*Nashville Banner .....(E)	41,700	.07	.07
*Nashville Banner .....(S)	42,931	.08	.08
VIRGINIA.
‡Bristol Herald Courier.....(M&S)	7,336	.04	.04
Danville Register and Bee.....(M&E)	11,992	.045	.045
Newport News Times-Herald.....(E)	9,041	.05	.05
Newport News Daily Press.....(S&M)	6,051	.05	.05
*Roanoke Times & World-News.(M&E)	21,420	.07	.06
*Roanoke Times .....(S)	14,560	.07	.06

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

‡Includes Bristol, Tenn.

††Publisher's Statement for July, 1922.

The Print Paper Situation

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS will have themselves largely to blame for higher prices if they permit themselves to be stampeded by the scheming manufacturers and jobbers.

There is absolutely no justification for present efforts for higher prices any more than for higher prices to labor.

The smoke screen is created so as to produce a continuance of the present contract price of 3½ cents and perhaps increase it to 3¾ cents.

Hold down consumption to the lowest possible point!

Refuse to sign contracts in blank!

As soon as our friends find they cannot sell on their terms they will sell on ours, so long as what we are willing to pay means cost plus a reasonable profit.

The European supply is not cornered, as some of our friends seem to think. Just as soon as manufacturers over there realize the true situation they will offer increased tonnage direct.

Abundant foreign tonnage is offered in the spot market at prices just under those demanded by manufacturers and speculators.

Thousands of tons have gone into warehouses at about $70 a ton which those hoarding it expect to sell at from $80 or $90 per ton, but which eventually will be sold for $65 to $70, and represent added loss for storage, handling, insurance and interest.

There is no cause for alarm.

There is plenty of paper.

The dealers, noting that publishers were wasteful with paper at 3½c mill, naturally would like to market their product a bit higher.

Some of the big users are going crazy in their wastefulness, but we can expect no co-operation from them. They did not co-operate in 1917 or in the years that followed, and will not now.

JASON ROGERS,
Publisher,
THE NEW YORK GLOBE

New York, September 13, 1922

THIS ISSUE: PROPAGANDISTS FEED NEW FIRES OF WORLD HATE

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.]

Vol. 55. No. 17 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

Where Most Books Are Sold

is a good place to sell more books

In the Chicago market, for example, publishers have learned that the most popular and effective avenue of distribution is through The Wednesday Book-Page of The Chicago Daily News.

With its yearly daily-average circulation of 401,698—1,200,000 readers daily—The Daily News "saturates" Chicago and its suburbs, journalistically, as does no other medium. And The Wednesday Book-Page of The Daily News is a Chicago institution. Wednesday in Chicago is "Book-Page Day."

The Daily News Book-Page commands that lively reader-interest, reader-confidence that impels buying decisions. The logic of this has been successfully demonstrated in practice. In the amount of book advertising carried by Chicago newspapers The Daily News leads the field continuously.

Here are the figures on book lineage for the first eight months of the year 1922:

		Comparison
The Chicago Daily News	90,416 lines	90,416 lines
The Post	52,057 lines	52,057 lines
The Daily Tribune	15,363 lines
The Daily Herald-Examiner	1,087 lines
The Journal	641 lines
The American	57 lines
SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS
The Sunday Tribune	32,065 lines
The Sunday Herald-Examiner	13,013 lines
The Daily News' excess over the next highest score, that of The Post		38,359 lines

Further emphasizing the established and increasing leadership of The Chicago Daily News in this field is the fact that for the months of May, June, July and August, 1922, The Daily News printed 6,359 more lines of book advertising than ALL other Chicago newspapers, daily and Sunday combined.

The Chicago Daily News

FIRST IN CHICAGO

First Order, December, 1921—

First Repeat Order, August, 1922—

15 more

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

General Offices, 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

548 Rand McNally Building, Chicago
301 Glaslyn Building, Memphis

560-A Howard Street, San Francisco
Canadian Agents, Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.

British Branch: Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, Kings Cross, London, W. C. I.

OHIO RANKS FIRST
AMONG THE LEADERS

FIRST IN NUMBER OF LARGE CENTERS

Ohio leads all other states in the number of large centers, having five cities with a population of 200,000 or over, and ties one state with seven cities having over 100,000 population.

FIRST IN BUILDING LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

Ohio leads all other states in the growth and development of Building and Loan Associations which boast of a larger membership than those of any other state.

FIFTH IN RAILROAD MILEAGE

Ohio is the fifth state in the Union in mileage of steam railways and second in mileage of electric railways.

SECOND IN AUTOMOBILES OWNED

Ohio ranks second to New York in automobile registration, having 742,000 automobiles.

FIRST IN MONEY SPENDING

From the standpoint of spending money per capita, for motor cars, Ohio ranks first. There is one motor car for every 7.7 persons in Ohio.

FOURTH IN POPULATION

Five per cent of the population of the United States is included in this Ohio territory, or 5,769,368 persons—more than 80% of which are native-born whites.

FIRST AS A MARKET

Ohio answers first as a market, making it an ideal try-out proposition for national advertising campaigns. Ohio newspapers cover the cities and towns and the country round about and ultimately find their way into every home.

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Akron Beacon Journal	(E)	35,904	.085	.085
*Akron Times	(E)	19,518	.06	.06
*Akron Sunday Times	(S)	21,952	.07	.07
*Athens Messenger	(E)	9,775	.03	.03
Bellefontaine Examiner	(E)	4,407	.0179	.0179
Cincinnati Enquirer	(M&S)	73,120	.17-.35	.17-.35
Cleveland Plain Dealer	(M)	181,185	.32	.38
Cleveland Plain Dealer	(S)	221,084	.37	.43
Columbus Dispatch	(E)	72,317	.15	.14
Columbus Dispatch	(S)	74,654	.15	.14
Conneaut News Herald	(E)	3,094	.017	.0179
Dover Daily Reporter	(E)	4,410	.02	.02
*Hamilton Daily News	(E)	8,143	.04	.04
Ironton Irontonian	(M)	3,150	.0179	.0179
Kenton Democrat	(E)	2,400	.014	.014
*Lima News and Times-Democ't	(E&S)	16,083	.07	.05
*Lima Republican-Gazette	(M&S)	10,270	.035	.035
*Marietta Times	(E)	6,160	.025	.025
Middletown Journal	(E)	5,037	.025	.025
Newark American-Tribune	(E)	6,573	.025	.025
Piqua Call and Press-Dispatch	(E)	6,039	.025	.025
Portsmouth Sun and Times	(M&E)	16,286	.06	.06
Portsmouth Sun-Times	(S)	10,059	.04	.04
*Toledo Blade	(E)	95,683	.25	.23
Toronto Tribune	(E)	1,092	.011	.011
Warren Daily Chronicle	(E)	6,405	.025	.025
*Youngstown Vindicator	(E)	24,063	.07	.07
*Youngstown Vindicator	(S)	25,220	.07	.07

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, April 1, 1922

Do You Sell Through Drug Stores?

There are 1,098 in

Philadelphia

194 of the retail druggists of Philadelphia were asked to recommend the best newspaper for an advertising campaign for a high-class toilet article.

139 of these druggists recommended The Bulletin. The others divided their votes among the five other Philadelphia newspapers.

In Philadelphia there are about 400,000 separate dwellings, housing a population of close to 2,000,000. Each Philadelphia drug store therefore serves on an average the families in 364 dwellings.

The Bulletin each day goes into nearly every home in Philadelphia and its suburbs.

If your sales outlet is through the drug stores, you can get greatest efficiency from your advertising in Philadelphia and suburbs if you place it in The Bulletin.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Bulletin

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is one of the largest in America.

A. B. C. report of net paid daily average circulation for six months ending March 31, 1922—494,499 copies a day.

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.,
681 Market Street

LONDON
M. Bryans,
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
J. J. E. Hessey,
5 rue Lamartine (9).

(Copyright 1922, Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 6,300

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday preceding the date of publication—by the Editor and Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Branch Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Vol. 55 NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1922 No. 17

PROPAGANDISTS FEED NEW FIRES OF WORLD HATE

Onward March of the Turks in Near East Brings a New Responsibility to American Editors Unequaled Since 1914—Self-Restraint Is Greatest Need

By Dr. WILLIAM T. ELLIS

EDITORIAL NOTE—Dr. Ellis is probably the best known and the best informed of all American writers on Near East problems. His charges and warning are based upon personal experience extending over a period of many years as a newspaper correspondent in the present area of action.

JUST now America is in the same situation with respect to the conagration in the Near East that she was ı with regard to the world war in the ıid-summer of 1914. Cross-currents of umor and propaganda then so distorted ıe actual news that the average reader ras more likely to be guided by his rejudices and sympathies than by the acts of the case, which were as closely eiled as a Moslem pasha's wife.

Since the Turkish question as it exists t present may quite easily be the preminary stage of a world cataclysm as errible as that precipitated by Austria's ltimatum to Serbia, it behooves Amer-a to read the cablegrams with discriminating eyes. This is an hour for emocracy to manifest the sound comıon sense of a self-restrained and self-overning people.

It is altogether likely that our nation ıay ere long be called upon to make omentous decisions as to its own course this new international upheaval; so l our traditional qualities of hard-eadedness will be needed. Nervous and ntimental folk will soon be clamoring r Government action along the line of eir predispositions.

Right here enters the question of the ewspaper's duty as a purveyor and inrpreter of events. Without bias and ithout passion, the press should present e facts in the case, in full proportion ad in due relation to history and to ther world affairs. This is a good time r editorial writers to get down their bbon and to take up their Wells. 'gnorance is the one unpardonable sin" especially in a newspaper man standing the bridge of the ship of human stiny.

Charles A. Dana's never-old rule for ws collecting should be pasted anew er every editor's desk, as this difficult ear Eastern situation comes to the re—"See both sides and get all the cts." Quick and powerful and subtle encies are at work to pervert the publ vision into seeing only one side and tting only partial facts. No sensible itor can overlook the fact that there e several groups of propagandists dilintly operating to color the news from sia Minor according to their own inrests. They have been at it ever since armistice; and they are skilled and ompt and efficient. It is the hard task editor and reader to distinguish beeen what is propaganda and what is saight news—especially at a time when public is eager for every line that n be printed upon the momentous and gic events in Turkey.

One or two illustrations from late disches will make clear this point. hens reported last week 120,000 Chrisns massacred in Smyrna. That statent naturally got into the headlines, and erica gasped with horror. In the it of the consistent experience of the blic with Athens since the war, this ws should be accepted with reservans; although it has neither been de-d or corroborated. Every attentive der of foreign cablegrams knows that close and rather reckless censorship maintained at the Greek capital. It suppresses and colors news according to the interest of the government. Greece simply does not comprehend the Western viewpoint of "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

So we should await explicit substantiation from official American sources of the dreadful details of the burnings and massacres at Smyrna. We do not know yet who started the fires and who did the killing. Already it is clear, from the silence of Smyrna dispatches on the point, that the wild tale from Athens was not true. Admiral Bristol, who is a genius at getting to the bottom of things in Turkey, will tell Washington the truth in due time.

Not that the Turks are incapable of massacre on so vast a scale. The whole world knows better. Several times 150,000 Christians were done to death by the Turks in the recent Armenian massacres and deportations. The bloody Turk is a past master at the trade of killing non-Moslem subjects and neighbors. His record makes him rightly suspect in any case. Nevertheless, Americans want to give even the devil his due; so they desire the ascertained facts before they believe any of the loosely-flung atrocity charges. A half-dozen American newspaper correspondents in Smyrna at the present time would do a priceless service to history and to international decisions.

American editors can scarcely escape taking the position that their public demands American news from American sources. War experience has shown that foreign news agencies and foreign correspondents cannot avoid news coloration. We have had overmuch experience of American papers carrying as news, or "special correspondence," the raw and unconcealed propaganda of foreign nations. This matter is a theme for an article by itself; but the conclusion is pertinent in connection with the Near Eastern crisis, that the only news upon which America can surely depend, is that which is written by the typewriters of American correspondents or officials actually upon the scene.

As full experience under many and varied tests has proved, the American newspaper man may be trusted to tell the truth, fully and fearlessly, about nations, causes and events. He may sometimes be inadequately informed, or lack a background of sufficient preparation, so that his dispatches are not always well proportioned. But he is not venal; there are no strings to him. He plays no favorites in the news. His ingrained sense of fairness makes him the world's most efficient purveyor of news. The time has come when the great press associations, as well as the biggest newspapers, should have their own trusted American correspondents at every news center in Asia and Europe. The admirable Associated Press service from the near East indicates that it has "put none but Americans on guard."

Charles A. Dana's never-old rule for news collecting should be pasted anew over every editor's desk, as this Near Eastern situation comes to the fore—"See both sides and get all the facts." Quick and powerful and subtle agencies are at work to pervert the public vision into seeing only one side and getting only partial facts.
—William T. Ellis

This photograph was taken at Cairo. At Dr. Ellis' right is General Lord Allenby of the British Army.

I have mentioned the Athens censorship. Greeks are not the only offenders in this matter of playing with the truth. For downright audacity and brazenness I think that, in all my personal experience as a foreign correspondent, the palm must go to Rustem Bey, in Constantinople, the former Turkish Ambassador to the United States to whom President Wilson gave his walking papers—although the Armenian Catholics of Cilicia ran him a close second in asking me to accept his episcopal assurance in a matter of "massacre" statistics in Aleppo, where, by official American and British figures, he was wrong in the proportion of one thousand to forty-eight. Old Rustem Bey, in a Constantinople club, once pledged me his sacred word of honor, and gave me a typewritten document to back his declaration, that over a million and a half Moslems had been massacred by the Armenians during and immediately after the war. When I could not conceal my amusement and disbelief, he at first tried to assume an attitude of affronted dignity; but evidently thought better of it, recalling, from his Washington days, that American newspaper men are "from Missouri."

Perhaps I should not be too severe on the jobless ambassador; for within a month I was "officially" supplied with "ethnographic maps" of the Near East, by three Government representatives, each "scientifically" proving that the other claimants for territory were complete prevaricators. Especially in the Orient it is well to heed the American humorist's injunction, "It's better not to know so many things than to know so many things that ain't so."

Levantine peoples are not the only ones who muddy the streams of information. Great Britain, France and Italy all maintain at Constantinople censorship over Mediteranean news. They have never subscribed to the doctrine that international affairs are the concern of all nations, and that the bald truth about them should be public property.

Within the past few days some American papers have carried a lengthy interview with Gen. Townshend, whom the Turks disastrously defeated at Kut-el-Amara. In this interview, given in Paris, the general voices strong pro-Turkish and anti-Allied views, supporting Mustapha Kemal Pasha's extreme claims, and sensationally predicting a "holy war" throughout the Moslem world. Apparently the correspondent who wrote this interview neither reads the British newspapers nor is at all familiar with the inside of events in Turkey during or since the war. Gen. Townshend's utterances and actions, following his capture, have been so erratic that the British Government forbade his going to Angora; and since his recent defiant visit there, the English press has openly declared that he would be disciplined upon his return home, since he is still technically in the British army.

The most charitable explanation of General Townshend's incomprehensible statements and actions concerning Turkey, both while he was a prisoner and

(Continued on page 37)

NO ANTI-AMERICAN FEELING IN ENGLAND, MANCHESTER EDITOR ASSURES US

J. J. O'Neill, Director of Guardian, Visiting New York, Says Great Hope of His Country Is for American Co-operation in Reconstructing War Hammered Europe

By ROSALIE ARMISTEAD HIGGINS

AMERICANS whose feelings have been badly ruffled by the several unkind remarks about the part of the United States in the World War credited to Rudyard Kipling by Clare Sheridan, should meet J. J. O'Neill, director of the Manchester Guardian, who is visiting New York on his first holiday in nine years, though he has been here in that period on purely business trips.

An alert, responsive young Englishman, this side of forty I should say, he is so sincere and straightforward in his manner and so interesting in his conversation, that a chat with him was a real pleasure. In appearance he is tall and well built, with blue eyes, light hair and a most pleasing smile. He met me with such cordial kindliness, that he immediately seemed like an old friend.

Mr. O'Neill's attitude is so vastly and entirely different, and his appreciation of America and his love for Americans so keen, that one feels after meeting him, that it matters little what Kipling and a few other people may think. When I saw Mr. O'Neill a few days ago I immediately asked him for his opinion of Kipling's remarks.

"I am astonished at the prominence given Mr. Kipling's utterances by the press," said Mr. O'Neill. "Kipling stands for nothing in the England of today, and if he had not written the "Recessional," would have been forgotten long ago. His other poems remind me of the gay, white lights of Broadway or of glittering tinsel; they shine, but when you delve underneath you find nothing worth while. Politically, Kipling has no sense and is a political nonentity. He is typical of a narrow type which one finds in every country, a type that says 'English soldiers are the best soldiers in the world, English women are the most beautiful women in the world; English dogs are the best dogs in the world; Brittania rules the waves.' Of course that attitude is ridiculous.

"Thinking opinion in England," continued Mr. O'Neill, "believes that America entered the war at the right moment, and the only regrets English Liberals have is that American participation in the work of making world peace is not so active and so militant as it was in making victory in the field.

"There is no use denying the fact that American co-operation is absolutely essential in the re-construction of the war-hammered world, and as an Anglo-Irishman, with many American connections, I hope soon to see your great nation with a hand on the helm. There is no anti-American feeling in England today. The Irish settlement wiped out many old feuds, and the Irish in Great Britain are working hard today for Anglo-American Unity in world politics. I regret to see that the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill has been passed, for I think it will be bad both for your country and for other countries doing business with you. For instance, I have a friend from Belfast who has been sending between two and three million dollars worth of the finest linens here, each year, but he told me yesterday that he felt that he would have to seek other markets."

In response to my request that he tell me something of his own newspaper, the Manchester Guardian, and something of newspaper workers in England, Mr. O'Neill replied. "The Manchester Guardian, which is 102 years old, I can say without fear of contradiction, is the greatest political and commercial newspaper in English, and Manchester is as you know in the very heart of the commercial district. C. P. Scott has been our editor for 52 years, and at the age of 76 is regarded as a very remarkable man. The Guardian confines itself to the publishing of industrial and commercial news, and uses nothing sensational. We use no stories of divorce suits, except in the case of someone extremely prominent, and then perhaps we would carry two or three lines.

"Do we have a woman's page? Yes, I am sorry to say we do, as two of the other directors thought it a good idea. I have never seen why women should be set aside and given a special page. I think it rather a slur on their intelligence to give them just one page, out of we'll say a thirty-two page newspaper, just as if they could not understand and appreciate the political and industrial news of the day, just the same as men do. And after all, I do not think it the business of a daily newspaper to teach a woman how to make marmalade, or to select the furnishings of her home. No, I do not think that is our mission," Mr. O'Neill said with a hearty laugh.

"What do you think of women in the newspaper field, both in news and advertising?" I asked Mr. O'Neill. His reply came instantly. "I think they are fine splendid workers and their employment is certainly on the increase. Some of our very best writers are women. Your question suggests to me, a woman whom I think is one of the most competent advertising people in England, and notice that I say people. She was until recently, Miss E. M. Seyer, managing director of the A. J. Wilson Agency, in London, one of the best known agencies in our country. Mr. Wilson who is at the head of the agency bearing his name is a very clever man also, but I think the cleverest thing he ever did was, when he found Miss Seyer so utterly and completely indispensable, to persuade her to become Mrs. Wilson. Of course newspaper work for women is not as far advanced in England as it is in the United States, and I believe that the average Englishman rather objects to having a woman reporter come to interview him; he prefers a man. If he has nothing to give out to the public, instead of meeting her and refusing, of course, courteously, he is more than apt to excuse himself. However, as more women are coming on the staffs of our English newspapers each day, he is getting over that. In addition to the Manchester Guardian, we publish several other newspapers. The Manchester Guardian Weekly is published every Friday, and it may surprise you to know that we have an American circulation of 9,000.

"It is a weekly digest of the news and comment of the Guardian, without any attempt to embellish with features, and voices the liberal thought of England.

"Also weekly we publish, 'The Manchester Guardian Commercial, which is a weekly world review of industry, trade and finance.

"We also issued a monthly, 'Reconstruction in Europe,' of which John Maynard Kaynes, well known in the United States, is editor. It started publication on April 20, 1922. The purpose of the Reconstruction Number is to present an assemblage of facts and opinions, international in their origin, and to help in the process of reconstructing Europe in every possible way. In other words, we offer it as a forum to Europe."

Mr. O'Neill paid a high tribute to the National Union of Journalists in England, saying that he thought it was an excellent and necessary organization. "I can see something besides the publisher's side" he said, "for I have filled almost every position on a newspaper including that of reporter, linotype operator and advertising manager. This association fixes a minimum wage of about $40 a week, which I think would be equivalent to $70 in New York, as it is so much more expensive to live here."

"I think it would be a splendid thing for the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held in London in 1924, and I hope that it will be held there. For four or five hundred of your bright advertising men and women to go to London, would help English advertising as you are much further advanced than we are, and doubtless, they too, will bring back with them some worth while ideas."

Mr. O'Neill is spending a few days in Washington and has also visited Montreal. He will return to New York for a brief visit, sailing on the Aquitania on October 3, for his home.

"Thinking opinion in England believes that America entered the war at the right moment, and the only regrets English Liberals have is that American participation in the work of making world peace, is not so active and so militant as it was in making victory in the field."

—J. J. O'Neill.

Receiver to Sell Ohio Paper

The Bellefontaine (Ohio) Index-Republican, an evening paper, is to be sold by J. C. Martin, receiver for the paper. He has filed a petition with the court for authority to have the property appraised and E. E. Rutledge, Don C. Bailey and P. W. Carter have been appointed to make the appraisal. The Index-Republican has outstanding against it bills amounting to $18,000. The receiver has incurred liabilities of approximately $5,700. The court has ruled that the receiver may sell the paper at private sale, providing the amount realized is not less than two-thirds of its appraised value.

Times Starts House Organ

"Times Topics" is the title of the new house organ of the New York Times, which has just made its appearance. It is eight pages and carries a number of rotogravure pictures interesting to the Times family.

NEW YORK PAPERS TALK PAPER ECONOMY

Two Meetings This Week Show Deep Interest in Cutting Waste, But No Plan Has Yet Been Effected

New York city newspaper publishers are awake at last to the dangers involved in the consumption of newsprint paper on the scale that was brought out in EDITOR AND PUBLISHER for September 9 and September 16. They held two meetings this week, one on Monday and one on Wednesday, the latter bringing out the best attendance that the local association meetings have seen in several months. Far more interest was shown than at past meetings on the subject. This meeting was attended also by William B. Bryant of the Paterson Press-Guardian, chairman of the committee on conservation of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association.

Agreement was general at both meetings that the scale of newsprint consumption of the past few months must be curtailed, but no plan has yet been worked out for the attainment of this end. Among the remedies suggested are the complete abolition of such return privileges as now prevail and limitation upon news and feature matter, but final decision has been reached on neither.

PLAN RELIEF OF CAR SHORTAGE

Pulp and Newsprint Shipments from Canada Hampered

Plans for relief of the car shortage situation in Canada, which is seriously interfering with the movement of wood pulp into the United States were discussed in Washington this week by representatives of the Canadian railroads and Interstate Commerce Commission and officials of the car service section of the American Railway Association.

The delegation of the Canadian railroad officials composed of C. P. Ridd Canadian Railway Association; C. Moore, Grand Trunk System; Geor P. Clark, Canadian National Railwa and A. Hatton, Canadian Pacific Ra road, explained to the American autho ties that the embargoes, priorities a other restrictions which had been plac on the movement of freight and handling of cars on American roads, the result of the shopmen's strike, h worked to prevent a return to the Ca dian roads of thousands of Canad cars. The Canadian roads now are f ing their heaviest freight season app ciably short of cars, and unless th rolling stock, now in the United Stat is released from the American railw jam, the movement of grain from Northwest and the movement of wo pulp and print paper into the Uni States would suffer materially.

L. M. Bett, of American Railway A sociation, with whom the Canadians cussed the situation at length, expres the opinion that substantial relief co be given in a short time.

Stuart Leaves Daily Mail

Sir Campbell Stuart, managing direc of the London Times, has resigned fr the management of the Daily Mail will devote all his efforts to the Tim He was the only director whom the newspapers had in common.

Polachek Again With Hearst

Victor Polachek is again a member the Hearst organization. About a mo ago he retired from the paper busin He is now in general charge of pro tion for the Sunday edition of the C cago Herald and Examiner.

Gov. Patterson in Journalism

Malcolm R. Patterson, former gover of Tennessee, has joined the staff of Memphis Commercial Appeal and wil political editorials and special article state and national character.

NEWSPAPER ADS ARE THE BATTLEFIELD IN SEVERAL MARKET FIGHTS

lational Advertisers Present Their Own Case and Rebut the Claims of Competitors in Campaigns Now Waging in Soap, Toilet Articles and Canned Food Fields

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

EDITORIAL NOTE—This is the tenth of a series of articles by Mr. Franklin on important hases of creating sales through newspaper advertising, based on studies of methods and results current successful local sectional and national users of newspaper advertising. Readers of DITOR & PUBLISHER who know the facts behind noteworthy efforts are invited to send them to r. Franklin, care of EDITOR & PUBLISHER. Suggestions and comments are invited. The next rticle of the series will appear in an early issue. Look for it.

A GROCER in a small city put up a sign in his window, "There are o street-dust, grime and germs on our uit. We protect it by keeping it be- nd glass."

The owner of a fruit stand, a near-by ompetitor, retorting with indignation, osted this sign: "Where does fruit ow? Outdoors!"

A miniature advertising "war" fol- lowed.

There are now several interesting ad- rtising "wars" in progress, in which nional advertisers are figuring and in hich copy is being used most ingen- icsly to meet claims of competitors. aying it with newspaper space" takes tl place of bows and arrows, bullets a hatchets of the skirmishes in which ir ancestors engaged.

n fact, many men who in the olden d s would have found their "thrills" a adventure in the forests now have si ilar ones in modern business. Selling gds in person or through advertising quires a fighting spirit and brings with t situations which are analogous to those n he times when the battling was done l sically.

What is the modern manufacturer gng to do when he is attacked by claims o competitors which divert trade from i own brand? Usually, the process is o nswer these claims directly, do so in- li ctly or simply continue forcefully re- ating the selling points of his own n chandise, as he always has. It is a lecate problem, requiring discrimina- ic.

here are times when it is unwise for h manufacturer to deign to bother with e onding to counter claims. By ignor- a he establishes the fact that he re- als them as trivial. On the other a , persistent failure to meet points a ed by competitors in some cases would p ar to the public and the trade to be due to the fact that the claims cannot be countered.

Advertising, after all, is argumentation and debate, with persuasion and conviction harnessed to make people think in a definite way. Rebuttal has an important place in argumentation. Why should it not be used, when the occasion demands it, in a high grade way by the manufacturer? It is an unwritten rule, however, that competitors can never be concretely mentioned by name.

Good sportsmanship and fair play characterize the use of rebuttal in the advertising "wars" now merrily going on.

The most notable recent contribution to "advertising war" literature comes from that advertising veteran, Ivory Soap. For years Ivory Soap, with its slogan, "It floats," has been the subject of large-scale campaigning along what might be called sound, rather than dramatic lines. The Procter & Gamble Company has kept at it in season and out, with resulting large scale sales.

The increase in the number of complexion treatments and soaps being offered without doubt has caused many women buyers to judge the value of such preparations by their colorings or perfumes. This, the Procter & Gamble Company feels, is all wrong. It declares that a clean skin, safely made so by a white soap, is what is needed for healthful complexions.

Full page rotogravure advertising of an unusual nature is being used. The copy is unusually frank in getting at the heart of the question. It does not mention competitors, yet it makes its position unmistakable.

The most striking piece of copy has this heading: "Pink? Purple? Green? Yellow? White? What color should a soap have?" In that category is included the product of almost every competitor and its own.

Then comes this copy:

"Many women believe that color is an indication of certain inherent qualities in soap which add to the soap's value in cleaning, and even, perhaps, in medicating the skin.

"No!

"Color in soap may be entirely artificial and may be misleading if the purchaser attaches to it any other than a decorative significance. Dr. Pusey, one of the highest authorities on the care of the skin, says, 'The natural color of the best quality of toilet soap is a creamy white.' And another well known writer on health says that it is always best to avoid, or at least be wary of, any soaps which are dark colored or heavily perfumed.

"Ivory Soap has nothing to conceal. Therefore, because it is made of pure ingredients of the very highest quality, it is creamy white and delicately fragrant. Furthermore, Ivory Soap is offered for the single purpose of cleansing safely—and safe cleansing is the only good purpose for which any soap can or should be used.

"Safe cleansing is recognized, also, as the very finest and most direct aid to the beauty of the complexion. Ivory Soap cleanses safely because it is pure, mild and gentle. In its 43 years of honorable history, it has befriended the skin of millions of women and is found today in probably more homes, rich and poor alike, than any other soap made."

Above the main copy, at the left of the page, it is said:

"Lecturing to the mothers of the younger generation, Dr. Verity says that for their daughters' determination to try mothers themselves are partly to blame every new complexion 'method' and complexion 'preparation.'

"'You yourselves must remember,' he says, 'that a beautiful complexion is first and foremost a matter of cleanliness. Water and mild, pure soap are your best 'preparations.' A soap should be bought not to cure 'skin troubles,' or to perform miracles, but to clean—clean gently. If it does this, it does the very best that soap can do for the complexion. Tell your daughters that!'

"In public, Dr. Verity carefully avoids naming soaps, but mothers who ask privately for his recommendation will probably hear him say, 'Ivory.'"

Whimsical illustrations which have an English novel flavor are used through the series. In each advertisement, some selling is done for Ivory Soap Flakes.

Another piece of copy is headed, "How to care for the skin? Let this well-known physician answer," another "How a healthy skin may be made sick," still another, "What soap can do to promote beauty," etc.

As in argumentation, authorities are cited in this advertising rebuttal. Thus far, competitors have simply continued with their regular advertising without special reference to this barrage.

It should be mentioned that EDITOR & PUBLISHER'S position in this, as in all advertising "wars," is neutral. It in no case of this sort desires to comment on the merit of the argument on either side.

Another interesting situation has risen through a smaller "war" in the canned goods line. Some years ago the Gorton-Pew Fisheries at Gloucester, Mass., called in an advertising agency to make an investigation for it. This agency, after a careful analysis, recommended that the company place on the market a trade-marked ready-to-fry codfish cake. This was done in a number of localities through newspaper advertising, and considerable sales were rolled up as the work was carried on. After a time, however, other complications temporarily placed the Gorton-Pew Company in financial difficulties and precluded more advertising of the codfish cakes. The momentum of the previous advertising "carried on" for some time, however.

It came about that the William Underwood Company, always a large advertiser of Underwood's Deviled Ham, about this time placed on the market Underwood's "Simplifry" Codfish Cakes. Its copy showed the three simple steps, one of buying a can of the product, another in frying in hot fat, and the third in serving. It apparently was out in dead earnest to go after the market.

Since then, the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company has resumed the pushing of its ready-to-fry fish cakes and, consequently, what might be termed an advertising "war" is taking place, the significant thing being that both firms show their recognition of the need of newspaper advertising for winning and holding a market.

(Continued on page 36)

Copy used by William Underwood Company in race for a market.

A striking example of advertising argument causing wide comment, used by Rinso Soap in full page space.

Plain speaking adopted by Colgate to meet counter claims.

NO RULING MADE ON "BOGUS" SETTING BY I. T. U. CONVENTION

Lynch Withdrew Appeal from Decision of McParland—Union Will Aid Formation of Labor Party—Atlanta Next Rendezvous

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 18.—Politics, applied both in the sense of internal disputes over the administration of the organization and extending even to the administration of the country, was the outstanding feature of the convention of the International Typographical Union held at the Hotel Ambassador here last week.

The convention saw not only a battle royal between Conservative and Progressive within the ranks of the union with victory perching on the standards of the former, but also for the first time in its history saw the International Typographical Union enter the national political arena. The delegates heeding the call of other labor organizations voted solidly to have their craft represented at the council to be held in Chicago in January from which it is expected that the National Labor Party will issue. It is the first time in the history of the union that politics of this nature has gained a foothold.

What was forecast as to be the biggest battle of the convention did not materialize. This was the appeal of the Syracuse Typographical Union No. 55 from the decision of the Executive Council over the arbitrability of foreign advertising, a bone of contention for many years between publisher and union. Armed with briefs and believed to have the support of the conservative majority, James M. Lynch, a former president of the International Union came to Atlantic City to fight out the matter on the floor of the convention. The date for the hearing was set for Friday, the last day of the convention.

At the opening of the session Friday morning Lynch withdrew the appeal with the statement that he had just received word from Syracuse that "the publishers had capitulated" and that the differences were at an end. He stated that there were small matters to be threshed out, but predicted this would be done in short order.

No action as applied to changes in relation between the I. T. U. and the American Newspaper Publishers Association was taken nor was any even considered. The convention, however, voted to continue the battle for the 44-hour week in commercial shops.

In a supplemental report to the convention, the Executive Council took up the question of arbitration at considerable length. This report referred to the conference between the I. T. U. and A. N. P. A. representatives at Chicago on August 16 to discuss negotiations of a new arbitration agreement to replace the one which expired last April.

"No progress was made," says the report. "Publishers were insistent upon agreement by the International Typographical Union that all its laws be subject to arbitration without restriction except those laws relating to the employment of union men and the eight-hour day, alleging their inability to vary the instructions given by the convention of their association."

"The law to which they (the publishers) have particular objection is the reset law," continues the report after reciting the instructions given the A. N. P. A. representatives by their convention. "They were willing, however, to accept a priority law providing for a probationary period of 60 days during which all substitutes would be on an equality. They were also insistent that charges against foremen because of contract violations should be taken up not as against the individual but as against the publisher involved. Other changes of a minor nature were desired by them.

"Considerable debate took place as to the possibility of harmonizing the views of the contending parties regarding the reset law, but no conclusion was reached. The conference adjourned without setting a date for a future meeting."

The report likewise gives the following deductions made from newspaper arbitration scheule, International Arbitration Agreement.

Forty-one unions parties to the International Arbitration Agreement hold contracts which provide for the arbitration of a new contract as well as all arbitrable differences, also agree to a continuation of International Arbitration Agreement procedure in the event new agreement is not made.

Twenty unions, parties to the International Arbitration Agreement hold contracts providing for the arbitration of the same points as above, but make no provision for the continuation of arbitration after the expiration of the International Arbitration Agreement on April 30, 1922.

Seventeen unions parties to the International Arbitration Agreement have contracts providing for the arbitration of differences arising under the contract only, and provide for a continuation of the International Arbitration Agreement procedure in the event a new agreement is not made.

Seventy-five unions parties to the International Arbitration Agreement have provisions for the arbitration of differences arising under the contract only, but make no provision for the continuance of arbitration after the expiration of the International Arbitration Agreement.

Thirty-one unions who held International Arbitration Agreements with publishers, make no further provision for arbitration in wage contracts.

One hundred and eighty-four unions, therefore, were parties to the International Arbitration Agreement. (In addition to this 17 unions having provision for local arbitration only, specify that arbitration shall be in accordance with the International Arbitration Agreement, making this form of arbitration agreeable to 201 unions.)

Fifty-eight unions indicate a desire in their contracts for a continuation of the International Arbitration Agreement after its expiration April 30, 1922, by indicating a willingness to sign a new arbitration agreement if made.

In nine jurisdictions but one or two newspapers held the International Arbitration Agreement, but all other papers in such jurisdictions having contracts have provisions for International Arbitration Agreement procedure, in most instances holding joint contracts with the firm or firms parties to the International Arbitration Agreement.

LOCAL ARBITRATION

Eighteen unions have contracts providing for arbitration of all arbitrable differences, including a new contract.

Three hundred and twenty unions have contracts whose provisions require the arbitration of differences arising under the contract only, making

Three hundred and thirty-eight unions having provisions for local arbitration. Of these

Two hundred and twenty-five unions contented themselves with just the provisions for arbitration contained in the International form contract.

Five hundred and twenty-two unions have provisions of some kind in contracts for arbitration.

Eight unions have contracts providing for the settling of disputes by referring same to the Executive Council of the International Typographical Union.

Seventy-nine unions are bound by the provisions of their contracts to arbitration of new contracts in the event of failure to agree through conciliation.

Ninety-five unions have no provisions for arbitration at all.

Resolutions calling for the establishment of an I. T. U. school for machine operators failed of passage on the final day of the convention, as did a resolution establishing Indianapolis the permanent convention city, Atlanta defeating Chicago for the next gathering place.

New St. Louis Stereotype Contract

Slight increase in wages for stereotypers is provided in a new contract with the St. Louis newspaper publishers, which runs for two years from August 24, with provision of opening the wage agreement on 30 days' notice at the end of any year of the contract. The present scale for journeymen is $42 per week, day and night, and for apprentices $2.62 to $3.22 per day or night. Hours are 48 per week, day work, and 42 per week, night work. Under the previous contract, which expired March 19, 1921, the scale for journeymen was $41.30 per week, day and night, and for apprentices, $15.42 to $18.96 per week, day or night. Day hours were the same, but night work was formerly 43 hours.

BRITISH UNION LAYS TAXES ON PRINTERS WHO FLOUTED STRIKE ORDER

BRITISH union compositors have finally accepted the wage reduction awarded last July by the Industrial Court, the Typographical Association vote on the referendum being 14,983 to 5,483. The men returned to work before the results of the vote were known and they also voted to levy a tax of four shillings in the pound against members who remained at work during the strike period, July 29 to August 19. The tax applies not only to those who did not walk out but to those who returned to work at the reduced wage before August 17. It is intimated that failure to pay the levy will lay members open to ineligibility for benefits and to a fine.

The union agreed with the employing printers not to expel members who did not heed the strike order, but claim that this agreement does not hamper it from otherwise punishing printers who disregarded the orders of executive council.

The present scale, after the first two cuts of 3 shillings a week each ordered by the Industrial Court have been deducted, is as follows for English and Welsh cities (except London) and for Belfast, Ireland:

	Grade 1	Grade 2	Grade 3	Grade 4	Grade 5	Grade 6
HAND COMPOSITORS	s d	s d	s d	s d	s d	s d
Night News	100 6	97 6	94 6	91 6	87 6	85 6
Evening News	86 6	83 6	80 6	77 6	74 6	71 6
Job and Weekly News	84 0	81 0	78 0	75 0	72 0	69 0
MACHINE OPERATORS
Linotype, night	105 6	102 0	98 6	95 0	91 6	88 0
Linotype, day	95 0	91 6	88 0	84 6	81 0	77 6
Monotype, night	101 6	98 0	94 6	91 0	87 6	84 0
Monotype, day	92 6	89 0	85 6	82 0	78 6	75 0
*MACHINE MINDERS
Class 1	84 0	81 0	78 0	75 0	72 0	69 0
Class 2	87 0	84 0	81 0	78 0	75 0	72 0
Class 3	90 0	87 0	84 0	81 0	78 0	75 0
Class 4	94 0	91 0	88 0	85 0	82 0	79 0
Class 5	99 0	96 6	93 0	90 0	87 0	84 0
*ROTARY MACHINES
Class 1	101 0	98 0	95 0	92 0	89 0	86 0

This schedule is subject to further reductions, one of 3 shillings and one of 3 shillings sixpence during the next six months.

London book and job wages were being considered this week as EDITOR & PUBLISHER went to press. The union meeting had before it a proposition of the London Master Printers' Association that wages be reduced for all members of the union. The union has until five weeks from August 29 to ballot its members and reply to the employers' terms.

*Pressmen who are included in Typographical Association outside of London.

MONTREAL STRIKE AVERTED

Herald Non-Union, Star Arbitrating Gazette Wins All Points

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MONTREAL, P. Q., Sept. 18.—The situation between the local newspaper and typographical union No. 176, comprising the English-speaking printers, has been clarified on the following basis:

The Herald has broken all relations with the typographical union and is now running a non-union shop.

The Gazette has won all its points of dispute with the union, including one that permits employment of a non-union foreman and the interchange of type between the newspaper and job composing rooms. The latter has been an open shop since the 44-hour week strike started last year.

The Star will arbitrate the proposals presented by the union, as after a long period of refusal the union agreed to arbitrate all differences which cannot be settled by conciliation.

The scale is $38 for a week of 4[illegible] hours and for night work $42 for [illegible] hours. The Star is paying $38 for a 44-hour week, day scale. The three French daily papers have signed a two-year contract with the union at $38 for a 48-hour week. This is an increase of $2 a week over the previous scale, but really only $1 as the French papers have been paying $37.

Raise for Louisville Pressmen

A three-year agreement, dated September 4, 1921, has been concluded between Louisville publishers and the pressmen, with a provision for opening the scale on 30 days' notice prior to September 4, 1923. It provides the following scale for both day and night work: Foremen, $46 per week; assistant foremen, $43 per week; pressmen-in-charge, $40 per week; journeymen $37; flyboys, $18 to $24 per week. Forty-eight hours, day, and 43 hours, night, constitute a week's work. The previous contract, which ran from September 4, 1920, to September 4, 1921, provided the rates: Foremen, $42; assistant foremen $39; pressmen-in-charge, $36; journeymen, $33. Publishers were paying a bonus of $3.69 a week above this scale to journeymen, and it is understood that similar bonuses were paid to the others.

Herman Is Cincinnati Arbitrator

Cincinnati newspaper publishers and the typographical union have agreed upon Garry Herrman, owner of the Cincinnati baseball club, as arbitrator in their wage dispute. Journeymen printers, who received $45 a week for day work in 1919-1920 and have been getting $51.75 for the last two years, now demand $60 a week, which, if granted, would make their scale the highest in the United States. The publishers are offering $48. The present night scale for journeymen is $48.30, the union demands $57 and the publishers are offering $45, which is $3 a week more than the scale under the 1919-1920 contract.

Edmonton Pressmen's Pay Cut

A new contract between newspaper publishers and their pressmen in Edmonton, Alta., provides a scale of $44.625 per week night work and $41.625 for day work from August 27, 1922, to November 27, 1922, and $43 per week night work and $40.50 a week day work from November 27, 1922 to May 27, 1923. This is a reduction of $3.375 per week for the first period and a further cut of $1.125 for the second period.

Greenville Press Scale Changed

Greenville (S. C.) newspapers and their pressmen have agreed for one year from September 2 on a new wage scale. Pressmen will receive $49 per week night work and $45 for day work.

(Continued on page 25)

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

"Ah, there was a ship," said E. W. Scripps (center, upper left), of West Chester, Butler County, Ohio, whose newspapers dot the United States as he turned to W. H. Gauntlet, of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company, while waiting for the launching of his new yacht Ohio at Newport News last Saturday. Robert W. Scripps, editorial director of the Scripps-McRae Newspapers is paying apt attention. The Ohio (below) in point of displacement and tonnage will be the largest American built Diesel yacht. Her length over all is 172 feet, her beam is 26 feet, her draft 11 feet and 6 inches and she will have a cruising radius of 9,500 miles. Daniel H. Cox, of Cox & Stevens, was the designer. Miss Isabel Ferguson (insert), daughter of the president of the builders, broke "the bottle" over her bow.

Theodore Roosevelt once made a very telling remark about the size of American families. Friend W. Richardson, owner of the San Bernardino Daily Times-Leader and Berkeley Gazette, heeded. Look. He also worked steady for the success of the California Press Association, which he has headed for more than 20 years. Result: He is the outstanding candidate for governor of his home state.

Newspaper men and women from every part of British Columbia recently gathered in Victoria to dedicate a memorial tablet in the Parliament Buildings to commemorate their colleagues who fell in the war. Among those who attended were. Front row—(left to right) Hugh Savage, Vic Andrew, D. J. McTaggert, P. W. Luce, J. E. Norcross, H. P. Hodges, Sidney Scott, president of the B. C. Institute of Journalists; William Henderson, E. H. Lain Johnston, R. M. Eassie. Second row—F. J. Burd, E. B. Mahon, J. Francis Bursill, J. J. Fitzmaurice, Alex Eaton. Third row—J. Morton, Robert Dunn, A. R. Dingman, Frank Turner, Bruce Kenvin, Mrs. Hodges, R. T. Freeman. Fourth row—B. C. Nicholas, Robert Dunn, Jr., T. Harry Wilson, Charles L. Shaw, Norton F. Pullen, W. Bruce Hutchinson, Kenneth C. Drury, Harold B. McDonald. Fifth row—John Williamson, T. J. MacNamara, J. W. B. MacDougall, P. C. Rawling, Frank Hopwood, John Hickey.

It was a long, long time ago but what's the use of having a memory if we don't want to use it. Meet Fred Lockley (left), assistant publisher of the Oregon Journal and well known column conductor, who put in a great part of his time in the early nineties of the last century toting mail around Salem. Even then he shouldered a heavy load, we'll say.

"This Freedom" has not made much progress in the thought of La Crosse (Wis.) to date. We present Cora Marie Bangsberg (right), telegraph editor of the Tribune & Leader-Press. She qualified by holding down most of the other jobs on the paper.

Commercial Photo Service

POMP MARKS ENTRY OF THE JOURNALIST ASSIGNED TO CHINA

Foreign Newspaper Men Must Follow the Established Rules of Diplomacy to Be Received—Picking News from Idle Talk and Propaganda Hardest Job.

By JOHN R. MORRIS

[Far East Editor of EDITOR & PUBLISHER]

TOKYO, August 27.—"Chinese war lords will have their little jokes, and Chinese wars for the most part may be classified as such. I believe, however, that the last civil war, in which Wu Pei-fu wrested the supreme military power of the republic from Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian super-tuchun, was one of the most important events and one of the biggest stories for American newspapers that has broken in China since the Boxer uprising."

This is the front-page valuation placed upon the recent encounter under Peking's walls by Duke N. Parry, Peking correspondent for the Public Ledger Far East News Service, who covered the war and important events leading to its outbreak and who is credited with being very close to Wu Pei-fu, the victorious commander of the Chili troops. Mr. Parry is now in Tokyo on his way to the United States for a vacation. He has been in China since the first of the year, but formerly was in Tokyo on the staff of The Japan Advertisers and as representative here for the International News Service. It was while representing International in the Japanese capital last November 4, that he scooped the rest of the outside world by a good time margin on the assassination of Premier Hara.

"American news services and newspapers recognize today more than ever before the importance of Far Eastern news," Mr. Parry said. It has been only within the present year that the last of the nationally distributed American news services opened a bureau in Peking, but when the civil war began not only were these services all represented but many of the leading American newspapers had correspondents on the ground. Such a full representation of the American press was never known there before."

The life and work of a newspaper correspondent in Peking are not duplicated anywhere else in the world. Formality, which demands strict adherence to a fixed set of unwritten rules, is the first essential to successful reporting and newspaper men elsewhere may consider that it is carried to extremes in the Celestial City. The first-day duties of a newly-arrived correspondent require between two and three hundred visiting cards and the assistance of a fleet-footed rikisha-boy, for all officialdom must be informed of the new scribe's advent according to the rules. At the Foreign Office cards must be left for everyone from the Minister for Foreign Affairs down to the sixteenth secretary, and at each of the foreign legations, for instance, paste-boards must be deposited in the proper receptacles designated to receive them for from fifteen to twenty officials. Promptly the next day, all the officials thus notified send messengers carrying their own cards to the correspondent. Thus he may know that Peking has heard nothing before his arrival that will influence them against tipping him off on the next war.

Regular hours, from 11 to 12 each morning and from 2 until 3 in the afternoon, are set aside by Peking officials for the reception of newspaper men. Except during these periods it is practically impossible for a foreign correspondent to do any work outside his own office.

Peking, it is well known, is the perfect haven for the most accomplished gossips in the world. In the spacious lobby of the Grand Hotel de Pekin, at the Peking Club and at social functions here and there, the most detailed information regarding government policies or the future movement of this or that intriguing general is to be heard "from the most reliable sources." Foreign civilian residents of the capital are interested in the internal politics of the country to a remarkable degree, and all of them have what they consider the very last word in the way of confidential information.

Almost without exception, the hotel and dinner-party gossip is the fruit of a fertile imagination. And the vernacular newspapers of the city, Mr. Parry says, are quite as unreliable sources of daily information as the willing conversationalists with the "latest dope." All of the

Duke N. Parry

Chinese newspapers there are subsidized by one faction or another, he says, and the same applies to most of the city's five English-language dailies. It is an open secret that until recently many of the subsidized newspapers were paid regular allowances by various departments of the government. When Tung Kang became Minister of Finance a few months ago he attempted to stop this practice, but the combination against him was so strong that he succeeded only in reforming himself out of office.

Chinese government officials are extremely courteous, Mr. Parry said. They receive a correspondent as if he were a visiting diplomat, and an interview often brings forth more ceremony than information. On the whole, however, the officials higher-up have a high opinion of the value of news and do what they can to assist the foreign newspaper man.

Mr. Parry will return to the United States by way of the Suez and Europe, and after spending a short time in Eastern cities will go to his old home in Kansas City where he started newspaper work on the Kansas City Star. Frank H. Hedges, the Public Ledger's correspondent at Peking until last January is now back at his post there after seven months spent in Japan. Mr. Hedges came here to cover the visit of the Prince of Wales in Japan and in July returned to China with the party of Annapolis graduates of 1881, headed by Secretary of the Navy Denby.

PICK TEN BASIC BOOKS ON ADVERTISING

Prominent Men of This Field Prepare Their Own Lists for This Section of Hotel McAlpin Business Library

The 10 basis books on advertising What are they? The Hotel McAlpin in gathering its business library requested a number of prominent men in this field to compile a list from which the final selection for the hotel's library might be made. So far replies have been received from Stanley Resor, the J. Walter Thompson Company; Ernest Elmo Calkins, Calkins & Holden, Inc., New York; Walter W. Hoops, the Hoops Advertising Company, Chicago; G. B. Hotchkiss, head of the Department of Advertising and Marketing, New York University; and Robert Tinsman, president, the Federal Advertising Agency, New York.

Mr. Hotchkiss chose "Advertising, Its Principles and Practice," by Tipper, Hotchkiss, Hollingsworth & Parsons, the Ronald Press; "Advertising as a Business Force," by Paul T. Cherington, Doubleday Page & Co.; "Making Advertisements and Making Them Pay," by Roy S. Durstine, Charles Scribner's Sons; "The Advertising Handbook," by S Roland Hall, the McGraw-Hill Company; "A Short Course in Advertising," by A. F. Osborn, Charles Scribner's Sons; "Making Type Work" or "Effective Type-use for Advertising" both by Benjamin Sherbow, the Century Company; "The Art Appeal in Display Advertising," by Frank Alvah Parsons, Harper & Brothers; "The Business of Advertising," by Ernest Elmo Calkins, D. Appleton & Co.; "Typography of Advertising That Pays," by Gilbert P. Farrar, D. Appleton & Co.; and "Essentials of Advertising," by Frank Leroy Blanchard, the McGraw-Hill Company.

Mr. Tinsman's choice was: "Advertising as a Business Force," by Paul Cherington; "Making Advertisements," by Roy Durstine; "The New Business," by Harry Tipper; "The Typography of Advertisements," by Gilbert Farrar; "The Advertiser's Hand Book," by Roland Hall: "The Psychology of Advertising" by Walter Dill Scott; "Advertising—Selling the Consumer," by John Lee Mahin; "The Advertising Man," by Ernest Elmo Calkins; "Living the Creative Life," by Joseph Appell and "Selling Forces," the Curtis Publishing Company.

In making his choice Mr. Calkins selected the following books: "Advertising and Selling," by H. L. Hollingsworth D. Appleton & Co.; "Advertising as A Business Force," by P. T. Cherington Doubleday Page & Co.; "The Advertising Hand Book," by S. Roland Hall the McGraw-Hill Company; "Imagination in Business," by L. F. Deland Harper & Brothers; "Making Advertisements and Making Them Pay," by Roy S. Durstine, Charles Scribner's Sons; "A Short Course in Advertising," by A. F Osborn, Charles Scribner's Sons; "The Theory of Advertising," by Walter Dill Scott, Small Maynard & Co. (1913 edition); "Human Nature in Selling Goods," by J. H. Collins, Henry Altemus Company; "Selling Forces," by Richard J. Walsh, the Curtis Publishing Company; "Making Type Work," by Benjamin Sherbow, the Century Company.

Mr. Hoops' selection was: "The Advertising Hand Book," by S. Roland Hall; "The Art and Science of Advertising," by Ernest Elmo Calkins; "Marketing Problems," by M. T. Copeland and "Trade Marks," by Glen Buck.

Mr. Resor said: "It seems to me that the position of advertising cannot be understood at all unless one realizes how recent our present industrial era is and the conditions that preceded it. In 'The Evolution of Modern Capitalism' Hobson outlines the widespread changes which we have gone through and are still going through as clearly, I believe, as has been done anywhere.

"John Henry Buckle is, I understand questioned as an authority on history today, but in his 'Outline to the History of Civilization' he certainly makes definite contributions to lay thought concerning the uniformity of human decisions.

"The problem of the housewife, who is purchasing agent, or at least a big factor in the purchase of everything for the home, from food to doctors, toys, and cars, is very brilliantly sketched in 'The Backward Art of Spending' by Wesley Mitchell.

"I think that any library such as you refer to which did not include books of this kind would not get very far in any real study of marketing and advertising."

Norristown Herald Incorporates

The Norristown (Pa.) Herald has been incorporated as the Norristown Herald Printing and Publishing Company with a capital of $5,000. The incorporators are Ralph B. Strassburger, publisher of the Herald; Gilbert R. Jones, and William A. Ringler. Frederick S. Fox, formerly managing editor of the Reading (Pa.) News Telegram, is now managing editor of the Herald. J. P. McKinney & Son have been appointed national advertising representatives of the Herald.

All-Church Press Increase Stock

The All-Church Press, Dallas, Texas, publishers of the Dallas World, the Fort Worth Tribune, and the Houston Times, weekly religious papers, has voted to increase its capital stock from $50,000 to $150,000. The additional capital will be employed in enlarging the news service and in otherwise improving the quality of the publications.

8 Page Roto Section for Single A

The Houston Chronicle on September 14 issued an eight-page rotogravure section which was entirely given over to the advertisement of Henke & Pillot, grocers, to celebrate their golden anniversary.

MECHANICS OF JOURNALISM

NO subject is of greater interest to wide-awake editors and publishers than the mechanical problems of newspaper-making. To meet their many demands for information EDITOR & PUBLISHER will, beginning with its next issue, devote a large amount of space in the last number appearing each month to a discussion of mechanical progress.

The first mechanical number appearing next Saturday will contain a wealth of mechanical information of a nature that has never before been assembled in the trade field.

There will be a tabulation of United States and Canadian daily newspapers that will show column and page measurements; top, bottom, side and crotch margins; name, page capacity and production per hour of printing presses, newsprint, tonnage used, size of paper rolls and many other valuable facts, totalling twenty columns per page.

H. Frank Smith, widely known as an authority on typography, will have the first of a series of monthly articles on type dress.

S. P. Weston, expert on mechanical arrangement, will contribute a special article on the new plant of the New York Tribune.

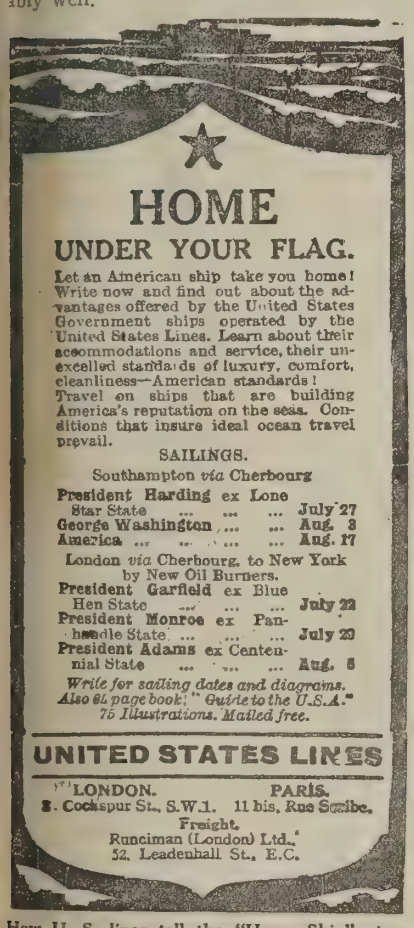
There will also be articles dealing with newspaper electrical equipment by the chief electrician of the largest newspapers in the country and another telling how they are training printers in the new Empire State School of Printing.

Remember the Mechanical and Equipment Number of

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

NEXT WEEK — ONCE A MONTH THEREAFTER

"HOME" IS THE KEYNOTE OF CAMPAIGN TO WIN AMERICANS TO U. S. SHIPS



United States Lines Are Making Patriotism Their Basis of Big Advertising Appeal Overseas and Are Attracting Wide Attention

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT

London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

LONDON, ENGLAND, Sept. 10.

ONE of the most interesting and unusual advertising campaigns ever seen in the British press is that now running in the name of the United States Lines. It is selling the United States Government ships to Americans in Europe as the means of returning home, and from all accounts is doing it remarkably well.

How U. S. lines tell the "Home Ship" story to Americans abroad.

An American abroad is an American still. Indeed, one might go farther and say that an American outside his own country is more an American than ever he personally demonstrates at home—animated by honest pride of his home town in particular, his own sphere of labor also, and his country in general, even though he will generously concede certain advantages to the land in which he finds himself a visitor. And, knowing this, the United States Shipping Lines operating the U. S. Government ships, are capitalizing the sentiment in an excellent advertising campaign aimed to interest Americans abroad in their own national ships.

The advertisements, which vary in size from two inches to five or more inches single column are arranged to appear in English dailes alongside the columns devoted to shipping news in order to catch the eyes of those Americans who consult these features for information as to sailings and mails. That they are successful in this respect at least is obvious from the fact that American visitors to London have called my attention to them in appreciative and prideful terms.

The copy used is based on the idea that to every American America is home and urges that on the ships of the United States Lines, under the American flag, from the moment the returning American sets foot on board, he is brought once again into the American home atmosphere, served according to the American standards of service luxury, comfort and cleanliness, served by Americans, enjoy the efficiency of the liners that are building America's reputation on the seas and so come home in a home afloat.

One typical advertisement may be quoted as an example. With the headline "Home! To America!" it addreses American eyes with the question "Does America mean Home to you?" and proceeds "Then find out about the splendid new ships of the great American fleet. Send your name and address today for the booklet especially prepared by the United States Government for prospective travellers. Learn about the giant of fleet ships that will take you home amid American luxury, American cleanliness; where you will be served by appearing during June, July and August, with the object of interesting returning Americans, reminding them that "it always seems good to be home" and emphasizing the "home feeling" on the United States Lines ships with congenial companions in American surroundings and American service.

American Ship Advertising in British Newspapers to Open U. S. Route to Far East

I am told that very great interest has been shown by Americans here in the advertising and that many, without preconceived plans for their departure, have been persuaded by it to return by these ships, in some instances deferring their sailing dates in order to do so.

As the season for returning draws nearer its end, the United States Lines are adapting their advertising to another phase of service, and are using larger spaces to develop their sailings to the Far East, suggesting the westward passage via New York, San Francisco to Yokohama through "the Sunshine belt" as against the all-Eastern route. In this series it is planned to secure passengers irrespective of nationality, so the "American home" idea is not necessary or suitable, but the pride of nationality still finds expression in the display line "On American Ships."

Following as this series does upon the Americans and enjoy an American atmosphere of Home that you will welcome anew after your travel in a foreign land." This is followed by a list of sailings for the ensuing three weeks and the offer of a 64-page book "Guide to the U. S. A." mailed free. The latter, of course, has an interest for intending visitors other than Americans, and in this way the advertising serves to obtain the attention of those to whom the American home note may not have a national appeal.

The advertising on these lines has been campaign to interest Americans abroad in their own shipping lines, the advertising has a special significance as showing that the U. S. Government-owned ships are being given a publicity abroad that should go far to secure for them an international reputation such as has been enjoyed by the lines of other nations in the past.

The advertising has, indeed, aroused considerable comment from both advertising men and the magnates of shipping circles in Europe.

COMMUNICATIONS TOP HONOLULU AGENDA

Pan-Pacific Commercial Conference in October Will Co-operate with Press to Increase Trans-Pacific News Dispatches

BY JOHN R. MORRIS

Far Eastern Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

TOKYO, August 30.—Alexander Hume Ford, chairman of the Pan-Pacific Union which fostered the organization of the Pan-Pacific Press Conference during the Press Congress sessions in Honolulu last fall, is now making a whirlwind tour of the Far Eastern countries completing preparations for the opening of a Pans - Pacific Commercial Conference in Honolulu late in October. The commercial conference, according to Mr Ford, will take up the all-important question of cable and wireless communication which drew concentrated attention at the newspaper men's meeting.

ALEXANDER H. FORD

"The subject of communications is close to the top on the agenda of the coming conference," Mr. Ford told EDITOR & PUBLISHER's Tokyo representative, "and this includes not only communication for commercial purposes but for the transmission of news messages as well.

"It is an unalterable fact," he said, "that commercial interests the world over are vitally affected by the means and the speed by which news is exchanged between nations. Without consideration for the desirability of international market quotations and current information on world trade conditions, the easy interchange of general news is beneficial to the business interests of all nations. For this reason, the leaders in the commercial circles of the Pacific who will meet within a few months at Honolulu will attempt to co-operate actively with the newspapers who are seeking to increase facilities for trans-Pacific news communication."

In Tokyo Mr. Ford conferred with prominent business men, financiers and newspaper publishers on subjects relating to the Pan-Pacific meeting and existing conditions under which telegraphic communication between Japan and the rest of the world is conducted. Yesterday he attended a luncheon given in his honor by Prince Tokugawa, who is president of the Pan-Pacific Association of Japan, the organization in this country which works in collaboration with the Pan-Pacific Union. Some of the most influential figures in Japan's business and official circles were present there and at a business meeting which followed the luncheon it was indicated that a fair-sized delegation of representative Japanese business men would be present at Honolulu in October.

The policies which will be considered in respect of improved means of commercial and news communication (improvement referring not only to speedier transmission but to reduced word rates as well) remain to be decided upon. Mr. Ford's personal opinion coincides with that of the newspaper publishers and news agency directors who would utilize the facilities of the Japanese and American navy radio stations until such time as the privately owned companies are prepared to perform the service efficiently and economically.

Virginia A. P. Service Started

A State bureau service for the benefit of Associated Press members in Virginia was inaugurated in Richmond, Va., on September 18. The service supplies both morning and afternoon papers on the A. P. circuit.

NO ADVERTISEMENT IS IMPOSSIBLE NOW IN THE NEWSPAPERS

Modern Methods Have Overcome Obstacles and Advertisers Quickly Make Their Market, New Advertising Book Proves

"TODAY IN THE NEWSPAPERS" is the title of a booklet of pithy advice to merchants and manufacturers which will appear about September 26 over the signature of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. Starting with the premises that "the vast majority of advertisers cannot profitably regard North America as a single market" and that "it no longer pays to look for business at points where it will not pay to advertise for it in the newspapers," the Bureau develops its theme with pointed text and illustrative illustrations, compiled largely by W. Livingston Larned. A chapter on "Marketing in Canada," by Arthur Partridge, manager of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association, follows Mr. Larned's articles and the booklet is concluded by an outline of the bureau's functions and a list of its membership.

William A. Thomson

Mr. Larned's articles bristle with quotable sentences on the new era in newspaper advertising. Some of them appear in the box on this page. His first chapter is headed "Newspaper Advertising's Rugged Aid for New-Born Products." In one month, he points out, in Eastern newspapers, there were 117 absolutely new articles advertised. All of them are selling now and this was less than six weeks ago. "Is that significant?" he asks: in view of the old "five or six years to a lifetime" for establishment of a product.

"Linit," a new laundry product, was put on the market in a little more than a week, through newspaper advertising, some examples of which are noted. Newspaper advertising of a new collar which was derided by the old-line manufacturers revolutionized the marketing of soft collars. When Borden's Malted Milk, a new product, was launched, newspaper advertising introduced it to the American public and it was an introduction acomplished in about two weeks. Teaser copy, an old device, has been developed and successfully used in several recent campaigns, Mr. Larned notes, both of new products and in stimulation of established lines. The policy of a toilet articles house in maintaining its old articles and bringing two or three new products a year before the public in newspaper advertising is also explained.

"New Techniques of Newspaper Illustration" are shown by Mr. Larned to have voided the old arguments against the effectiveness of newspaper advertising. By text and illustration he proves that all of the once-forbidden devices are now in common and effective use in newspaper copy, through careful study of correct methods of preparing art. He sets forth rules for this preparation and gives details on some trick processes which are not yet generally understood among advertisers. What technique can mean to the success of a campaign is brought out by reference to advertising of Lux, the United States Shipping Board, and community campaigns.

"Preferred position" means less than it did, he states, because almost any position in the paper is good when the advertisement is dressed up for company and is totally unlike its next door neighbors.

News as a factor in advertising is the subject of the next chapter, entitled "Strategy in the Newspaper Campaign," and it is developed more intensively in the following chapter. Mr. Larned is not an advocate of arbitrary settlement on a size, months in advance of the campaign, of a dozen pieces of copy and stubborn adherence to the schedule. "It is a lazy line-of-least-resistance. It is making it easy for a clerical force and making it harder for the advertising," he declares.

One house, he says, links the size of the advertisement to the importance of each message. "Along comes a really big idea with a big selling argument. It may be identified with current news. It may take advantage of a current condition. It may be a piece of copy made necessary and politically expedient by certain things that competitors are doing. As much space is taken as the character of the copy demands and deserves—a page or a double-spread, if justified by the magnitude of the idea."

"There will yet come a day when newspaper advertising will be constructed in units, and each campaign will be filled with local color," is Mr. Larned's prediction.

His advice that newspaper advertising should not be tied to a hard and fast schedule, but should be based wherever possible on the day's news is concluded with the following trenchant paragraph:

"Whatever you may manufacture, there comes a psychological hour when you can 'make a killing' in the newspaper field. The pendulum swings around to you. If you merely fill your regular space with conventional advertising, prepared long in advance, you are retarding the progress of all advertising and you are cutting a hole in your own purse."

The Canadian market is explained by Mr. Partridge. He gives late figures on distribution of population and purchasing power and points out the habits of mind of the Canadians and the great distances which separate East, Prairie and West which make the Canadian a pronounced newspaper reader and make the daily newspaper the closest of contacts with the market. Testimony of advertisers in the Canadian press is adduced, the market is analyzed geographically and according to newspaper rates and circulations, and statistical data covering the business of the last 20 years concludes the Canadian section.

Western Ad Golfers Play

The Western Advertising Golfers' Association held its penultimate tournament at Oak Park, Ill., September 13. Ray Maxwell won low gross and first flight prizes and Clare Maxwell the low net and second flight trophies. Ray had 39-41-40-120 for 27 holes, while Clare finished with a reduced card of 117. Winners and runners up in the flights were: First, Ray Maxwell and Roy Barnhill; second, Clare Maxwell and Franklin MacVeagh; third, H. S. Stevens and R. B. Johnston; fourth, R. K. Hanson and C. B. Goes; fifth, C. W. Wallace and J. A. Bender; sixth, Henry Dumont and R. W. Richardson; seventh, J. N. Raymond and E. G. Johnson; eighth, J. M. Bundscho and C. C. McKinney; ninth, Graham Stewart and T. J. Morris; tenth, Grey Sullivan and E. C. Bode; eleventh, Guy Pierce and J. N. Buchanan; twelfth, E. D. Wheeler and W. E. Farmiloe; thirteenth, F. J. Maxted and J. H. Lynch.

Ada News Sued for $25,000

The Ada (Okla.) News has been sued for $25,000 because it erroneously stated that a certain man had been arrested for drunkenness.

Sues Denver Herald

Suit has been filed against the Denver (Colorado) Herald for $500 by the American Type Founders Company.

BULLSEYES FOR THE NEWSPAPERS

THE vast majority of advertisers cannot profitably regard North America as a single market.

It no longer pays to look for business at points where it will not pay to advertise for it in the newspapers.

News is the best of all advertising. And the newspaper is the only outlet for it.

There is such a thing as having emergency advertising prepared in advance, covering a wide list of possible news events. Wise advertisers are doing this.

The newspaper does it now. Interest your reader and he calls at the store that same day or the next.

The successful newspaper campaign of today is master-generalled. No Napoleon, with his maps and his stick-pins before him, could go about the task ahead with more genuine strategy.

Newspaper advertising, in its art, has grown wonderfully, even marvelously fine.

You can tell nearly any advertising campaign of a California product or proposition—by the lettering.

When all is said and done, the daily newspaper is the most precious possession of the average individual.

—From "Today in the Newspapers," issued by the Bureau of Advertising, A. N. P. A.

MARTIN HEADS TEXAS LEAGUE

Annual Meeting of Daily Publishers' Organization in Fort Worth

Lowry Martin, general manager of the Corsicana (Tex.) Daily Sun, was elected president of the Texas Daily Press League at its annual meeting held in the club rooms of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, September 14. Round table discussions on "Needed Legislation Affecting Texas Newspapers" and "Handling News on the Assignment Basis" occupied the morning session. Some of the other subjects taken up after luncheon were newspaper accounting, commissions to direct advertisers, newspaper costs in relation to the advertising rate, the price of newsprint and co-operative buying of newsprint.

Lowry Martin

Other officers elected were Sherwood Spots, the Bonham Favorite, first vice-president; Bernard Hanks, the Abilene Reporter, second vice-president; W. M. Hamilton, the Palestine Herald, third vice-president; D. W. Campbell, the Hillsboro Mirror, secretary-treasurer.

Members elected to the advisory committee were W. E. Edwards, the Denton Record-Chronicle; Houston Harte, the San Angelo Standard; Sam E. Miller, the Mineral Wells Index; C. E. Palmer, the Four States Press, Texarkana; George Neu, the Brenham Banner-Press and J. L. Nunn, the Amarillo News.

MAGAZINE ADS IN 19[illegible] WORTH $95,439,236

Seventy-Two Publications Listed [illegible] Curtis Publishing Co. Are Led by Saturday Evening Post with $25,404,697

Advertisers spent $95,439,236 in 1[illegible] in 72 monthly and weekly magazin[illegible] women's publications and farm journ[illegible] it is stated in a recent survey of ma[illegible] zine advertising compiled by the Cu[illegible] Publishing Company. The same publi[illegible] tions in 1920, had an advertising inco[illegible] of $132,414,799; in 1919, it was $97,2[illegible] 791; in 1918, it was $61,312,888; in 1[illegible] in 77 publications, some of which h[illegible] been merged with members of the pres[illegible] list, the advertising expenditures total[illegible] $57,793,628; in the same number in 1[illegible] they were $51,837,806; in 1915, in [illegible] publications, they were $38,737,336.

The tabulation is headed by the Sat[illegible] day Evening Post and Ladies' Ho[illegible] Journal, which in 1921 had respect[illegible] advertising incomes of $25,404,697, [illegible] $10,370,829. Publications are listed [illegible] low in the order of their total inco[illegible] for last year:

Saturday Evening Post	$25,404[illegible]
Ladies' Home Journal	10,370[illegible]
Literary Digest	7,414[illegible]
Woman's Home Companion	4,421[illegible]
Pictorial Review	4,020[illegible]
American	3,650[illegible]
Good Housekeeping	2,742[illegible]
Country Gentleman	2,356[illegible]
Delineator	2,310[illegible]
McCall's	2,284[illegible]
Cosmopolitan	1,888[illegible]
Collier's	1,579[illegible]
Vogue	1,568[illegible]
Successful Farming	1,550[illegible]
Farm Journal	1,451[illegible]
Red Book	1,429[illegible]
Popular Mechanics	1,007[illegible]
People's Home Journal	982[illegible]
Designer	90[illegible]
System	852[illegible]
Woman's World	845[illegible]
Modern Priscilla	782[illegible]
National Geographic	757[illegible]
Life	736[illegible]
Harper's Bazar	656[illegible]
Review of Reviews	575[illegible]
Farm & Fireside	572[illegible]
Photoplay	559[illegible]
Needlecraft	533[illegible]
World's Work	518[illegible]
Christian Herald	500[illegible]
Leslie's Weekly	498[illegible]
Vanity Fair	456[illegible]
Atlantic Monthly	445[illegible]
House & Garden	419[illegible]
Physical Culture	417[illegible]
Country Life	395[illegible]
Hearst's International	392[illegible]
Motion Picture	382[illegible]
Metropolitan	377[illegible]
Farm & Home	345[illegible]
Scribner's	345[illegible]
McClure's	340[illegible]
Argosy-All Story	340[illegible]
Town & Country	326[illegible]
Harper's Magazine	322[illegible]
American Boy	317[illegible]
Hoard's Diaryman	314[illegible]
Mother's Magazine	304[illegible]
Popular Science	287[illegible]
Sunset	266[illegible]
Century	262[illegible]
Youth's Companion	262[illegible]
Outlook	249[illegible]
Today's Housewife	232[illegible]
Breeder's Gazette	222[illegible]
House Beautiful	220[illegible]
Field & Stream	210[illegible]
Theater	175[illegible]
Independent	150[illegible]
Scientific American	136[illegible]
Everybody's	110[illegible]
Judge	100[illegible]
St. Nicholas	100[illegible]
Munsey	80[illegible]
Garden Magazine	70[illegible]
Illustrated World	60[illegible]
Boy's Magazine	50[illegible]
Current Opinion	50[illegible]
Outing	30[illegible]
Travel	30[illegible]
International Studio	20[illegible]

New Baltimore Paper?

Establishment of a new Baltir[illegible] paper to be called the Baltimore I[illegible] trated Times was rumored in New Y[illegible] during the past week. The ventur[illegible] understood to be backed by a Mr. M[illegible] dell, a banker, and a Mr. Bohn, form[illegible] of the Baltimore American, is repo[illegible] to be the business manager of the [illegible] paper. Felix Agnus is credited with[illegible] ing interested in the venture. At [illegible] time that Editor & Publisher wen[illegible] press no telegram of confirmation[illegible] denial from Baltimore had been rece[illegible]

Boston Evening American Talent

AMONG many reasons for this newspaper's tremendous and growing circulation, at the advanced price of three cents a copy, are FEATURES. The list is too long to be given here. A few hints:

ARTHUR BRISBANE, known as "clearest thinker in the land," whose TODAY column is a real education.

GEORGE McMANUS, who makes the land laugh with his BRINGING UP FATHER.

F. OPPER, cartoonist extraordinary.

FANNIE HURST, novelist and short story writer.

BETTY ALDEN, who keeps an eye on the Smart Set.

"MEDBURY SAYS"—A daily corner in fun.

T. A. DORGAN, known as TAD, who makes everybody laugh.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, with wise advice to the lovelorn.

CLIFF STERRETT, in POLLY AND HER PALS.

B. C. FORBES, informative talk about business.

GARRETT P. SERVISS, authority on scientific subjects.

A FEW OF MANY REASONS FOR THIS PAPER'S WIDE POPULARITY AND ITS DISTINCTIVE VALUE AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM

BOSTON AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

BRITISH JOURNALISTS ARE STIRRED UP BY MRS. STAN HARDING CHARGES

Claims Mrs. Marguerite Harrison Broke Faith—Many Newspapers Take Up Campaign for Redress for Woman Writer Whose Health Was Broken in Soviet Prisons

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT

London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

EDITORIAL NOTE—The charges made by Mrs. Stan Harding, a British newspaper woman, against Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, an American newspaper woman, as outlined in the following article have created a sensation in England where they have been given wide publicity and editorial treatment. It is regrettable that Mrs. Harding, whose health was broken by her experience in Russia, should have delayed in making such serious charges until Mrs. Harrison had reached Northern Sakalin, out of communication with the remainder of the world, and unable to defend herself. It seems unusual, to say the least, that Mrs. Harding waited so many months and until such a time to make her allegations.

Efforts of EDITOR & PUBLISHER to secure statements from the New York World, the Baltimore Sun, the Associated Press and intimate friends of Mrs. Harrison have been without avail. The Associated Press pointed out, however, that Mrs. Harrison was not one of its staff correspondents and did not carry its credentials, although she did do special reporting for the A. P. At the request of EDITOR & PUBLISHER the charges of Mrs. Harding have been cabled to Mrs. Harrison at Pekin, where she is expected this month, by her son, Thomas B. Harrison. Friends of Mrs. Harrison say that she is fully prepared to protect her good name against unwarranted charges.

BRITISH journalists of all ranks are showing intense activity in the case of Mrs. Stan Harding, an English journalist who after service in Berlin as the correspondent of the London Daily News went to Russia in June, 1920, as the representative of the New York World, and on arrival at Moscow was arrested and imprisoned on the charge of being a spy in the employ of the British Government. She suffered in prison, under conditions of severe hardship and ignominy, for five months, and, completely broken down, was released when the Trade Agreement with Russia was concluded.

I have before me as I write a sheaf of papers that show how keen is the feeling in journalistic circles here, and it is at the request of the National Union of Journalists that I place the matter before American newspaper men, because the name of an American woman journalist has become involved in the matter in circumstances that affect the honor of their profession.

Mrs. Stan Harding alleges that she was betrayed by false accusations at the hands of Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, a correspondent of the Associated Press. Mrs. Harrison was herself arrested in April, 1920, as a political spy in Russia, and in EDITOR & PUBLISHER, August 6, 1921, it was stated that after a few days she was released, to be re-arrested in the following October, when she was "given the alternative of trial . . . which meant execution if she were convicted, or serving the Soviet as a spy. She chose the latter course, and for a short time was allowed her liberty in Moscow."

The Soviet Government announced in January, 1921, that in the previous spring Mrs. Harrison bought her release by consenting to act as a spy on British and American visitors to Russia, and Mrs. Stan Harding alleges that her arrest and subsequent indignities were due to Mrs. Harrison's denunciation at this time.

Mrs. Harding has succeeded in interesting British journalists in her case and in a letter to the Institute of Journalists says, "I beg my fellow-journalists to believe that I do not wish for any notoriety for the facts of my case beyond what is necessary to enable me to secure justice in these days, when for evil or for good, publicity rules the world." She then states categorically that Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, who acted as correspondent in Moscow for the Associated Press "was responsible for my arrest."

Considerable efforts have already been made to secure justice for Mrs. Harding from the Soviet Government. Representations were made to the Foreign Office, and the endeavors of this department and the fruitless results were narrated in a White Paper presented to Parliament. The Soviet Government twice rejected the claim put forward for compensation to Mrs. Harding. There have been some eighteen questions asked on the subject in the House of Commons. A distinguished journalist, H. N. Brailsford, possessing himself personal knowledge of some of the facts and some of the persons in the case, has told his story of it, and states that Mrs. Harding "was denounced by an American journalist whom I had the misfortune to meet, both in Berlin and Moscow, a certain Mrs. Marguerite Harrison."

Mrs. Harding was a British journalist working, at the time, as correspondent of the New York World. On the day of her arrival in Moscow, as an invited journalist, she was asked to share a room at the Kharitonewsky guest-house with Mrs. Harrison, and was arrested the same night. The allegations made by responsible individuals are that Mrs. Harrison falsely denounced Mrs. Harding to the Soviet Government as a spy, that Mrs. Harrison was herself then acting as a Soviet spy and informer, and that Mrs. Harding was offered her freedom if she would act in a similar capacity for the Soviet. The latter rejected the offer, and held firm to her refusal until, under pressure from the British Government, she was released in the following December. She denied all the charges made against her and Lord Curzon, of the British Foreign Office, confirmed her denial. Mr. Brailsford, who was in Russia while Mrs. Harding was in prison, says out of his knowledge of her and of some of the details of the case that "the accusation against her is unfounded and incredible."

Mrs. Harding suffered such indignities and hardships, including solitary confinement, at the hands of the Soviet Government that to-day she is a broken woman. Her case has been taken up by the two representative bodies of journalists in England. The National Union of Journalists, of which Mrs. Harding is a member, is moving in every available direction to secure redress. The Institute of Journalists have told the story in their journal with the same object. Truth, the London weekly newspaper, is devoting columns to the details of the case and urging action. The Manchester Guardian went to the length of devoting a leading article to the subject on August 21.

And it is not a pleasant fact to record that all of them press for publicity attaching to the charge of denunciation by Mrs. Marguerite Harrison, from whom is sought an explanation, due as much to the honor of the American journalistic profession as to a sense of justice for a woman who claims to have been wronged.

Thrift Insures A Good Market

Where 65 per cent. of the population carries savings accounts, you look for business conditions to be consistently good and unusually stable. This is true of Baltimore and is one of several reasons why Maryland's great seaport is so often chosen as a try-out city.

And when you decide to enter this fertile market, remember that

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

ANOTHER FOR PERRY AND JONES

Add Pensacola Journal to Tulsa and Jacksonville Holdings

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 18.—The Pensacola Journal was purchased by John H. Perry, of New York, and Richard Lloyd Jones, of Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 15. Mr. Jones is now president and editor of the Journal and Mr. Perry is treasurer. T. F. McPherson is general manager and Bryan Mack is managing editor and business manager. The new owners announce that their policy is "to give Pensacola the best possible newspaper. If it is good for Pensacola and Florida, the Journal is for it." No purchase price was stated.

The Journal has been conducted by Mrs. Lois K. Mayes for several years since the death of her husband. She has been publisher and general manager and has a wide acquaintance among American newspaper executives. Her future plans are unknown.

The Pensacola Journal is the third newspaper in which Messrs. Perry and Jones have become associated as owners since last June. Mr. Jones had been editor and publisher of the Tulsa Tribune for three years following a long career as a magazine and newspaper editorial executive and owner, when this summer he sold a half-interest in his Tulsa paper to Mr. Perry and joined him in the purchase of the Jacksonville Florida Metropolis. The name of this paper was changed almost immediately to Jacksonville Journal. Its make-up was also changed and new features were added. Mr. McPherson, who had been with Mr. Jones as general manager of the Madison State Journal and later of the Tulsa Tribune, joined the Jacksonville paper in the same capacity.

Mr. Perry was for several years best known as an expert on newspaper libel law, but his holdings of stock in several Scripps-McRae newspapers were also considerable until last year, when he sold most of his shares to Mrs. James Scripps. He purchased the Seattle Post-Intelligencer early in 1920 and conducted it until January 1, 1922, when he transferred it to William R. Hearst. He is also president of the American Press Association and of the Publishers Autocaster Service Company.

Another for Lucier Group

Dustin Lucier, formerly a Boston newspaperman, has bought the Hudson (Mass.) Daily Sun, which has been combined with the Enterprise list of papers, including the Concord, Maynard, Sudbury, Acton and Bedford Enterprise, of which he is publisher.

Local Dealers Know!

in local display advertising

The Detroit News Leads the Country

For the first six months of 1922

SIX-DAY	Lines	SEVEN-DAY	Lines
Detroit News.....	6,193,586	Detroit News.....	7,883,736
Chicago News.....	5,663,644	Washington Star...	7,549,720
Los Angeles Exp...	5,637,450	Los Angeles Times.	7,105,098
Washington Star...	5,545,457	N. Y. Times.....	6,948,592
Los Angeles Herald	5,513,536	Chicago Tribune...	6,731,451

(Figures from "National Advertising," August issue)

Since the consolidation of the Detroit Journal The News exceeds 275,000 Net Paid Circulation.

TheDetroitNews

Two and a Half Times Nearest Competing Week Day Circulation in Detroit and Vicinity.

Largest Sunday Circulation in Michigan

"Always in the Lead"

Only Detroit Evening Paper With Associated Press Franchise.

Pennsylvania's

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

These products are being produced by the people of Pennsylvania:

61,450,000 .....bushels of corn
29,183,000 .....bushels of oats
55,965,000 ....pounds of tobacco
22,051,000 ...bushels of potatoes
5,956,000 .....tons of hay
4,755,000 bushels of buckwheat
23,453,000 .....bushels of wheat

These products alone are stupendous enough to make any state a great state. They all go into a receptive market, where prices are high and the demand brisk.

Pennsylvania, industrially, is a veritable key-stone state, and no one branch of industry out of running as a commercial prospect.

Pennsylvania is a producer and with its workers comes a demand for merchandise of all kinds—and Pennsylvania's daily newspapers carry your message to these people.

The Pennsylvania daily newspapers herewith listed furnish the mediums through which you can reach these people in their homes in the most efficient and economical way.

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call	(M)	29,021	.09	.09
Allentown Call	(S)	16,104	.09	.09
Bethlehem Globe	(E)	8,066	.04	.04
Bloomsburg Press	(M)	6,316	.029	.029
*Chester Times and Republican	(M&E)	14,752	.065	.05
Coatesville Record	(E)	5,436	.0214	.0214
*Connellsville Courier	(E)	5,652	.0179	.0179
*Easton Express	(E)	15,668	.05	.05
*Easton Free Press	(E)	12,147	.05	.05
*Erie Times	(E)	26,428	.08	.08
*Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	36,478	.095	.095
*Lancaster Intelligencer and News-Journal	(M&E)	21,867	.08	.08
*Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,088	.035	.035
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(M)	54,541	.17	.15
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(S)	63,767	.22	.18
Pottstown Ledger	(E)	1,590	.025	.025
Pottsville Republican	(E)	11,558	.055	.05
Scranton Republican	(M)	32,180	.12	.10
*Scranton Times	(E)	37,701	.12	.10
Sharon Herald	(E)	4,888	.021	.021
Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	3,911	.021	.018
*Warren Times-Mirror	(E&M)	7,931	.036	.036
*Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	15,426	.06	.05
West Chester Local News	(E)	11,010	.03	.03
*Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	21,234	.08	.05
York Dispatch	(E)	16,549	.045	.045
York Gazette and Daily	(M)	16,614	.045	.045

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.

PLANE, RADIO TELEGRAPH AND AUTO GAVE ARGONAUT STORY TO WORLD

Newspaper Men and Women from Every Part of Country Covered Tragedy—Unique Agreement Made With Mine Owners Explicitly Lived Up to.

By FRANK B. ANDERSON

EDITORIAL NOTE—Mr. Anderson is a staff correspondent of the San Francisco Call, and covered the Argonaut disaster story for that paper.

KENNEDY MINE, Jackson, Cal., Sept. 17.—No news story ever "breaking" in California was more thoroughly covered by the press of the country than the Argonaut Mine disaster.

Veteran newspaper men on the job here, many of them dating their experiences back to the days of the Indian wars, say they fail to recall any greater effort on the part of the newspapers to tell their readers what was happening than was done at Jackson.

Unique in the history of newspaper reporting was the arrangement made through the staff of correspondents, camera men, news movie operators and the management of the Argonaut and Kennedy mines to "cover" the story on the day that the rescue crews pierced the prison tomb in which the men cut off by a shaft fire had been held for twenty-two days.

The radio for communicating news above the ground is commonplace to the system of underground telephoning that was brought into play when the rescuers broke through and began discovering the victims.

Special wires ran to the collar of the Kennedy shaft from which the rescue attempt was made, to receive the underground news with all the dispatch possible and every effort was being made by the mine management and the press to relay the information to the waiting world.

The feature writers—men and women—from metropolitan dailies were here telling their readers what was happening, putting the story up in interesting style to relate the marvelous work of the mine owners and mine workers who had been working night and day to pierce the channels of muck and solid rock in order to reach the victims.

The news men, alert for the latest developments in quick action copy, were on the job night and day to flash the reports to their respective publications or press associations.

The camera men were here with graflexes, flash lights and powder and dozens of plates to take pictures on a second's notice in order to graphically illustrate features of the rescue work or tragedies that tell more than words can portray.

The news movie camera operators were located to film every angle of the operations that visualized the rescue work to the millions of moving picture patrons.

Telegraph operators working fast leased wires, chauffeurs driving speedy cars, darting here and there and hurrying from the Argonaut to the Kennedy, half a mile away on the surface, but joined closely through the underground mining operations, conveyed the reporters, camera men, etc., from one scene of news activity to the other.

Airplanes came to hurry the first news pictures of the rescue to papers hundreds of miles away. There is not a paper of importance in California but what had a crew of news gatherers here, and as far East as Chicago came a special man, who followed every development. Owing to the fact that a large number of the entombed miners were of foreign extraction, special representatives of foreign language papers were here to relate the tale of the tragedy to their readers, handling the news as thoroughly as their American competitors.

The tense feeling caused by the disastrous fire in the Argonaut shaft which kept Jackson on edge for three weeks was not improved any by the swooping down on the town of a horde of news gatherers.

This town and the conservative mine owners, unused to having strangers trespass at will over their properties, somewhat resented the inquisitive reporters.

Unorganized systems of giving out news caused every wild rumor to break into print. After the first few days the mining companies adopted an efficient method of reporting the underground progress through a committee consisting of V. S. Garbarini, superintendent of the Argonaut; E. C. Hutchinson, vice-president and manager of the Kennedy; and Fred L. Lowell, safety engineer of the State Industrial Accident Commission, the latter being spokesman in giving reports to the press.

We listened to the miners and muckers give their version of the doings under ground; we heard the town gossip of this, that and the other thing, but we looked to Lowell, who was as obliging and willing to give us information at 6:30 or 7 in the morning as he was at midnight, and after to the morning papers' crew.

There had been so much said and done about the news of this disaster that the newspaper men and women made a written understanding with the mine people as to conditions under which the news of the rescue would be handled and the reports transmitted. With the exception of one paper every publication and news gathering agency represented here joined in the tacit understanding of how the big news was to be handled and the conduct of the press crowd on the Kennedy property on which the news of the day was occurring.

The Kennedy people, through their head, E. C. Hutchinson, reserved the nearest points of vantage, a few feet from the top of the shaft, for the press. The big timber shed and sawmill, a special shed in which the Call's leased wire was strung, and a platform for cameramen were at the service of these men and women who had signed up to agree to expedite the surface operations without interference and to accept the accuracy of the committee's reports, copies of which were flashed to the governor and carefully checked on a map in the executive office at Sacramento.

Clarence E. Jarvis, member of the State Board of Control, drove to Sacramento nightly with the latest reports, advising Governor Stephens on every move, and Jarvis lent what assistance he can on behalf of the state to guide the rescue work, in which was joined the Department of the Interior through the Bureau of Mines, the State Industrial Accident Commission, the State Mining Bureau and every other agency which could offer help or suggestion to the high speed rescue work.

A battery of telegraph instruments were installed for the morning press and specially strung telephones conveyed the news from the scene of activities.

George A. Burrell, local manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, and his wire chief, George A. Pathnick, in addition to an efficient and accommodating staff of telephone operators, made Jackson the scene of the fastest news relays ever sent out of the Mother Lode country.

G. P. Herrick, district commercial manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, sat in at the telegraph key transmitting thousands of words from the special correspondents, giving a service that carried an endless word picture of the day's news.

Files Bankruptcy Petition

TAMPA, Fla., September 20.—The Florida National Publishing Company, publishers of the Winter Park Post, September 20, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the office of the clerk of the Federal Court in Tampa. This petition, signed by W. R. Rahn, acting president of the company and filed by H. F. Mohr, its attorney, gives on the schedules accompanying it assets totaling $119,914 and liabilities of $46,529.68. The assets include real estate valued at more than $27,000; insurance of $17,500 and mechanical equipment $46,000. The principal items in the liability schedule are mortgages on real estate, money due on equipment, and money due employees. J. H. Wendler, formerly editor of the Florida Post, is due $5,204.70 for salary and money loaned the company.

Fildes Starts Palm Beach Times

F. P. Fildes, owner of the Fort Worth (Tex.) Oil Gazette and the Jacksonville Florida Tropical News, has established the Palm Beach Times, an evening paper which started publication last week. He arrived in Chicago August 21 and by night had bought the complete equipment for the Times, including a battery of Intertype machines, a newspaper press, and type and cabinets as well as contracting for leased wire service. The plant was on the cars by the next morning and headed for Florida. Bruce O'Connell of the Intertype Corporation accompanied him to Chicago.

Plans Sunday Messenger

The Athens (Ohio) Messenger, an evening paper, will add a Sunday edition of from 24 to 36 pages commencing October 1, which will replace the Saturday issue.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

"FOOLS ERRANT" looks fr
where we sit to be one of t finest plays seen in New York since days of Aristophanes. Scintillating in dialogue, thrilling in its situations, combines the best of Sophocles' tra spirit with the subtlest of Piner comedy. A matchless cast, includ such superb actors and actresses
Lucile Watson, Cyril Keightley, Vinc
Serrano, Alexandra Carlisle and F
Williams, completes the work which author has begun in supplying the st with the practically perfect drama.

* * *

NOTE.—"Fools Errant" was written
Louis Evan Shipman, editor of LIFE our boss.

Robert C. Benchley, in Lif

Editor Fights Building Law

E. O. Wickizer, publisher of the So Pasadena (Cal.) Record, has been strained by court order from constr ing a newspaper plant on Fair Oaks a nue, a restricted area. According t decision handed down by Judge Wc Wickizer, who was arrested recently the charge of violating the South Pa dena building laws, has rendered him liable to prosecution by the build commission. When the police stop the work on the new plant Wickizer f an injunction suit to prevent the local thorities from interfering with h Wickizer is attacking the legality of building zone ordinance.

85% of us were born here

CINCINNATI folks like the city because most all of them were born here, educated in one of the finest school systems in the world, and live in one of the most prosperous communities. There are 141,000 families, and 28.7 per cent of these families own their own homes. A city of industry, contentment and prosperity.

Cincinnati folks like the TIMES-STAR because it is the only paper owned, edited and managed by Cincinnatians, thus truthfully reflecting the dominant sentiment of the city. That's why it is read by four out of five of the possible 141,000 families.

And they buy in Cincinnati, too. That's why the TIMES-STAR in six week-day issues publishes more local and more national display advertising than any other paper, even with Sunday issues included—and has done this each year for fifteen years.

CINCINNATI TIMES-STAR

CHARLES P. TAFT, Publisher C. H. REMBOLD, Manager

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

WAR COSTS LINGERING PERIODICALS FIND

Labor, Paper and Carrying Charges Still Near Peak, Reported to National Publishers—Swetland Re-elected Activities of the past year were reviewed and all officers were re-elected at the annual meeting of the National Publishers Association, Inc., at the Engineers' Club, New York, Sept. 19. Formation of the American Publishers Conference and its work, as well as that of the association, were outlined briefly by J. C. Pearson, of the Dry Goods Economist and president of the conference.

The labors of this organization for reduction of postal rates have been reported, as they occurred, in EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

Pending negotiations of new wage scales and working contracts in the New York book and job printing trades were explained by Arthur J. Baldwin, of the McGraw-Hill Company, chairman of the labor committee. He held out no hope of material reduction in New York printing costs during the next year.

I. M. Swetland, of the United Publishers Corporation, was returned for his third term as president. Other officers who continue are: First vice-president, R. J. Cuddihy, Funk & Wagnalls Company; second vice-president, P. S. Collins, Curtis Publishing Company; treasurer, Roger W. Allen, Allen Business Papers, Inc.; secretary, Frank C. Hoyt, Outlook Company; executive secretary, Frederic W. Hume.

President Swetland in his report urged greater measure of co-operation between publishers and between their associations, citing the benefits which had accrued to other organized bodies in the past few years, some of them not to the publishers' advantage.

"This organization should at once undertake to stabilize the activities of its membership by recommending a code of business practice," he continued. "Such a code must not be mandatory to its membership, but must be so developed as to afford stimulating suggestion. It will retain and revivify the fact that honesty is always the best policy. It will give evidence that no contract is valuable that is not a benefit to both parties. It will mean that we must outdo the Audit Bureau of Circulations in giving the advertiser full knowledge of the quality as well as quantity of circulation. It will mean that the publisher to decline business that cannot be made profitable, or that will be better placed. It will present the danger of allowing advertisers to make untruthful or even extravagant statements. It will censor the advertiser the discrimination between legitimate business and fraud. It will urge counsel that great and small producers to determine what advertising and how much can be made profitable. It will curtail the influence of advertising of products of inferior quality, and should never allow an abuse of this dominating sales factor.

"The establishment of these and other ethical principles will create confidence in the individual and tend to raise the standard of legitimate advertising. While we are great publishers and justly proud of our individual production, we must remember that we are really in the business of advertising. We build great publications to create a great circulation for the sole purpose of establishing a successful advertising proposition.

"Therefore any indulgence in question able practices not only injures the publisher individually, but creates a detrimental influence on advertising as a whole. Stimulation of ethical practice will therefore, be beneficial both to the individual and the publishers at large."

Mr. Swetland declared that the association must increase its membership by enrolling every reputable paper in its present field and that it must then broaden its work by amalgamation with other publishers' organizations until it becomes national in membership and in broad control of all publishing interests.

"The major issues to be considered are of interest to all publishers. At that time our committees will attempt, with positive assurance of success, the large problems, such as contact with Federal and State governments, industrial relations, education, taxation, our supply of raw materials. In a unity of thought and spirit, it will serve as an authentic and authoritative clearing house for data and information to every affiliated interest, and be the leaders and not be led into situations and pitfalls that prove all too expensive after the demands have been exacted.

"We are the chief consumers of many commodities, paper, printing, engraving, etc. We have learned that the wage scale is not vital to the employing printer. He has only to pass the advance on to the publisher. When an advance in tariff was proposed on casein, coated paper immediately advanced in price. The publisher must therefore interest himself in the methods of the production of his materials and bring influence to bear to correct bad practice or unscrupulous combination."

The association took no action upon any of the reports, which in addition to those noted, were rendered by B. A. Mackinnon, of the Pictorial Review Company, on transportation of periodicals, and A. D. Mayo, who, as chairman of the committees on tariff legislation and government priority orders, informed the association of his work in Washington.

Mr. Mayo urged his audience to contract for their 1923 paper supply for six months at least to protect themselves against fluctuations of a rising market. He predicted that the mills in November and December of this year would be chary about discussing prices, preferring to wait until they had their business for 1923 well in hand before they named their market rate.

Mr. Mackinnon's report, which was read by Mr. Hume, detailed efforts to obtain lower freight rates to make possible greater use of combined shipments of periodicals to points of postal reentry.

EDWARD BELL GOES TO PEKING

Was Invaluable to Washington Corps in Covering State Department

Washington newspaper men are losing a good friend. Edward Bell, chief of the division of current information of the State Department and, as such, liaison between the State Department and the Press, has been appointed counselor of the American Legation at Peking. He will leave for his new post shortly after October 1. Mr. Bell's successor has not been named and probably will not be selected until Secretary Hughes returns from Brazil.

Although not a newspaper man, Mr. Bell took up his work at the State Department, as the successor to Henry Suydam, who left to become the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle, with a natural sense for news. He made himself invaluable to the newspaper men who cover the department by his thorough knowledge of departmental procedure, diplomacy, and foreign affairs. These proved of great assistance to reporters seeking information through state channels. His departure is viewed with genuine regret by members of the Washington corps who came in contact. His appointment to the Peking Legation is recognition of his profound knowledge of oriental affairs. Mr. Bell, who will be the first counselor accredited to China, was charge d'affaires of the American Embassy in Tokio from May, 1920, to September, 1921, and was Far Eastern Affairs adviser to the American delegation at the Armaments Conference.

No New Seattle Daily Yet

The Seattle Daily American did not begin publication September 15, as scheduled.

Elected to Associated Press

The Newport (Ark.) Independent, afternoon paper, has been elected to membership in the Associated Press.

The Best Business Producer in Japan

First in News, Influence and Circulation Throughout the Far East

Morning and Evening Editions—Over a Million Copies

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN

Established by the late Premier Okuma

報知新聞

A Splendid Circulation

The Hochi Shimbun has had continuously since its establishment in 1872 the largest circulation in the Far East.

Oldest Evening and Morning Press

The Hochi Shimbun was the first newspaper in Japan to add an evening edition to its morning paper.

Advertising Rates

Per line.....Y	1.25
Per Column..Y	170.00
Per inch....Y	12.50
Per page....Y	2,000.00

A Rich Field

There is no section of the Japanese buying community which is not reached by the Hochi Shimbun.

An Efficient Medium

The Hochi Shimbun is read extensively through Japan, Korea, Manchuria and Formosa, and is the foremost advertising medium.

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN SHA
TOKYO, JAPAN

REJECT WANT ADS FROM AGENCIES WHICH TRY TO CUT RATES

Classified Manager Finds It Better to Sacrifice Revenue Than Full-Rate Principle—Guaranteed Room Advertising Brings Rockford Star Results

By C. L. PERKINS

Executive Secretary, National Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers.

A CLASSIFIED manager on a newspaper with a circulation of about 20,000 in one of the smaller cities, writes as follows:

"For the past four or five months we have been bothered by shortages in remittance from the majority of agencies handling classified copy. These shortages generally only amount to from five to fifteen cents, but we find it impossible to get them to pay our full rates, less the regular commission and discount. We have refused business from several agencies on this account, as we will not cut rates to anyone. Possibly other papers who accept busines at a cut rate are getting this from us. Other papers that I have visited during the last few months report the same trouble, and I regret to say that the majority of them are taking what they can get and saying nothing. Our rates are so low that we feel that we are justified in asking for full rates. We know that this policy has cost us some money, but we would rather have it so."

The writer of the above paragraph has touched upon a subject which annoys practically every clasified manager. Agencies handling classified copy send out their orders without proper remittances. Because this is done so frequently and because they do not correct the habit when it is called to their attention, many classified managers are of the opinion that it is done deliberately. This is probably not true in all cases.

The writer of the above has also taken the proper course, which is simply to return the copy from the agency which did not make the remittances agree with the rate card rates.

* * *

FOR the comfort of its want-ad customers and its employees, the Chicago Tribune has installed, at the cost of several thousand dollars, an air-conditioning machine in its want-ad store on the first floor of the Tribune Building at Madison and Dearborn streets. This machine replaces air in the room at the rate of 6,000 to 10,000 cubic feet per minute. This air has been washed and dried, and either heated or cooled, as may be required by the outside temperature. It is thermostatically controlled and keeps the Tribune want-ad store at an even temperature of 60 to 70 degrees winter and summer.

* * *

THE New Orleans Item, L. R. Jalenak, classified director, is circularizing want-ad prospects with a series of bulletins, which in addition to promoting the Item, emphasizes the advantages of descriptive copy.

Following is that portion of the circular which was especially devoted to this subject:

IF YOU WANT TO SELL REAL ESTATE
(Residences, Commercial and Industrial, Lots)
Then Be Sure to Read the Information Given Below:

Sometimes, not through fault of your market, your price, or your offer itself, a want-ad fails to give the returns you had hoped for. When you place a want-ad in the paper, you of course want to get results. But have you given sufficient thought to the wording of your ad.

The successful want-ad is the one that tells a complete, interesting story about the room, house or apartment that you want to rent. The good want-ad is written slowly and carefully so that it can be read with complete understanding. There is no haste on the part of the reader; he reads leisurely and he wants to know what you have to tell him. Tell it, then, directly, fully, interestingly.

Remember that the people go to the Item want-ad section deliberately, with intent to buy, and if you withhold any detail that is essential to their knowing exactly what your offer is—little wonder that they do not phone you or reply.

Suppose you were looking for a residence, store or lot. Which of these would you answer?

BURNETT OF BINGHAMTON

JAMES J. BURNETT entered newspaper work about ten years ago, in the business office of the Springfield (Mass.) Union. During seven years with that paper he filled various positions, including that of both display and classified solicitor. He left Springfield in January, 1920, to go to the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram as classified manager. During his connection with that paper, he increased rates 300 to 600 per cent and broke all previous records in volume of classified business.

JAMES J. BURNETT

Burnett became classified manager of the Binghamton (N. Y.) Press in January of this year and has since put over one increase in rates and is now running ahead of last year by thirty-four per cent in number of ads and sixty-nine per cent in lineage.

THE Minneapolis Tribune, P. M. Hughes, classified manager, is probably the first newspaper to use a full page of rotogravure to promote its classified advertising department. This page appeared on September 3 and contained an illustration showing the order board with 16 girls engaged in taking want-ads. The text of the advertisement describes the telephone service given by the Tribune and the ease with which advertisers may place want-ads in these columns.

* * *

THE Rockford (Ill.) Morning Star reports that during the past few months it has used the plan of guaranteeing results for room advertisers with success. The plan has not only increased the lineage but has reduced the collection losses, as the guarantee was not made good except on paid advertising. It also had a tendency to increase results as the advertiser was forced to run the advertisement at least six times, and naturally those using six insertions would more frequently get results than those using only one or two inertions.

W. H. Merrick, classified advertising manager of the Star, reports that only 10 per cent of the advertisers came back for the free insertions which were offered to the advetisers whose six-time advertisements failed to produce results. With every advertisement sold a coupon containing the following wording was given:

Classified Advertising Department
THE ROCKFORD MORNING STAR
Rockford, Ill.
SIX TIME GUARANTEE TICKET
For Room and Apartment to Rent Ads Only

The Rockford Morning Star agrees that if the results from this advertising are not satisfactory the SAME ad will be repeated without charge for SIX MORE consecutive insertions. Request for re-insertion must be made the day of expiration of the orginal order.

Note: On charge ads, re-insertion will not be given unless the original advertising has been paid for.

Name .....
Address .....
Phone No. .....
First Insertion .....
Last Insertion .....

PAID ☐ CHARGE ☐

Present this Ticket with request for re-insertion

IN other words, the classified manager who permits in his columns confidence-destroying copy is actually reducing the revenue of his paper rather than increasing it. One of the places where this is being done to a great extent is in Help Wanted, where advertisers who want to employ salesmen on a strictly commission basis place copy that conveys the impression that they want to employ help on a salary basis.

Bring the case home. Suppose you were a reader of a newspaper and were out of a job and needed one very badly. You turned to your newspaper and foun a dozen advertisements offering positio which you thought you might fill an which intimated that they paid a salar which you needed and could earn. Yo then spent a whole day of your time i terviewing these advertisers, and at th end of the day you found that you ha merely listened to 12 alluring offers fro people who had more or less doubtf schemes and wanted you to take all th chance on a strictly commission basi Wouldn't your confidence in that pap be destroyed?

The securing of salesmen on a strictl commission basis through misleading a vertising is a practice which is growin rapidly. Some newspapers have stopp it by adopting the rule that all Hel Wanted advertisements must sta whether the position is on a salary commission basis. Such a rule esta lished on all newspapers and strictly e forced would undoubtedly stop this pra tice which is destroying reader confidenc

Fifty Dailies in Oklahoma

Oklahoma now has 50 daily pape and 409 weeklies in addition to 20 clas religious, fraternal, and race publicatio These facts are contained in repor made to the School of Journalism, t University of Oklahoma, which, als indicate that the financial condition the papers of the state have made mark improvement during the past 18 mont In contrast to the many suspensions a consolidations immediately after the wa during the past 18 months 67 new pape have been started and only 31 have co solidated or suspended.

Tunica Times Sold

Clayton Rand, editor and publisher the Philadelphia (Miss.) Neshoba De ocrat as well as associate editor of t DeKalb (Miss.) Press, has bought t Tunica (Miss.) Times. He will ta possession October 1. New equipm will be bought for the Times.

NEA NEA

THE COMPLETE NEWS FEATURE SERVICE

Every Feature Necessary for a complete up-to-the-minute newspaper.

Write for Samples and Rates

NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET
CLEVELAND, OHIO.
NEA NEA

Japan's Program of Conquest

A Series of Sunday Articles

by

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr.

The articles are based on a minute study of problems confronting Japan and the development of Nipponese history before, during and in the wake of the Washington Conference.

These articles serve as a warning to America of the vital import of affairs in Asia because America's political future depends upon the developments in the Pacific.

October 8 FIRST RELEASE October 8

Wire for terms—

C-V NEWSPAPER SERVICE
52 Vanderbilt Ave., New York City
Washington New York

OVER-ASSESSMENT OF TAXES FREQUENT WHEN BUSINESS YEAR IS SHORT

When Firm Has Been Operating for Only Part of Calendar Year, Government Inflicts Injustice by Basing Taxes on Calculated Turnover for a Twelve-Month Period

By CLIFFORD YEWDALL

EDITORIAL NOTE—EDITOR & PUBLISHER will publish an article each week on taxation problems affecting newspapers and advertisers, conducted by Mr. Yewdall. This is a continuation of the series begun in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of December 10, 1921, and carried into March of this year. Mr. Yewdall will deal with the everyday problems of newspaper taxation reports and accounting, as gathered from his personal experiences in working for publishers all over the country. He will endeavor to answer any questions asked of him through EDITOR & PUBLISHER. In taking up the work, he desires to make the following statement: "I am not a lawyer and I appreciate that Federal tax cases present problems requiring the best attention of an accountant and a lawyer who has given the subject special study. The legal discussions in my articles are based to a considerable extent on discussions of the chairman of the Federal Taxation Committee of the A. N. P. A., Arnold L. Guesner, of the Minneapolis bar, with whom I have worked on tax cases."

IN the last article was discussed the various conditions pertaining to comparatives to be used under the Relief Sections of the 1917-1918 Acts. It has always been my contention that more substantial relief can be obtained by the proper presentation of its facts by each particular newspaper, rather than from comparison with another newspaper similarly situated.

The Government, of course, does not expect, when they are examining your books, to do the work that you should do yourself. All they do in their examinations is take notes of such items as are in their favor. This goes for the majority of examinations. I have seen Government examinations which gave refunds to the tax payers, but these are few and far between.

In making an examination of a newspaper in the middle West, some little time back, immediately after the Government Revenue Agent had completed his examination, I discovered that what appeared on the surface to be the correct method of handling the company's invested capital had been used by the revenue agent, but on studying the law and the regulations, I find that he had seriously decreased the company's invested capital by application of a principle which did not apply in that case. The principle is, where a corporation commences business during the course of a year and closes its books at the end of the calendar year, it shall be put on a yearly basis.

By the above is meant, that, if a corporation starts in business on September 30 and elects to make a return for the 4 months from September 30 to December 31, its earnings for that period should be multiplied by three as it is a 4 months' period and the taxable year is a calendar one, hence, if the company was enormously successful for the 4 months, irrespective of the fact that the summer months are bad trading months and it would not make any money, the yearly profits would be inflated considerably, whereas the invested capital to be used would only be the actual net cash invested from the day the corporation started business. Hence, it would have a very large income and a very small capital and a large tax payable.

This is probably more properly illustrated in the case of an individual who, in January last year, bought and sold an apartment house, making thereon a profit of $50,000. This was something outside of his ordinary course of business. Early in February, the man died. At the end of the year when the estate came to make up its income tax return, the application of the law provided that the one month's earnings of January be multiplied by twelve and the tax on the resultant total with all surtaxes worked out on the annual income basis be taken, and of that amount then one-twelfth was the tax to be payable.

Under this scheme the tax payer, namely the estate, was called upon to pay over to the Government a sum almost approximately the amount of profit made in January on this apartment house deal.

In this newspaper case that I have in mind, the revenue agent had erred, inasmuch as he had overlooked the fact that the company was incorporated prior to the purchase of the assets of the publication in question, that its capital had been paid in considerably longer than it had been in business. He had, in making his examination, assumed the capital was paid in the day the newspaper was purchased and had proportioned that capital according to the number of days that it was in business. He had then taken again a proportion of that proportion in order to put the company on a yearly basis. Had he looked into the matter more fully, he would have found that the capital of the company had been paid in for the year, that the company was in business for a whole year but had only operated for a period of four months.

Notwithstanding this latter fact, however, according to law, the earnings of those four months were earnings for the year and the tax should have been figured on that basis, thus resulting in a large refund being due the company, instead of a large extra assessment as contemplated by the revenue agent.

There is another point that frequently comes up and on which there is a lack of understanding and that is, the question of life insurance premiums.

The 1917-18-21 acts specifically state that life insurance premiums paid on the life of an officer of the corporation are not a deductable item from income, if the corporation is directly or indirectly a beneficiary.

In the case of group life insurance, where the individuals are the beneficiaries, the premium is a charge against income. However, where a corporation insures its officers for its own benefit, although those policies may be deposited as collateral security to a loan to the corporation and even although the insurance was taken out for the specific purpose of obtaining that loan, the premiums thereof are not a deductable item if the company is in any way a beneficiary.

It is my opinion, however, that these items if they have been paid for a considerable number of years, could be added to capital invested, inasmuch as where a corporation pays out money in life insurance premiums on the lives of its officers, that money is an investment by the company until such time as the policy either matures or lapses. If it matures then the receipt thereof of the money applies against the capital built up. If the policy lapses, it is my opinion that that could be charged off as a dead loss.

It may be necessary to fight this contention, but I believe it possible to win it if the facts can be shown to be as I state them.

1,400 Tons of Newsprint Lost

Fourteen hundred tons of newsprint were lost by the New Orleans Item, the States and the Times-Picayune in the $7,500,000 fire that destroyed the half-mile wharf of the army supply base, and all freight that had been unloaded there, September 15. The paper had been ordered from Sweden to meet an emergency situation caused by the inability to get newsprint by rail on account of the strike.

The ACID TEST of Reader Interest

Iowans pay more than a million dollars a year for the Des Moines Register and Tribune —think how many additional millions the readers of The Register and Tribune expend for food, clothing, automobiles, building materials and other necessities and luxuries.

Read in 120,000 Iowa homes, daily and Sunday

HAS YOUR NEWSPAPER A WELL-DEFINED FARM NEWS POLICY?

Few Dailies Are Making Proper Appeal to Great Undeveloped Field that Should Be a Big Source of Steady Income with Increased Editorial Influence.

By H. A. PARISH

WHAT personal and financial satisfaction would come to the editor who could ride out into the nearby farming district and find his paper—a real institution in the molding of public opinion and shaping of policies in the metropolis—a definite factor in rural community life. In other words, there is a great and undeveloped field for the city daily that will fairly represent the farmers' interest.

Articles appearing in the May 13 and September 2 issues of EDITOR & PUBLISHER have set forth some of the possibilities awaiting the managing editor and the circulation manager in catering to farmers and people in rural communities.

Recent figures show that one-third of the population of the United States live on farms or in towns of 2,500 or less. Surely then, the field is there for the paper that directs its efforts in the right direction. A few papers, particularly in the strictly agricultural districts, have long since felt that great possibilities are in store for the paper that comes closest to reflecting a true agrarian spirit. Few, however, have taken an intelligent advantage of the opportunities.

Several years ago the first dailies in the middle west hit upon the idea of establishing a weekly page or daily column for farm news. Too many times the responsibility of this work was turned over to some cub reporter with little or no practical training or some chap who was born on a farm and reared miles away from one. In other cases the duties were turned over to a graduate of an agricultural college who had no experience in the practical phases of news writing. No matter who got the job all he had to do was to write heads on the material sent out by the federal agricultural department, agricultural institutions, or other such sources. He had to fill a column once a day or a page once a week, with no regard to the class of material used.

Such a policy has not met with success. This does not mean that material sent out by agricultural institutions, national and state, is not vital to farmers but in itself cannot constitute all the material printed. The farmer wants something practical. He is interested in knowing how the federal department of agriculture and the agricultural colleges recommend the best method of growing a crop of alfalfa. But he is more interested in knowing how and with what luck his neighbor, John Jones, has grown alfalfa.

Many city dailies are conducting successful farm departments today. Many more have tried and failed. But even with past experiences, there are rare possibilities for the paper that will properly visualize the agricultural field, but until the managing editor and the business management get together and intelligently survey the field, white space and ink might better be turned to more profitable use.

Today the farmer has his legislative and commodity organizations, both state and national. He has a group of legislators in Washington working in his interests. He has the War Finance Corporation and other institutions catering to his financial needs. He has the federal department of agriculture with its increasing regulatory work brought into existence for his sole benefit. He has a host of other sources of real news, all of which interests and concerns him vitally. And all of these factors in which the farmer is and should be interested have been brought about during the past few years.

What has been the result? Farmers are taking an increasing interest in the city daily as the one source from which he can learn today what was done in his interests yesterday. He is recognizing that the metropolitan press has the greatest force in public life. The time worn thought that the farmer did not subscribe to the daily paper, to a certain extent, has been exploded. He is eager and thirsty for news dealing with agriculture.

With the farmer in this susceptible frame of mind the daily paper is doing but little to place him permanently on the subscription files. It has not, as yet, seen the possibilities of the rural field.

Circulation managers of many leading papers have launched extensive circulation campaigns among farmers. The farmer was met at his gate with brass band tactics and a good city paper. In many cases the farmer was sold because he is as interested in the world's affairs as is his city brother. But when he had an opportunity of sitting down in the calmness of his own household to figure out just what the paper had to offer him as a producer he came to the conclusion it had nothing.

The editor took a slap at him because he had to pay thirty cents for a cantaloupe. He took a vicious jab at the farmer because he thought the price for food he had to buy was more than he should pay. Never did the editor analyze the situation to find that the farmer received a few cents for that cantaloupe or that he was producing his crops at a little more or many times less than the actual cost of production. If the farmer continued to take the paper it was because he was interested in world affairs. He never became a moral booster for the paper in his community nor did he receive it as a molder of rural policies or opinions.

A decision has been handed down today by the Secretary of Agriculture which vitally concerns the farmer in every section of the land. The story has been handled by the representatives of press associations and Washington correspondents in a routine way. These writers have been hardened in the work of news reporting or have been sent to the nation's capital as the home paper's star man. But they have no more idea of the significance of Secretary Wallace's decision than they have of the fourth dimension. The story was sent out over the wire or through the mail, not as a decision that will reflect good or bad to every farmer in the land, but as a routine piece of work. The story finds a place on the back page, where it rightfully belongs. It escapes the eye of the editorial writer. The farmer reads the scant item but is not enabled to crystallize the importance of the decision.

The benefits of the rural field can never be realized until the press agencies, the papers themselves and their representatives establish certain definite policies. Above all, the paper must adopt a firm conviction that the farmers' interests will be fairly, firmly and intelligently represented. The farmer is not himself condemning in wholesale terms the functions of the so-called middlemen. He does recognize, however, that certain unfair and discriminatory practices exist in the present system of marketing and distribution. The paper that would succeed in the rural field must likewise recognize the right of the farmer to see that he is fairly treated in the handling of his products and defend this right before the public eye. The paper must take such a stand in fairness to all concerned.

To succeed the paper must realize that the problems confronting American farmers today are not alone those of production, but economic. The untrained and ill-informed editorial writer who attempts to discuss the economic phases of agriculture is walking on dangerous ground. The editorial writer who understands the position of the farmer and the economic side of agriculture and can discuss all questions intelligently and along certain definite policies adopted by his paper, is not only assisting to put agriculture on the proper national footing but is bringing his paper close to the heart of the farmer reader and others who feel that agriculture is the basic industry.

The press writers for the federal department of agriculture and agricultural institutions prepare their material from an official angle. The successful correspondent is the one who can interpret this material into what it will mean to the man back home on the farm. He must be agriculturally trained; his hobby must be the farmer.

The feature writer or editor of a farm page is not the clever head writer or the re-write man but the one who can go out into the country, slap Hank Smith on the back, inquire about the crops, and then go back to his desk and tell in an interesting and intelligent manner just how Hank is feeling, what he has to say or why his method of raising pork is better than his neighbor's.

A Chicago advertising agency has secured the services of an agriculturally trained and schooled writer to assist in the preparation of copy and build up this heretofore undeveloped field. An advertising solicitor on an Iowa daily has persuaded the farmers in his community to adopt a trade mark and sell their poultry products direct to the consumer. Another Nebraska daily secured the services of a circulation manager, agriculturally trained, who worked for weeks with the editorial and business management in forming a rigid agricultural policy before he launched a successful campaign.

The rural field is as yet undeveloped. It is a fruitful one and a pleasant one for the paper that will see the farmer as he is.

Press Room Annex for Sentinel

The Knoxville (Tenn.) Sentinel is erecting a three-story and basement engine and press room, 75 feet by 145 feet, of reinforced steel and concrete, to house the new super-speed, octuple Hoe press now being constructed.

Obituary

WILLIAM FRANKLIN BAILEY, aged 54, veteran newspaper man and copy-reader on the Washington Evening Star, died of heart disease at his Washington home, September 15. He entered newspaper work at the age of 19 on a Middletown (N. Y.) newspaper, and except for a brief period, he has always been in newspaper work. In New York he worked on the American and World. Later he served as Albany correspondent for the Publishers' Press Association and was with the Central News. In Philadelphia he worked on the Public Ledger and the Philadelphia Inquirer. Mr. Bailey joined the staff of the Washington Times in 1918 and went to the Star in 1918. He is survived by two sons, Howard P. Bailey of the Star and Richard M. Bailey, who is on a Bridgeport (Conn.) newspaper.

JAMES L. CAMPBELL, aged 74, in his early life editor and owner of Manchester (N. H.) Union and later, with Capt. George A. Hanson, owner of the Lowell (Mass.) Times, died recently.

DANIEL SYDNEY RICHARDSON, aged 71, at one time an intimate acquaintance of Bret Harte, Ambrose Bierce, and Charles Warren Stoddard and well-known in California literary circles some years ago, died September 11.

HAROLD OTIS SKINNER, aged 33, an actor and son of the late Charles M. Skinner, an associate editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, died September 13.

CHARLES J. SHEARER, aged 55, formerly advertising manager of Bloomingdale Brothers, a New York department store and recently head of his own advertising business, Tucson, Ariz., where he had gone for his health, died August 15.

O. C. WIKE, formerly publisher of the Yellow Springs (Ohio) News, died in Savannah, Ga., last week.

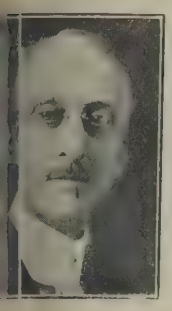
THOMAS H. ENSCOE, aged 57, for more than 33 years head stereotyper of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, died September 14.

Ad Post Start Season

Advertising Men's Post 209, of New York, will resume its fall activities on September 25 with a luncheon which will be given at 12.30 o'clock at the Palais Beaux Arts. Harry Tipper, of the Class Journal Company, will be the speaker.

Reg'lar Fellers
by Gene Byrnes

The News-Scimitar of Memphis comes into the fold this week. Wise editors are putting on this feature before the opposition gets it.



Furnished full page matrices, black alone, black and red and black and three colors; or, as the first page of a printed comic section.

HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE
280 Broadway New York City

MERGER OF N. Y. PRESS BODIES IN VIEW

Field Secretary for Proposed Consolidated Association Practically Assured, According to P. A. Blossom's Report in Syracuse

SYRACUSE, September 18.—A movement which may result in merging of the New York State Press Association, the New York State Publishers' Association, and the Associated Dailies was started here last Saturday at a meeting of the Press Association. It was practically decided to employ a field secretary to have general supervision of the proposed merger.

PETER A. BLOSSOM

Press Association men from all parts of the state were present. P. A. Blossom of the Brockport Republican, president of the association, said a field secretary was practically assured.

The duties of the secretary will be to co-operate with the daily and weekly newspapers of the state by furnishing expert advice and keeping in touch with all new undertakings for the welfare of the press. It is the view of many of the association men who attended the conference the proposed plan will assist both the editorial and advertising end of the newspaper business as well as the commercial printing houses.

As a means to supply down-to-the-minute information in connection with the legislature it was decided to issue a monthly bulletin service which will be available to all newspapers. This will contain items of interest to the newspaper industry in general. It will be printed at the Empire state school of printing at Albany New York.

A broad program of work to be accomplished by newspapers in the association when the legislature convenes was presented by the legislative committee and received warm approbation.

Members of the association present were P. A. Blossom, the Brockport Republican, president; M. V. Atwood, Batavia Journal and Courier, vice-president Elias Vair, Seneca County News, secretary; Wallace Odell, the Tarrytown News; F. A. Merriam, the Mount Vernon Argus; T. J. Blain, the Portchester Item; Keith, the Newburg News; John Hall, the Corning Leader; F. W. Rogers, Gloversville Leader; F. D. Corse, the Cold Creek News; and F. C. Parsons, Cortland Democrat.

1,000 WORDS ON TENNIS MATCH

Press Gallery Covered Singles Championship at Philadelphia

Approximately 25 newspaper men attended the National Singles Championship matches last week in Philadelphia. They were played at the Germantown Cricket Club. From 60,000 to 65,000 words were sent out each day over the wires from the side of the tennis courts, making a total of practically a half a million words for the week. The press stand at the Germantown matches took in the back of the marquee and throughout the day it was filled with bona fide newspaper men and telegraph operators. The Germantown Cricket Club made ample and generous provision for the newspaper correspondents. They were provided with every necessary facility in the press stand and they were the continuous guests of the club whenever the dinner gong rang, and when they were working against a story they had but to say the word and attendants from the club were there at their elbows with coffee and sandwiches.

Many of the players, too, were writing stories for various papers and syndicates and they were actually writing their stories, and in most instances, wiring them right from the field. These player-correspondents were champion Tilden; Gerald Patterson of Australia, and holder of the Wimbledon World's Championship; Vincent Richards, Bob Kinsey of San Francisco and C. M. Charest of Baltimore.

The curious thing about these championship tennis matches is that while clicking typewriters and telegraph keys are lost in the general shuffle of noise at a big baseball and football game, they become very conspicuous at a tennis match. With twelve or fifteen thousand people watching a contest and keeping as silent as the proverbial church mouse, sixteen telegraph keys and an equal number of typewriters manage to make considerable noise. At the Philadelphia matches this noise became so pronounced that it annoyed some of the players who were working at high tension, and it looked for a time as if the press sections might have to move. But pads were placed under the typewriting machines and sound-killing boxes were placed around the front row of telegraph keys. In this way considerable of the noise was eliminated, and there was no further difficulty on this score.

At the request of the Germantown Cricket Club, Mr. Pollock of the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger looked after the interests of the newspapermen throughout the tournament.

PARIS PROPAGANDA PAPER QUITS

English Weekly Review Not Welcome to the French

PARIS, September 1.—This week witnesses the demise of a small British propaganda journal reminiscent of the days of war. The Revue Hebdomadaire de la Presse Anglaise, or Weekly Review of the English Press, which has contained translations of political articles from the leading English newspapers, with the object of enabling the French public to appreciate the English point of view, announces its end in the following terms:

"For some time now it has been apparent that the efforts made by the Revue Hebdomadaire de la Presse Anglaise to improve Franco-British relations were not appreciated as they ought to have been, and the founders of this paper have thought that it would be bad grace on the part of foreigners to wish to continue the publication of an organ which was not welcome to their hosts. The Revue Hebdomadaire de la Presse Anglaise will therefore cease publication with this issue."

Le Matin, which has no particularly kindly feeling for England just now, questions the impartiality of this propaganda weekly and speeds the parting guest with the accusation that it was published by "the principal agent of Mr. Lloyd George in France."

Editorial Brings Libel Suit

Suit alleging criminal libel has been filed by John H. Cunningham against F. N. Potter, editor of the Jourdanton (Tex.) Atascosa News-Monitor. It is the outgrowth of an editorial in the News-Monitor on August 17, just before the recent Democratic primary. Mr. Cunningham alleges that the editorial shows malicious statements deliberately made with the intent to injure him in his race for the Democratic nomination for Congress from this district.

Paris Tribune Moves London Office

The London editorial office of the Paris Tribune has been moved to 138 Fleet street. The business and advertising department will remain at the same office, 125 Pall Mall.

Coast Advertisers Meet Oct. 5

The California Advertising-Service Association will hold a convention at Lake Arrowhead October 5 to 8. On the first day, the directors will meet. The general meeting will open October 6.

LEADING THE LIST

In a city and nation where class circulation means everything, where American advertisers in the ordinary newspaper buy waste circulation among Japanese whose purchasing power is low, The Jiji Shimpo leads all. With a monthly subscription rate of Y1.10, The Jiji is the highest-priced newspaper in Japan.

THE JIJI SHIMPO
時事新報

Is the newspaper of prosperous, ambitious Japan—a young nation, newly-endowed with means for enjoying the goods of the West. Her most progressive sons and daughters, eager to learn more of America and all America has to give Japan, read The Jiji Shimpo. Not only on account of its superior presentation of domestic and foreign news, but because it carries the bulk of foreign advertising appearing in Japan, The Jiji is the favorite of the class the American advertiser must reach.

The Jiji's New York representative, Mr. J. P. Barry, will gladly discuss the opportunities of the Japanese market, which he has studied at close range.

New York Office:
JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE
Equitable Bldg., 120 Broadway

THE JIJI SHIMPO

Cables: "Jiji Tokyo" Bentley Code

TOKYO, JAPAN

Morning and Evening Editions

"In Japan, the Buyers Read the Jiji"

CO-RELATING THE NEWS WITH SCHOOL STUDY

Special Department Established by Jacksonville Times-Union to Aid Teachers and Enable Children to Evaluate News

The Jacksonville Florida Times-Union has established a special department for schools called "The School Service Department." Here will be assembled facts and figures for correlation with the regular work of the text book. Teachers have been employed to suggest problems in arithmetic and algebra, based on the news of the day, suggestions for work in English composition, sentences for grammar classes, helps for civics classes, etc. The idea is to help train children to get a better grasp and appreciation of world affairs.

W. A. Elliott

"The department already has the endorsement of the various state educational boards and is meeting with favor among school teachers," according to W. A. Elliott, business manager of the Times-Union, who explained its purposes in detail to Editor & Publisher as follows:

"A great many teachers are organizing 'Current Events' classes, but the method of teaching current history through every subject offered in the course of study is more generally approved by the leading educators. We believe mathematical problems based on the news of the day serve the same purpose as the text book problems, and in addition tend to arouse the interest of the child in the world about him.

"History and geography when correlated with what is taking place become live and worthwhile subjects. History becomes valuable as a study only when it helps the child to understand the present. Study of civics can be made a real joy when children are taught to associate the study of it with the proceedings related in the news stories. Even English grammar has some charms for a boy when the sentences are made from events that are actually taking place.

"The indifference of a large part of the public to the affairs of state and nation is a matter of grave concern to those who boast that this is a democracy. At recent elections in the various states, it is claimed that less than half of the qualified voters went to the polls. The ignorance of a great many persons to the political, economic and social conditions in even their own communities is little short of appalling. The people of the United States boast of universal suffrage, but the government is fast becoming an oligarchy. Unless something is done to awaken the interest of the people, the nation will be at the mercy of the corrupt politician and the grafter.

"The remedy is to induce the people to read the newspapers and the current magazines and to establish forums in the various centers for the discussion of current happenings. The newspapers have a larger circulation than ever before, but many of the readers, do not read the news with the proper understanding and knowledge of how it relates to the daily affairs of life.

"The use of the daily newspaper and the current magazine should be encouraged in the public schools. Children should be taught not only to read but to evaluate the news. It is to help teachers in this work that the Florida Times-Union is establishing its school service department."

NEW COURSES AT MEDILL

Chicago Journalism School Opens for Second Year

The Medill School of Journalism began its teaching year September 12. A new course in dramatic criticism is being introduced, under direction of O. L. Hall, dramatic critic for the Chicago Daily Journal. Changes in curriculum follow:

Baker Brownell, formerly editorial writer on the Chicago Daily News, will direct the course on editorial writing and also one on problems in newspaper policies.

H. F. Harrington, director, will also instruct the class on community newspapers.

Walter A. Washburne, city editor of the Chicago Evening Post, will be in charge of the reporting class, assisted by Michael A. Strauss and Lewis Hunt, also of the Post staff, and George Stone of the Chicago Daily News.

George C. Bastian, assistant Sunday editorof the Chicago Tribune, will direct the class in news editing.

Frank Thayer will have charge of the work in "Writing for Business" and also the "Journalistic Writing Course."

Plans are being made for the lecture course each fortnight in the School of Journalism at which noted editors and writers of the country will speak.

The first of these lectures will be held September 28 when Senator Medill McCormick will speak.

Blanchard Repeats Ad Course

The course in the "Essentials of Advertising," given by Frank L. Blanchard at the 23rd Street Y. M. C. A., New York, which was started in 1904 will be repeated again this year. The course begins October 10 and continues one night a week until the first of April. Among those who will address the students in Mr. Blanchard's course this year are: A. Roden King, of A. Rowden King, Inc.; Edwin T. Harris, of W. T. Mullally & Company; W. Livingston Larned, art director of Ethridge Company; L. E. Firth, production manager of the H. K. McCann Company; Dr. R. E. Rindfuez, secretary American Writing Paper Company; Gilbert P. Farrar, author of "Typography of Advertisements that Pay"; Albert R. Bourges, of Bourges Service; John Sullivan, executive secretary, Association National Advertisers; John Howie Wright, editor of Postage; W. C. Robbins, editor, Gas Record; Robert M. Herman, Albert Frank & Co.; S. N. Holliday, Poster Advertising Company, Inc.; Sherwin Cody, author of Books on English Composition; Joseph A. Richards, of J. A. Richards Company; John Lee Mahin, of Federal Advertising Agency; Frank Presbrey, president F. Presbrey, Inc., and Walter Drey.

G. M. Hyde Acting Head of School

When the University of Wisconsin School of Journalism at Madison opened last week with an enrollment of more than 300 students, Grant M. Hyde was in charge in the absence of Prof. Willard G. Bleyer, who is spending a year in Europe studying newspaper methods on the continent. Prof. Hyde is a graduate of both Yale and Wisconsin. He was formerly managing director of the Popular Science Monthly, associate editor of Popular Mechanics and feature edit the Evening Mail of New York. the author of "Newspaper Reportin Correspondence" and of "News Editing." Mr. Hyde is the editor University Press Bulletin, which w carries the news of the great univ to the community press of Wisc Upon his return from Europe Bleyer will issue a revised edition text book on news writing.

Typography at Columbia

James D. Gabler, president of the lap Press, Inc., New York, is rep the course in typography which he last year under the auspices of the versity Extension Department of C bia University. There are two clas morning and an evening session. are held on Wednesdays. Many of who take this course are from the tising, printing and publishing fiel

Fifty at Birmingham

The School of Journalism of Bir ham-Soutnern College has started it ond year under the direction of Henderson, head of the Birmir (Ala.) bureau of the Associated with more than 50 students.

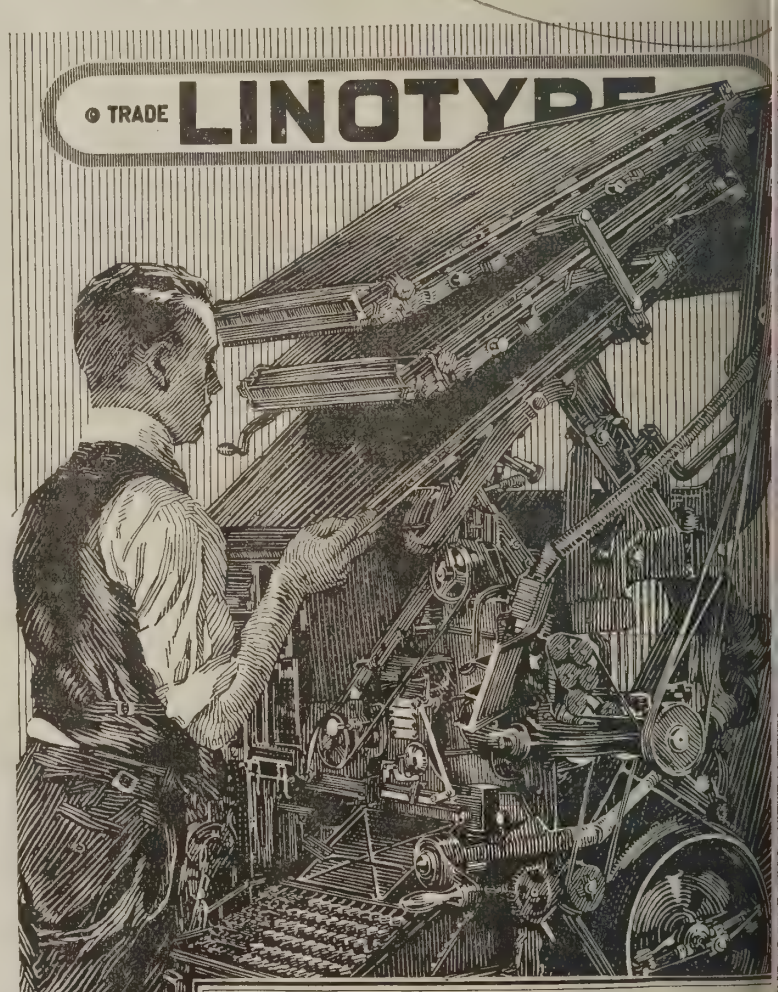
LEDGER SYNDICATE

NEWS AND FEATURE SERVICES

Maintain Prestige—Create Circulation—Attract Advertising

NEWS SERVICES

(Via leased wire or laid down in New York, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Seattle, San Francisco or Los Angeles.)



PUBLIC LEDGER COMBINATION NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER FOREIGN NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER DOMESTIC NEWS SERVICE.
PUBLIC LEDGER BUSINESS NEWS SERVICE.

FEATURE SERVICES:

FEATURE PAGES IN MAT: Daily—Human Interest Page. Weekly—Personality Page, Special Feature Page, Science Page, Short Story Page. COMICS: "Somebody's Stenog." (Hayward), Daily Strip and Weekly Page; "That Reminds Me" (Collins), "And Then He Changed His Mind" (Dunn), "Dumb-Bells" (Dunn), "The Crossing Cop" (John). CARTOONS: Sykes' Daily; "Follies of the Passing Show" (Hanlon), Weekly; "Children of Adam" (Rehse), Daily. FICTION: Daily and Weekly Detective and Mystery Serials; Hazel Deyo Batchelor's Daily Love-Problem Serials; Daily and Weekly Short Stories. RADIO FEATURE: "Radio in the Home" (Daily). MIDGET FEATURES of stick length: "Things You'll Love to Make," "Things for Boys to Make," "The Housewife's Idea Box," "What's What," "After-Dinner Tricks," "The Home in Good Taste," "How to Save When Shopping," "Cultivating Your Charm," "Famous Ghosts," "Favorite Recipes of Famous Women," "Sharpening Up Your Memory," "Guess Who?" "Pam's Paris Postals," "The Children's Hour," "History of Your Name," "Who-Why-What-When-Where?" "Human Curios," "What Are You Good For?" "Making More Money," "Daily Fun Hour," "Can You Tell?" "Correct English," "Read Your Character." HOME PAGE FEATURES: "A Daughter of Eve," "The Latest" (Paris Fashions), "Home Cooking," by Queen Victoria's cook, "As Woman to Woman," "Dreamland Adventures." SPORTS FEATURES: "The Sportfolio," "Wise Tennis Tips" (Tilden). PUZZLES, CUT-OUTS, TRICKS and MAGIC.

LEDGER SYNDICATE

INDEPENDENCE SQUARE PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Far up in the Arctic Circle and deep in the jungles of Africa—on every frontier of civilization—you find the Linotype.

Under the most adverse conditions these machines give uninterrupted service because they were built without compromise. Every part of the Linotype is there because the machine is better for it and every part fits into the big scheme of simple operation.

The illustration shows an operator changing the lower magazine of a Model 8 Linotype, from the front, of course, because that is quicker and more convenient for the operator.

Composed entirely on the Linotype

TH DISTRICT WANTS EDUCATIONAL WORK

onvention at Minot, N. D., Commends A. A. C. W. Movement—Urges Its Expansion—Support Pledged for State Campaign

By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER

MINOT, N. D., September 20.—Resolu-ons commending the educational cam-ign recently instituted by the Associ-ed Advertising Clubs of the World ere passed at the close of the final con-ntion of the Eighth District of the A. . C. W. held at Minot, N. D., Septem-r 14 and 15. The continuance and rther extension of the movement was rged. Support of the Town Criers ubs of the state in a campaign to get e legislature to provide finances for ad-rtising North Dakota was promised. he convention passed a vote of thanks the City of Minot for the elaborate spitality extended to those attending e convention.

This was the final meeting of the ighth District clubs because, at the in-rnational convention, to be held in At-ntic City, June, 1923, all district or-nizations will be dissolved, and the siness of each state will be handled rough state organizations.

Fargo was chosen the 1923 meeting ace of the North Dakota clubs. R. E. olley, of Fargo, was elected president, d V. E. Stenersen, of Minot, and Julius acon, of Grand Forks, chosen first and cond vice-presidents, respectively. homas F. Sullivan, of Mandan, was med secretary-treasurer. A member each club in the state will be named the president to constitute the board directors.

"Advertising the Great Northwest" as the subject treated in a paper pre-red by Governor R. A. Nestos, who as unable to attend the convention on count of a previous engagement.

"Advertising may and should play a ost important part in the development the great northwest," said the gover-r in his paper, which was read to the nvention. "While it is true with com-unities and states, as it is with individ-als, that no person liveth to himself one and that to a large extent adjoining ctions or states will feel keenly the re-tion from the prosperity or lack of osperity of neighbors, nevertheless, our ain interest is in our own state and the part that advertising may be made play in the building up of our com-nwealth.

"In advertising merchandise or lines business you require that the adver-ting should be free from fraud, should clean, truthful and adequate for the rpose. In the task of realizing this al you must of necessity carefully an-yze the article or business to be adver-ted, and in so doing will discover what-er defects or weaknesses may exist in ch article or business, that you cannot ord to reveal to the prospective pur-haser, and if an advertising campaign conducted in conformity with the ideals successful merchandising these defects d weaknesses will unquestionably first eliminated so that there will be noth-g to impede the finest kind of an ad-rtising campaign."

"Advertising is a form of public ser-ce—helping the customer by saving his her time and money," declared Carl unt, of New York, general manager of e Associated Advertising Clubs of the orld.

"An advertising club has the power to ake advertising more effective in the al community by advertising. I be-ve the average advertiser does not talk ough about his advertising and what it es for the public," he said.

"Advertising lowers the cost of selling ngs. It helps get the goods into the nds of the people at a smaller expense an would otherwise exist."

Spearman Reporter Burned Out

The printing plant of the Spearman ex.) Reporter was destroyed by fire unknown origin last week. The loss will amount to more than $5,000 and is partially covered by insurance. Publication of the paper will be resumed as soon as new equipment can be purchased and installed.

EXPECTS SKY WRITTEN NEWS FLASHES SOON

R. L. O'Brien, Editor of the Boston Herald, Predicts Possible Use of Sky-Writing Airplane for Big Events Day or Night

The time may be here soon when the dissemination of news in letters of smoke in the sky may be a frequent event, according to Robert Lincoln O'Brien, editor of the Boston Herald, in commenting on the recent introduction of "sky writing" into the United States from England.

"Is the day at hand when we shall receive our news from the skies and when 'signs in the firmament' will get ahead of the telegraph and beat radio at its swiftest?" he queries. "There is a promise of it already, but no more than a promise. We have beaten the British at broadcasting; the British are already far ahead of us in the art of 'sky-writing.'

"The trick is done by an airplane which emits puffs of smoke in the shape of letters, and does it with such scientific precision that words can be fashioned out of the very texture of the vapor itself. For a hundred square miles around London, advertisements thus formed are being daily seen and read by millions of people, nor does the writing fail to be intelligible even when the airplane producing it is at such an elevation as to be itself invisible.

"It is now proposed to employ sky print, by a combination of airplane and wireless, as a means of announcing events of national interest—the result of a horse race, the winner in an athletic competition, the death of some high-placed statesman, or the outcome of a parliamentary vote. The suggestion is offered that if two or three words can thus be written on the skies by a single airplane, whole sentences could be displayed by a fleet of machines.

"And for night service would it not be possible to make the smoke luminous? Then comes the thought of what might be done with such a method of communication in time of war. Valuable information or important orders, first received by wireless, could be delivered from airplanes to a waiting regiment; so false messages could be sky-written to deceive a whole army. Here would be the beginning of new conflicts in the air, for the enemy would want to keep the advantages of the system to himself and make them useless for his rival.

"Thus far, the airplane fitted with apparatus for sky-writing is in competition with the hoarding and the billboard. It will have a long way to travel when the news of the day is in question before it can write upon its banner, 'Look up and not down.'"

Drops Football Prize

At the request of the principals of the five Buffalo high schools the Buffalo Courier and Enquirer have withdrawn their $3,000 cash prize offer to high school football teams. The principals said a contest of this type conducted last year, on a coupon basis, detracted pupils' attention from their studies.

Williams Buys Hope Herald

C. C. Williams, of Little Rock, Ark., and formerly one of the publishers of the Stuttgart (Ark.) Free Press, has bought the Hope (Ark.) Evening Herald, which he took possession of September 15.

Indicted for False Advertising

An indictment charging false advertising was recently returned by a Boston grand jury against H. V. Greene, a financier. He was held under $5,000 bail, which he furnished.

RHODE ISLAND

A Busy Market Place

Rhode Island is the most densely populated State in the Union.

Here is a compact community whose wants are many; a population of 600,000 people composed of skilled wage-earners, thrifty farmers and successful professional and business people, eager for good things and able to buy if your merchandise or service fills the bill.

Providence is the trading center of Rhode Island. More than two-thirds of the State's population is within a fifteen-mile radius, excellent train and trolley service and well-kept State roads placing them within and hour's ride of the city.

This prosperous community is thoroughly covered by Rhode Island's two great newspapers—

The Providence Journal

MORNING AND SUNDAY

—AND—

The Evening Bulletin

Leaders in New England thought for many years, there are few worthwhile homes in the State where one or the other is not read. In all advertising classifications which denote buying power, such as financial, automobile, resort, travel, educational, etc., these papers lead the field. No matter what your product is, they will secure for you the maximum of buying power and reader confidence.

21½c a Line Daily and 12c a Line Sunday Buys the Combined Circulation of These Influential Papers

Providence Journal Co.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Chas. H. Eddy Co.
Representatives

R. J. Bidwell Co.
Pacific Coast Representatives

New York Boston Chicago San Francisco Los Angeles

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT NATIONWIDE

Steel and Iron Industries Return Toward Normal—Wheat Crop 30,217,000 Bushels Above 1921 Cost of Food Declines

Continued signs of better business were to be found in the newspapers during the past week. Iron and steel, two of the largest basic industries of the country, are speedily returning to normal. The past week witnessed increased production of both pig iron and steel, together with a falling off in the amount of business done at premium prices to insure speedy deliveries. Eight additional blast furnaces, chiefly in Ohio and Western Pennsylvania, were blown in, according to Iron Age, which states that as a whole the steel industry is now probably operating at about a 65 per cent rate.

The wheat crop of the United States and Canada for 1922 will be 1,125,968,000 bushels, according to the latest bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture. This is 30,217,000 bushels greater than the 1921 crop of 1,095,751,000 bushels, and 342,158,000 bushels greater than the average yield from 1909 to 1913, which was 883,810 bushels a year.

Jones Brothers Tea Company reports gross sales for August of $1,395,001, as against $1,402,834 for the same month last year. For the eight months ending August 31, the company's sales aggregated $11,416,130, as against $11,377,686 for the same period in 1921. At the same time the average prices for its products have declined approximately 12½ per cent, so that these figures show a substantial increase in the volume of business done.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works during the past week reported the receipt of $350,000 order for locomotives for the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway.

In announcing a decline in the price of Willys-Overland automobiles, John N. Willys said: "We are rapidly settling many of the fundamental problems which have held business back over here, and conditions are improving daily. I cannot see anything but a period of increasing prosperity ahead. We are not worrying about coal. We are simply bending our energies toward getting ready for the big increase in business which we know is ahead of us."

The Association of Railway Executives announced the number of cars loaded with coal for the week ending September 16 as 195,142, of which 19,816 carried anthracite, which was the first week's output since resumption of mining operations.

The earnings of the Packard Motor Car Company for the year ending August 31, 1922, is not announced as yet, but the company states that "after setting aside adequate reserves, net earnings will be more than $1,000,000. If no reduction in inventory is called for the company's net for the period may run as high as $1,500,000."

"The net earnings at present are running in excess of $500,000," the statement adds, "and there is no indication of slackening of business. The company is now on a production basis of about 2,000 cars monthly and is planning a considerable increase in production."

The retail cost of food to the average family in the United States decreased 2 per cent in the month ended August 15, according to figures made public September 19 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor, based on reports from fifty-one cities.

Decreases in twenty-two articles of food ranged from 28 per cent for potatoes to 1 per cent for sirloin steak and rib roast, while of eleven articles showing an increase granulated sugar led, with 7 per cent.

Receiver for Gatti-McQuade Co.

The Gatti-McQuade Company, 200 Fifth avenue, New York, were placed in the hands of John B. Johnson as receivers September 15 by Federal Judge Martin T. Manton. The company, which deals in mill products, has a plant in New Jersey. The creditors who filed the petition are Samuel Waldstein, with a claim of $572; the Gratton and Knight Manufacturing Company, $40, and W. C. Jones Company, $11,205. The petitioners state that about six or seven months ago there was a meeting of the creditors and a committee was then formed and has since conducted the affairs of the company. Because of this, the petitioners believe the company is insolvent and will not be able to continue the conduct of its business.

AD INDUSTRY BOOK NEEDED

Is Least Understood Business Fundamental, Says Guy Emerson

Bankers, with a few exceptions, are not opposed to advertising, according to Guy Emerson, first vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, New York, speaking September 19 at the first luncheon of the season of the New York Representatives' Club, speaking on "Bankers in Advertising."

"The idea that bankers as a class are opposed to advertising is erroneous," said Mr. Emerson. "As a class, they know that advertising is a potent force and they are not opposed to it. But their business is to lend money, not their own money, but money placed in their care, and as such they have no direct contact with advertising, except that used by their own institutions. However, advertising is less understood than any other important industry in the country, and the organization which would immortalize itself has only to prepare a work which would set forth exactly what advertising is and how it works, just as has been done many times with steel and other basic industries."

Mr. Emerson closed his talk by emphasizing the need of a closer understanding between business men, advertising men and bankers.

LLOYD GEORGE SIGNS CONTRACT

New York Times and Chicago Tribune Get Serial Right to Memoirs

The New York Times and the Chicago Tribune have signed a contract with Lloyd George for the serial publication rights of his memoirs. The British Prime Minister signed the duplicate contracts September 14 and they are now on their way to the United States for the signatures of the two papers which are syndicating the feature.

The price to be paid for the Lloyd George Memoirs which will be devoted to the period of the Great War is not given, but it is stated that he will receive nearly £1 per word. This, the New York Times announcement states, will be double the price the ex-Kaiser received for his autobiography. The Prime Minister, it is understood, will not retain any of the money he receives for his work, but will give the entire proceeds of his writing to charity. Publication of the Lloyd George Memoirs will commence after the Kaiser's book has been printed serially. Publication of this will be begun September 24.

Rothermere Buys Brother's Papers

Lord Rothermere, brother of the late Lord Northcliffe, has purchased from the Northcliffe estate its interest in the London Daily Mail, the Evening News, the Weekly Dispatch, and the Continental Mail. Cables from London dated September 17 state that the consideration is understood to be £2,000,000 and that the London Times has been offered to John Walters for £1,000,000. This is understood to be more than he is willing to pay. Lord Beaverbrook is mentioned as a bidder for the London Times, if the Walters family do not take up their option, but it is prophesied that if the purchaser is other than a Walters it will be Lord Rothermere.

NEWSPAPER ADS "STAR" AT AGENCY MEETING

Personnel of United Advertising Companies Told of Performances of Space in Papers at Annual Convention Held in N. Y.

The United Advertising Corporation, the United Advertising Agency and affiliated companies held a general sales convention, September 19 and 20 at the Waldorf Astoria, New York. A number of talks at the agency sessions laid particular stress upon the part of newspaper advertising in general advertising plans.

Theodore S. Fettinger, treasurer of the United Agency, with headquarters at Newark, N. J., pointed out particularly how the many performances of newspaper advertising for merchants and manufacturers proved it to be a great force and that no salesman should or need go beyond the truth in selling newspaper advertising to his clients. There is no need to surround the subject of advertising with "black magic" or to promise untold wealth in return for the money expended. A. Cavalli, of the New York office of the agency, laid stress on the fact that advertisers could secure immediate publicity and advertising through the newspapers for the changes in the styles of merchandise, that sometimes come about overnight. He told the gathering of the various style elements and how they influence the advertising of all merchandise and the part played by the newspapers in the quick dissemination of the manufacturers' message to the public.

E. W. Bateman, vice-president of the Texas division of the agency, told the audience of the specific details of two of the big Southwestern newspaper campaigns—"Mrs. Tucker's Shortening" and The Texas Chiropractors' Association. In the case of "Mrs. Tucker's Shortening," by means of the proper merchandising of the newspaper campaign, the concern was able to sell the jobbers on the idea of taking shorter profits per item in anticipation of the more appreciable profits that would come from greater volume.

In the matter of the Texas Chiropractors' Association the chiropractors of Texas were faced by adverse legislation and the newspaper campaign which was run throughout the State of Texas succeeded in protecting their profession.

Among the other speakers at the agency sessions were Leonard Dreyfus, president of the United Agency; H. C. Daych, vice-president of the agency; Joseph R. Lisson, managing director of the Canadian branch; Martin Prehn, director of copy; Jerome Walter, Joseph A. Burrell, credit manager, and Harry A. Ahern.

Last Tourney of Ad Golfers

The last tournament of the season of the Advertising Club Golf Association of New York, will be played September 2 on the links of the Shackamaxon Golf Club, Westfield, N. J. The Frank Prebrey Cup is to be played for during the afternoon.

The Ludlow

For Heavy Holiday Rush

YOUR heavy advertising during the Thanksgiving and Christmas rush, will tax your type capacity. How will you prepare for it? Will you once more adopt the annual makeshift of buying new type for immediate needs? Or will you solve this problem for good by installing equipment which lasts.

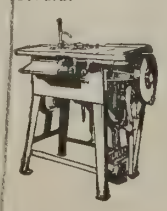
New Type, As Needed, Without Storage

No more type shortage will ever haunt your office when big business looms if you have a Ludlow. You make, as needed, all the type you want, all new and without storage.

No more last minute jams in composing room, because advertisements can be set as far in advance as copy can be secured. With whole issues of forms still standing, your type capacity is still 100 per cent.

Save distribution costs. There will be no more night or Sunday distribution, to make way for next edition. Ludlow forms may be dumped or stored indefinitely. Clean decks follow the Ludlow.

More speed at make-up is easy and natural when the all-slug method is followed. Slugs are quick and easy to handle; they cannot pi, and are easy to justify.



Big type sizes in bold and extended faces all the way up to 60 point, dispense with single types altogether. The Ludlow System covers the whole range.

No type to buy; this leaves money in your pocket each year. Ludlow matrices stay new. Every expenditure brings additional fonts instead of replacements of old ones.

Small investment is important and profitable compared with any other system. This little giant scores heavily on every test. It costs less, takes less space, gives greater capacity, makes more speed, and lasts longer at lower cost for upkeep.

The Ludlow has helped us materially in handling increased business and we entertain no fears concerning its assistance when the heavy fall and holiday advertising rolls in. No more pulling of letters; no more worry about type supply running low in spots. Distribution has been reduced to a minimum. —Allentown Democrat.

In addition to having an almost unlimited amount of type, the appearance of our advertising alone justifies the installation. —Omaha World-Herald.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
Eastern Office: World Building, New York City

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION ABOVE 10 PT.

IG ADVERTISING ERA SEEN BY RANKIN

rosperity of Nation Based on $7,000,000,000 Agricultural Year Already Felt in Advertising Field—Better Times for Everybody Coming

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 18.—The signs e set for a bumper advertising period, cording to William H. Rankin, presint of the William H. Rankin Company, dvertising agency, of New York, Chigo, London and Toronto. Mr. Rankin cently came to Boston to attend the tional golf championship tournament, it he took sufficient time away from atching "Chick" Evans in action to oint at some concrete evidences that siness in general and advertising are ttering the upswing.

"Ever stronger and each day with a ndlier warmth, the sun of prosperity beaming upon the United States," he ated. "Not for many years has the rospect seemed so hopeful; the foundaons upon which sane, non-speculative siness are erected have never been more lid. He must be a confirmed pessimist deed who, looking at the clouds made of railroad and coal strikes, confused olitics, outbreaks of disorder, an unttled tariff and such things, does not e that these things are only to hide r a very short time the sun of prosrity.

"It is an axiom in national economics at wealth springs from the soil, and nner crops which conservative estimars place at a value of over $7,000,000,00 are sufficient to show how solidly d on what a firm foundation is based e coming era of prosperity. There is t a business throughout the length and eadth of the United States but what is und in the logical course of nature to el the effect of the announcement that e farmers of America are coming into e market with $7,000,000,000 to spend. hat have you to sell?

"As a matter of fact, I am firm in the lief that the new tariff, so far from ting as a brake on prosperity, will have effect of speeding it up, enhancing it d placing it on a firmer basis.

"But this bumper crop with which the ition is blessed is only the beginning. ever before has the national credit been so high a mark. The world is in bt to us and our position in the money arts of the world is supreme. Surplus edit reserves are piling up daily. Every gitimate security we possess is rising in lue; orderly liquidation of inventories oceeds as a matter of course; cheap ney is seeking in every field new work t do, and new construction projects in ery quarter of the nation make the ions of the optimists real and true.

"And there is no greater or surer incation of the solidity of the new prosrity which is upon us than the advertng field. Here is the very pulse of a business; for the field of advertising the nation's market place. Never was re so propitious a moment for the rchant or manufacturer to let the nan know by judicious and timely adrtising what he has to offer. The riche harvest will be gleaned by those earlie in the field.

"The farmer, the merchant, the manufturer, the banker, all have their faces ward the rising sun of this prosperous e. Back of it all is the high intelligce of one hundred millions of hardrking, God-fearing, home-building merican citizens. Side by side they ve stood while the sun was overcluded with the hate and disintegration o war, knowing that this phase would ss, and that work and faith and high ideals would bring their reward.

"For the prosperity that is upon us is n the prosperity of one class; it is not f the farmer alone, nor the capitalist ane, nor the laboring class alone. On a the workers of the great and busy hie which make up the American nation, th sun of prosperity is shining. The lit clouds, 'no larger than a man's had,' which seem to dim the rays of prosperity's sun are passing surely and swiftly away. The gods of industry are holding forth their hands laden with rich gifts. It is for us to be worthy of the fortune which is ours."

GREENVILLE PRESSROOM SCALE CHANGES

(Continued from page 8)

assistants will receive $38 nights and $36 days. Second assistants get $34 nights, $29 days, and third assistants, night work only, $25 per week. Hours are 48 a week, day or night. The old scale for night pressman, night and day first assistants and day second assistants are unchanged. Day pressmen get a decrease of $2 per week, while second assistants on day work receive a $3 increase.

New Typo Scale in Brantford

Brantford (Ont.) newspapers and compositors have signed a three-year contract, effective September 30, providing a scale of $34.50 day work and $36.50 night work for operators and floormen, and $36.50 day work, $37.50 night work for machinist-operators and foremen. Apprentices will receive from $10.50 to $14.50. Hours are 48 a week for day work and 45 for night work. The former scale was: Operators and floormen, $33 day and $35 night; foremen, $36 per week; machinist-operators, $35. The old apprentice scale was $9 to $13 a week.

Union Printers Out of Politics

Denial that the Allied Printing Trades of Boston back any political candidate has been issued by the officers of the unions involved as the result of the claim of William T. A. Fitzgerald that he was being backed by these labor groups. "The Allied Printing Trades have not endorsed any candidate for any political office at this time," the statement said. It was signed by the Boston Electrotypers' Union No. 11, and also by Martin J. Casey, president, and O. S. MeLeod, secretary pro tem of the Boston Allied Printing Trades Council.

Union Won't Support Labor Daily

Members of the British National Union of Journalists recently voted down a proposition to tax each member twopence a year for the support of the London Daily Herald, the labor newspaper. About 25 per cent of the membership voted, 399 favoring it and 739 against it. The Herald has launched a circulation campaign and has dropped its price to one penny.

New Women's Political Weekly

Equal Rights is the name of a publication issued weekly by the National Woman's Party to record the progress the organization is making in its campaign in behalf of a constitutional amendment to remove the so-called legal discriminations against women. Mrs. Eleanor Taylor Marsh, press chairman of the party, is in charge of publication of Equal Rights.

Installing an Ad Board

The Boston Advertiser is installing a special order telephone switchboard in their 82 Boylston street office to take care of want ads. Miss Nora Bielenberg, who has handled classified advertising for over five years in Boston, is in charge of the Advertiser's order board.

Harvard Business Review Soon

The Harvard Business Review, published for the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, by A. W. Shaw, Chicago, will commence publication this Fall.

IOWA—

Strong in Educational Facilities

Largely because of the abundance of educational institutions, Iowa leads the nation in literacy. Well equipped elementary schools adequately meet the needs of half a million children. About 439 efficient consolidated schools place the advantages of a city high school at the disposal of rural residents. A state university with more than 6,000 students, a state college of agriculture and mechanic arts with over 4,000 students, and normal schools provide means for higher education.

In addition, there are scores of sectarian and private universities, colleges and schools of academic and specialized training throughout the state.

Education Improves the Market

It is impossible to wish for something of which one is ignorant. A great multitude of things, once luxuries, have become common necessities through education. Knowledge breeds desire.

Iowans want the best. Widespread intelligence has led to universal demand for the finer things in life. The great wealth and resources of the state make possible realization of these wants.

Advertisers find Iowa an easier market in which to sell and one supported by huge buying power for products of proven worth.

Reach this wonderful market through the following newspapers.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(M)	10,510	.035
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(S)	13,171	.035
†Cedar Rapids Gazette.....(E)	21,131	.06
*Council Bluffs Nonpareil.....(E&S)	14,749	.05
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(E)	14,649	.06
*Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,080	.06
*Davenport Times .....(E)	23,839	.07
*Des Moines Capital .....(E)	60,186	.14
*Des Moines Sunday Capital.....(S)	33,607	.14
*Des Moines Register and Tribune..(M&E)	122,074	.20
*Des Moines Sunday Register.....(S)	116,465	.20
*Iowa City Press-Citizen .....(E)	6,320	.035
Mason City Globe Gazette.....(E)	11,015	.035
*Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,868	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	13,186	.05
*Sioux City Journal .....(M&E)	50,804	.11
*Sioux City Journal .....(S)	38,168	.11
*Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	15,099	.05

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.

†Publisher's Statement for July, 1922.

CHARGE OF CONTEMPT AGAINST SANDERS

Second Arrest for Editorial Comment on Federal Injunction Against Railroad Strikers—Hearing Set for Today

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 19.—G. V. Sanders, editor of the Press, was arrested here last night, charged with contempt of court, and will be given a hearing Saturday.

G. V. SANDERS

He was arrested late last night by United States Marshal W. F. Appleby, on a warrant charging contempt, in the publication of an editorial alleged to have reflected on the dignity and integrity of the Federal courts.

Sanders was arrested at his home at 10 P. M., and arranged to give $1,000 bond this morning before George H. Poole, United States Commissioner. He was permitted to remain at his home last night.

Sanders' arrest followed publication of an editorial bearing the caption "The King Forbids," commenting upon the arrest of Jacob Cohen, editor of the Labor Review, on a charge of contempt for printing an editorial denouncing the strike breakers as "scabs" and "scavengers."

The warrant for Sanders' arrest did not state whether the contempt charge was based on the Daugherty injunction against striking railroad shopmen or another injunction issued by Federal Judge J. W. Ross, prohibiting criticism of strikebreakers.

Cohen yesterday was found guilty by Judge Ross of contempt of a Federal strike injunction issued by him, and sentenced to six months in jail and to pay a $1,000 fine.

In his editorial Sanders attacked both the Wilkerson and Ross injunctions. Commenting on Cohen's arrest, he said in part:

"If the courts can go that far in muzzling free press, where is the stopping place? Could there be any stopping place beyond that? If freedom of the press means anything at all in this country, it means freedom of an editor to express his opinion on questions which are uppermost in the public mind.

"If a court can take away the right by an injunction, either the court is out of gear, or the constitution. We prefer to think it is the court that is off its base.

"Since the arrest of Cohen, it seems that the local United States District Attorney has decided to prosecute him under the injunction issued by Judge Ross in the Federal Court here.

"It makes no difference whatever whether the injunction was issued in Chicago or Memphis. Both are in America."

AMBITIONS UNFILLED

IN the comprehensive memorial summary which the New York "Times" devoted to Charles Ransom Miller, its editor-in-chief from 1883 till his recent death, is this:

The ambition to become a teacher of Latin and get out his own edition of the "Odes of Horace" was put aside for the time, and Mr. Miller went to work on the "Springfield Republican."

That refers to 1872. Fifty years of arduous newspaper work went by, and at the end of the editor's life the chronicler says:

The early aspiration to edit Horace, persisting through many years, was never realized . . . Mr. Miller never wrote a book.

For the majority of newspaper men, even among the best, that must serve as an epitaph: He never wrote his book.

And yet, when the endless quiet work of our newspaper men is considered, when the sum is made up of the facts they have recorded, the minds and lives they have influenced, may they not be rated higher than those who leave unthumbed cards in the depths of library catalogues?—Colliers Weekly.

FUN AND BUSINESS

Get-together Dinner of Philadelphia North American Great Success

The classified advertising department of the Philadelphia North American held its annual get-together dinner recently. I. W. Williams, classified advertising manager, says, "We not only have a lot of fun at these dinners but we have enough of business to make it of value to the department."

The program and menu, given in part below, has a Want-ad flavor:

Parcel Post Toasties with Cream of Philadelphia Lineage

Radioshes

Storage Eggs a la Ying Comp e Tition

Carp etcle Ning

Selected Resorted Tea Ravels

Hot Dogs and Birds (save the bird seed and grow some more)

Real Estate Snappers
(One look means a lot)

Spring Poultry Pages
(Pullets Advertisers' Profits)

Williamsized Farm and Garden Produce

Bill Ding's Feet—Sure!

Leg a la Dvertisements

Stewed Help Wanted
Mail and Remail

Mew Sick Ailin' Struments

If there's still any room for rent, here's a business opportunity to the man who wants the situation of filling your machinery, apartments with horses, bicycles, patent attorneys, ordinances and steamboats.

Everything About the North
E. S. Edmondson

Propaganda in Salesmanship
F. V. L. Turner

Graphic Illustration of Promotion
Edmund M. Pitts

Selling the North
T. J. Mulvey

Many, Many Thanks
Doc. Williams

CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

President McKirdy of Pittsburgh Press Club Instigates Investigation

S. M. Luckett, an advertising solicitor, L. S. Neff and R. B. Sulter, Salesmen, were placed under arrest in Pittsburgh, September 8, on charges of conspiracy in connection with an alleged outing for the benfit of local newsboys.

According to Detective E. T. McGough, who made the investigation and arrests, at the instigation of John E. McKirdy, president of the Pittsburgh Press Club, in behalf of the club, the men said to have obtained a large sum fr local business firms in contributions the outing, which the men arrested said to have claimed was being held der the auspices of Pittsburgh lo papers and the Pittsburgh Press Clul

Mr. Sulter was chairman of the alle outing. Detective McGough stated, had offices in the Shannon Building, fr where a telephone canvass of the city conducted. The tickets were sold $2.50 each "for benefit of the Newsbo Home and outing," and the money ceived is said to have been appropria by those under arrest.

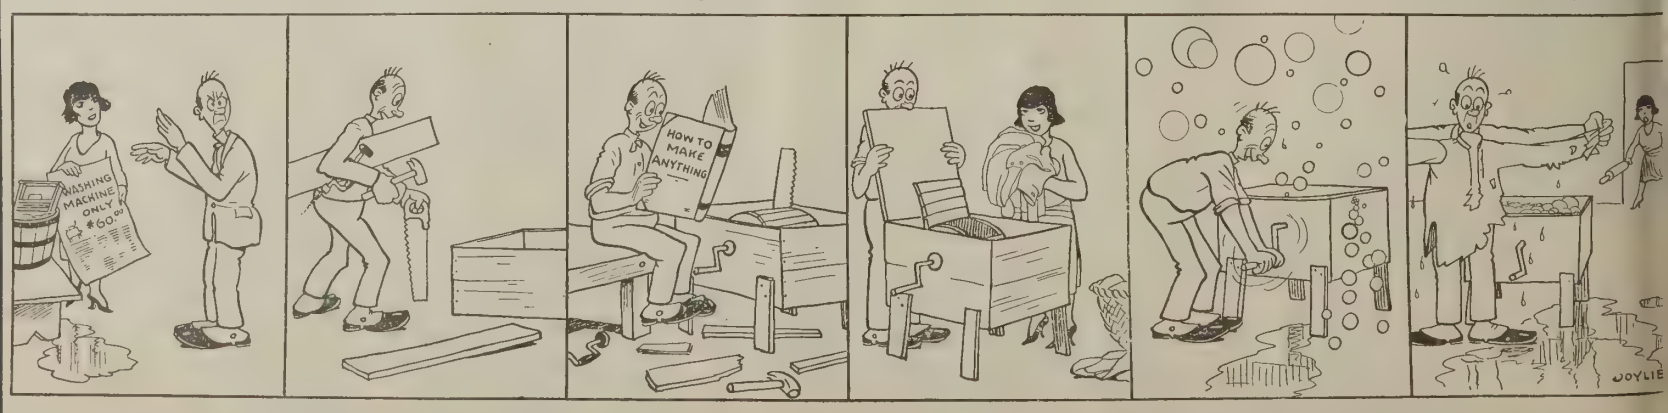
Three other men are involved, and said by Detective McGough to have b paid a 20 per cent commission for deliv ing tickets sold by the telephone canv and collecting contributions. One ch for $25 was endorsed with the name of Newsboys' Home and cashed in a l cafe. Officials of the Home denied outing or canvass had been authori by them.

WILLIAMS SUES DRY LEADE

Former Editor of the Richmond Jour Asks for $10,000 Damages

Col. Alfred B. Williams, former tor of the Richmond (Va.) Ever Journal, is suing the Rev. David H burn, superintendent of the Anti-Sal League of Virginia and supposed ed of the Virginia edition of the Ameri Issue, for $10,000 for alleged libel.

An article appearing under date September 9 contains the following pa graph upon which Colonel Willi bases his suit: "We will give one lustration and we believe that this due our friends. We refer to A. Williams, former editor of the R mond Evening Journal, which was mouthpiece of the liquor organiza during the statewide campaign and reported to have sold out that org zation for the period of the campa against Statewide prohibition. Williams was so disgusted that the S of Virginia had gone dry that he mo to Baltimore and later to Washing Notwithstanding his unsavory reputa as a liquor advocate, he is now repo to be the editor of Westmoreland Da paper, known as the Loudoun Cou Times, in which the following langu appears: 'The opposition of this ganization (the Anti-Saloon Leag was vile, vindictive and vicious, these words express it very mildly deed.'"



Colonel Williams asserts that he not the editor of the Loudoun Times denies that he was the author of article in the Times which the Rev. H burn quoted.

The Newest 6-Column Comic Strip

DARIUS DUBB

Now Running in Several Leading Journals. Wire for proofs.

DARIUS DUBB—He Makes a Home Made Washing Machine. By Doyl

KEYSTONE FEATURE SYNDICATE 512 Victory Building PHILADELPHIA, PA

EWS OF ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

PUBLISHING

CI J. PINKSON of the San Fincisco Chronicle has been ec president of the San Francisco s lub, succeeding G. G. Weigle, of Examiner. Other officers elected ilbert H. Parker, the Associated s, vice-president; Frank B. Con-, easurer, and W. F. Kilcline, the ecretary. Directors named for yars were R. H. Cromwell, the nle; Abe Kemp, the Bulletin, and Reerts, the Examiner.

Shanahan, the Eastern (Md.) emocrat; Leo Moore, the Havre Gce (Md.) Hartford Democrat, Jseph B. Finan, the Cumberland Evening Times, were appointed a mee to arrange an equitable rate Ste advertising at the meeting of Maryland Press Association held eber 18 at Westminster. Baltimore sected for the winter meeting.

teiational problems of newspaper isng were discussed in the sum-eeting of the Texas Newspaper isers' Association, held in Galves-Stember 11. Walter A. Dealey, psident of Dallas, presided. Other obs in attendance were G. J. Pal-ecial commissioner of the asso-or J. L. Mapes and Alfred Jones, eumont; Frank G. Huntress, San n; John H. Payne and J. L. Ev-, Houston; Charles H. Newell, as Al H. Schuman, Fort Worth; ., reer, Denison; Harry L. Cohen Jm H. Luben, of Galveston.

neannual convention of the Indus-Editors' Association will be held at Hotel Nonotuck, Holyoke, Mass., eber 29. Sam Wingfield, the Cur-Publishing Company; C. F. Olin, the Departure Manufacturing Com-; George Galliver, president of the rian Writing Paper Company, and or John Cronin are among the ks. Charles E. Coyne, editor of Echo, William Filene's Sons Com-, Boston; James Parons, editor of e Partners, of the United Shoe Ma-er Company, and Anne D. McEl-the Gilchrist Company Ace, idt, secretary and treasurer, re-ively, are working on arrangements. Cox, of Telephone Topics, is head neprogram committee.

ne Sigma Delta Phi, professional nasm fraternity, will hold its na-l convention at the Kansas State cultural College at Manhattan, Kan., ober.

r ilbert Parker was the guest of r it a luncheon given by the So-Midland Authors at the Audi-rhotel in Chicago at 2 o'clock the noon of September 17.

ne all meeting of the Carolinas' Cir-ic Managers' Association will be in Winston-Salem, N. C., about the lof October. At this meeting the ir Circulation Managers' Associa-wl be brought into the organization it name changed to include circula-nagers of this state.

ADVERTISING AND BUSINESS

H Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston held a house warming r its new quarters in the Hotel ev September 16. Representatives vious advertising organizations l parts of New England came. neon of 150 covers was served in R Room of the hotel. After this as a tour of inspection of the as-ti's quarters on the seventh floor, r he guidance of Chester I. Camp-te president. Afternoon tea was dn the rooms and a group of wom-e ed by Miss Frances Hanson, sec-y treasurer of the New England Ad-si Clubs and former president of Advertising Women's Club, enter-d he visiting women's club members. n those who were present as representatives of various organizations were Miss Anna L. Mahoney, president of the Advertising Women's Club of Boston; William Balser, former chief crier of the Providence Town Criers; W. B. Snow, chairman of the New England Council of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; Frank A. Black, vice-president of the A. A. C. W., in charge of the New England division; L. A. Hastings, president of the Worcester (Mass.) Advertising Club; Edward A. King, former president of the New England Advertising Club; Ben Rawlings, treasurer of the Providence Town Criers; E. S. Durkee, president of the Lantern Club; Mrs. Florence Walker, former president of the Providence Advertising Women's Club; Henry Green, manager of the Boston Better Business Bureau, and William B. McLane, president of the Portland (Maine) Advertising Club.

The Fourth District Advertising Clubs convention is to be held in Chattanooga, Tenn., October 23-24. Arrangements in Chattanooga are in the hands of L. J. Wilhoite, president of the Chattanooga Ad Club, and F. J. Hitz, club secretary.

The National Co-operative Advertising Association, of which Herman Roe, of the Northfield (Minn.) News is president, has rented an office at 141 West Thirty-sixth street, New York. Mr. Roe is coming to New York shortly to confer with national advertisers and advertising agencies and push the work of getting his organization started.

A series of twelve lectures, to begin September 22, has been arranged by the Davenport (Iowa) Ad Club. Prominent leaders in the advertising field of Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, Ill., have been engaged to give these lectures.

New officers were recently installed by the Wichita (Kan.) Ad Club at their first meeting of the fall season. Charles A. Smith, of C. A. Smith & Co., succeeds John Millhaubt as president. Other officers are L. W. Baurerle, vice-president; Frank Galle, secretary-treasurer, and, directors, Charles H. Armstrong, E. H. Eberhardt, Floyd Irving, Harry Toby and John Millhaubt.

B. W. Elliott has been elected president of the Advertising Club of Wheeling, W. Va. Other officers are Will Hunter, vice-president; Willard F. Garrett, secretary; and French D. Walton, treasurer.

The American Manufacturers' Export Association will hold its annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, October 25 and 26. E. W. Drooston, export manager of Robbins & Myers Company, is chairman of the committee on arrangements for this convention.

Editor Arrested for Forgetting "Adv."

W. L. Thorndyke, editor of the Kissimmee (Fla.) Valley Gazette, has been arrested and released under bond pending hearing. The arrest was made under an information filed by County Solicitor Milton Pledger of Osceola county. It is understood Thorndyke is charged with publishing campaign literature without marking it "paid advertisement," and also that he is charged with publishing articles opposing a candidate without giving the stipulated 18 days' notice to the candidate.

The Cedar Rapids Transaction

Through an error it was stated in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week that the Cedar Rapids (Ia.) Gazette and Times had been sold by Luther A. Brewer to a syndicate composed of Col. W. G. Dows, Ike Smith, W. G. Haskell and H. W. Havner. In reality the paper sold was the Republican & Times. The Gazette is an evening paper with no relation to the transfered property.

Montreal Gazette Will Build

The Montreal Gazette is contemplating building a new home for the paper, but nothing definite has been done as yet, was the statement made by officials of the Gazette.

PLACE YOUR MESSAGE

for the selling of nationally advertised products before the prosperous people of

INDIANA

This is a great business state, "right in the heart" of everything; giving you excellent steam, electric and water transportation; agriculture, steel industry, coal mining and general manufacture.

The people of Indiana are liberal spenders for all things that go to make their Home-State worthy of all the affection they have for it.

Advertisers owe it to themselves to carefully scan the Indiana field and its great possibilities. This field can be judiciously covered by the use of Indiana newspapers.

The dailies listed below reach the greater part of the worth-while people of the state and can be of great aid in helping national advertisers to secure a firm foothold in one of the greatest units in the country.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,151	.025
*Evansville Courier	(M)	22,938	.05
*Evansville Courier	(S)	21,392	.05
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M) 23,528	38,582	.10
*Fort Wayne Evening Press	(E) 15,054
*Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	24,661	.07
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	31,508	.08
*Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(S)	32,008	.08
*Gary Evening Post and Tribune	(E)	8,953	.05
*Indianapolis News	(E)	115,634	.20
LaPorte Herald	(E)	3,721	.025
†South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,021 (E) 9,170	18,191	.05
†South Bend News-Times	(S)	18,864	.05
South Bend Tribune	(E&S)	16,027	.055
*Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,381	.06
*Vincennes Commercial	(M&S)	5,010	.025

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.

*A. B. C. Publishers' Statements, April 1, 1922.

†Publisher's Statement.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Farm News

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, SEPT. 12, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER.—I notice from time to time articles in EDITOR & PUBLISHER regarding farm journalism for the daily or the weekly; what is, or what is not farm news, and what bearing farm news might have on the circulation department and the advantage it might or might not give in advertising. It has interested me very much because farm news is my bent. This it is that brings me my bread and butter. I do know that the farmer praises the paper that will take pride in agricultural surroundings. I don't want to assert myself as an authority on this subject of farm news, but I should like to state my view as developed after a few years of association with dirt farmers whose experiences I write for their own weekly journal.

Because I passed directly from dirt farming into daily newspaper reporting I have always been inclined toward farm news. What appeared as interesting to me in the county seat position, the city bred reporter ran over as of no importance. So, the local columns contained items of hogs sold, cattle bought, buildings going up, and even the first chicks in the spring, or the first load of grain at threshing time, were faithfully reported by me.

All this was long ago and in a little city, and time, I believe, has broadened my views as to what farm news really is. Now I go out directly to the farmer in his fields. No longer do I mention merely that John Jones sold hogs or sheep or cattle, or that Mrs. Jones' old hen hatched the first chickens of the springtime. Such idle gossip as that would be! Long before the paper comes around with the reports, the neighborhood has heard them over the telephone party line, and over where the Joneses are not known, who cares? They have pigs and cows and chickens of their own which might deserve mention, but which, by some careless crook, never got into print, and so what prestige the paper won in one neighborhood, it lost in the other through envy of the latter.

We must delve deeper for farm news than into the shallowness of the surface. We must write of the things that will enlighten, uplift, and point the way upward out of drudgery. knowledge that will bring him larger yields if not better prices for his produce. He craves knowledge, but this he will not have forced upon him as we force castor oil down the throats of our infants with a spoon. Out of this desire for more knowledge the agricultural extension departments were born. Their bulletins are packed with the knowledge, but not in the appetizing English of the newspapers. Therefore they are taken slowly, grudgingly.

The newspaper can be the connecting link between the extension department and the farmer. What the extension departments have worked out in their demonstrations in field, feeding pen, and laboratory, let the newspaper make vital, concrete, emphatic, by applying it at home on the farm. Somewhere in the nearby territory are various farmers who are not working in the dark. They can be discovered through the office of the county agricultural agent, or they can be pointed out almost any day when they come into the town. Go to them for the interviews on better farming and you will be surprised at the intensity of farm interest you will obtain. Your story will be a verification of the truths brought out in the experiments in the agricultural station that all of us should be supporting.

Bulletins from these experiment stations that go out to the farmer seem coming from so far away—down from the land of strangers, so the farmer reads them only with a grain of salt, or ignores them altogether. Only a few are awake to the importance they contain. They can be localized, brought home, warmed up, colored up, glorified, after the newspaper's own style and they will be eagerly read by the farmer. Find the farmer who follows them.

Interview the successful farmer. He will reflect the knowledge he has gained from his own experience coupled with experience with the extension men. Any good reporter can get this interview, but unless the reporter has some knowledge of agriculture—more than that—love for it—he will be apt to regard this as of little importance. He will not know what queries to apply to his subject. If he be an agriculturist at heart he will meet the farmer on common ground and the narrative that he seeks will come very naturally as one farmer talks over the roadside fence to his neighbor. It will not be enough to know that his subject raised the biggest and best hogs. He must discover what plan of breeding and feeding the farmer followed. Ten chances to one it was very similar to one recommended by the animal husbandry department of the agricultural college upstate.

Agricultural bulletins from the stations are dry reading except for the farmer who is grasping for every new thought. Apply them to local farmers, serve them up in the bright, snappy journalistic way, and even the most stubborn man of the soil devours them as news and begins to see the light.

I like to keep posted on what is being worked out in the extension departments and then to seek the farmers who are being guided by the experiments. There is usually only one right way to farm in a certain locality. The rest are only partially right or entirely wrong. There is a reason for every failure, and the agricultural experiment stations are striving to discover all of them. They have solved hundreds of the problems and will solve more, and the press of the country can be of tremendous assistance.

There is romance in farm journalism, much more than you will find following police court records or marriage license clerks. The most romantic of all the crops I find to be the lowly potato. Follow the potato specialists a season or two and you will discover why. It is a living, breathing thing, so sensitive to every change of soil and climate and so responsive to human care.

I cannot understand why farming, science, profession, art that it is, should not have its department in the newspaper along with society, finance, automobile, and the courts. The more local the department can be made, the greater value it will be. So many of the daily newspapers I pick up imagine they have a farm department when they only clip from here and there afar off, and the ignorance of the farm editor is manifest in the untimeliness of the chosen articles. I know one case in particular where a society editor, a young lady, who never in her life was a farmer, makes up the farm page as filler for the lean issue every Monday morning.

If only the bulletins from the stations were written by regularly trained newspapermen, the farmers might take them more eagerly, but they are prepared by men who are otherwise professional. I believe the time is not far off when they will be from the typewriters of journalists who fully understand that their contents must be more than informative. They must be bright, entertaining, sunshiny, almost jesting, like all of the newspapers also should be, even if some of them are not.

—GEORGE R. HARRISON.

The Home Paper

OMAHA, Neb., August 29, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: The following reasons why home folks should lend their support to their home paper came out in a recent issue of the Valley (Neb.) Enterprise:

1. Because, when you were born, it was the home paper that introduced you to the world.

2. When you grew up and graduated the home paper gave you another writeup.

3. When later on and you found your life companion and were happily married the home paper gave you and yours a nice notice.

4. When sickness and misfortune invaded your home, the sad news was carried to your friends and neighbors by the home paper.

5. When you had been successful in a business venture or had been promoted, it was the home paper that heralded your ability.

6. If you sold out or moved to another location the home paper followed you with news of friends and neighbors.

7. When some unscrupulous person tried to injure your character, it was the home paper that came to your aid.

8. Because the home paper boosts your town and its institutions, its people, its schools, its churches, and helps to promote good fellowship in the community.

9. Because the live merchants offer money-saving bargains and protect you from catch-penny mail order houses.

10. And last, when you are finally laid away, it is the home paper that prints consoling news of your demise, and that extols your virtues so the hearts of those who mourn are made to feel thankful that the home paper stuck by you from cradle to grave.

ARTHUR R. DAVISON.

Wants a Patterson Infeed Device

CLINTON, Ind., September 13, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I wonder whether, from your records of advertising, you have any knowledge of the Patterson Infeed device for use on web printing press. We bought a Cox Duplex three years ago, equipped with one, which has worked satisfactorily and to change to the regular device made by the Duplex printing company means time and expense. The Duplex people claim the Patterson outfit is out of business and they don't know where we can get some new rubber disks—that ride the ribbon. If you can throw any light on where we can get such we will appreciate it.

THE DAILY CLINTONIAN,
J. W. PIERCE, Publisher.

Mr. Hamilton Analyzes an Editorial

NEW YORK, September 2, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: This morning's leader editorial in the Wall Street Journal is a simple syllogism of the kind you wanted for your re-interview with me in EDITOR & PUBLISHER of September 2:

* * *

A RESIDUE OF REAL GAIN

There is a significant item in Friday's Wall Street Journal which states that the Chesapeake & Ohio shops have now 70 per cent. of a working force and are turning out much more than 70 per cent. of the production previous to the strike. Out of the shopmen's strike may come a thorough reform of those preposterous national working conditions established by McAdoo and only in part repealed by a decision of the Labor Board. It is evident also that the strike is falling to pieces. The strikers themselves have become strikebreakers by taking jobs on railroads safely distant from those which previously employed them.

Eighteen years ago contraction in general business forced one of the greatest systems in the United States to cut its shop force 50 per cent. after a time of inductrial activity. It did this by retaining on full time that 10 per cent. of good men who will not allow even a union to force them to do poor work. It laid off the 10 per cent. fringe which is always on the verge of unemployment from its own worthlessness. The remainder of the men were put on three days a week instead of six. Theoretically this was a reduction of 50 per cent. in the working force. But in a fortnight the output was 70 per cent. of what it had been and in six weeks it was 85 per cent.

Leader Lewis' $14,000 salary would call it "sweating," and this was clearly squeezing the water out of labor. People who remember the shirking and poor work, short hours and needless overtime of the war will hardly need to be told that at least $10,000,000,000 of our national debt of $23,000,000,000 represents watered labor. Every wasted hour will have to be made up by an honest hour's work; every unearned dollar must be redeemed by our children in a dollar which will be at least a hundred cents American. If the strike results in squeezing the water out of railroad shop labor it may be well worth its cost to the American consumer and taxpayer.

There is one fund for the payment of wages, and that is production. Over-production is so rare as to be negligible because it can always be remedied by increasing the production of transportation. If, as the great chemists say, "dirt is only matter in the wrong place, a surplus of raw material or manufactured goods is only something which has not yet been moved to its market. So long as men require food, clothes and shelter the world is in no danger of over-production. But it is in real danger of under-production, and the scientific cultivation of artificial scarcity is the only efficiency the central labor unions have ever developed.

Under the lead of the Pennsylvania Railroad, which deals direct with its contented workers and needs neither the Labor Board nor the unions, railroad production is at last beginning to shake off part of the incubus laid upon it by cowardly politicians and crooked labor leaders.

* * *

This editorial consists of a major premise, a minor premise and a conclusion. The major premise, the thought which is everlastingly true, is in the last paragraph but one—that production is the only fund for the payment of wages. The minor premise, the news of the day, that a railroad shop is getting better work than before the strike out of fewer men, is in the first sentence. The illustration is in the second paragraph and refers to the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1907, and the conclusion is in the last paragraph. The might have been stated first and perhaps editorial would be the stronger if it left out. It is a good thing to leave torial when you have made your point the reader draw his own conclusion.

* * *

There is one error in your interview accuse me of having worked on the P Gazette under H. Wickham Steed. some desk editor's work, and I do no Wickham Steed was in journalism at t but the idea of working for Northcl and editing a London daily thirty year absurd. The Pall Mall Gazette was c by William T. Stead, one of the most journalists who ever lived, even if he clined to fly off the handle.

W. P. HAMILTO
Editor, The Wall Street Jo

E. & P.'s Live Departmen

COATESVILLE, Pa., August 31,

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I want gratulate you upon your valuable dep "Hunches," as it really contains quite interesting dope. I have used a number hunches and have obtained great results interested also in the one dollar prize c have planned to submit several hunches have used myself in newspaper work introduce myself as a member of the sta Coatesville Record, Coatesville, Pa.

W.

Label Publicity Yarns

BERKELEY, CAL., Se

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: So far as t ing public knows or cares the contents news columns of a paper have the tacit ment of the publication, as to fact. P who realize this and who recognize th toward their readers are extremely care all opinionated matter in the news col credited. They hold, and rightly so, news columns are strictly imperson should, aside from features, reviews, in and other material, credit for which clearly established, merely chronicle the ings of the day.

Laudatory theatrical or motion

The Bradford, Pa., Star and Record

Says—

"We run these ads at top of our first page on Saturdays, or as a full page on back page, entirely at our own cost, and have been doing this for two years."

The Gloversville, N. Y., Morning Herald in ordering Church Advertisements, Series No. 3, says: "We shall use one of these ads each week on our church page."

In the same manner the Milwaukee Journal, Greensburg, Pa., Tribune, Sault Ste. Marie News, Brandon, Man., Sun and other papers in this country and Canada are ordering these advertisements.

Series No. 3 is the best set of church advertisements ever offered newspapers. There are 52 pieces of copy, each 250 words, arranged to fit in with special church events, offered at a price which averages only 30 cents to $1.40 a week, depending on circulation of paper. Proofs on request.

Start something new in church advertising in your town and use these to stimulate more advertising by individual churches.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMEN
A. A. C. W.

Send for proofs to Herbert H. Smith, 156 Fifth Ave., New York City. After Oct 1 the headquarters of this department will be Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

ic: or so-called news, bear the same re-ionship to the readers as unsigned news items it implied that the newspaper vouches for e py or the picture. Therefore, in fairness th readers, all such material, unless signed a dramatic critic, should bear some distin-shg mark indicating that, while it is rtl as news, its text does not necessarily e ie endorsement of the publication.
'h same applies to the news contents of the rorbile section which, in many instances is tted with free writeups—material sup-ec of value to the autoist, but much of it a matter of fact, merely free notices ac-mpied by advertising made necessary to ai the writeup.
Th Gazette now has under consideration a n f labelling all material used in its news ms that has not been prepared by staff nlers or does not carry the credit line of our egiphic services. If the plan is finally opti all material of the character heretofore ntned will carry the slug line of "Publicity tte." This offers a simple "out" for the olier who wants to be fair with his readers ho at the same time is forced by condi-ns ver which he has no control to publish rei which he is not prepared to endorse.

JAS. E. WALES.
Editor, Berkeley Gazette.

ncy Papers Have a Real and Important Place

MONTREAL, September 15, 1922.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: You may have rec in recent issue of Life dated Sep-tbr 7th, a burlesque on the present day nd newspaper.
Th subject matter is splendid, but the roection appeared to us to be rather bitter ex ession.
a, accordingly, sending you a copy of a er which I have addressed to the editor Li. It follows:

* * *

R LIFE:—
ve just finished reading the very amus-ine entitled "The Sunday Number," but wa somewhat disappointed to find that in r ening pages you have given what is for a very unusual display of bad temper.
n our introduction, Gutenburg is repre-tec as making comments on the contents th present day Sunday Newspaper, and n other comments he refers to the Comic oph ent as being the very poorest form of no etc.
Fo my dear Life, even the most elementary ins establishments are not supposed to se their competitors, not only because it is tne but because it is poor business policy, p rticularly as there have been occasions en the remarks that you have made could pos ed to as a shining example of the "pot in the kettle black."
Ho ver, Life, we digress from our subject, a we supply a goodly quantity of very Canadian Newsprint on which many ex-en comic supplements are printed, I am ng he liberty of sending you a little folder chherhaps will give you a new understand-of the principles on which the comic page ou ied.
fo all one must remember that for every a ng your circulation that considers Life sil and the comic supplement vulgar, there fil , including myself, who sometimes con-r fe very dull and the comic page humor-tcan extreme degree. However, as you e doubtless discovered the masses are always, udg myself, stupid and lacking in sense hu or.
cl ring that while there is Life there is , am

A. L. DAWE.

* * *

n it seems that the Sunday paper has a l al and important place in present day nd m, and I would be interested in know-if ou have received other comments on this ec

A. L. DAWE.

Wi Not an Auditors' Association

EL PASO, Tex., September 13, 1922.

O DITOR & PUBLISHER: Notwithstanding re onsibility which newspaper auditors as-e d the complex questions they are called decide in every branch of newspaper nag, publishers are continually at a loss lece if a man is really in a position to ce of their interests, for however good an ay be in ordinary accounting, he is cer-y t a newspaper auditor and accountant ou years of experience. Publishers ex-thir auditors not only to audit accounts, to lace before them a monthly statement os statistical records, and protect them ns irregularities in every department.
ew aper executives are organized in cir-io classified, display and editorial, and qte time that auditors and accountants d rces, not only for the benefit of pub-rs, but for the former's protection and a there is no doubt but publishers would r engage men who are qualified by he ip to an organization limited to ex-nc newspaper auditors, in preference to norant of newspaper work, for the r son they prefer their circulation man-s t be members of the I. C. M. A.; adver-g nagers members of the A. A. C. W., e xchange of ideas between members is he reatest value to publishers, who neces-y in a very distinct advantage by having be of these organizations as executives, in view of the present day requirements d by men of proven experience and ability he particular profession are taken into de tion by the leading publishers, the ssi of a newspaper auditors' association ar to be paramount.

a ition to the advantage of such an as-tio to publishers, the benefits to members would be even greater; an auditor, like any other executive, sometimes wishes to make a change, possibly through indifferent health or some family reason, and a welfare department could put such men in communication with publishers, thus avoiding delay in making a change, while the exchange of ideas at the association's convention would help each member to be more up-to-date and of greater value to the publisher.
In asking for the publication of this letter, I have no thought or intention of seeking an official salaried position with an auditors' association, but have only in mind the many advantages to be obtained by publishers and newspaper auditors.
Every newspaper auditor is cordially invited to give his expression of opinion and suggestions so that a definite decision may be reached, with a view of forming an association.

B. G. BRINKLEY, Auditor,
El Paso Times.

How a Semi-Weekly Uses E. & P.

LONDON, Ohio, Aug. 29, 1922.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Enclosed please find four clipped articles from your "Money Maker-Saver" column, for which credit me with a subscription to your magazine. I am much pleased with the publication and find it a big help in my work as editor of the Madison Press, a semi-weekly printed here. We have a circulation of 32,000 paid in advance subscribers and we print on Monday and Thursday.
At the present time, I am conducting a contest among the farmers and garden fans for subscription to the paper for the largest specimens of various farm and garden produce exhibited in our office. This was suggested in one of the items I noted in your magazine and is making quite a hit with the community, especially in the face of a subscription contest put on by the opposition. Good luck.

A. K. CHENOWETH.

A Square Contest Man

LAREDO, Texas, Aug. 17, 1922.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: About a month ago I read a series of articles in EDITOR & PUBLISHER on Contests and I certainly want to congratulate you and Joseph S. Rogers, the author, on the frankness in which you discussed the same.
I used to work with a man named Rogers several years ago, and I was wondering if it was the same Rogers. At any rate, would you mind sending me his address?
I consider by publishing those articles that you have done more to help the contest business than any other agency and I have heard several publishers express the same opinion.
The Rogers I used to know, and I feel certain he is the author of those articles, was the orginator of many contest ideas now in use—and one the squarest men I have ever had the pleasure of meeting. I am confronted with several difficult problems at present and I think he might make some suggestion that would help me.

J. J. BENDER,
Campaign Manager, Big Four Organization.

A New Local Rate Basis?

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 15, 1922.

To EDITOR & PUBLISHER: I am enclosing herewith our new rate card, which we believe to be a new departure in the local advertising field, basing our circulation and rates on three cents per inch per thousand for daily advertisers, and, as you will notice, a few cents difference for less frequent advertising.
Believing it to be new, I am simply sending it to you with the thought that you may be interested, for it looks to us to be the right basis on which to make rates.

SOUTH BEND NEWS TIMES.
J. M. STEPHENSON, Publisher.

Crist Takes Over Tribune

The Anderson (S. C.) Tribune, published every morning except Monday, has recently been taken over by E. V Crist, advertising manager of the paper for more than a year. Since Mr. Crist became publisher of the Tribune, he has appointed George C. Sims, of Norfolk, Va., advertising manager and T. C. Jackson, circulation manager. Wilton E. Hall, editor of the Tribune for the past two years, remains. E. N. Smith, who came to the Tribune from the Tampa Tribune, as city editor, has resigned to go to the Greenville (N. C.) News and has been succeeded by L. M. Trotti of the Atlanta Georgian. The Anderson Tribune was founded in 1917 by V. B. Cheshire.

Fraternity Officers Meet

The executive officers of Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity, met in Ann Arbor, September 23. Those attending were national president, K. C. Hogate, New York; national treasurer, Neef Ward, Chicago; secretary, T. Hawkey and Professor F. L. Martin, School of Journalism, University of Missouri, editor of the fraternity's magazine.

If you did not like your town pretty well you probably would not spend your life getting out the very best daily newspaper possible to produce for your fellow citizens.

As a progressive, wide awake citizen it is your duty to do everything you can to make your good town a better town—to keep it thoroughly up to date—to keep it just a jump or two ahead of any other town of its size in the country.

When you tell manufacturers of the splendid market your town offers; when you put the story of your town before them, you are living up to your opportunities; you are inviting them to come to your town—to share in the prosperity of your town, to introduce their products to your fellow citizens; to share profits with your merchants.

If, in doing this, you necessarily offer the services of your advertising columns, you are merely pointing to the easiest, least expensive, quickest and most logical way for them to establish a market.

Inasmuch as most of the men who make up advertising lists are readers of EDITOR AND PUBLISHER—our advertising columns are splendidly equipped to carry your message to them.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER really enjoys co-operating with publishers of daily newspapers who wish to sell their towns to National Advertisers.

EDITORIAL

RAISE THE "A. B. C." STANDARD

AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS had on its membership list on August 18 last 33 business publications of "free distribution" as follows:

American Exporter
L'Exportateur Americain
Exportador Americana
Exportador Americano
Blue Book Foreign Trade
Building Materials
Buyers' Register
Cement Mill & Quarry
Chilton Automobile Director
Chilton Hotel Supply Index
Chilton Tractor Index
Concrete Products
Directory of Bidders
El Comercio
El Automobilismo
La Industria
Export (English, French, Spanish, Portuguese)
Fertilizer Green Book
Ford Car Trade Journal
Hendricks Register
Highway Engineer
MacRae's Blue Book
Mining Catalog
Mining Catalog Metal Quarry
Modern Hospital
100% Management Magazine
Pit & Quarry
Southwestern Bankers Journal
Sweet's Architectural Catalog
Sweet's Engineering Catalog

Stanley Clague, the managing director of the Bureau, informs EDITOR & PUBLISHER that the question to be determined at the October 20 meeting at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, is whether the Bureau will continue to accept publications of such character as members and to what is to be done with those who are now members.

Shall they be given a sufficient length of time in which to qualify with paid circulations and, upon a certain date to be set, automatically lose their membership unless they qualify?

Or shall they be eliminated forthwith?

Many newspaper publishers have been surprised to learn that such publications are enjoying membership in the Bureau and have asked the question how did it happen that they were admitted? Certainly this was done without the members' consent.

But with few exceptions publishers say they will be willing to forget the past, with its involved explanations, and vote for immediate elimination as of November 1, 1922, of free publications from membership in the Bureau, for none of the free publications now audited by the Bureau are entitled to second-class entry in the Post Office and only a very few are eligible to membership in their own field of legitimate publishing organizations. In plain words, they do not measure up to the most elementary qualifications of what constitutes a legitimate periodical or newspaper in the judgment of the government and the leading publishers of the country.

This does not mean necessarily that the free publications have no place or function or that they are without advertising value. They have in fact the same function and value as any piece of direct-mail printed matter; other things being equal. But they should be made to travel under their own colors.

LIES FROM ASIA MINOR

DANGER to America lurks in the Near East; just how great that danger is or will become rests entirely with the American newspapers.

The international propagandists are busier today than at any period since 1914 and it is regrettable that American editors after their sad experience with Old World liars during the Great War should now put such faith in the same sources of information.

Elihu Root, writing in the new quarterly magazine Foreign Affairs, might well have been discussing the first news to reach us of the sack of Smyrna by the Turks as a warning against the dangers threatening popular diplomacy when he said:

"When foreign affairs are ruled by democracies, the danger of war will be mistaken beliefs. The world will be the gainer by the change (to open diplomacy), for while there is no human way to prevent a King from having a bad heart, there is a human way to prevent a people from having an erroneous opinion."

Probably no event since the great war has better emphasized the need of internationalized communications free from censorship, if honest public opinion, the basis of the new diplomacy, is to be arrived at.

Unhampered communication is the biggest problem before the independent newspapers of the world today and it is one that demands the serious attention of all editors who are striving for truth. It is the principal reason why the Press Congress of the World should receive the unstinted support of newspaper men everywhere. In touching on this phase of the new order in diplomacy Mr. Root says:

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

COMPILED BY CHAS. W. MILLER

Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald

IN the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.—(Gen. iii:9). Ye shall do My judgments, and keep Mine ordinances, to walk therein: I am the Lord your God. Ye shall therefore keep My statutes, and My judgments: which if a man do, he shall live in them: I am the Lord.—(Lev. xviii:4,5).

"Our people have been taught by events to realize that with the increased intercommunication and interdependence of civilized states all our production is a part of the world's production and all our trade is a part of the world's trade, and a large part of the influence which make for prosperity or disaster within our own country consists of forces and movements which may arise anywhere in the world beyond our direct and immediate control."

It would seem that until such a time as unhampered communications are opened to the newspapers and news agencies of the world our Government should make some arrangement whereby the American people can secure the facts about important international happenings while opinion is in the formative state.

That could have been done at Smyrna where there were American representatives of proven honesty and ability as impartial observers and a number of warships carrying powerful wireless. It certainly is not to the credit of American journalism that in this case it accepted and printed as news canned propaganda that was carefully prepared by interested politicians located several thousand miles from the scenes of horror they pictured.

THE WEEK

G. V. SANDERS, editor of the Memphis Press, has been arrested on a charge of contempt for reprinting an editorial from the Labor Review that resulted in Editor Jacob Cohen of that publication being sentenced to six months in jail and fined $1,000 for daring to criticise the obnoxious Daugherty injunction against the right to reason. Editor Sanders committed the unpardonable crime of raising the question, "Why?" This important case to decide whether the Constitution is supreme or whether an Attorney General can transfer its powers to a Federal Court will be tried today.

Two brokers have been expelled from the New York Stock Exchange for "conduct inconsistent with equitable principles of trade."

The National Association of Retail Clothiers, meeting in the Madison Square Theatre, adopted a code of ethics that binds the members to a truthful representation of merchandise and to stanch integrity in all their dealings.

The insidious propaganda carried on by the directors of public relations of the railroads of the United States is at last being felt. Four New York City newspapers carried streamer headlines to the effect that the United States Railroad Labor Board had been defied by the New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads. It was not true, but the experts in public relations got credit for "putting it over" and justified in this case at least the fancy salaries and retainers that they now enjoy.

It is a long time since Ben Franklin wrote, "That they who will not be counselled cannot be helped. If you do not hear reason she will rap you over your knuckles."

But it's still true.

COMPETITION IS CONTROLLING

FOR EVERY INCREASE of a page of tising over last year, the 17 New Yo newspapers have given their readers seve tional pages of news and features. This ve erous attitude on the part of the greater cit paper publishers has resulted in an increas sumption of 33,835 tons of newsprint paper percent more than for the first 7 months of

A study of the illuminating tables containi data, presented in EDITOR & PUBLISHER for ber 16, indicates that the percentage of ne features to total space for morning and papers has ranged from 77 percent for the B Times for first 7 months this year to 42 per the New York Times and for evening pape 72 percent for the Post to 48 percent for the News and feature pages to total pages approximately the following percentages: A 64, Eagle 48, Brooklyn Times 77, Commer Journal 52, Mail 59, Post 72, Sun 48, Teleg Evening World 50, Globe 53, Herald 60, Dail 69, Standard-Union 60, Times 42, Tribune 64 ing and Sunday World 47.

Contrariwise, paid advertising lineage—lo tional, classified—for each paper listed avera following percentages to total pages printed newspaper: American 36, Eagle 52, Brooklyn 23, Commercial 24, Journal 48, Mail 41, Sun 52, Telegram 42, Evening World 50, G Herald 40, News 31, Standard-Union 40, Ti Tribune 36, Morning and Sunday World 53.

All of the greater city publishers realize t such operation and consumption will ultimate upon the sensitive newsprint market, if not diately controlled. But the element of con and the pursuit of wornout theories of techn controlling and it has been difficult to re satisfactory basis of conservation.

Some papers are selling at 3 cents per co 10 cents per copy Sunday, others at 2 cents d 5 and 6 cents Sunday. And in the metropoli this often means delivery at the home of scriber at these prices, plus a delivery charge

Publishers who maintain the higher pric ards seem to feel that they are in a con position and should not be expected to join general conservation program with publish are underselling them. But a crisis is thr and EDITOR & PUBLISHER urges that, in the of all papers, some sane basis should be imm found to bring together in a helpful, cons conservation program, the dominant factor greater field.

Meanwhile, many of the newsprint manu have sensed the attitude of the big consum are taking advantage of the insane competit for bulk pages and the coal and rail strike si to withhold and delay shipments on regu tracts, to advance spot news prices and to permission to advance regular contract price mills. But industrial conditions are now m

Is it too much to expect that in the prese gency newsprint manufacturers will be gu the experiences of the past, look ahead and the future with vision and sanity to a stable when the element of good-will will count larg increased volume of business at a reasonable

A BRILLIANTLY TOLD TALE

"TODAY IN THE NEWSPAPERS" i liantly told tale, in eight interesting presented in an artistic setting. The article, "The Battle With Selling Costs," William A. Thomson, is a logical, forceful vincing argument as to the power of the n to economically market merchandise. The of sales impelling newspaper copy selected sented with a series of illuminating essays themes as "Strategy," "News," "Humor," paper advertising, by Mr. W. Livingston will hold your interest and convey many a to your mind on the power of clever craft in advertising to center your thought on a co proposition and to impel action of a favora The Bureau of Advertising merits fullest p this accomplishment.

PERSONALS

ANK B. NOYES, president of the ssociated Press, accompanied by Noyes, will leave Montreal Sep- r 22 for Vancouver, B. C., from they will sail September 28 on Empress of Australia for Japan, China, en route on a tour around orld, to be gone until next spring.

Talcott Williams, professor emeri- f the Pulitzer School of Journal- Columbia University, was elected a or of the United Chapter of Phi Kappa at its fourteenth national il, held recently at Cleveland, Ohio.

Perre C. Starr, head of the Star ce Corps, New York, has returned a business trip to England.

Robert Baird, K. B. E., managing or of the Belfast (Ireland) Tele- and past president of the Ulster ct Institute of Journalists, accom- il by Maj. Gen. Sir Menus O'Keefe, M. G., C. B., M. D., will arrive in York on the Baltic September 24. tour of the United States will last December 16, when they leave on Majestic. They will visit Philadel- Washington, Richmond, Salisbury, ; Atlanta, New Orleans, El Paso, Diego, Cal.; Los Angeles, San isco, Butte, Chicago and Buffalo.

William T. Ellis, of Swarthmore, Pa., candidate for Congress from Penn- nia.

on H. Kelly, editor of the Sioux (Iowa) Tribune, was elected na- committeeman from Iowa at the convention of the American Le- held at Waterloo, September 7 3.

P. Adler, publisher of the Daven- (Iowa) Daily Times, and his son, Adler, who have spent the past months in England and on the con- , arrived in New York Sep- r 7. During their European trip visited England, Scotland, France, any, Belgium and Switzerland.

M. Bates, editor of the Lewis .) Press, recently caught his hand printing press, mashing two fingers it they had to be amputated.

rles F. Scott, editor and publisher Iola (Kan.) Register, was recent- -elected president of the board of es of Emporia College. William White is another Kansas news- man member of the board.

ner T. Peterson, editor of the Wi- Beacon, is acting as private secre- to Governor H. J. Allen, publisher e Beacon.

D. Florey, editor of the Pawnee .) Republican, was elected vice- dent of the Republican State Press iation, recently formed at a meet- f the Nebraska State Press Asso- n.

n Fields, editor of the Oklahoma er, is Republican candidate for nor of the State.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

TON B. OCHS, managing edi- tor of the Chattanooga Times, is e newly elected directors of the Highway Association.

bert Reese, son of the managing of the London Times, is spending al months in America studying the and ideas of our journalism and ecently become a member of the staff Chicago Tribune. After his stay nerica Mr. Reese plans to return to on to continue newspaper work with his father.

s Isadore E. Coward, daughter of us L. Coward, editor and publisher 0 years of the Lodi (Wis.) Enter- has been appointed news editor of nterprise.

rtin A. Halling, formerly on the desk of the Milwaukee Journal, has taken a similar position on the Chicago Daily News.

Eric M. Halling, formerly on the Milwaukee Wisconsin News and the Milwaukee Leader, is now a member of the exchange department of the Milwaukee Journal.

George A. Hough Jr., news editor of the New Bedford (Mass.) Standard, and Mrs. Hough are parents of a second son, John Talcott Hough.

Albert J. Porter, at one time night city editor of the San Francisco Chronicle and more recently on the New York Tribune night desk, is back in San Francisco as third officer of the steamer Robert Luckenback.

George Herriman and James Swinnerton, creators of the Krazy Kat and Little Jimmy comics, on a recent trip through the Arizona desert came near to losing their lives. They left their horses in search of water and became trapped in a pocket in the cliffs which, formerly, was a stronghold of the Hopi Indians. A fog settled and they could not locate the single entrance to this hole-in-the-wall. A party of Indians rescued them after they had been held prisoners there for two days.

Joseph O'Neill, for the past two years city editor of the Sudbury (Ont.) Star, as semi-weekly, is now on the staff of the Kingston (Ont.) Standard.

J. Tenny Louderback has joined the news staff of the Springfield (Ohio) Daily News.

Harold Cotton, a former member of the news staff of the Chicago Daily Journal, has resigned from the paper to attend North-western University where he has been made editor of the college paper, "Syllabus."

Mrs. Lola Clark Pearson, director and a member of the executive board of the general federation of Women's Clubs, has been added to the staff of the Oklahoma City, Oklahoma Farmer.

John F. Williams, former managing editor of the Joplin (Mo.) News-Herald, and now publisher of the University of Missouri, is the father of a daughter.

Charlie Carpenter is the new editor of the Lumber department, recently started by the Chicago Journal of Commerce. Previous to going to that paper he has been editor of the magazine "Lumber" for several years.

Lieut. Col. John H. O'Connor, city editor of the Winfield (Kan.) Courier, and now postmaster of that city, has received notice of his promotion to be colonel of the 353rd Infantry of the infantry reserve.

N. P. Hardy, formerly a member of the financial staff of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, has been made real estate editor of that paper.

Charles Gooding has resigned from the local staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening to open a bookstore in Newark, where the University of Delaware is located.

Victor O'Keefe has joined the local staff of the Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening.

T. H. Tapping, state editor of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press has returned to Ann Arbor to take charge of the Michigan University news bureau for the Booths newspaper.

Harry Burke, music and art critic on the St. Louis Times, has been visiting former associates on newspapers in Portland, Ore.

Jay Allen, a University of Oregon journalism graduate and formerly on the staffs of the Eugene Register and Seattle Post-Intelligencer, is now on the Portland Oregonian.

Frank G. Heaton, city editor of the Tampa Tribune, who has been seriously ill for some weeks, suffering from a nervous disorder, is improving and expects to be back at his desk shortly. Marvin L. Walker is filling in on the desk during his absence.

Charles E. Owen, of the news staff of the Chicago Daily News, has returned to work after a protracted absence on account of illness.

Houser Massey has joined the staff of the Tampa Tribune to cover police courts at present.

David Ginsberg has joined the staff of the Tampa Times and is doing the marine run and features.

Fred Olson, art editor of the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press for the past eighteen months, has resigned to go to New York to study. William Hendrickson has been made assistant art editor.

Fred H. Strong, feature writer for the St. Paul Daily News and formerly city editor, has gone to the Lake Worth, (Fla.) Leader as editor.

James H. Tucker, for years copy reader for the Minneapolis Tribune, is now reading copy on the St. Paul Dispatch.

Miss Clara Shipman, who has been doing club work for the St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press, succeeds Miss M. Jessis Leitch as feature writer.

C. B. Connolly has resigned from the staff of the Tampa Times to enter business.

John L. Morris, formerly court house reporter on the Tampa Tribune, is now state editor of the paper.

James B. Butler, for the past 20 years a member of the editorial staff of the San Antonio (Tex.) Express, has been appointed editor of the San Antonio Farm Express, a semi-weekly.

George McLinn, for several years secretary of the American Trapshooting Association and previously on the sports staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger, joins the staff of the Evening Ledger, October 1, as a feature sports writer.

Charles Sessions, managing editor of the Topeka Capital, has been suggested to President Harding by Senators Curtis and Capper for postmaster at Topeka. Mr. Sessions was at one time Washington correspondent for the Kansas City Journal and later served two terms as Secretary of State of Kansas.

J. Bart Campbell, Senate man for the International News Service in Washington, was called to Philadelphia last week by the death of his mother.

Andrew Jackson Warner, dramatic critic of the Rochester (N. Y.) Times-Union, has returned to his desk after a four months' tour of Europe.

Elliot L. Thurston, of the New York World, has been transferred from New York to the Washington bureau.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

ROBERT M. LYNN, for the past eight years managing editor of the Richmond (Va.) News-Reader, has been ordered to go up higher. On October 1, he becomes Washington representative of the paper and will write day-to-day stories of what is transpiring in Washington.

ROBERT M. LYNN

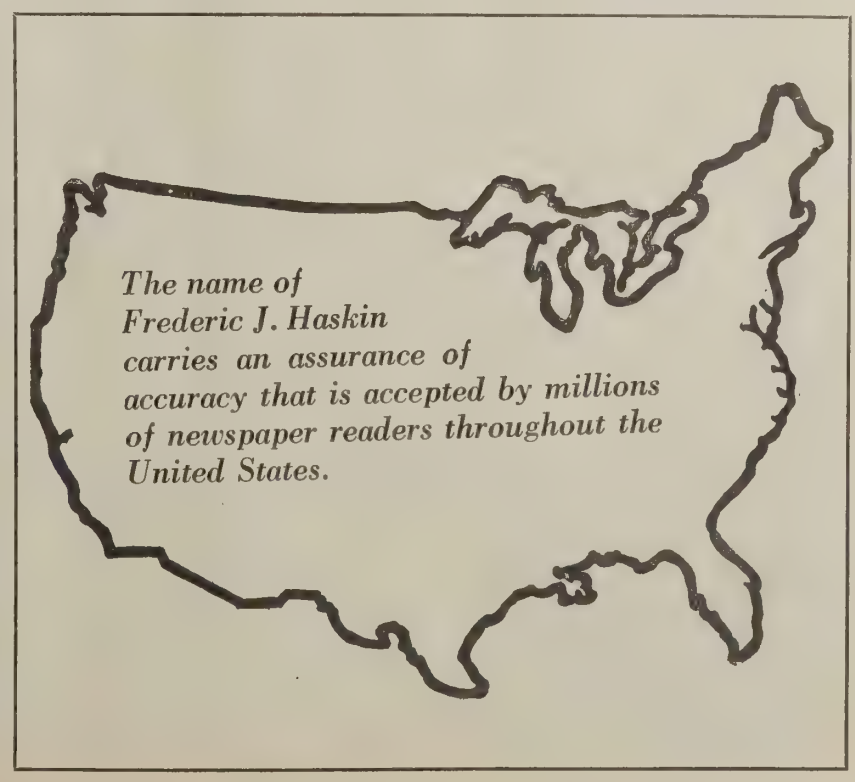
Mr. Lynn is not only a Virginian by birth, but also distinctly a product of his State in his newspaper work. His apprenticeship in the newspaper field was served on the old Danville Evening Star. He worked on the Danville Register, the Richmond Dispatch, and the old Richmond Journal.

IN THE BUSINESS OFFICE

E. O. PARSONS, director general of advertising for the Chicago Tribune, has returned after an extended stay in the Paris office of the Chicago Tribune.

H. J. Crawford, of the Chicago Tribune, has been transferred from the business survey department to the national advertising department.

W. A. Jackson, formerly of the business survey department of the Chicago Tribune, has gone to New York and will look after national advertising for the Chicago Tribune. This office is located in the New York Tribune Building.



James W. Fish, formerly a business lecturer on the staff of the Dry Goods Economist, and later in charge of the retail service department of the Associate Advertising Clubs of the World as well as lately with the Edward Schuster & Co. stores of Milwaukee, has been appointed merchandising counselor for the Milwaukee Journal.

C. L. Shepard, foreign advertising manager of the Denver Rocky Mountain News-Times, has been elected vice-president for Colorado of the National Association of Newspaper Executives.

Frank I. Sefrit, general manager of the Bellingham Publishing Company, has been appointed chairman of the publicity committee of the Bellingham, Wash., Tulip Festival for May, 1923.

William Reckert, assistant manager in the advertising department of the Norfolk (Neb.) Daily News, has been made advertising manager, succeeding George L. Stem, who has resigned to take up advertising work in Omaha.

James Martin Kirschner and Miss May Dowley, both of the advertising staff of the New York Times, have announced their engagement.

J. W. Dyer, former advertising manager for the Blytheville (Ark.) Courier, is now advertising and business manager of the Iron River-Stembaugh (Mich.) Daily Reporter.

E. Will Greene, for the past 12 years manager of the Oleans (N. Y.) Republican, has been appointed manager of the Middleport (N. Y.) Niagara Herald. P. A. Dragon will succeed Mr. Greene on the Republican. He was formerly with the Camrose (Alba.) Canadian.

John M. Pile, business manager of the Wellington (Kan.) Daily News, has been elected secretary of the Wellington Commercial Club.

Carl Brockhagen has been appointed business manager of the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Enquirer by Charles S. Young, the publisher, who has also appointed Richard A. Carrington, advertising manager of the paper.

C. W. Yeager, the new circulation manager of the Jacksonville (Fla.) Journal, was until recently classified advertising manager of the Tulsa (Okla.) World, not circulation manager, as was recently stated in these columns in announcing his new appointment. E. E. Scott is in charge of circulation for the Tulsa World and has been for many years.

E. J. Hodgeman, formerly with the Boston American, has been made assistant classified advertising manager of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, with offices in the Little Building. Mr. Hodgeman was formerly connected with the Boston American.

Walter R. Snyder has joined the executive staff of the Huntsville (Ala.) Times. He will have charge of the circulation department and be in touch with the other departments of the paper.

Sumner Jacobs, formerly advertising manager of Scherer's department store in Worcester, Mass., has joined the advertising staff of the Boston Daily Advertiser.

William J. Bell, formerly in the art department of the New York Globe, has been added to the art department staff of the Boston Daily and Sunday Advertiser.

NOTES OF THE NEWS SERVICES

FREDERICK ROY MARTIN, general manager of the Associated Press, who, with Mrs. Martin, has been in Europe during August and September, will sail for home on the Paris September 24. During the past week Mr. Martin had a conference with President Poincare and was the guest of honor at luncheons given by Maurice Bunau-Varilla, publisher of Le Matin, and Charles Houssaye, head of the Havas Agency, and Andre Maginot, the French Minister of War. Mr. Martin also spoke at the luncheons of the Noon Day Club of Paris and the Angle-American press organization.

T. S. Trebell has recently joined the staff of the San Francisco office of the Associated Press.

Cecil William Grange, formerly on the Omaha World-Herald, has joined the Chicago staff of the Associated Press.

H. H. Penney has been employed temporarily as editor in the Detroit office of the Associated Press.

Glen Walker was temporarily employed in the St. Louis office of the Associated Press to cover the Women's Western Golf Tournament.

Hanler Drake, assistant pony editor in the Kansas City office of the Associated Press, has been transferred to the Southern division.

H. R. Baukhage, Western manager of the Consolidated Press, Chicago, returned this week to the office after an extended business trip.

James I. Miller, general South American manager for the United Press, sailed from Naples for New York September 21, after spending several months in Europe. He will stay in New York some time before returning to South America.

Marlen E. Pew, editor and manager of the International News Service, who has been making a tour of inspection of the European bureaus of the service, sails for home on the Aquitania September 23.

Thomas A. Wrigley, Chicago bureau manager of the International News Service, has resigned to become managing editor of the Elmira (N. Y.) Advertiser-Telegram. He is succeeded in Chicago by James T. Kilgallen, now manager of the Kansas City bureau, who in turn is succeeded by Douglas G. Tinsley, of the Atlanta bureau staff.

Harry Lachterman has resigned as assistant to the International News Service bureau manager at St. Louis and joined the staff of the St. Louis Star.

Webster K. Nolan has left the Washington staff of the International News Service and soon will make a tour of the Orient, visiting Japan and China.

Kent Watson, for the past two years with the International News Service in Fort Worth, Texas, Los Angeles, St. Louis, and more recently mail service editor of the New York office, has joined the staff of the New York Evening World.

Earl C. Reeves has left the International News Service to do free-lance magazine work. He had charge of the I. N. S. London bureau during the war, and for the past year has been on the New York staff.

Milton A. Fishman has left the United Press at St. Louis and joined the staff of the Illinois State Register at Springfield.

Webster K. Nolan, White House man for the International News Service, whose resignation from the service was effective September 21, expects to leave for China shortly, where he will write for several publications. He has been with the I. N. S. for three years and came to Washington from the Pacific Coast at the time of the Armaments Conference.

WITH THE AD FOLKS

VERNON BEDTLY of the Gundlach Advertising Agency, Wrigley Building, Chicago, has returned from the south where he was called on account of the illness and death of his mother.

George Henauer has returned to the staff of the Gotham Advertising Company, New York, after a year as vice-president and general sales manager of the Wynkoop Coal Mining Company.

Emmanuel Rosenthal, advertising manager of Rothschild & Co., Chicago, has just returned from an extensive trip abroad.

Richard H. Lee, vice-president of Lord & Thomas, spoke at the first open meeting of the season of the Chicago Women's Advertising Club in the Florentine Room, Congress Hotel, September 19.

Ralph J. Rosenthal, for eight years with Lord & Thomas, has joined the Charles F. Nichols Company, Chicago, as a representative and account executive.

M. B. Aleshire, recently art director of Calkins & Holden, has been appointed art director, in supervision of the editorial and advertising art of the Chicago Tribune and New York Daily News. G. P. Haynes has succeeded Mr. Aleshire at Calkins & Holden.

Bitting & Service, Los Angeles advertising agency, has been reorganized and incorporated under the name of Bitting & Sunday, Inc. The officers of the new organization are: C. B. Bitting, president; George M. Sunday, vice-president, and Charles G. Patrick, secretary and treasurer. These officers, together with J. E. Service and W. H. Sibley, will constitute the board of directors.

H. M. Legler has joined the staff of Dade B. Epstein, Chicago advertising agency to have charge of national and direct-mail business. He has until recently been with Stavrum & Shafer, Chicago. Francis Ochsner has been appointed art director of the Epstein agency.

Howard Rockey has left the Calkins & Holden Company, New York, to join the Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency of Philadelphia.

J. T. Miller, for the past year associated with William Irving Hamilton, New York advertising agent, has opened an office under his own name in New York.

William C. Hunt, a former New York and Detroit newspaper man and recently of Seelye & Brown, Inc., Detroit advertising agency, has been appointed service manager and copy writer of the Campbell-Ewald Company, attached to their Detroit office.

THE "SPECIALS"

THE A. E. Clayden Special Agency has added to its present organization the services of C. H. Berdan, who will aid Mr. Clayden in the solicitation of business for his papers. Mr. Berdan is the son of E. A. Berdan, New York representative of the Cincinnati Daily Times Star, and has grown up in an advertising atmosphere. He is a graduate of New York High and Technical Schools and was a member of the 359th Aero Squadron during the late war. Mr. Berdan will be connected with the New York headquarters office of the Clayden Agency.

C. H. Berdan

R. Kent Hanson has joined the Chicago office of Paul Block, Inc., publishers' representative. He is a son of F. H. Hanson, publisher of the Duluth Herald.

Allied Newspapers, Inc., New York, has opened a branch office in San Francisco, with L. L. Rood as manager. He has been with the Scripps-McRae League for a number of years and was on the San Francisco Daily News, and before that with the Cleveland Press.

Cone, Hunton & Woodman, Inc. have resigned the representation of the Oakland (Cal.) Post-Enquirer, effective November 13.

S. C. Theis Company, publishers' sentatives, moved its New York of 141-145 West 36th street, Septembe

Miss Mabel Bryan, for several with the Famous Players, has join staff of the George B. David Cor New York.

The Paris (Texas) News an Peekskill (N. Y.) Star have app Frank R. Northrup, New York, a national advertising representative.

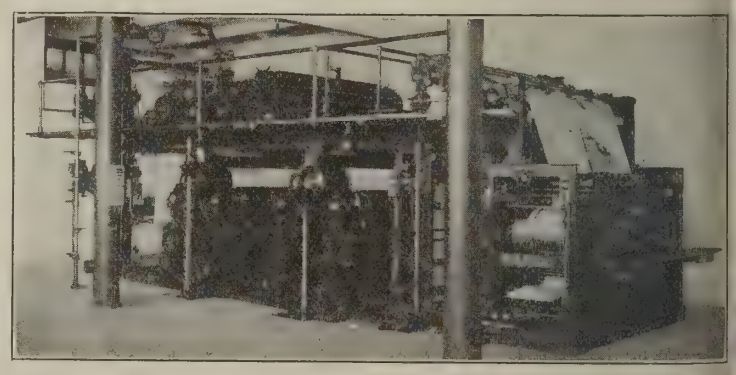
MARRIED

MISS CORA BRENTON, a of E. F. Beck, managing edi the Chicago Tribune, and McKiney, reporter on the Tr were married recently.

Charles K. Rhoderick, junior edi the Middletown (Md.) Valley Re and Miss Florence Hill were m recently.

Miss Helen Brimblecom, daugh John C. Brimblecom, president National Editorial Association and of the Newton (Mass.) Graphic married September 16 at Newton t fus Frost Harrington of Medford, They will reside at Medford. Brimblecom accompanied her fathe mother on the recent N. E. A. conv trip to Montana.

Moves Into New Diggins



The Verdun Messenger Publishing pany, publishers of the Verdun (Messenger and Point St. Charles as well as the newly inaugurated End Messenger, has just move the new three-story building re constructed for them.

Intertype Head Abroad

H. R. Swartz, president of the type Corporation, asiled on a two m business trip for Europe, Septemb on the Majestic. He will visit the cipal countries while away.

Coakley in Washington

John P. Coakley, who succeeded Bowman as Washington corresp of the Newark Star-Eagle, when man was made managing editor paper, has arrived in the capita taken over the bureau of the Star and the Toledo Blade.

THIS IS THE SCOTT SEXTUPLE

"Straight-Unit" Newspaper
Press recently installed at

THE HUDSON OBSERVER, Hoboken, N. J.

Another Scott Sextuple Press

will be installed in a few days in the same establishment.

WALTER SCOTT & CO.
Plainfield, New Jersey
NEW YORK, 1457 B'way CHICAGO, 1441 Monadnock Block

Advertisers
ARE Keeping Up with
The Times

213
COLUMNS GAIN

August 1922
over
August 1921

The Washington Times
The National Daily
3c Daily, 10c Sunday
LOGAN PAYNE, Pub.
National Advertising Representative
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.,
Chicago, Detroit,
St. Louis and Los Angeles.
PAYNE, BURNS & SMITH,
New York and Boston.

The Atlanta Journal
ATLANTA, GA.
Radio is a symptom. In the case of The Atlanta Journal it is the latest notable item in The Journal's long lived habit of 'getting there first with the best.'
40 states, Canada, Newfoundland, Cuba and Mexico concerts on in The Journal's sound proof Radio Studio have been heard.
each of several days more than 800 telegrams, letters and postals have come to The Journal telling of the beauty, the clearness and the excellence of The Journal's programme. Some far distant enthusiasts rate The Journal's Radio as the best in the entire country.
"Size-up"
the Atlanta Journal by reading it
Advertising in The Journal Sells the Goods

More Advertising
Find the right men to create and handle new accounts through
EDITOR & PUBLISHER
Help Wanted Advertisements

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

Advertising Industries, Inc., 1697 Ellicott square, Buffalo, N. Y. Sending out one-time orders for Steel Department Stores Company.

Anfenger-Jacobson Company, Board of Education Bldg., St. Louis. Using 14 lines, 3 times for Hill Brothers Fur Company.

N. W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Will make up lists in October for The Hygienic Products Company, Canton, Ohio, manufacturers of "Sani-Flush." Will make up lists in October for Sargent Company, New Haven, Conn.

George Batten Company, 381 4th avenue, New York. Using 2 inches, 52 times for Bell & Co.

Benson, Gamble & Slaten, Tribune Bldg., Chicago. Are sending out copy on the White Company. Also the Parken Pen.

Victor C. Breytspaak Company, 109 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Has the A. D. Joslin Manufacturing Company account, manufacture the Eclipse Time Stamp.

Florence Burchard Advertising Agency, 15 West 37th street, New York. Making up lists in October for J. & J. Cash Inc., South Norwalk, Conn.

Brooks, Smith & French, Kresge Bldg., Detroit, Mich. Will make up lists in October for The Arco Company, 6408 Euclid avenue, Cleveland.

Nelson Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, St. Louis. Sending out schedules for the Marmola Company. Will make up lists in October for Lexoid Company, Cleveland. Making yearly contracts for Nature's Remedy.

Collins-Kirk, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making 4,000-line contracts for John F. Jelke.

George L. Dyer Company, 42 Broadway, New York. Making 10,000-line contracts for United States Tire Company.

Erickson Advertising Agency, 381 4th avenue, New York. Making 2,000-line contracts for the Congoleum Company.

Erwin Wasey & Co., 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Have secured the account of Robbins & Myers, electric equipment and appliance, Springfield, Ohio. Making 7,000-line yearly contracts for Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

Federal Advertising Agency, 6 East 39th street, New York. Will make up lists in October for Samstag & Hilder Brothers, 1200 Broadway, New York.

Charles H. Fuller Company, 623 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts for Cooper Pharmacal Company. Making 2,500-line contracts for Charles H. Fuller Mail Order Customers. Sending out 26-line orders for Mark H. Jackson.

Gotham Advertising Company, 114 Liberty street, New York. Using trade papers in several foreign countries for the Cary Manufacturing Company, Brooklyn, N. Y. (Universal Box Strapping and Packing Devices). Placing advertising in the Philippines, Hawaii and Porto Rico for Lehn & Fink (Pebeco Tooth Paste and Lysol).

Guardian Advertising Corporation, 511 5th avenue, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts for International Consolidated Chemical Company.

A. P. Hill Company, 233 Oliver street, Pittsburgh, Pa. Will make up lists in October for The Republic Metal-ware Company, 100 Alabama street, Buffalo, N. Y.

E. T. Howard Company, 117 West 46th street, New York. Making 2,800-line contracts for Ex Lax Manufacturing Company.

James Advertising Agency, 120 West 42nd street, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts with rotogravure newspapers for William R. Warner (Richard Hudnut).

Wylie B. Jones, 107 Chenango street, Binghamton, N. Y. Making 500-line contracts for F. W. Clements Products Company.

Wylie B. Jones, 107 Chenango street, Binghamton, N. Y. Making yearly contracts for Norma Laboratories.

Kling-Gibson, Consumers Bldg., 222 South State street. Preparing copy for the Century Chemists, some to be used in Oklahoma.

Koch Company, University Bldg., Milwaukee. Using 10 inches, 6 times for the Eagle Knitting Mills.

A. Lipman, 201 Concord street, Brooklyn. Using first page reading notices for the New York American.

Lord & Thomas, 724 South Spring street, Los Angeles. Planning newspaper campaign for "The All-Year Club" of Southern California.

Matteson-Fogarty-Jordan Company, 215 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making 1,000-line line contracts for the Globe Soap Company.

O. J. McClure Advertising Agency, 111 West Monroe street, Chicago. Using 98 lines, 30 times for Miller & Hart.

McJunkin Advertising Company, Mallers Bldg., 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago. Have recently taken on the advertising account of the Elkhart Motor Company, manufacturers of the "Elgar" automobiles.

Mertz Agency, 58 East Washington street, Chicago. Is preparing copy on the Sherer-Gillette Company, Chicago, makers of counters and display containers for groceries.

Harry Porter Company, 15 West 44th street, New York. Making contracts for Nestles' Food.

Potts-Turnbull Advertising Company, Gates Bldg., Kansas City. Using 476 lines, twice for Portland Cement Association.

Power, Alexander & Jenkins Company, Madison Bldg., Detroit. Making contracts for Sweeney & James Motors.

William H. Rankin Company, 1 West 37th street, New York. Making 1,000-line contracts for National Carbon Company.

Roberts & MacAvinche, Boyce Bldg., 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Are issuing copy on Cluett, Peabody & Co.

Frank Seaman Company, 470 4th avenue, New York. Making 3,000-line contracts for E. A. Dupont de Nemours & Co.

Walter B. Snow & Staff, 60 High street, Boston. Planning early fall campaign for John P. Squire & Co., Cambridge, Mass., featuring Arlington hams and bacon.

David C. Thomas Company, 165 East Erie street, Chicago. Placing account for Silver Steel Castings Company, Milwaukee, Wis.

Thresher Advertising Service, 136 Liberty street, New York. Sending out additional schedules for Colgate & Co.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making 5,000-line contracts for Lambert Pharmacal Company.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Preparing copy on Cornell Wood Products to be sent through the Middle Western States.

SPECIAL EDITIONS

THE Mobile (Ala.) Register, September 1, published its eighty-second annual trade review in 8 sections of 150 pages.

The Ashland (Ky.) Daily Independent will publish, October 8, a one hundred and twenty-eight-page "Greater Eastern Kentucky Edition," devoted to the industry and trade.

The Beaumont (Tex.) Enterprise recently issued a 72-page special edition devoted to progress and development of Beaumont and East Texas.

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal will soon issue its diamond jubilee edition.

The Madill (Okla.) Record, September 7, issued a special edition devoted to the Marshall County Free Fair.

The Hackensack (N. J.) Bergen Record published a three section special edition September 15 to celebrate the opening of its new home.

The Lexington (N. C.) Dispatch issued its centennial number, 30 pages in four sections, on September 7.

7,623 REPORTERS A DAY

Boston Post Audit of Ford Contest Shows Total of 388,769 Letters

A staff of 45 people was necessary to handle the flood of letters from readers to the Boston Post, in connection with its "Every reader a reporter" feature in which it has been awarding a Ford each day for the most interesting item submitted.

To insure that its contest was fair, the Post engaged Price, Waterhouse & Co., accountants, to report. This concern found that, up to the time of its report, 388,769 pieces of mail had been passed upon, an average of 7,623 letters a day, with an average working force of 27 people. At one time 45 people were necessary, although at the start four employees handled the mail.

"The daily winner is determined by a process of elimination," the auditors state. "The first reading of the articles results in the rejection of all but about 1,000 daily. These in turn are reduced to 250 by a second group of experienced Post employees. This remainder is further reduced to from 50 to 75 by the Ford-a-day man in charge. The final lot is submitted to the managing editor, who decides the daily winner. The fact that many members are in isolated localities would indicate that the awards are based purely on merit.

"The regular price of a fully equipped Ford touring car with self starter and demountable rim has been paid, the minimum price being $499. We have reports on file of stories being investigated and in most instances the winning story is one that has been personally investigated. Many stories are rejected as a result of being investigated."

FEATURE PAGE
EMERGENCY MATS
THAT SAVE YOU TIME AND MONEY
VARIETY OF UNEXCELLED SUBJECT MATTER
Carefully Edited
Cleverly Illustrated
7 or 8 COLUMNS 20" or 21"
MATS CAN BE CUT TO PERMIT LOCAL AD OR TEXT INSERTIONS
Ask for Proofs Today—
ROTOGRAVURE
With Local and General Pictures—Artistically Displayed—Attracts and Holds Readers.
Revenue Possibilities Big from National and Local Advertising.
Write for Samples and Our Attractive Proposition.
WORLD COLOR PTG. CO.
R. S. Grable, Pres.
Est. 1900 St. Louis, Mo.

FOOTBALL
40 WINNING PLAYS has been sold to Boston Globe
Cleveland Plain Dealer
New York Globe
Pittsburgh Gazette-Times
Des Moines Register-Tribune
Buffalo Courier
Oklahoma City Times
Syracuse Journal
and many others.
WIRE YOUR ORDER
THE INTERNATIONAL SYNDICATE
213 Guilford Ave., Baltimore, Md.

The
Pittsburg Press
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION IN PITTSBURG
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St., New York
544 Fort Dearborn Bank Bldg., Chicago
A. J. NORRIS HILL, Hearst Bldg., San Francisco

Features by
Irvin S. Cobb
Fontaine Fox
Hugh Fullerton
Rube Goldberg
Ed Hughes
Burns Mantle
T. L. Masson
O. O. McIntyre
Frederick Palmer
H. J. Tuthill
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

The Mount Vernon, N. Y.
DAILY ARGUS
carries more display advertising than any other newspaper in Westchester County.
This is an acknowledgement of its power that the advertiser should heed, if desirous of reaching the people of Mount Vernon.
GEO. B. DAVID & CO.
Foreign Representative
171 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper
Circulation over 32,500 Average
Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.
New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston — New York—Detroit—Chicago

THE
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL
has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America.

In New Orleans it's THE ITEM

MAKERS-MONEY-SAVERS

This is a regular weekly department designed to answer questions, offer suggestions and generally help the man and woman of the smaller city dailies and weeklies. Your ideas on money making and for money saving are wanted, and for each idea published we will pay $1. When your idea appears clip it out and send it to the MONEY SAVER EDITOR, and payment will be made. Your ideas must be workable, told in as few words as possible, and new to this department. Contributions to this department will not be returned.

FEW small papers give much attention to a meeting of school teachers from the county or district yet these people (mostly women) could tell a lot of interesting things that would be read throughout the paper's territory. More interesting than the list of speakers at the institute meeting would be stories telling how their communities are developing. Possibilities are endless for an interviewer who will just get teachers to talking. Some ideas: Have better roads increased attendance in your neighborhood? Do you have warm school lunches? Is the health of children better with medical inspection? Boy and girl clubs—school gardens—how is farm bureau helping you—athletics—modern school building—consolidated schools—the list is indefinite.—H. D. K.

You run the record of births in your territory, of course. But do you run the record of names given the children? You can easily find out the names given the babies and it would interest all of your subscribers if you would run these names. You might also use this stunt in getting more business in this way: Get some merchant whose first name is John to advertise that he will give some article for the baby to every youngester who is named John during the coming month. And so on. The merchants, of course, would use ads to tell what they were offering.—F. H. W.

Dull days hit even the best of country newspaper offices, and it's a problem for the publisher to figure out a way of getting some little return for the wages he is paying out. Of course, some publishers "lay off" most of the force on these occasions; I once worked in such an office and the boys didn't stop talking about the "dock" in their wages for six months after. I worked for another boss who always let us have a holiday—on pay. We liked him for that, of course. As a general rule, his might be the best plan. But why not try this little stunt one day, at least? Have everybody wash up, get them some writing material and a place to write, and then have each one write to a list of his personal friends, neighbors and acquaintances who are non-subscribers, asking them to take the paper. Don't dictate what is to go into the letters; just let them tell their story in their own way. Such letters will pull about ten times better than would a form letter, printed in type, and signed with the newspaper's name.—J. T.

Some country newspapers have increased their subscription lists and created interest in their publications with an offer of a year's subscription free to each newly married couple who made application at the newspaper office for same. Persons already taking the paper were given an extension of a year and the fact noted in the news note columns of the paper. —R. K. C.

The policy of giving country correspondents a free subscription to the paper for the news matter, mostly personals, which they send in from time to time does not bring in the real news of the country. A western weekly pays its correspondents from one to two dollars per column according to the district and the correspondent. By doing this the editor feels that he can write any of these people and tell them to "send in a story on such-and-such by Monday or Tuesday as the case may be. This weekly measures up the space at the end of each month and mails money orders to the writers. This plan is working out well and is making the Country Correspondence Column a real feature of the paper.—W. E. McT.

The Elkhorn (Wis.) Independent occasionally uses standing half-tones of local people and things to attract attention to advertisements. For example a photo of the local boys' band may top a clothing ad with the battle cry of "Send Them Back to School in Hart Schafner and Marx Clothes!" It may not be A1 advertising, but used infrequently it gets attention.—G. W. G.

Perhaps the last contest you conducted, if it was a circulation contest, sickened you on all contest ideas. But consider this one: Offer a prize of $50 in gold for the best bushel of seed corn raised in your county this year; have your county agent take care of the details of the contest; and after the contest formulate a plan for distributing the prize seed over the county as a nucleus for improved corn crops. Of course, there is no direct return on this idea—it's just an investment in goodwill. But I'll assure you that you'll have the best display of seed corn ever seen in the county, and you'll earn the sincere friendship of every farmer in the county for your interest in their business.—J. T.

WHITE HOUSE MEN HAPPY

Improvement in Mrs. Harding's Condition Welcome Personal News

No group in Washington has given greater evidence of the genuine relief and gratification which has followed the news of definite improvement in the condition of Mrs. Harding, wife of the President, than the newspaper men, particularly those who accompanied the Hardings in the 1920 campaign and those now associated with the White House detail.

Mrs. Harding's intimate knowledge of newspaper affairs, gained as the result of her long and active association with the management of the Marion Star, has brought her closer to the correspondents perhaps than any woman who has ever occupied the White House. Her thoroughly democratic manner and her delightful give-and-take method in dealing with reporters has endeared her to the members of the corps.

In the campaign, which made her husband President, and in which she played a conspicuous part, she spent a good many hours with the reporters getting their views of the situation and discussing the progress of her husband's fight.

She had a habit on the trips of coming forward into the press car and talking things over in general with the newspaper men. Since coming to Washington Mrs. Harding has frequently stepped over to the White House offices and greeted the reporters on duty there. She has made it plain from the beginning that she puts considerable store in their judgments.

On the automobile trip to Marion made by the President early in July, she went out of her way on more than one occasion to see if the newspaper men were "being looked after," as she expressed it, and to greet her personal friends in the squad which was following the Presidential party.

American Names New Ad Men

S. Cherr has been appointed assistant advertising director of the New York American and E. N. Chalfant is now national advertising manager. With these appointments T. K. McIlroy is placed in charge of agency relations and the following have been added to the staff of the department: R. M. Vandivert, Wynn Taylor, H. R. Wheeler, W. R. Baringer, H. W. Hoenes, J. A. Ward, Gillespie, Chicago representative in charge of the automotive department, and M. De Sousa, merchandise service manager. Mortimer Berkowitz has been appointed local advertising manager of the American and the following have been added to the local advertising staff: H. M. Alderstein, C. Axelrod, J. W. Bleakney, J. J. Hutchins, S. M. Krupp, V. J. Sawyer, L. Sirkey, G. B. Borden, and Kriby Chandler.

Soward & Strong Buy Paper

Olaf S. Soward, formerly assistant business manager of the Kansas City Journal, and Chester K. Strong, of the Tina (Mo.) Interior-Journal, have purchased the Carrollton (Mo.) Republican-Record from Harry L. Thomas.

1,000,000 Ahea
THE total advertising lineag
The Passaic Daily News shown by figures compiled by Lisser Brothers, is 4,380,105 for period from January 1 to Au
31, 1922.
This is a lead of over 1,00
lines over the other Passaic p
OVER 10,000 NET PAID DA
DAILY NEW
Passaic, New Jerse

An Accounting and Federal Tax Servic for Publishers
References on Application
CLIFFORD YEWDAL
33 West 42nd Street
New York City

EX-KAISER'S STORY
HIS REIGN AND FALL WAR MEMOIRS OF
DAVID LLOYD GEORG
The Memoirs of the Ex-Kai will begin Sunday, Septem
24, in The New York Tir and continue daily and Sun for thirty days. It will be f lowed soon by the Lloyd Geo story.

The Pittsburgh Po
A newspaper of char ter, integrity and ent
prise which has earn the confidence of the p ple of the world's great industrial district.
DAILY and SUNDAY

WIRE
NEWS
For Evening and Sunday Newspaper
International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE

The World.
MORNING EDITION

The World and The Evening World have a combined circulation, daily, of 650,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. They carry more high class dry goods advertising; are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combintaion.

Advertise in Newspapers by the Year

The Evening World
Pulitzer Building, New York
Hier's Building, Chicago
Ford Building, Detroit

Would You Insure Subscribers Against Delivery Disappointments?

It can absolutely prevent 90% of the cases for papers delayed or undelivered by installing the MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM. The other 10% are for causes over which the circulation manager has control.

The MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM handles all addressing, mailing, checking, and kindred operations connected with the mailing list. Adapted to all mail lists. Adopted and endorsed by many of the greater publications.

Investigate it. Learn how it will speed up your mail room—prevent errors and eliminate labor. Write today for further particulars.

The Speedaumatic Company
MANUFACTURING
THE MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM
817-825 WASHINGTON BLVD.
CHICAGO

Brass Tactics

Correct selling mean co-ordinated sales and advertising. It means advertising in the newspaper that will reach practically all your possible customers in a market in which you have distribution.

Indianapolis News

New York Office: Dan A. Carroll, 150 Nassau St
Chicago Office: J. E. Lutz, The Tower Bldg.
Frank T. Carroll, Advertising Manager.

KANSAS IS A RICH, RESPONSIVE FIELD—TOPEKA, ITS CAPITAL A GOOD "TRY OUT" CITY

They are best covered by the

Topeka Daily Capital
TOPEKA, KANSAS

The Kansas Daily with a General Kansas Circulation

Dominates its field in circulation, all classes of advertising, news, prestige and reader confidence.

Supplies market data—does survey work—gives real co-operation.

Arthur Capper
PUBLISHER
MEMBER A. B. C.—A. N. P. A.

DOLLAR PULLERS

Advertising and circulation managers are always on the lookout for new ideas that will increase advertising receipts and win new circulation. Your idea for increasing advertising or circulation may not appeal to your manager, but it may be just the thing that some other manager wants. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each idea printed under this head. The fact that the idea is now being used in your city does not bar it from the department. Address your communication to the DOLLAR PULLER EDITOR. When they appear clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable ideas will not be returned.

THERE'S no "reason why" you shouldn't easily sell a "reason why" page. Approach the advertiser by asking him if he doesn't want to hear the readers' reasons for his store being so popular or his products being so much in demand. The newspaper or advertiser should give a dollar cash or merchandise reward to the persons telling in twenty words or less the best "reasons why" back of the success of the business firms listed on the page. Any person may compete for any or all the "reason why." The page should be run a week or two later giving the winning "reason why" in each ad together with the name of the winner.—R. B. M.

Idea for a retail credit men's advertisement: Have secretary collect half-dozen worthless checks from local storekeepers; there will probably be several returned on account of signer having insufficient funds, at least one should be that drawn by a person not having any account whatsover, and one other should be a forgery. Arrange these on a card with suitable background, and use as the illustration for the advertisement. The headline will be "Here Are Six Good Reasons Why Merchants Cannot Cash Checks for People They Do Not Know." The copy of the advertisement will explain how losses on bad checks increase overhead expense, and will convince the readers that the merchant is protecting his customers' pocketbooks in an indirect way when he uses caution in cashing checks and that they should appreciate his efforts rather than to resent them.—J. T.

Have one of your merchants offer prizes for the best written descriptions of his store and why people should trade there. One merchant in the South offered prizes aggregating $25 in a contest like this, and a chain of eight shoe stores conducted this kind of contest in all the cities where their stores are located, offering radio outfits as first prizes, and cash for secondary prizes. In both instances a liberal amount of newspaper space was used in connection with the contest. I am personally acquainted with the advertising manager of the shoe stores and he told me his company was more than pleased with the results of their contests.—J. T.

A boys' apparel store in Jackson, Mich., advertised a boys' contest. An article was published telling of the joy and happiness good clothes bring to boys, their mothers and teachers. The name of the store was mentioned for selling clothes that are just right for dress-ups or play, etc. Every boy who committed the article to memory and repeated it "word for word" to the manager during the following week was given a $1.50 light stripe percale blouse.—R. B. M.

Much interest was created among the large number of readers of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press in an advertising plan which has just been completed in the paper. A list of 81 mercantile establishments in the city was made up and, through their co-operation, a paragraph was written about each of the establishments, telling something characteristic and interesting about each, but not giving the name of the concern. These descriptive paragraphs were printed in the Free Press and three liberal prizes offered to the readers of the Free Press who sent in the largest number of correct names of the mercantile establishments before a certain date. In order to get these names correct it was necessary to follow up some key-word in the paragraph and, in this way, those who were trying for the prizes learned a great deal about the stores in the city, and discovered a number that they had not known about before. In fact, the scheme proved to be of benefit to everybody concerned.—E. F. C.

Automobile dealers overlook many bets in not advertising more to the community the cars which already have been sold and used for many years possibly. These dealers can easily be induced to offer prizes for the oldest car of its kind in the county, the car with most miles or service, car with most miles in one month or year, car that has changed hands oftenest, or one that hasn't changed at all in long period. Few people realize the number of cars of any particular make in service in a city or town and such advertising would benefit that make more than can be estimated.—E. H. J.

A good twin sister to the "What Is The Greatest Thing in Life" page recently described by "R. K. K." was one run by the Marysville (Cal.) Appeal on "What Marysville Needs Most." Two pages of space were sold. Advertisers represented were: Dairy, Insurance, Dry Goods, Theatre, Plumbing, Electricians, Lumber Yards, Furniture. In the news columns we carried an interview with business men on the city's needs, and concluded the story with an offer of a $10 prize for the best composition on "What Marysville Needs Most." Many rattling good stories were received and subsequently published. Each of the spaces in the Display pages carried the heading, "What Marysville Needs Most."—J. C. A.

Register all the approaching farm sale dates under a heading called "Farm Sales Calendar." Give the date, the owner's name, the location of the sale, general nature of the goods to be sold, and the name of the auctioneer. Each sale will take about four lines. Run these notices free, for they make interesting reading for your farmer subscribers. You will not be beating yourself out of a cent; just the opposite, these notices will help you to build up a real patronage of display advertising for sales. —J. T.

What method does your newspaper use in introducing its new advertising salesman to his customers and prospects? You could insure him a pleasant send-off by mailing an announcement of his coming to those with whom he will come in contact. And it will offer a good opportunity to get in a clincher something like the following: "When our ad-man shows you a suggestion for an advertisement, please remember that he brings you a glimpse into your business from the point of view of the consumer. He's on the outside looking in, while you're on the inside looking out."—J. T.

Is there an auto highway running through your city? If there is, find out when the birthday of this highway occurs, and then get up a page or two pages of ads from concerns located on the highway. It should be an easy task to put over a special page of this sort.—F. H. W.

VALLEY SPIRIT
Subscription Check

_____ 192__
Your Town, State and Date

Pay to the order of Valley Spirit Publishing Co. $ _____

_____ Dollars

In full of subscription from _____ 192 to _____ 192

Name your bank

Your signature

Your bank's town and state

Name
Address

Do you lose many mail subscribers through their failure to remit when their subscription expires? It makes it very expensive to have a solicitor follow up all the tardy ones. In your notice to subscribers advising them of the expiration of their paper enclose a blank check with a self addressed envelope. We find since using this method that the percentage of subscribers neglecting to remit at period of expiration has been reduced 50% due to the fact that we have made it easier for them to remit.—R. A. S.

26,000 last October—Now
150,000
DETROIT
Evening
TIMES

The Buffalo Territory Offers Big Possibilities To National Advertisers

Twelfth American City; second in New York State, Buffalo, with over half a million people and the surrounding trade area with three hundred thousand more, affords a rich market to national advertisers. The effective medium to capture this desirable market is the big, popular, home newspaper—A. B. C. Net paid 105,958, 80% of English-Speaking Homes.

The Buffalo Evening News
Edward H. Butler, Editor & Publisher
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

There's a Reason
Ask The Los Angeles Times

The Hollister Organization is now conducting its third circulation campaign for the Los Angeles Times.

Write or wire for more details of the circulation building plan that has repeatedly satisfied.

HOLLISTER'S CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
Largest in the United States
300 MERRITT BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

NEW ORLEANS STATES

ADVERTISING RATES AFTER OCT. 1

12c DAILY FLAT
15c SUNDAY FLAT

Daily over 51,000
Sunday over 63,000

PRESENT RATE
10c D. & S. on 2,000 Lines

Represented by
S. C. Beckwith, Special Agency
New York
John M. Branham Co., Chicago

W. F. HERMAN BUYS THE LONDON ADVERTISER

Now Owns Four Canadian Dailies—Has Made Rapid Rise for Publisher of Small Saskatoon Weekly—Possession October 1

The London (Ont.) Advertiser has been sold by T. H. Purdom and associates to W. F. Herman, owner of the Saskatoon (Sask.) Star; Regina (Sask.) Post, and Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star, the property to be taken over on October 1. Completion of the deal marks another forward step in the career of Mr. Herman, who from being publisher of a small weekly in Saskatoon, has within a very few years risen to be one of the most conspicuous figures in Canadian daily journalism. Plans for the future of the Advertiser have not yet been divulged but it is being predicted that the morning edition will be reorganized on an evening paper basis.

The Advertiser was founded in 1863 as an evening paper by the late John Cameron, with whom were associated his brothers, William and Lud. K. Cameron. It remained in the Cameron family until 1902 when it was purchased by T. H. Purdom, K. C., a London lawyer with important financial interests. Mr. Purdom's companies having recently encountered serious difficulties, it became necessary for him to dispose of his newspaper property. Negotiations were at first carried on with Hon. W. C. Kennedy, federal minister of railways, and a group of liberal politicians, but without result. Later Mr. Herman made overtures for the paper.

Until 1913, the Advertiser remained exclusively in the evening field and was reputed to be a money maker. That year Mr. Purdom was persuaded to add a morning edition, virtually converting the paper into a morning newspaper.

During its long career, the Advertiser has been edited by several notable men. John Cameron himself was a prominent figure in Canadian journalism, being at one time editor of the Toronto Globe. Hon. David Mills, another of the earlier editors, became federal minister of justice in the Laurier government. J. D. Clark, who succeeded Mr. Mills, followed him to the department of justice. From 1902 to 1913, M. W. Rossie, now one of the editors of the Toronto Globe, was editor of the Advertiser, being succeeded in turn by Wallace Laut, Harry Pickett and A. R. Kennedy.

Would Advertise New York State

Advertising of the natural advantages of New York State by an official publicity bureau authorized to spend $1,000,000 was urged at the annual meeting of the Adirondack Resort Association held at Lake Placid, N. Y., September 14. Joseph H. Marvel, proprietor of the Hotel Marion, Lake George, N. Y., who was re-elected president of the association, appointed the following committee to present a bill to the state legislature for the creation of this publicity bureau; L. A. Flanagan, Malone, N. Y., L. C. Emerson, Schroon, Lake, N. Y.; Leslie Kincaid, Adjutant General of the state, and W. T. Thayer, state senator, Chateaugay, N. Y.

NEWS HAS 50TH BIRTHDAY PARTY

Lebanon Daily News Prints Special Edition on Yellow Paper

The Lebanon (Pa.) Daily News, September 14 issued its 50th anniversary edition of 48 pages in six sections. The paper was printed upon light yellow newsprint and both black and red ink was used.

"Yellow paper was used because it was the 50th birthday anniversary of the Daily News," explained J. K. R. Schropp, vice-president of the paper. "When a couple have lived together for 50 years, their celebration is usually termed a golden wedding anniversary.

"On the day of this issue we had a large brass band parading the streets in honor of this edition, and in the afternoon the band gave a concert in front of the News building. There were thousands of people present to hear the concert.

"In the evening there was a dance in front of the News office, on the wood block pavement, the music being furnished again by the same band. The streets were roped off and there was no traffic allowed while the dancing was in progress.

"Many persons came in person to the News office to tender their thanks and declared that it was one of the best advertisements the community has ever received. The counter in the business office was literally packed with big baskets of flowers sent the management by citizens and well-satisfied advertisers."

Lincoln Star Building

The Lincoln (Neb.) Star has a two story building under construction. The building will be 90 x 112 feet. The basement will house the press and mailing room, the first floor the advertising and circulation departments and the second floor the editorial and composing rooms.

News-Times to Add Roto Section

The South Bend (Ind.) News-Times will add a rotogravure section on September 24. The News-Times has appointed Lorenzen & Thompson special representatives effective October 5.

MAKE NEWSPAPER ADS THEIR MARKET BATTLEFIELD

(Continued from page 7)

A third case, out of a number which might be cited, is that of Colgate & Co., which, like Ivory Soap, is turning to direct refutation in its outdoor, newspaper and other advertising.

In its newspaper advertising, one piece of copy shows a package in front of a bull's eye. The copy hits its message over this way:

"Clean teeth the right way——

"'Washes,' does not scratch or scour the enamel.

"Colgate's is safe to use every day."

Another is one of a series, entitled, "What I know about Colgate's Ribbon Dental Cream." It says:

"I know that I could scrape my teeth clean with a soapless, gritty tooth paste, but I know that washing is safer than scouring.

"I know that Colgate's is made from non-gritty chalk and pure soap, which will loosen and wash away injurious substances in my mouth. I know Colgate's cleans my teeth thoroughly and that no dentifrice does more."

Again, no competitors are mentioned, but the inference is that some of it petitors claim to make teeth whi naturally. Once more, EDITOR & LISHER wishes to make it clear has no desire to take sides in a versy of this kind, but simply repr this copy as an example of how ad ing rebuttal is being used.

Almost everybody likes a fight, ing advertising men. Consequently is being done along the line of "tising battles in printer's ink" ha than ordinary zest for members advertising and newspaper fraterni probably, for the public.

Mexia News Again a Daily

The Mexia (Tex.) Evening Ne moved to its new home, recently by the News Publishing Compan within a week will resume the p tion as a daily. The Evening Ne discontinued as a daily and was pu as a semi-weekly after the first o was passed.

Buys Interest in News-Sentin

Oscar G. Foellinger, business m of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) News-S has purchased the interests of th of Clarence F. Bicknell, formerly lisher, who died about three yea in the News-Sentinel.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

NEW YORK, N. Y.
ADVERTISING RATES
in effect March 11, 1922

DISPLAY ADVERTISING

	Agate Lines	1 insertion	6 insertions within year	12 insertions within year	26 insertions within year	52 insertions within year
Full page	672	$200.00	$188.00	$175.00	$150.00	$125.00
Half page	336	113.00	100.00	94.00	88.00	75.00
Quarter page	168	60.00	56.00*	50.00*	47.00*	44.00
Eighth page	84	35.00	30.00*	28.00*	25.00*	23.00
Sixteenth page	42	20.00	18.00*	15.00*	14.00*	13.00

Less than sixteenth page transient rate 50 cents per agate line (minimum space 14 lines —1 inch).

All 52 consecutive-insertion contracts (see last column above) are based on consecutive insertions within the year. Extra space is charged at the 52-insertion rate, but contract is credited for one insertion only.

Half pages and full pages on 6, 12 and 26-time contracts may be used at the option of the advertiser within the twelve-month period.

*Quarter, eighth and sixteenth pages must be on definite copy schedule.

b. Contract advertisers are accorded the privilege of same insertion rate for larger space. For example: an advertiser under contract for twenty-six (26) quarter-pages at $47 per insertion is accorded the privilege of half pages at $88 and full pages at $150, but such advertisement is to be credited on contract as but one insertion of contract space.

c. Rate maker card—52 consecutive insertions—minimum space 28 agate lines—net rate 28c. per agate line. Extra space pro rata.

d. All rebates earned by advertisers using more than contracted space within life of contract are paid in advertising space to be used within one month after expiration of contract.

Classified Advertising

a. Help Wanted ..... .06 a word
For Sale ..... .06 a word
Situations Wanted ..... .03 a word
Business Opportunities ..... .06 a word

b. All advertisements inserted on a strictly cash basis, except on orders from contract advertisers.

c. No discount for frequency of insertion.

Reading Notices—(None.)

Commissions. Allowed to recognized agencies on other than publishers' advertising.

Preferred Positions

Front and back cover rates on application. Inside front and back covers 10% extra. All other positions 25% extra.

SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT

For Newspaper Making

Wanted
Good used Duplex 12-page flat-bed press. Address at once The Leader, Great Falls, Montana, stating best price and terms.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and Business bought and sold, American Typefounders' products, printers' and bookbinders' machinery of every description. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Beekman St., New York City.

Are You All Set for the WORLD'S SERIES
Two "Left"—Speak Quick
Magnetic Player Board
GEO. H. REYNOLDS, Treas.
New Bedford Mass.

Take It To
POWERS
Open 24 Hours out of 24
The Fastest Engravers on the Earth
Powers Photo Engraving Co.
154 Nassau St., Tribune Bldg.
New York City

Huber's ROTOGRAVURE INKS
Are now made in our new Rotgravure factory. A better ink at the same price.
HUBER'S Colors In use since 1780
J.M. Huber
Main Office
65 W. HOUSTON ST., NEW YORK
It Pays to Huber-ize

Newspaper Plant Equipments
Established in 1912
PECKHAM MACHINERY
MARBRIDGE BLDG, 34th & Bw
NEW YORK CITY

24-page Scott Straightline, deli and erection in month. Shown ning until Aug. 15th.
Complete Newspaper Plant Eq ment.
8 Linotypes. Model B Intert Head Letter Matrices, Molds, Li
2 Monotype Equipments mats.

24-Page Potter Pres For Sale or Will Trade Goss Press to Fit Ou New Equipment
This press is in fine running co tion, does 2-color work, gives all by two's in one signature up t pages with single set of plates or signatures of 12 pages each.
Can be seen in operation.
Delivery can be made about Oct 1st.
For further particulars address,
SUPERIOR TELEGRAM
Superior, Wisco

FLEXIDEAL
A Dependable, Unifor
DRYMA
Better in performance than other, and at a LOWER pr A trial will convince you
Unlimited Stock on Hand at all Times
The Flexideal Compa
15 William Street
NEW YORK CITY

Introduction to Employer and Employee

SITUATIONS WANTED

A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order. For ...e unemployed one insertion (adv. not to ...ed 50 words) FREE.

...certising Man
... record as salesman, copy writer and ad-...ising manager will interest executives ...ing for increased lineage. Have proven ...istent producer under all conditions. ...racter and ability highly recommended by ...former employers. Would accept staff po-...n if the opportunity justified. Box C-... Editor & Publisher.

...able Editor
... writer employed in present position twelve ...s desires change about October 1. Now ...cutive on afternoon paper city of 100,000, ... middle west. Age 36, married. Prefer ... on metropolitan daily Pacific Coast or ... but will go anywhere if salary is satis-...ory. For particulars address Box C-902, ... Editor & Publisher.

...ulation Manager
...ist references as to ability, integrity and ...sty. Hard worker. Understand circula-...n methods from all angles. Further infor-...on upon request. Address C-944, care ...dor & Publisher.

... Editor,
... of best county dailies in Middle West ...s place in town of 10,000 to 20,000. Rea-...-owner's time as postmaster expires. Age ... Graduate of University of Missouri School ...ournalism. Available October 20. Craw-... Democrat-Forum, Maryville, Mo.

...sified Manager-Solicitor
...s to connect with progressive paper. ... continuous service, trained space builder, ...36, good character. Address C-906, Editor ...ublisher.

...ble Your Classified
...next 6 months. Have had 16 years' expe-...e and can show you how to double the ...ness, all classifications, and at a profit in ...o eight weeks. Train your own help or ...ny own. Stated charge for stated term or ...ract on commission basis with weekly ...antee. Only good for those selling over ...,0 papers daily. Can take on six papers ...next six months. My references are pub-...rs that have used my services. For detail ...ess Box C-841, Editor & Publisher.

...omy Is the Order of the Day—
... why I am worth $7,500 a year to the ...isher who wishes to reduce expenses with-...mpairing his earnings. Twelve years' hard ...rience in keeping costs at a minimum in ...rtising, Circulation, Editorial and General ...r. Now holding position as Business ...ager on Paper with 20,000 Circulation, but ...se change to larger Organization. Address ...C-928, Editor & Publisher.

...orial Writer
... high recommendations wants position ... Democratic or independent newspaper. ..., Editor & Publisher.

...ir
...ied man, 39, thoroughly versed repor-..., editorial, mechanical ends; long and ...ssful experience country and metropolitan ...s and trade magazines; recently signed ...cate feature writer big metropolitan ..., now editor and manager prosperous ...ry, seeks change for family reasons. ...rs country weekly or small town daily. ... York State or nearby. Can handle every-... on either. Salary commensurate with ... costs and position, but healthful, ...ant surroundings for four children first ...deration. Address Box C-933, Editor & ...lisher.

...ditor or Managing Editor
...u really want an editorial chief, married ... family, middle thirties, college man, ...teen years in journalism in two countries, ...sten years' executive capacity, I am avail-...on week's notice. Want position that ...s with it responsibility, that offers op-...nity to man who will throw off his coat ...make the wheel hum. Salary secondary ...deration so long as it is reasonable. ... or write, Advertiser, 530 Lathrop Street, ...ng, Michigan.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Have You Thought
of employing a woman for that position in your advertising department? My success during the past five years in all phases of newspaper work makes me feel justified in suggesting the subject for your consideration. Address C-936, Editor & Publisher.

Managing Editor,
seven years' experience, aged 27, sober, industrious and reliable, seeks position on afternoon newspaper in East or South, either as managing editor, city editor or desk man. Write C-943, Editor & Publisher.

Position Wanted as Advertising Manager
Experienced both morning and evening newspaper—a fighter from the word "go"—prefers stiff competitive field. Capable of writing and selling more space than any man on his staff. Copy and retail advertising expert. A manager that knows how to get space and can impart that knowledge with "red-hot" enthusiasm to his men. Has good position now, but wants bigger one. Excellent references. Age 39, married. Address C-929, Editor & Publisher.

Publishers' Eastern Representative
New York office established eight years. Well known among advertising agencies and national advertisers. Offers advantages of principal owner's personal efforts on accounts. Inquiries invited from publishers seeking eastern connection. Commission or fixed remuneration basis. C-937, care Editor & Publisher.

Three Things
make most newspapers unprofitable. Competition is not one of them. Am soliciting job as manager of an unprofitable daily paper in city of no less than 20,000 population, surrounded by good territory. Can give proof of success on paper established 63 years, never paying, deep in debt. In four years I increased advertising revenue 200%; circulation 400%. Have now disposed of property with profit to owners. Will be at liberty November 1st. Address C-915, Editor & Publisher.

Young Man,
understanding daily news end thoroughly, desires place on daily, town 15,000, where can learn business side. Wants to go into game for himself but feels need of business experience. College graduate. Available about October 15. C-947, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

Advertising Solicitor
Newspaper of 20,000 circulation in a Pennsylvania city of 50,000 population is in need of an advertising solicitor who is capable of closing contracts and writing good merchandising copy. The newspaper is a fast growing one and it stands well in the community. Address Box C-938, care of Editor & Publisher, giving references, stating age, salary expected, and, if possible, enclose a photograph of yourself.

Feature Writer
Sunday department, New England newspaper, experienced man. Act quick. Box C-940, Editor & Publisher.

Help Wanted
Salesman, experienced in selling newspaper syndicate services, newspaper machinery and similar lines to handle a very attractive proposition on either salary or commission. It will be necessary to travel. For appointment, address Box C-934, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted
Circulation manager. Old established high class daily in Eastern city of 100,000 has opening for experienced circulation manager. Must know how to develop circulation among clean, legitimate lines, rather than by premiums, contests, etc. Must be thoroughly dependable and able to give good references. Write Box C-939, care Editor & Publisher, giving full information as to experience, whether married or single, salary expected, etc.

SITUATIONS WANTED

Editorial Connection with general publication, weekly or daily, wanted by lawyer, contributor to leading law reviews on current legal, political and economic questions and on international law. Opportunity to contribute toward shaping of public opinion chiefly sought—could make slight investment if necessary. C-949, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Accountant
A newspaper office man with many years' experience in every branch of the business wants connection with a good newspaper or magazine in New York or nearby eastern city. Have done everything from small beginning in clerical work up to management and systematizing in large publishing offices. Will begin for moderate salary to re-enter publishing business. Highest endorsements. Address C-951, care Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

For Sale
only paper and job plant in good town of 2,300. Plant well equipped and money maker, has only changed hands twice in fifteen years. Present owner taking over larger proposition, must sell at once. $6,000 cash required, balance easy terms. Reed M. Hewitt, Harbor Beach, Michigan.

Wanted
If you have a syndicate service or any sort of material to sell to retail advertisers or newspapers, a real selling organization wants to handle your proposition. For appointment address Box C-935, Editor & Publisher.

PROPAGANDISTS FEED NEW FIRES OF WORLD HATE

(Continued from page 5)

since, is that the terrible heat of Mesopotamia, and the strain he underwent during the siege, affected his judgment so seriously that he should not be held responsible for what he says or does. He has been given no military post of authority since his return home. In the light of these facts, known to every informed Britisher and every publicist in the Near East, the reader would be in serious error who based any conclusions concerning the present trouble upon the views expressed by General Townshend.

Enough has been written to emphasize the point that all news from the Near East is subject to corroboration. Judgment should be reserved upon all points. The public mind should come to final conclusions only after it has tested the reliability of its information. In this respect, America is better off than other countries, for our government rarely lets policy affect the news it imparts to the press. What Admiral Bristol and his aides report is likely to be nearer the full truth than any other statements coming out of the Near East. For our vigorous High Commissioner at Constantinople has a rare sense of what is new and what is true; and in the interest of the American public, he has not hesitated to give newspaper men from this country the use of the navy wireless, in order to escape the three-fold censorship through which dispatches would otherwise have to pass. Whatever news comes from Admiral Bristol direct is to be taken as trustworthy to the limit: what Americans are reported to have said in Athens or Salonica or London or Paris is to be accepted with reservations.

Mannington Leader Starts Soon

James F. Hovey, of Marietta, Ohio, has leased the plant of the old Mannington (W. Va.) Evening Leader and is preparing to publish an evening paper under the same name. The plant is equipped with a Duplex press and two linotype machines. Both the circulation manager and advertising manager of this new paper are yet to be selected. The staff will be made up partially of local men.

New Press for Boston Herald

Work on installing a new press for the Boston Herald has just been commenced. By the first of the year the paper will have this Scott multi-unit double octuple press in operation. This press, together with another similar press installed last year, will give the Herald a capacity of 288,000 16-page papers per hour. In making these changes a mezzanine floor has been built into the press room upon which the presses are located. The space underneath this serves for paper storage.

New Farmer-Labor Weekly

Farm and Labor News, a weekly newspaper, has just been launched in Texarkana, Tex. The initial number appeared September 1. R. J. Dowling is general manager and E. H. Tobey is the editor. The paper will be devoted to the interests of industrial and agricultural workers.

WANTED ADVERTISING MANAGER

In city of more than half-million people

One with selling as well as executive ability. Good salary, also chance to work on profit sharing basis. Replies considered strictly confidential.

Box C-950 Care of EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Sales Appraisals

Palmer, DeWitt & Palmer
Newspaper Properties
225 Fifth Ave. New York

Unusual Opportunities
Daily & Weekly NEWSPAPERS
TRADE PAPERS
HARWELL & CANNON
Newspaper and Magazine Properties
Times Building, New York
Established 1910

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

OVER TWENTY YEARS we have conducted a service bureau for employers and position seekers in the publishing field. Our lists include men and women fitted for positions up to the highest responsibility in editorial, business and mechanical departments of newspapers and trade journals. No charge is made to employers. Registration is free.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L B'LD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Talented, experienced, and highly efficient men, each a specialist in his own line, ready to solve your problems.

STARR SERVICE CORPS
UPBUILDERS of NEWSPAPERS
BROKAW BLDG···42ND and BROADWAY
NEW YORK

We Have Never Had A Discontinuance
on
Sir John Foster Fraser's "Weekly London Letter" of Literary, Theatrical, Social and Political Happenings.

Springfield Union
Cincinnati Times-Star
Indianapolis Star
Brooklyn Eagle
London Free Press
Wheeling News

are among those using it.

Write for Samples

The McClure Newspaper Syndicate
373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

Beginning September 11
THE SCIENCE NEWS BULLETIN
will be MAILED DAILY
instead of weekly
(with no increase in rates)
Forty Clients Now Receive This Service That Brings Science To
The Man In The Street
Write for trial report

SCIENCE SERVICE
1115 Connecticut Ave., N. W.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business-builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

The Standard of Influence
Discriminating readers and advertisers know that generations have found such power behind their favorite paper,
The Pittsburg Dispatch
the same year in and year out!
Branch Offices:
Wallace G. Brooke,
Brunswick Building, New York
The Ford-Parsons Co.
Marquette Building, Chicago, Ill.

"The African World"
AND
"Cape-to-Cairo Express"
Published every Saturday in London.

HUNCHES

Managing editors and city editors are always on the lookout for news; and feature ideas that can be used locally. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each hunch published under this head. The fact that the hunch is not being worked successfully in your city does not bar it from this department. Address your contributions to the HUNCH EDITOR. When they appear, clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable hunches will not be returned.

DR. E. H. BULLOCK, Kansas City health commissioner, has said we need legislation as well as education as to the hair of women food handlers, forcing them either to bob it or wear hair nets. Men food handlers also have a habit of tossing their heads, what about them? What does your city health officer think of the idea?—H. G. R.

Here's a plan which gains the approval of your church going readers. Have printed on one side of Post Cards name of your newspaper and on the reverse side blanks for name of church, total attendance and collection for your Sunday School last Sunday, one week ago and one year ago. Are more cards needed? Other news of interest. Distribute a number of these cards to the Superintendent or Secretary of each S. S. in your community and one day during the week (preferably Saturday) publish the reports. A rivalry will be started among the larger schools to head the list each week.—R. B. M.

How many nights a week should the married man have off? Here's a topic which is of great interest to all married women so it would arouse a great amount of interest among your readers if you could conduct a contest to get the cleverest letters on this topic. Also the publication of the letters would prove extremely entertaining to all of your readers.—H. H. W.

"The college of twins." That's the name that has been bestowed on Stephens College in Missouri. Eighteen pairs of twins are now attending that school. Find out how many sets of twins are attending your public and high school, or college. Obtain their photographs and interview them on humorous incidents when they have been mistaken for their twin. Readers are always interested in such stories.—R. B. M.

In what months of the year do most deaths from pneumonia occur? In what months are there the greatest number of suicides? In what months of each year do the greatest numbers of deaths from diphtheria and croup occur? Go to your local health officer, get his death statistics for the past five years and analyze these statistics so as to answer the above questions and so as to show what the danger months in your city are for sufferers from various diseases. This would make an unusual and very interesting story at this time of the year.—F. H. W.

Where demands on space are heavy the practice of The Seattle Times in printing the subscription rates and other information usually found in the Editorial masthead in blackface agate in the waste space on either side of the date line on an inside page, can be profitably followed. In the case of The Times this information is compressed into two lines.—A. N.

As a Halloween feature, a description of the pumpkin crop of the country, with a suitable prize for the largest pumpkin raised, would be of interest to readers of country weeklies and small town dailies.—L. J. T.

A big percentage of all the poeple in your city are greatly interested in playing games of cards—poker, bridge, pedro, etc. But it is very seldom that a paper runs a story about card playing. Why, then, wouldn't it be a good idea to do some inquiring among card players in your city as to the strangest hands they've ever seen at cards—all the players in a poker game having three of a kind, people in a bridge game all having four honors in one hand and so on? Such information could be given with or without the names of the people from whom it was secured and such a story would be immensely interesting to a big percentage of your readers.—F. H. W.

It has been said that nine men out of ten carry or wear a good luck piece or rabbit's foot. Is this true? Interview your leading townsmen and find out. Get them to tell about their favorite superstition. It is said that former Vice President Marshall picks up every pin he sees, and that on one occasion when he was Governor of Indiana a friend played a prank on him by spilling a box of pins on the cement walk leading to the Capital. It took Mr. Marshall 30 minutes to pick them up but he got them all.—L. J. T.

Methods of doing business in nearly all lines have undergone considerable changes during the past decade. A feature as well as semi-humorous story might be written on the present day experiences of a house-to-house canvasser. There was a time, especially in the more sparsely settled hamlets, when a book agent or pedlar would have the undivided attention of the house wife, but now, with better roads, automobiles and easy access to the larger towns, it is almost an impossibility for the agent to obtain a hearing. A reporter often runs across these individuals. They are ready talkers and who knows but a little questioning might bring forth sufficient material for a couple of good yarns.—H. E. R.

A four-page supplement dealing with agricultural and farm news of local interest has been started by the Wisconsin State Journal. A college graduate, with newspaper training, spends his full time mixing with the farmers of the county and gathering informative, feature, and personal news copy. This section appears each Tuesday and runs through all editions.—G. W. G.

What do your traffic cops think of the city and country drivers? Strange as it may seem, many officers report most of their trouble comes from city "jay" drivers. The suburban autoist is inclined to play safe and slow but the city cutup will take a chance and make a traffic jam.—J. R. C. Jr.

The Chicago Tribune is running the "Fifty Years Ago Today" feature in a new form—instead of making extracts from the files it is reproducing upon the editorial page fac-similes of news items. The contrast of the "Dress" of half a century ago with the make-up of today is effective.

Another thing the Tribune is doing is to put the bound file for twenty-five years ago into the show-windows, opening it every day to some page of interest.—H. D. K.

How long does the average piece of property in your city remain in the same hands? Here's a chance for a different, new story which you could easily get up by talking wth some of your local abstractors. Get from them some interesting data about pieces of property which have most frequently changed hands, about early owners of the most valuable property in the city and so on. Most abstractors are mines of very interesting information along this line. You could also from the abstractors secure striking data regarding technicalities which have created trouble in transferring local properties. And so on.—F. H. W.

Nearly every man and woman cherishes some favorite selection that was in the old reader they used at school—remember Henry Ford's special trip to buy a copy of McGuffey's? Interview some well-known persons about what they remember. Then find out if these selections are taught the children of today in your city. Some of the classics are still used. This will interest many who maintain that "They don't teach 'em as well as they did when I went to school."—H. D. K.

Do people bury their money, or hide it about the house as they did in the former days? The bankers in your city can give you a story. Recently a Muskegon (Mich.) bank was able to redeem several hundred dollars in paper money that had been badly damaged by being buried. But people, the bankers, say, are not hiding their money as in the olden days.—C. D. M.

Almost every agricultural community specializes in a few products of which it is proud. The local newspapers can popularize themselves immensely by promoting special days for the exhibit of such products, and with the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and the home merchants can offer attractive prizes for the best products. "Sweet Potato Day," "Elberta Peach Day," "Tomato Day," "Water Melon Day," are suggestive for the alert newspaper man with a litfle initiative. Keep your paper before the people by keeping something doing that is worth while to your community.—W. H. M.

Don't overlook the morbid. People like it. Some old attorney whose practice is being lost to young blood, will be glad to write a series of worst crimes in your county, free. They can be whipped into absorbing stories. Avoid crimes of late years. No apology is needed if the editor believes in giving the people what they want, not what others feel they should have. Gruesome crime stories of Balzac and Poe are still read with zest. Yours will have a genuine arresting interest, with a local background.—A. N. B.

Million Dollar Hearst Features
The World's Greatest Circulation Builders
International Feature Service, Inc.
New York

HAVE YOU SEEN THE DICKEY DOG CARTOONS IN THE SATURDAY EVENING POST?
They Are Also By the Creator of "Buddie and His Friends"
The Once-a-Week All-Dog Series, DRAWN ESPECIALLY FOR NEWSPAPERS
"Whistle for Buddy!"
METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK CITY

Few Papers — (if any) — surpass th
TRENTON NEW JERSEY TIMES
AS
A Food Medium
A recent reader survey indicates tha among the housewives of the city ou Thursday Food Feature Department—upward of four pages devoted to foo recipes and news and food advertisin —is the best feature carried by th Times
Circulation 30,237 Member A. B. C
KELLY-SMITH CO.
Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg Chicago

America's Best Magazine Page
Daily and Sunday
Newspaper Feature Servic
241 WEST 58TH STREET
New York City

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD
LEADS ALL LOS ANGELE DAILY NEWSPAPERS IN TOTAL PAID CIRCULATIO
Government statement for six months ended March 31, 1922
average 146,233 daily
New York
H. W. MOLONEY
604 Times Bldg.
Chicago
G. LOGAN PAYNE
Suite 401, Tower Bl
6 No. Michigan Av

THE

GREAT DAILY CIRCULATION OF NEW ENGLAND NEWSPAPERS EXCEEDING TWO MILLIONS

in a population of more than 7,000,000, indicates the avidity of the people for news and their ability to assimilate and digest advertising.

Advertising in New England will reach seven and one half per cent of America's population and more than half of these people live in thirty-six cities.

Here are people of all classes and occupations—for the most part well paid and thrifty—living close together yet not congested.

Advertising is as much read as news, in New England, as will be indicated by the number of actual sales credited by local advertisers to individual pieces of copy.

The national advertiser who will use the daily newspapers wisely surely puts in motion the greatest stimulus for sales.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Attleboro Sun .....(E)	4,968	.0275	.0175
*Boston Sunday Advertiser(S)	416,358	.55	.55
Boston Globe .....(M&E)	284,724	.45	.45
Boston Globe .....(S)	322,907	.55	.55
Boston Post .....(M)	380,796	.60	.60
Boston Post .....(S)	401,797	.55	.55
Boston Telegram .....(E)	145,113	.20	.20
Boston Transcript .....(E)	38,443	.20	.20
*Fall River Herald.....(E)	12,905	.035	.035
*Fitchburg Sentinel .....(E)	10,739	.05	.035
*Haverhill Gazette .....(E)	15,425	.055	.04
*Lynn Item .....(E)	16,273	.06	.04
*Lynn Telegram News.(E&S)	16,886	.05	.05
Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader(M&E)	20,419	.06	.06
*New Bedford Standard-Mercury .....(M&E)	30,659	.07	.07
*New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	24,853	.07	.07
Pittsfield Eagle .....(E)	15,845	.035	.03
*Salem News .....(E)	20,023	.09	.07
*Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	74,394	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	42,741	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

Bangor Daily Commercial(E)	14,469	.05	.04
*Portland Press Herald (M&S)	19,291	.07	.06
*Portland Express .....(E)	25,424	.10	.07
*Portland Telegram .....(S)	25,966	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,312	.03	.02
Manchester Union-Leader (M&E)	28,649	.10	.0175

RHODE ISLAND—Population 604,397

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Newport Daily News....(E)	6,171	.035	.03
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	24,063	.07	.06
Pawtuxet Valley Daily Times (Arctic) .....(E)	2,475	.021429	.021429
*Providence Bulletin .....(E)	59,767	.135	.135
Providence Journal .....(M)	30,662	.08	.08
*Providence Journal .....(S)	54,629	.12	.12
*Providence Tribune .....(E)	22,501	.10	.09
*Woonsocket Call .....(E)	13,024	.04	.04

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

*Barre Times .....(E)	6,644	.03	.02
Brattleboro Daily Reformer. (E)	3,016	.03	.015
Burlington Daily News...(E)	7,001	.04	.04
*Burlington Free Press..(M)	11,108	.05	.05
St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record .....(E)	3,124	.025	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	43,033	.145	.14
*Bridgeport Post .....(S)	18,395	.085	.08
*Hartford Courant .....(D)	29,780	.08	.07
*Hartford Courant .....(S)	48,600	.10	.09
*Hartford Times .....(E)	44,077	.12	.12
*Meriden Record .....(M)	6,634	.045	.025
New Haven Register..(E&S)	32,537	.09	.08
*New London Day.....(E)	10,325	.06	.045
Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	11,629	.07	.05
*Norwalk Hour .....(E)	4,594	.03	.03
*Stamford Advocate .....(E)	8,254	.0375	.03

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.

The Globe
AND Commercial Advertiser.
LARGEST DAILY NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES EST. 1793

Offers the general advertiser his most effective medium for reaching a large part of the great purchasing power of Metropolitan New York.

The Globe is made to interest people of the class who think and have money enough to buy advertised goods.

The Globe is different from most other newspapers by reason of its strong individuality and independence on all topics.

It is America's oldest daily evening newspaper—founded 1793—and stronger and more vigorous than ever.

Member A. B. C. THE Member A. B. C.

NEW YORK GLOBE

JASON ROGERS, Publisher

LORENZEN & THOMPSON, Inc.
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVES
NEW YORK CHICAGO

THIS ISSUE: TWO SECTIONS: TURKEY—THE CENTER OF WORLD INTEREST

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.]

Vol. 55. No. 27—First Section NEW YORK, DECEMBER 2, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

THE

Consolidated Press Association

ANNOUNCES THAT

The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service of which it is the sole selling and distributing agency, is Published Today in More Newspapers From the Atlantic to the Pacific —totaling a larger circulation than any other special cable service in the world.

This service is distributed instantaneously by our leased wire system on receipt of the cables in New York and San Francisco.

For rates in cities where the service is not yet under contract address

CONSOLIDATED PRESS ASSOCIATION
Evening Star Building Washington, D. C.

How Tetley's Tea Was Shown to Boston

BOSTON AMERICAN advertisers of products handled by grocers or druggists, having entered into a year's contract with us for at least 10,000 lines, are entitled to window displays of one week each in 100 Greater Boston grocery or drug stores. At the same time they are given a week of the American office window facing on Summer Street, where more than 30,000 persons pass daily.

THE AMERICAN'S Merchandising Service Department looks after all details, the advertiser's only expense or responsibility being the articles displayed.

Joseph Tetley & Co., makers of Tea, were among the more recent to avail themselves of this opportunity. Of the 100 grocers whose windows were used, 67 had the Tea in stock, but 23 others ordered liberally to meet demands. The total of immediate orders exceeded 1,000 pounds. Since then numerous other orders have been placed, due to the American advertising and window displays.

Writing of the recent campaign and its results from a newspaper advertising standpoint, Mr. F. A. Laurie, New England sales manager for the Tetley Company says: "We consider this very good indeed, and also wish to congratulate the Boston American on the co-operation created by the window displays."

Tetley Tea's experience parallels those of other Boston American advertisers. WON'T YOU BE SHOWN?

BOSTON AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

80 SUMMER ST., BOSTON 8, MASS.

MR. C. I. PUTNAM, 2 COLUMBUS CIRCLE, NEW YORK CITY
MR. J. F. FITZPATRICK, 504 HEARST BUILDING, CHICAGO
MR. ARTHUR BOOTH, 58 SUTTER STREET, SAN FRANCISCO

PRESTIGE

The First Buy in Cleveland indicated in advertising lineage

THE fact that THE PRESS carries more local advertising every week day than the News or Plain Dealer simply serves to indicate in a clear and tangible way the high esteem in which THE PRESS is held by advertisers.

When it is known that 79% of THE PRESS circulation of 182,548 (latest A. B. C. statement) is distributed in Greater Cleveland the complete local dominance of THE PRESS is readily understood and appreciated.

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, INC.
Publishers Direct Representatives
New York Chicago
Cincinnati St. Louis
Atlanta San Francisco
Cleveland
Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

The Member of Scripps McRae League of Newspapers

CLEVELAND PRESS

DOMINATES GREATER CLEVELAND

To Keep Your Goods Selling in

Philadelphia

During 1923

Philadelphia, — third largest market in the United States—should be placed 'way up on the list of trading areas to be covered in your 1923 advertising schedule.

With a population of 1,823,779 in the city alone and 3,000,000 in the metropolitan area—a $100,000,000 building program—industries running at capacity—and generous buying habits, Philadelphia presents big opportunities for you in 1923.

Let The Bulletin help you to sell your goods to Philadelphians next year—by carrying your advertising messages to nearly everybody in Philadelphia, Camden, and suburbs.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating in the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Bulletin

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania and is one of the largest in America.

U. S. Post Office and A. B. C. reports of net paid daily average circulation for six months ending September 30, 1922 —485,145 copies a day.

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
681 Market Street.

LONDON
M. Bryans,
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
Ray A. Washburn
5 rue Lamartine (9)

(Copyright 1922—Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 17,400

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday proceding the date of publication—by the Editor & Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

l. 55 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 2, 1922 No. 27

WHAT TUFFORD SAYS"—INLAND'S PASSWORD

pular Secretary's Labor for the Newspaper Indus try Truly Work for "a First Love"—Printers' Ink to Him Has Always Meant Something M ore Than Fumes of a Place of Occupation

BY BEN MELLON

IERE is a lot more to this thing of being good than appears on the sur-

Wil V. Tufford

Take the of Wil V. ord. He never bled, never tobacco, r was intox- d and has n doing his 'dest to keep Inland Daily s going on without any sual com- ts from any since 1887. some record there are ably a lot of le in this world who would never heard of Clinton, Iowa, one of our rn newspaper centers, if it had not for Wil.

s a far cry from Indian fighting in rado to the grand ballroom of the rison Hotel in Chicago, but that may in why they have such perfect order adjournments of the Inland Press always on scheduled time. "What Tufford say?" comes pretty close ing pass-words at Inland meetings. fford was born at Morrison, Illinois, became smeared with printers' ink at y early age. The Sentinel, a weekly paper of more or less regular habits the shop in which he first acquired ove that was to guide him in all his e activities.

ture movements in the life of Tufrather go to prove that printers' ink early age is something more than umes of a place of occupation.

fford was hardly twenty-one when, g migrated west, he secured a job as hter until there was an opening on Gunnison (Colo.) News. Gunnison had two buildings. One was occuby the News.

me time later Tufford became manof the Gunnison Democrat and carwith it the duties of local editor and nan as well as humorous paraher.

his spare moments he hept the books e stage coach line that connected ison with the outside world.

hear a great deal these days about ree and easy life and true indepenof column conductors. But that's ng when you come to consider the f Dave Day, who, under the nom ume of "The Solid Muldoon," won utation that would have brought joy sometimes fear to the moulder of ibes today.

fford became so good and still lived, y the very nature of the things he that he accumulated the second st honor that could come to a newsman in those easy going Colorado s, where the curses were loud and a voice preceded treatment that was ttle Muldoon" was the title con- on the paragrapher of the Demo- That meant a lot when it is reered that Gunnison was then 187 from a railroad and each mile over ghter trail has a way of killing any appreciation that a man may have for humor. It is a pretty high tribute to Tufford that he is still doing paragraphs, that sometimes carry a mean thrust, in the quiet of Clinton, Iowa.

After three and a half years in Colorado, crowded more or less with real excitement, and which included six weeks in the field with frontier troops hurriedly organized immediately following the Meeker massacre, Tufford returned to Clinton, Iowa, and the foremanship of the Clinton Herald. Later he became city editor of the newspaper.

Being city editor created an ambition to become a full-fledged editor and, as there only seemed to be one way of realizing that desire, Tufford took the necessary step and became owner of the Clinton Morning News, which he later consolidated with the Age.

For eleven full years Tufford was an editor and publisher and acquired a vast amount of inside information, which he credits with being largely responsible for his ability to hold his own when he is discussing newspaper operation with members of the Inland today.

Following a short stop at Waterloo, Tufford moved on to Mason City to direct the destinies of the Times-Herald. His stay was short. Clinton kept calling him and there is where you will find him today giving a percentage of his time to his own printing business, but a far larger part of it to the newspaper publishing industry of the Middle West.

Wil Tufford's labor for the publishing industry can rightly be called work for a first love. He has not been actively engaged with any newspaper for many years, but that has in no way lessened his interest in the general betterment of the newspapers and a just return for the men engaged in their making.

Tufford first became interested in cooperative organization for better business methods among the publishers of the Middle West in 1887 and his interest has not lagged any since that time. He was secretary of the first meeting held that year. He has been a continually active member of the Inland since 1890, when as publisher of the Clinton Morning Age he was one of the sixty members whose dues totaled the magnificent sum of $60.

In 1900, Tufford was elected president of the Inland and one year later to the position of secretary and treasurer.

He held it down ever since.

In 1905 Tufford sold out his last property interest in the newspaper business, but that made no change in his connection with the Inland, and some people go so far as to say that he was actuated by a desire to devote more of his time to other people's newspaper interests.

The Inland was reincorporated five years ago, but it took two years more to get Tufford on a salary basis—and that isn't much.

Tufford visions the Inland only as a purely business organization and its meetings as a place for the discussion and solution of business problems. Editorial matters have no place within its scheme of things. He has always had a prominent part in arranging programs and controlling meetings, and that, in no small measure, is credited with the success of the organization.

Right now he is carrying on a campaign in the interest of advertising and against free publicity that is sure to have a far-reaching effect. Instead of talking about free publicity as an evil he is gathering up big bundles of the products of the ready made opinion material with which the country is flooded daily and sending it to the persons in whose interest it was first sent out. In this manner he hopes to show the victims how clean of deletions for publication the stuff for which they pay real money goes through the every-day copy desk.

Tufford's interest in the Inland extends somewhat beyond the newspaper business although he would probably be the first person to deny it. In fact, it has only been within the last twelve months that he has wandered very far from that territory although he was born in 1858, and has done a lot of traveling since.

He and Walter C. Johnson, of the Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, had a bet on which organization would lead in membership the first of last year. The Inland passed the 250 under a special Tufford stimulant, and he journeyed down to Chattanooga to eat an opossum dinner as guest of honor. Being so close to a real rolling ocean he decided to continue over to Savannah and look at it. He must have been pleased.

During the last convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association he paid his first visit to New York, and having taken a liking to oceans, with the Atlantic as a sample, he spent last July watching the Pacific pounding on the shores of the Northwest.

Will V. Tufford has written a number of Indian legends, and has lectured on the ways of the Red Man from information gathered first hand—both in the field and as a friend of a chief of the Utes. His favorite recreation is walking, but instead he drives a car. He finds it a safer place to be than afoot on the road. He writes poetry—and some of it has been printed, and he envies the window decorations of Marshall Field's as works of art.

And, at the next annual meeting of the Inland Daily Press Association Wil V. Tufford, secretary and treasurer, will open his annual report with the remark that "You can't do much—office help considered—on $1,000 a year, but—" Then next year, if he runs true to form, you will find him turning out more stuff than ever.

OUR TURKEY SUPPLEMENT

EDITOR & PUBLISHER today presents as a supplement the suppressed King-Crane Report on Turkey, together with cognate documents, such as the Turkish Nationalist Pact, and places before the world the most needed and trustworthy and unbiased facts concerning the tangled affairs of the peoples of the Near East which now hold the focus of universal public interest.

IT IS AN ANTIDOTE TO PREVALENT PROPAGANDA

This report holds the answer to all the clamorous claims of the clashing parties which are making the mind of America their battleground—the pro-Turks, pro-Armenians, pro-Greeks, pro-Zionists, pro-British, pro-French, pro-Italians, etc.

No handbook for the editorial desk upon the Lausanne Conference can compare with this, and that Conference would have been unnecessary had this report been heeded. Events since 1919 have substantiated the findings of these American investigators.

IT'S NOW TOO LATE

to follow many of the recommendations made in this report, but much is revealed that may still be salvaged. The report is in accord with the startling declarations of American Ambassador Child to the Lausanne Conference.

PRESIDENT HARDING PLEADS FOR THE NEAR EAST and has asked the governors of the states for observance of December 3 as a day of relief for the destitute millions in this land that now holds the world's attention and future peace.

Every American editor and writer should be prepared to meet this great emergency with facts and it is for this reason EDITOR & PUBLISHER prints, for the first time, as a part of this issue

SPECIAL SUPPLEMENT PAGES I TO XXVIII

ADVERTISERS SUGGEST NEWSPAPERS SHOULD BACK UP MAGAZINES

But A. N. A. Convention Is Told That Idea Is Impractical and Uneconomical—Marketing Economy Program Started Off with Standard Paper Size Recommendations

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 23.—Determined to do everything within their power during the next year to help reduce the cost of living, through more efficient advertising methods, thereby directly lowering the cost of commodities distribution, the members of the Association of National Advertisers closed their convention here today with the following specific recommendations to start their economy and efficiency program:

That this Association approves the report of the Committee on Simplification of Paper Sizes of the Bureau of Standards, in which are recommended the standard book paper sizes, 25 in. by 38 in., 26 in. by 29 in., 32 in. by 44 in., 35 in. by 45½ in. and their doubles; the bond and writing paper sizes 17 in. by 22 in., 17 in. by 28 in.. 19 in. by 24 in., and their doubles; and the 30½ in. by 41 in. size for the use of book publishers.

"2. That this Association urges that co-operation with the Bureau and with other trade organizations toward further simplification of paper and printing be continued, looking to the establishment of standards of paper grades and the identification of paper by the manufacturers thereof.

That the Association go on record as recommending both to its members and to publishers, that the recognized standard page of 9 in. by 12 in. trimmed size, and 7 in. by 10 in. type size, be adhered to, and that fractional deviations or exceptions be eliminated, believing that this size as recommended by the A. B. P. and the T. P. A. is most convenient and practical. This recommendation applying particularly to the so-called business papers.

Discussion of ways and means by which cost of distribution may be lowered continued right up to adjournment. Waste representing millions of dollars yearly was pointed out in present methods of mailing and in freak and pointless printed matter and mail advertising, which, added to those covered in the report of the early sessions of the convention published in EDITOR & PUBLISHER last week, offered plenty of food for thought for the members of the association to work out reforms upon during the next year.

One of the interesting discussions of the convention, from the newspaper standpoint, was that which followed the talks made by representatives of various advertising mediums on the subject of co-operation. Several advertisers asked why newspapers were unwilling to solicit local advertising from retailers to back up magazine campaigns and William A. Thomson, director of the Bureau of Advertising of the A. N. P. A., who, with his associate, Thomas H. Moore, had spoken before the convention, was asked to answer the question.

Mr. Thomson said that magazine advertisers frequently asserted it would cost too much money to advertise in the newspapers of a given locality, but at the same time these advertisers asked newspapers to induce dealers to do this advertising which the manufacturer ought to be doing. Mr. Thomson inquired what justification there was for the idea that this advertising, which the manufacturer says he can't afford to do, would pay the retailer.

Being questioned further, Mr. Thomson discussed the essential difference between the magazine campaign of general publicity and the newspaper campaign of market development. He said so far as the majority of national advertisers were concerned, the two systems had little in common. He asserted newspaper people were kept busy at all times co-operating with advertisers who were newspaper users. Even if the newspaper man were inclined to get dealers to do the newspaper advertising necessary to support a magazine campaign, he had little time for that. He asserted that the unwillingness to induce merchants to spend money in co-operation with a magazine campaign was not a wholly selfish position. Frequently this refusal merely protected the dealer against an unprofitable investment. He believed in many instances the refusal was an indirect benefit to the advertiser in that it represented unwillingness to encourage a costly and unscientific method of national merchandising which was gradually giving way before modern trade developments.

The long argued question of methods of paying advertising agents was brought up again in the annual report of President Fowler and of the committee on advertising agency relations, but in a way that seemed to be more hopeful of a satisfactory solution of the problem than has so far marked its debate. Chairman E. I. LaBeaume, of the agency relations committee, reported briefly to the effect that satisfactory progress has been made by the A. N. A. on the agency remuneration question, but that it is a problem that cannot be settled immediately but will be gradually, to the A. N. A. members' complete satisfaction.

Retiring President Fowler, in his annual address, gave the subject more detailed attention and held out hopes that steps which the A. N. A. is now taking to place the position of its members before the publishers of the country, will be "the forerunner to a meeting which I would like to see brought about between a joint committee of three each, from the publishers, the advertising agencies and member companies of the A. N. A."

"We are not going around with a chip on our shoulder, trying to solve the agents' problem for them; nor yet are we complacent under the occasional resolutions passed by various publishing organizations, stating that the present commission form of payment is the best form of payment for advertising agents," said Mr. Fowler. "Nor are we eager to see advertisers remain in the dark; paying agents' commissions which are either too small or too great and certainly not based upon a strict understanding of what constitutes good business.

"The present program of the Association of National Advertisers, as I see it, is to live in harmony with the publishers and agents who are at the other two points of this advertising triangle.

"We do not desire to tear down an important part of our own business structure simply because we do not like the color of the brick that is used, and we do not intend to pull out the bricks and throw them at our confreres. I am of those who believe that we are nearer to a point of securing action than we have even been before, not as an association, because that we cannot do if we would, but each member of the Association of National Advertisers has had or can get help in solving his own individual advertising agency problem, so that he will get the utmost out of every dollar which is retained by the agent as a commission for his service.

"The publishers are the ones on whom we should bring pressure to bear, to enlighten them in their darkness.

"With the American Association of Advertising Agents, headed now, I believe, by strong, conservative, right-thinking men, I think our program is one of common friendship and common interest—that the solving of the trouble is something that should be undertaken by them, and that our duty ends with making it clear to our advertiser principal executives just how much and just how they are paying these a vertising agents who are of known help to us

"The attitude of John Benson, the new pre dent of the four A's is broad and helpful. talk with the new vice-president, Clarence Newell, assures me that they will welcome, stretching out of a friendly hand, and so as our solving the problem for them goes, am inclined to believe that the full enlight ment of publishers and advertiser executiv by such methods as our fact-series of letters v give, is the forerunner to a meeting which would like to see brought about—that of committee of three each from the publishe the agents and member companies of our as ciation.

"We can't change the system in a minu We can make it necessary that increased s vice be rendered, and just so sure as the vertiser insists on adequate service, based the amount he spends, the returns he requi just so will the question of method of paym become secondary. The advertising agent w finds himself having to spend so much of commissions he secures (in order to give a quate service) that he is left without the ex long profit which he secures under the pres arrangement, will be the first to suggest a vised plan of payment for his service, by advertiser.

"This phase of our business is not the be and end-all of the Association of Natio Advertisers; it is but one subject of many which we are all interested, but one, the so tion of which is only a part of our day's wo

"I would deplore organized action at s another A. N. A. meeting on the question agency relations. Our own number think too many and varied ways for an entire u nimity of opinion. How then can we hope have the agents or publishers at once agree w us on an immediate change to some other p than the present form?

"But what the A. N. A Headquarters can for us is to help us solve our own individ problem. There is no reason why advertis as a selling force should not go forward greater lengths than ever before, and while is going on, the agents' problem and every ot problem can be solved if each member will quaint his advertising executive principal fi with the facts. I am convinced of this, beca it has been solved in the case of my own ho and I know that others have solved it."

How vast sums of money are wast yearly in careless and thoughtless ser ing of advertising and manufactu goods through the United States ma was outlined by A. H. Black, assist postmaster at Philadelphia. One of t startling things brought out by M Black was that it costs the Post Off Department approximately $5,000,000 year to pay clerks for searching rectories because of incomplete, wrc or missing street addresses on m matter.

He urged especial care in addressir correcting mailing lists; printing dresses in all advertisements; avoid the use of street junction address using too much moisture in sealing stamping, causing mail to stick toget and subjecting it to delay in handlir frequent mailings through the day t holding all until evening, thereby ining 12 to 20 hours in delivery in ny cases; not using cards and en- opes of unusual sizes, which are liable damage; leaving fully 3½ inches of ce on the right hand side of envelopes stamping and marking; addressing at least 10 point type; guaranteeing urn postage on third or fourth class il; using mailing permits or pre- celled stamps on large mailings, reby necessitating less handling, and nplying strictly with the postal laws o what can and cannot be sent through various classes of mail.

THE ASSOCIATION OF NATIONAL ADVERTISERS AT ATLANTIC CITY, N

Mr. Black urged use of the par- post as the method of reaching more ces than any other transportation ncy existing. He also informed the ertisers that the Post Office is at ir service for correcting mailing lists a cost of 60 cents per hour in first and ond class cities and in other classes reasonable charges.

That only 88 advertisers, and fourteen cent of the A. N. A. membership, ng to the Audit Bureau of Circula- s was brought out in a talk by O. C. rn, of the National Lead Company, w York, on why all national adver- rs should be giving their whole- rted support to the A. B. C. Mr. rn is president of the A. B. C. and a ner president of the A. N. A. Ten N. A. members signified their inten- of joining immediately.

Mr. Harn also announced that the erican Institute of Architects, through structural service committee, has ar- ged to show manufacturers of build- materials the best means of selling r products to them through advertis-

. Knickerbocker Boyd, of Philadel- , and Sullivan Jones, of New York, bers of the institute committee, ex- ed and described kinds of advertising holly mail—that was useless or help- to them, and why. The purpose of service extended by the Architects' itute is to eliminate waste, for which public in the end pays. The com- ee recommended that building mate- producers adhere in advertising mat- ent to architects to sizes not exceed- 8½ by 11 inches and not smaller 7⅝ by 10½ inches, folders in those being acceptable. This will allow ling by number in the standard files he institute. Suggestions as to def- information architects want to know t products will be included in the service of the committee. The use of "flyers" was suggested, to save the read- ers' time, such as brief reference to mat- ter in the Institute's files or being adver- tised in current issues of architectural trade publications or catalogs."

In the course of his talk, contending that an excess of retail dealers operat- ing without any system or sense of public responsibility, is the primary cause of the high cost of marketing goods, William G. Shepherd, of Collier's said: "Most stores are in the main small one-man affairs, blindly groping about in the dark jungle of economics. One good store, properly conducted by a retailer who has sense of public service, is better than half a dozen dub stores that only light up the sidewalk at the consumers' expense with a garish glare that doesn't mean anything but a challenge to other store- keepers to the battle royal of retail com- petition. Advertising can subtly teach the consumer how to deal with a re- tailer in a community who receives the confidence of that community and then abuses it by overcharging or by exhibi- tion of the monopolistic spirit."

The lesson the retailer must learn, ac- cording to the findings of the Harvard University Business Research, as stated to the convention by W. A. Shaw, of Chicago, is that rapidly turning stock, provided it is adequate to meet the re- quirements of the reasonable consumer, is the most profitable. "Those who will ignore this lesson will do so to their regret," said Mr. Shaw.

The Harvard Bureau is endeavoring to set up operating standards for stores that will enable them to operate at lower costs and yet increase their business volume, with more profit to themselves and the manufacturers of the goods they handle. It has been engaged in the work since 1913. Examples were quoted by Mr. Shaw where sales force expenses had been reduced as much as seven per cent on shoes and five per cent on groceries and stock turnovers increased to 2.5 times on shoes and to twelve times on groceries.

Occupancy charges have been one of the largest factors in the increase of re- tailers' cost of doing business since 1921, according to Mr. Shaw, who said in part:

"The cost of running retail jewelry stores between 1919 and 1921 increased from 32.3 per cent of sales in 1919 to 43.5 per cent in 1921. Of this increase 11.2 per cent, or 50 per cent, is accounted for by the increased percentage taken by the wages of sales people and rent. Occupancy cost the typical jeweler ex- actly 50 per cent more in 1921 than in 1919. The jeweler, turning stock slower, had to bear a larger increase in his in- terest charges than the retailer of shoes, but otherwise the story is parallel.

"Since 1913 the net profit in the typical retail hardware business fell from 6.02 per cent of sales to a loss of .82 per cent in 1921; net profit from shoes dropped from 4.69 per cent to 1.52 per cent; retail groceries from 6.5 per cent to 2.5 per cent; and dry goods from 7.2 per cent to 6.4 per cent.

"Stores that turned stock fastest spent the most for advertising and more for location, yet made the more net profit by far. Those stores with the lowest rate of turnover lost money."

Too few manufacturers analyze their cost figures to the point of the actual net result in profit or loss on each sale, said O. D. Street, general manager of distribution for the Western Electric Company. When they do, they find that many sales and transactions on which they figured a certain profit have really been losses. He estimated that out of every 5,000 factory accounts sixty per cent are losing money, and the manufac- turers don't know it. The loss, for the most part, is represented in small sales and transactions, which seem profitable because of their larger volume, but which, upon analysis, will be found to be cost- ing more than they bring in. Mr. Street proved this by charts used in the busi- ness of his own company. He also pre- dicted that standardization is going to be the biggest factor in reducing costs of distribution, pointing out that only recently, through the efforts of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, the sizes of paving blocks manufactured in the United States were reduced from sixty-two to nine and farm machinery seat styles and sizes from eleven to one.

In his talk on what the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce can do for American business firms in helping them in foreign business, Henry H. Morse, chief of the Division of Spe- cialties, asked the A. N. A. to discourage the idea that it is only necessary to ob- tain a mailing list and send a catalogue to do business abroad. Sales programs, as complete as a firm would use in sell- ing in America, is just as necessary for foreign business, he said.

Necessity of forestation in America was emphasized by M. L. Davey, of the Davey Tree Expert Company, a mem- ber of the A. N. A., who has just been returned to Congress from Ohio. He declared Gifford Pinchot's warning that America will have a lumber famine within twenty-five years should serve as a personal warning to every manufac- turer of what is in store for him, if the cutting of forests continues without re- planting.

E. T. Meredith, publisher of Successful Farming, Des Moines, declared the farmer is the business barometer of the nation and showed charts to prove that business rises and falls with his pros- perity and adversity. He urged the na- tional manufacturers to give the farmer their especial consideration in keeping him contented and happy.

The complete list of A. N. A. officers for the ensuing year, including the execu- tive committee, follows:

PRESIDENT—G. B. Sharpe, Burroughs Adding Machine Company, Detroit.*

EX-PRESIDENT—G. E. Fowler, Colgate & Co., New York.*

VICE-PRESIDENTS—G. Lynn Sumner, Inter- national Correspondence Schools, Scranton, Pa.; E. T. Hall, Ralston Purina Co., St. Louis; P. L. Thompson, Western Electric Company, New York.*

SECRETARY-TREASURER—John Sullivan, 17 West 46th street, New York.

DIRECTORS:

H. K. Gilbert, Oliver Typewriter Company.
T. C. Tucker, California Almond Growers Exchange.
E. E. Taylor, Carnation Milk Products Com- pany.
P. B. Zimmerman, National Lamp Works of General Electric Company.
W. S. Ashby, Western Clock Company.
E. I. La Beaume, Hercules Powder Com- pany.*
J. S. Wichert, Mellin's Food Company.*
F. N. Sim, Timken-Detroit Axle Company.*
R. E. Miller, Hamilton Watch Company.*
H. V. Jamison, American Sheet & Tin Plate Company.
Carl J. Schumann, Hilo Varnish Corpora- tion.*
W. L. Weeden, Geo. W. Blabon Company.*

*Indicates members of executive committee.

Retiring President Fowler, in his an- nual address, summed up the year's rec- ord of the A. N. A. and the result of the convention as follows:

"It is not so much in the number of members that our association finds its greatest strength, but in the character of the houses, the sincerity of purpose of the member representative themselves. The real reason for our existence has been crystallized in this convention's sub- ject—How to make advertising yield more for every dollar spent."

E ITS THIRTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION WAS HELD, NOVEMBER 22-24.

DAILY NEWSPAPERS ARE TOO DIURNAL FOR NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER

American Journalism Elevates Superficiality to the Plane of an Occupation, He Tells Columbia Trustees—Passion for News Has Driven Out Knowledge and Scholarship

"THE besetting vice of the present day and generation is the spirit and temper of journalism, which may perhaps be fairly described as day-to-dayness. It is the enemy of constant and continuing interest in any serious subject, and it elevates superficiality to the plane of an occupation."

Thus wrote Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, in his annual report to the trustees of the university. "The Passing Show" was the heading he gave to the chapter in his annual report wherein he described the tendencies of present day newspapers, reporters, editorial writers and general tendencies in the journalistic field. In places he praised the profession; other paragraphs condemned it severely.

"We have at our disposal a quick record of contemporary happenings of more or less interest and importance," Dr. Butler continued, "and an abundance of critical comment upon them, which could not have been foreseen or foreshadowed a hundred years ago. This has been an incalculable gain to civilization and to the education of public opinion. Puck has not only put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes, but his electric spark has annihilated time and made of space a mere convenience. If this vast development were kept by the public in its proper place and treated with a due sense of proportion, there would be no ground for critical comment.

"What has happened, however, is that the spirit and temper of journalism, of this day-to-dayness, have spread over pretty much the whole of mankind and have substituted a rapid survey of the surface of things for a sound and well-balanced understanding of their length and breadth and depth. It is as if one were to stand upon the shore of the ocean and attempt to estimate the movements of its waters, the secrets of its depths, and the variety of its influences by watching the waves that with greater force or less roll up on the sands hour after hour."

Under the subject of "What is called news," Dr. Butler described it as "a happening which is deemed to have an immediate emotional or intellectual interest." He then classified this interest as "occupying not only the first place but the only place in the mind that has surrendered itself to the spirit of journalism."

"The most recent happening must be instantly reported," he continued, "even at the cost of complete accuracy. Time will not permit the sort of inquiry that may be needed to substantiate a rumor or to interpret correctly an incident or event. As a result of experience, the daily press comes to have an almost uncanny instinct for dealing at short notice with these matters without going far astray. But, nevertheless, when this habit of mind is communicated to the larger public which is untrained and undisciplined, the results are nothing short of deplorable. With such, the printed word comes to have an authority which the writer of it would never venture to assume, and a bit of misinformation, once started on its way, travels with incredible speed, while the correction or denial goes haltingly and inconspicuously after.

"This spirit and temper have notably invaded American education to its grave undoing. It is less than half a century since an urbane and accomplished professor in Columbia College used to advise his students to spend no time upon a book that was not at least a hundred years old, since, if a book had not survived that long, there was no telling whether it was worth reading or not. Today the number of younger students who know the names of a dozen books that are a hundred years old, much less read them, is not very large. That this is not an event of yesterday is well illustrated by that passage in Martin Chuzzlewit in which Charles Dickens makes an American with a military title reply to Martin Chuzzlewit's inquiry as to the condition of poetry, the theatre, literature, and the arts in the United States, in these words: "We are a busy people, sir, and have not time for reading mere notions. We don't mind 'em if they come to us in newspapers along with the almighty strong stuff of another sort, but darn your books!'"

Dr. Butler claimed that a passion for information as to current events has driven out both knowledge and scholarship. "These events," he said, "may or may not be correctly reported and interpreted. They may or may not be of considerable or permanent importance. Given only the fact they are current events, they are hastened upon the attention of curious youth with all the paraphernalia that would accompany the revelation of a fundamental law of nature or an interpretation of the rise and fall of the Roman Empire. It is the instinct of this point of view and of this method of mental occupation to put the newest book in the place of the best book and the newest theory in the place of the soundest theory. Since the time of Thomas à Kempis and John Bunyan it has not been unusual for a 'best seller' to find its way into the history of literature. Novelty, instead of arousing suspicion by reason of its very newness, offers attraction by reason of its departure from that which has heretofore been. To find this spirit and temper so widely abroad in the world is distressing enough; but to find it invading the school and college is disheartening in the extreme.

"The educational institutions of the nation, like its courts, have been supposed to be above the ebb and flow of mere temporary passion or passing appetite, and to deal with those far-reaching principles and well established laws that hold the moral and intellectual order together, give it coherence, and make possible its understanding. Current events have significance only if noted and judged, to use Spinoza's noble phrase, sub specie aeternitatis.

"The one competent judge of the significance and importance of current events," Dr. Butler said, in closing on his subject of journalism, "is he who is so soundly grounded in the meaning of events that have gone before that he can judge the newest happenings not according to their newness but by their value. They may be new and of highest significance; they may also be new and of no importance whatsoever. Novelty is neither a recommendation nor an obstacle. It marks simply the latest change in the content of the eternal time order. An education which does not understand this fact, or an education which neglects to emphasize and to interpret this fact, is little, if any, better than no education at all. The search for truth is something quite distinct from the search for novelty. To quote Victor Hugo's well known words: Ceci tuera cela."

WILL MEET TO PUSH KELLY BILL

Conference Will Discuss Ways and Means December 4

Representatives of the newspaper organizations constituting the American Publishers Conference will meet in Washington December 4, to discuss ways and means of advancing the Kelly bill which provides for the repeal of the last two increases in postal rates on second class matter. Enactment of the measure at the short session of congress, which is the aim of the interested publishers, will mean a reduction of $22,000,000 in newspaper rates in the next year.

The bill, which was introduced last summer by Rep. M. Clyde Kelly of Pennsylvania and referred to the House Committee on Post Office and Post Roads contemplates the reduction of present second class rates from "the rate in effect July 1, 1921, to the rates in effect July 1, 1919, without affecting the free-in-county privileges or the existence of the zone system."

The publishers organizations which will be represented at the conference are: American Publishers Association, American Newspaper Publishers, Associated Business Papers, Inc., Southern Newspaper Publishers Association, Inland Daily Press Association, National Editorial Association, National Publishers Association, New England Daily Newspaper Association and the Del-Mar-Via Press Association.

$50 FOR A CHRISTMAS STORY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER wants a Christmas feature story for its issue of December 23. The winning story must meet the following conditions:

Must be told within 2,500 words.

Must be of a human interest nature built around a Christmas event concerning a newspaper or advertising man or woman, a newspaper or advertising office, an act of Christmas spirit, or the like.

It may be a story of fact or fiction.

Manuscripts must be in hand by December 18.

$50 will be paid the writer of the story that is published; non-winning stories will be returned, provided postage is enclosed.

Address at once: CHRISTMAS STORY EDITOR.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1115 World Building New York City

SMILEY CHIEF EDITOR OF PUBLIC LEDGERS

E. G. Lowry Named Editor of Morning Paper, Succeeding John J. Spurgeon—Wile and Spillane Resign

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—Announcement is made of a number of important changes in the executive personnel of the Public Ledger and the Evening Public Ledger.

David E. Smiley, who has been editor-in-chief of the Evening Public Ledger as well as a director of the Public Ledger Company, which publishes the morning and evening Ledgers, has been named as chief executive editor of both the Public Ledger and the Evening Public Ledger.

Edward G. Lowry, who has been attached to the editorial staff of the Public Ledger becomes editor of that newspaper.

John J. Spurgeon, former editor of the Public Ledger, has resigned. Resignations have also been accepted from Frederic William Wile, who was Washington correspondent of the Public Ledger, and Richard Spillane, who has been editor of business news section of the Public Ledger. Mr. Wile and Mr. Spillane have already severed their connection with the Public Ledger. Mr. Spurgeon retires on December 1, which marks the date when Mr. Smiley and Mr. Lowry assume control.

Mr. Smiley's elevation has created a new executive office. He will be in supreme control of the editorial activities of both newspapers, Mr. Lowrey confining his efforts exclusively to the Public Ledger.

Mr. Smiley is a native Philadelphian and his newspaper career of more than 25 years has been spent entirely on Philadelphia papers. He is one of the best known and best liked newspaper executives in the city.

Shortly after his graduation from the old Central Manual Training High School, in 1896, Mr. Smiley began as a reporter on the Evening Star. Later he became political writer and legislative correspondent on the Evening Bulletin. He wrote politics for a time on the North American and served also on the news desk of the Press. He returned to the Bulletin as political writer, resigning to study law.

Mr. Smiley was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar in 1906. In that year he returned to newspaper work and became city editor of the Public Ledger. In 1911 he rejoined the staff of the Evening Bulletin as editorial writer and dramatic editor, continuing in that dual capacity until 1916, when he became managing editor of the Public Ledger. In March 1918, Mr. Smiley became editor-in-chief of the Evening Public Ledger, a position he has held until his recent elevation.

Mr. Smiley is married and has three children. He lives at Oak Lane, one of Philadelphia's most attractive residential suburbs.

Mr. Lowry is a native of Atlanta where he began newspaper work as a reporter on the Constitution in 1900. In 1903 he became Albany correspondent for the New York Evening Post, later becoming its Washington representative and in 1913 its managing editor.

He was also political correspondent for Harper's Weekly and contributed political articles to the North American Review and other publications. At the start of the World War he was a special agent of the Department of State, attached to the American Embassy at London. When the United States entered the war he went to the front with the British forces and was awarded the British military cross. He is the author of "Washington Close-ups" and until he became attached to the Public Ledger editorial staff, represented the Public Ledger at Washington. He has also written extensively for the Curtis magazines on Washington topics.

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

rick E. Murphy, of the Minneapolis Tribune, was in Washington last week and his respects to that other newspaper man in the White House, accompanied by or Frank B. Kellogg. From the smile, we would say a pleasant time was had .

Homeward bound! Major Wynne Williams, for several years Business Manager of the London Times, in America, sailed for London this week to take an important position in the advertising department of the same newspaper. He, Mrs. Williams and daughter Helen register pleasure, not because they are leaving America but because they are going home.

. Smiley stuck to Philadelphia when hia was "hard." Now he is chief e editor of the two Ledgers.

Sigma Delta Chi has been having some time lately. Newspaper men from every part of the Pacific Northwest gathered at the University of Oregon recently and above we have the S. D. X. result. Front row, left to right: Donald Sterling, managing editor, Oregon Journal; W. F. H. Thacher, professor of journalism; Philip Jackson, associate publisher of the Oregon Journal; Ralph Cronise, Albany Democrat; Clinton Howard, journalism student, and Hal Hoss, Oregon City Enterprise and secretary Oregon State Editorial Association.

But you ain't seen nothing. Below we have one of the results of the Eighth Annual Convention at Kansas State College. Top row—N. S. Barth, K.S.A.C.; A. D. Dailey, K.S.A.C.; Eugene Thackney, Depauw; Theodore Christian, Denver; Roy L. French, Wisconsin; Chilson Leonard, Cornell; Henry C. Fulcher, Texas; D. R. Tobin, Ohio State; Wallace Abbey, Northwestern; Ralph Shideler, K.S.A.C. Fifth row—Henry D. Ralph, Beloit; Lorenz Walters, Iowa University; C. E. Rogers, University of Oklahoma and K.S.A.C.; George H. Godfrey, University of Oregon; Grayson Kirk, Miami; Arthur S. Bowes, Purdue; Nelson P. Poynter, Indiana; I. E. Showerman, Illinois. Fourth row—L. M. Nevin, Pittsburgh; Walter C. Folley, North Dakota University; Craig Johnson, Ruox; H. H. Ayer, Maine; Ralph Crosman, Colorado University; Alfred Willouby, Wisconsin; E. T. Keith, K.S.A.C.; Kenneth Stewart, Stanford; Dana Norris, Grinnell; Ed. Amos, K.S.A.C. Third row—Karl Wilson, K.S.A.C.; T. Adams, Louisiana; Owen Cowling, Washington; Edmund S. Carpenter, Marquette; Frank L. Snow, K.S.A.C. and Oregon State; E. Parrish Lovejoy, Jr., Michigan; C. F. Moran, Western Reserve; C. R. Smith, Harold Hobbs, and Albert Mead, K.S.A.C. Second row—Paul Frederichsen, Columbia; W. E. Dripe, John S. Dodds, Marc Buettell, Mortimer Goodwin, and Jewell W. Johnson, Ames; A. S. Tousley, Minnesota; Gerald F. Perry, Missouri; Hutton Bellah, Oklahoma; William O. Cogswell, Montana. Bottom row—N. A. Crawford, K.S.A.C.; Conrad E. Larson, Ames; F. W. Bechman, Ames; Ward Neff, national treasurer, Chicago; Kenneth C. Hogate, national president, New York City; Lee A. White, past president, Detroit; T. Hawley Tapping, national secretary, Ann Arbor, Michigan; H. H. Herbert, national vice-president, Norman, Oklahoma; H. W. Davis, K.S.A.C.

ve have what Frazier Hunt, better as "Spike," calls disguising himself. up like a Turk he recently made his o Asia-Minor as a correspondent of rst publications.

LISTING FOR ALL CAPITAL REGULARS IN NEW CONGRESS DIRECTORY

Seating Rules Will Also Be Changed to Accommodate All Working Writers at Special Congressional Exercises—Listing Will Include Bureau Chiefs and Reporters

By SAM BELL

(Washington Correspondent of Editor & Publisher)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.—Recommendations providing for changes in the membership and seating rules of the press galleries of Congress will be submitted next week by the Standing Committee of Correspondents for the approval of the full gallery membership. The meeting will be held on the day President Harding goes to Congress, probably Tuesday, with his message opening the regular session.

The changes, embodied in a resolution recently adopted by the Standing Committee, composed of Robert Barry, Philadelphia Public Ledger, chairman; Arthur Henning, Chicago Tribune; Charles S. Albert, New York World; Roy Roberts, Kansas City Star, and Gus J. Karger, Cincinnati Times-Star, are designed to increase the number of newspaper men listed in the Congressional Directory and to better the seating conditions in the galleries on special occasions at the Capitol when press accommodations invariably prove inadequate.

Under the present rule of membership, single newspapers and news services are entitled to list only three men in the Directory and press associations nine, a procedure which results in exclusion of many bonafide reporters from Directory listing privileges and forces many men in the larger bureaus to resort to the subterfuge of having themselves entered in the Directory as representatives of small papers which engage only a slight amount of their time. The rule also has been responsible for various abuses of the gallery privilege by men who are not bonafide daily newspaper workers, but who use some unimportant newspaper connection as the means of gaining entrance into the gallery for press agent and publicity purposes.

The change proposed by the Standing Committee would accord listing privileges to the chiefs of bureaus and all those whose chief attention is given to reporting the activities of the Federal Government.

At present the seating capacity of the Senate and House galleries is hardly adequate to care for the working reporters. The crowded situation is noticeable particularly in the House when the President addresses a joint session. Under existing rules, which were made years ago when the gallery membership was much less than at present, seats are reserved for certain newspapers, and the result is that the work in the gallery on such occasions resembles a free-for-all fight. The plan of the Standard Committee is to handle special occasions by issuing work tickets, one for each newspaper and two for press associations for gallery seats to be reserved until the curtain goes up on the Congressional show, whatever it is. After the session starts the galleries would be open to all members and seats would no longer be reserved. This rule is designed to prevent the galleries from being filled with a half a dozen or more men from one organization or men who are there out of curiosity rather than for work.

Thus far little opposition has been expressed by correspondents to the proposal to increase the Directory list, but some of the "Old Guard" in the galleries have voiced objection to the proposed seating arrangement, despite its obvious efficiency over the present regulation. The resolution of the Standing Committee is as follows:

"The rule limiting the listing of accredited correspondents in the Congressional Directory to three for newspapers and news service and nine for press associations is hearby repealed. Hereafter the listing shall be accorded chiefs of bureaus and those whose chief attention is given to reporting for newspapers receiving daily telegraphic news service, the activities of the legislature, executive and judicial departments of the Government of the United States; provided, in view of the restricted seating capacity of the press galleries, tickets of admission to the galleries proper will be issued on the basis of one to a newspaper and two to a press association for use on special days at the Capitol, but where any member represents more than one newspaper only one ticket shall be assigned, and the galleries proper shall not be reserved for holders of tickets after the special exercises shall have started, the seats then becoming available to all members of the gallery."

LONDON TIMES CLOSES U.S. OFFICE

Payne Companies and Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Will Handle All Business

The American business offices of the Northcliffe Press, at 280 Broadway, New York, which have been operating on behalf of the London Times, the London Daily Mail and the other publications controlled by the late Viscount Northcliffe, closed November 25.

C. Vanderbilt, Jr.

The Times will maintain advertising representation in the U. S. A. through the G. Logan Payne Company, Chicago, and Payne, Burns & Smith, Inc., New York, in conjunction with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., acting as special representatives.

Major Wynne Williams, who has been in charge of the office for the past three years and a half, is returning to London immediately to take up an executive position on the advertising staff of the Times.

Wickham Steed is to retire from the editorship of the London Times in favor of Geoffrey Dawson, according to the London Evening Standard. Mr. Steed succeeded Mr. Dawson as the editor of the Times. Mr. Dawson was then known as Geoffrey Robinson. He later changed his name to Dawson to comply with the provisions of a will drawn in his favor.

E. W. SCRIPPS ON WORLD CRUISE

Noted Newspaper Publisher Plans to Spend a Long Time at Sea

E. W. Scripps sailed from Jacksonville, Fla., on board his new yacht, the Ohio, on a world cruise, November 24. This will probaly last about a year. Upon advice of his physician Mr. Scripps will probably spend much of the rest of his life at sea. The Ohio, which is 172 feet long, and is luxuriously appointed, has a cruising radius of 9,000 miles.

The itinerary of Mr. Scripps' cruise starts with a visit to Cuba, Central American ports, and thence through the Panama Canal to San Diego, Cal. After a brief stop there, the Ohio will proceed to Hawaii, China, Japan, the South Sea Islands and probably return via the Suez Canal.

On board the Ohio when she sailed from Jacksonville were Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Scripps, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Scripps, Miss Culbertson of Erie, Pa., Gilson Gardner and Robert P. Scripps, Jr. They will arrive in San Diego shortly before Christmas. On the trans-Pacific cruise Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Scripps will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Scripps. Robert P. Scripps will probably leave the Ohio at the end of six months and return home, although that is not as yet decided upon.

The Ohio left New York for Jacksonville on November 19. The party on board included Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Scripps, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Sidlo, Gilson Gardner and Dr. William E. Ritter. Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Scripps were already in Florida waters on board the old Scripps yacht, the Kemah.

MANY NEW PRESSES ORDERED

Goss Plant to Be Enlarged 20% to Accommodate Business

Hearst newspapers are engaged in important plant improvements. The Goss Printing Press Company has installed a new special double sextuple press for the Chicago Herald & Examiner. The Chicago Evening American will use the same press. The Goss Company has also received orders for six double sextuple presses for other Hearst papers, to be delivered in the fall or winter of 1923.

This week the board of directors of the Goss Company decided to enlarge the plant 20 per cent. M. L. Redfield, vice-president, recently returned from England with orders for fifteen octuple presses, the greatest amount of business ever obtained by the company from abroad.

The Goss Company is also building additional machines for use in the coloroto section of the Chicago Tribune.

The Portland Evening Express and Sunday Telegram have ordered a new press from the Goss Printing Press Company, Chicago, to replace two smaller machines which have been outgrown. This press is an octuple. With its installation the width of the pages will be increased from seven to eight columns, and an inch and a half will be added to the column length.

INCREASES CAPITAL TO $10,000,000

Detroit News Files Amendments to Incorporation Articles

Lansing, Mich., November 29.—The Evening News Association of Detroit, publishers of the Detroit News, today filed amendments to its articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State's office increasing its capitalization from $50,000 to $10,000,000. No explanation of the boost in capital stock was vouchsafed here, although such a step has long been expected by Michigan publishers.

The News is controlled by the Booth and Scripps families, and it is understood the will of the senior Booth had tied the corporation to the small capitalization. How the change could be made at this time could not be learned here today.

Some connection with the expansion in stock of the Evening News Association is seen in coincident increases made by the James E. Scripps Corporation and the William A. Scripps Company. The former boosted its capitalization today from $1,000,000 to $1,500 000 and the latter from $300,000 to $800,000.

White House Corps Fills Vacancies

Harry N. Price of the Washington Post, was elected vice-president of the White House Correspondents Association to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Frank A. Stetson of the International News Service. Thomas Stokes of the United Press was made treasurer in place of Raymond Clapper, who has been made head of the Washington Bureau of the United News. Vacancies on the executive committee of the Association caused by the elevation of Mr. Price to the vice-presidency and resignation of W. Bruce MacNamee, formerly of the Universal Service, were filled by the election of Isaac Gregg of the New York Sun and Samuel W. Bell of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Mr. MacNamee now is engaged in publicity work for the Red Cross.

BAGGAGE RATE RAISI DENIED TO ROADS

Thirty-Cent Tariff on Gravure Comic Sections Stand, by I. C. C Decision—No Express Rate Increase Either

(Special to Editor & Publisher)

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—Ap cation of five eastern railroads to el nate the 30 cent baggage rate on the s ment of gravure and comic supplem of newspapers, was denied by the In state Commerce Commission yester The Commission also cancelled the posed schedules of the roads which w have forced the shipment of supplem by express at much higher rates. findings of the Commission, to w Commissioners Hall and Eastman sented, were as follows:

"The only question presented is wh er the suspended schedules have justified by the respondents. It se clear that, if these schedules are mitted to become effective, the exp service alone will be adequate to this traffic. Protestants' principal ob tion to that service rests upon the that considerably higher rates would ply. A witness of one of the protes testified that express service would crease the yearly charges of his n paper for the transportation of these plements by about $15,000. It is ap ent that the withdrawal of the pr service and rates, which have been corded this traffic for a long perio time, would result in the applicatio much higher charges for the transp tion of the supplements. And whil present rates undoubtedly are low are not prepared upon this record to tion the considerably higher charges would become applicable for the kind of service that would appear quate upon the cancellation of the ent rates.

"We find that the suspended sche have not been justified. An order be entered requiring the cancellatio the suspended schedules and discon ing this proceeding."

The proposal to eliminate the rat supplements, effective August 1, 1 20, was filed by the Pennsylvania road, the Baltimore & Ohio; Dela Lackawanna & Western; Buffalo, R ester & Pittsburgh; Baltimore, C peake & Atlantic. Immediate protes made by the publishing interests cerned with the shipment or recei supplements to be used in Sunday papers. Newspapers interested in proceedings were dailies in Balti Buffalo, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, P dence, Washington and other cities King Feature Syndicate, Inc.; N paper Feature Service, Inc.; Int tional Feature Service, Inc.; and th Gravure Corporation. Upon presen of the newspapers' case by Charle Galloway, Rowland B. Mahany and stein & Axman, the proposed rates suspended by the Commission until mony was taken by the Commission aminers.

The railroads sought elimination present rates at the suggestion American Railway Express on the tention of the express company tha tinuation of the rates amounted to lation of the so-called Uniform Co between the railroad and the express pany. Express company officials that the supplements were not news and therefore not subject to shipm the special baggage rates provide complete newspapers. The pub denied that contention successful fore the Commission.

Commissioners Hall and Eastm their dissenting opinion asserted tha tinuance of the rate was preferenti less the rate also were applied to zines and periodicals as well.

Change to 8 Columns

The St. John (N. B.) Telegra Times have changed from seven t columns to the page.

OFFEE WINS BRITISH CANDY MARKET IN 3-YEAR NEWSPAPER CAMPAIGN

ght-Hearted Copy, with "Sir Kreemy Knut" as Hero Makes Old-Time Sweet Favored Over Modern Choco-lates and Bonbons

By HERBERT C. RIDOUT

(London Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

is an aphorism among our mentors n advertising that if the advertis- is right, marketing conditions not erse, and the commodity sound, it is ible, by the stick-to-itiveness of ad- ising, to place that commodity in a tion of supremacy in its particular ket. And it is happening all the . None the less, it comes as some- g in the nature of a shock when the most vigilant of those of us attempt to diarize the progress of rtising suddenly realize the existin 5-inch double-column space, this copy hardly be missed on a newspaper page.

of a new star on the horizon—a star is obviously dominating the firma- t in which it is set.

'e may have watched it as it rose in sky, observed its brightening, and the lual spread of its effulgence, yet it is when we realize how its brilliance had the effect of bedimming some of former great stars, that it is brought e to us as another new triumph of liative advertising.

ne British candy market has its new in Sharp's Toffee. This is a wrap- d sweetmeat of genuine "old gran- slab toffee, made more delicate in or by the use of richer ingredients ested in the words "Super-Kreem" form part of the title. Its success rds an interesting peep into the tastes ne British people, as well as a side- upon some very definite principles ied in the publicity methods.

ne British nation has a sweet tooth. consumption of sugar is a record in f. Its tastes in gratifying that sweet n are simple. In bygone days the toothsome morsel in candy was a e or less jagged fragment of slab tof- such as it was the practice to make ome. Dainties and sweetmeats in olate and other forms are available very popular, but the taste of the itude is for the toffee that approxi- s most closely to the old-fashioned This is obtainable in many dif- nt varieties, under innumerable ds, loose and in packages, and gh it is a fact that various locali- favor specific brands before others. rand that has taken its place almost ne national sweet is Sharp's "Super- m" Toffee.

nat supremacy is an achievement of years of advertising.

ne story of that three years is the of a cleverly developed newspaper campaign, and from details fur- d by Philip Smith, the principal of h's Advertising Agency, London, I ble to show how the campaign was ed out.

arp's Toffee had an initial advan- in the fact that in itself it was a flavorsome and agreeable sweet- meat than the older style of slab toffee, but it had distinctive features on its marketing side. These were the name "Super-Kreem," a mascot in the form of a dude-like figure christened "Sir Kreemy Knut," and the idea of packing them in decorative tins of small size at a popular price. With few exceptions, wrapped toffees had previously been sold loose, and candy stores packed them in paper bags or sachet cartons. But under the Sharp scheme the handy shilling and other tins made a useful feature to utilize in advertising.

So the tin, the name, and the mascot were coupled together, and the advertising campaign launched in the newspapers. In doing this, cognizance was taken of the fact that other toffees had been advertised very successfully along certain prescribed lines, and in the Sharp advertising a new and distinctive atmosphere was attempted.

In the words of the originator of the campaign, tin, name and mascot were blended and placed out "in an atmosphere in which happiness and light-heartedness were the dominant notes. It was important, not only to familiarize the public with the name of the toffee and the tin it is sold in, but also to put them in the right frame of mind for buying toffee—to get 'the toffee mood,' as it were. The appeal is a straightforward appeal to the sense—and a very simple sense at that. It is therefore principally pictorial. It speaks to the child—actual and grown up, for there is something of the kiddy in all of us. The copy is subordinate to the picture, but strikes the same light note, while introducing insistently the three selling points—deliciousness, wholesomeness and purity."

The campaign on these lines are built on generous proportions. Whole pages in newspapers were a frequent occurrence, with a steady run of bold double-column spaces. These have been marked by several series of very striking character—one series being based on popular personalities, including the Prince of Wales, Earl Haig, Mr. Lloyd George, Admiral Beatty, etc., a novel touch being imparted to these by the fact that in no case was the pictured personality named, though the heading aptly suggested him. Another series dealt with familiar Dickens' characters—Jingle, Sam Weller, Pickwick, Micawber, Buzfuz, Mark Tapley and others addressing the reader in approved Dickensian language.

The atmosphere of light-heartedness is preserved all the way through, and that the public as readers appreciate this effort to suggest the happier side of life may be judged when it is stated that sales resulting have been such that while in 1919 Messrs. Sharp allocated but a few thousand pounds for the year, 1922 sees the advertising expenditure running into tens of thousands.

It needed courage, undoubtedly, to tackle the problem of capturing a market already full of wrappered and advertised toffees, but the first campaign was a bold one, and succeeding campaigns have been progressively larger.

Mr. Smith, in reviewing the success of this very typical British candy, puts it in a nutshell: "As the profits have grown, so has the advertising—as the advertising has grown, so have the profits."

These small advertisements have all shouldered a part of the battle to make Sharp's confection a British leader.

Monett Tribune Starts

The Monett (Mo.) Daily Tribune was recently started. It is the second daily to appear in Monett. T. L. Tillman is the editor of the Tribune.

Add Equipment

The Fort Wayne (Ind.) Journal-Gazette recently added a Ludlow machine.

WOULD ALLY CAMERA WITH LINOTYPE

Assembled Matrices of Special Design Photographed and Printing Plate Made from Picture by a British Invention

An interesting development of "typeless printing" is noted in a recent issue of the Newspaper World of London, England, concerning a patent filed by John Robertson, Thomas William Brown, and Andrew Orrell, of St. Anne's-on-Sea, Lancashire. The process is said to embody the Linotype principle of assembling a line of characters, which are then moved in front of a lens and exposed on a sensitized surface, a printing plate being afterwards made for reproduction. Its patentees are connected with J. Robertson & Co., Ltd., printers of the Blackpool Times, which has developed a photo-offset process of printing to an unusual degree in England.

From the description filed at the patent office, the Newspaper World quotes the following:

"The invention relates to a photographic printers' composing machine for photographically reproducing a negative of the printing surface for lithographic, offset, letterpress and photogravure printing. The invention consists in employing matrices of either a negative or positive character, dependent upon the type of printing in view, in a type-setting machine employing the usual magazine, keyboard, distributor, etc., and embodying therewith a camera attachment for photographing, step by step, the various lines or portions thereof, as and when set, the complete block matter being conveyed photographically by means of a beam of light passing through or from the transparent or other matrix and through a lens on to a sensitized film or plate, the latter then being employed in the usual way for preparing the printing surface or other device for reproduction.

"The invention may be broadly summarized as a typesetting machine similar to the well-known machine known under the registered trade-mark 'Linotype' wherein the usual type-casting matrices are replaced by character members suitable for reproduction by photography, hereinafter termed for convenience the 'matrices,' said matrices being capable of being set into a line by the usual typesetting keyboard and selective mechanism, there being employed in combination therewith a photographic atachment, including a light source, a lens and a sensitized member, hereinafter termed the plate or film, to receive photographically an impression of the set line of characters when an exposure is made.

"The invention incorporates various details and features for effecting the foregoing result as will be more particularly hereinafter described. For instance, a suitable construction of matrix is given by way of example, a mode of throwing light through the matrix on to the camera lens, and various adjustments for focussing the matrices on to the plate or film.

"In carrying out the invention described generally above, it is preferred to embody means for justifying a line photographically by enlarging or reducing it the necessary amount to bring it to the required length. The following describes a mode of automatically focussing to increase or reduce the length of an abnormal line. Working in conjunction with such automatic focussing is a centralizing mechanism which shifts the camera lens laterally to compensate for displacement of centre in case of a long or short line. Obviously the reverse may be employed, moving the line so that its centre is coaxial with the optical system, or, again, the sensitized member may be moved.

"In a machine constructed in accordance with the present invention, the guideway carrying the matrices to be photographed is formed with a movable part, so that each line, as and when set by the operator, may be automatically raised to photographic position in front of the lens."

THRIFT WEEK WILL OPEN MANY AVENUES FOR JANUARY LINEAGE

Seven Subsidiary Campaigns Lend Themselves to Co-Operative Effort by Local Firms—Copy Suggested by Y. M. C. A. and an Agency

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

PLANS are being made by editors, newspaper business managers, advertising managers and agencies to tie up closely with "National Thrift Week" which will open on Benjamin Franklin's birthday, January 17, and which will include National Thrift or Bank Day, Budget Day, National Life Insurance Day, Own-Your-Home-Day, Share-with-others Day, Pay-your-bills-promptly Day and Make-a-will Day. All have to do with wise spending.

The week, which has become an annual affair, last year provided many newspapers with a considerable amount of extra advertising. Not only life insurance companies, banks and similar institutions may be interested, but special stunts involving nearly every class of merchant have proven possible.

"National Thrift Week, annually January 17th-23d, is an educational movement entirely non-commercial, fostered by the Young Men's Christian Association," John A. Goodell, secretary of the National Thrift Week committee, 347 Madison avenue, New York, outlined apropos of plans for 1923. "Its object is to help the individual in money matters in the realm of earning, spending, saving, investing and giving. It is based on the following ten-point creed: Work and earn, make a budget, record expenditures, have a bank account, carry life insurance, own your home, make a will, invest in safe securities, pay bills promptly and share with others.

"National Thrift Week always opens on the natal day of America's greatest apostle of thrift—Benjamin Franklin. This movement has strength because it is fostered and promoted by the Young Men's Christian Association, with 2,000 local units and in co-operation with 44 national, civic, commercial, educational and religious organizations. Adolph Lewisohn of New York, philanthropist and financier, is chairman.

"Advertising managers of newspapers should get in touch with the local Y. M. C. A. (as proofs of advertising mats are being sent to them the first week in December) for help in promoting the local campaign. The plan includes a page or more of paid advertising each day of National Thrift Week.

"January 17 is National Thrift Week or Bank Day, when a page or more of advertising can be made up from the bank and trust companies. In Detroit, twelve banks joined in a page advertisement over their names, which later was converted into a window poster and placed in all of the bank windows in Detroit.

"Budget Day, January 18, is in charge of the Women's Clubs, public schools and retail merchants' association. This day wise spending, with a budget, is featured and advertisements are secured from merchants for all kinds.

"January 19 is National Life Insurance Day, when the life insurance men frequently make up a page advertisement with some editorial matter in the center. The Underwriters' Association of San Francisco did some splendid co-operative advertising during National Thrift Week.

"January 20 is Own-your-home day, when the real estate board features advertisements as well as contractors, home furnishers, furniture dealers and others.

"January 21 is Sunday and will be known as Share-with-others day. It is generally observed in all of the churches.

"January 22 is Pay-your-bills-promptly day, which is sponsored by the Retail Credit Men's National Association, who have prepared special copy which is available through their local branches.

"January 23 is Make-a-will day which can be featured by trust companies and the bar association. In Buffalo, N. Y., on Make-a-will day, the bar association maintained a booth at the court house where wills were made and counsel was given free of charge to all who applied for it.

"National Thrift Week appeals to both the editorial and advertising departments of the newspapers. The fact that the week opens on 'Poor Richard's' birthday is of special significance to all editors. Many papers have conducted essay contests, awarding generous prizes for the best essays on 'The family budget' or 'Thrift applied in the home.'"

For 1923 it is hoped that 500,000 families will be induced to put their family finances on the budget plan and that 5,000 thrift clubs will be formed in commercial organizations and industrial plants. A simple plan of committee organization has been worked out to be executed under direction of the local "Y."

Wise spending, not abnormal hoarding, is made the keynote of the week's educational drive. The Edwin Bird Wilson Advertising Agency of New York has contributed copy for suggested advertisements carrying out this idea for the various days.

A few highlights showing how local Young Men's Christian Associations and local newspapers worked together last year:

The slogan, "Every family in Gloversville on a budget this year!" was adopted at Gloversville, N. Y. Newspaper co-operation helped the campaign to attract wide attention.

In Lexington, Ky., Rotary, Kiwanis, Optimist and Pyramid Clubs co-operated with the citizens' committee of 75 men and women in putting over Thrift Week.

Cities as widely apart as Hartford, Conn., Seattle, Wash. and Honolulu witnessed the use of large local display advertising. Thrift sales by merchants have been popular.

At Hartford, two newspapers gave excellent co-operation editorially with a total of 81 news items amounting to 593 inches or the equal of approximately 28 columns.

From the cash register point of view of the newspapers, tie-up was good business policy. Thrift was mentioned prominently in 86 regular newspaper advertisements amounting to 4,175 inches, with an approximate value of $4,900. There were also 39 thrift slogans displayed in these advertisements.

In addition, there were 47 special newspaper advertisements emphasizing the different phases of the thrift program, amounting to 2,284 inches with an approximate value of $2,900. This included one double-page spread, 9 full pages and four half pages, all prompted by Thrift Week.

There were, of course, other features such as the distribution of over 57,000 pieces of literature on thrift, lantern slides, meetings, and similar idea-broadcasters, but the importance of the newspaper work is considered to rank as perhaps first. All this effort is believed to be certain to be reflected not only in business and religious institutions, but also in better citizenship.

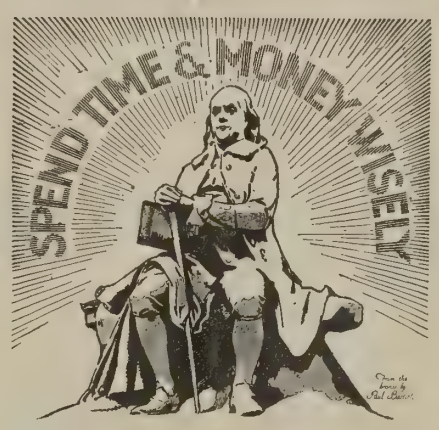
At Lexington, Ky., the newspapers announced that the whipping post was to be restored in the spot where it stood years before. This was done and on Pay-your-bills-promptly day, Bill D. Linquent, a dummy, was given twenty-five lashes before a huge crowd.

The City Federation of Women's Clubs, San Francisco, carried on a campaign with the slogan, "Budget your time a money."

At Painesville, Ohio, a full-page a vertisement appeared daily in the lo newspaper. A series of interviews w citizens on "How I earned my first d lar" went over well.

At Troy, N. Y., in addition to adv tising, a prize essay contest on "Thr its meaning and rewards" with a fi prize of $25 stirred interest.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer pu lished a little thrift coupon in the fo of a pledge to open a savings account or before Feb. 17, 1922.



Editorials on Franklin and the we were numerous. Among the newspap which commented were the Nash (N. H.) Telegraph, Boston Americ Atlantic City Gazette, New York E ning Mail, the Lynn (Mass.) Telegra News, Mount Vernon (N. Y.) Arg and Worcester (Mass.) Telegram.

The local newspaper at Painesvi swung behind the thrift campaign. published a full page of insurance co a full page devoted to "Keep cash m ing and good times going" (Pay up), o devoted to will day, another for ba day, still another on the theme of bu gets, another on home building a owning pro-rated among real estate boa members and another paid for by t churches under the heading, "Are you cheerful giver?"

Individual regular advertisers are gl to have the "tip" passed along to th to shape their copy to the thrift id during the week. Some like to use t special cuts of the week in such co Advertising agencies in copy from r tional accounts down to local ones a expected to inject thrift touches appe ing about the time of the campaign.

It has been the practice to furnish c and mats for newspaper use at practica cost. Full information as to how th may be obtained is being sent to Y. M. C. A. secretaries. Several typi pieces of copy used last year are repr duced. EDITOR & PUBLISHER conside the type of advertising as broad a highly commendable.

Indications point to a widespread o servance of Thrift Week throughout t country by large, medium-size and sm newspapers advertisingly and editorial It is the sort of demonstration wh would be certain to please old Ben Fran lin if he were a newspaper publish today.

A Man Wise in the Ways of Life

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN was wise in the ways of life. His philosophy was of the practical sort that meets everyday problems. He saw that the part which money plays in most people's lives is a very important one.

By taking to heart good common sense rules, always living on less than his income and getting the most from the money he spent, he mastered his own financial problems, and he knew what he was talking about when he gave these old truths interest and meaning through his picturesque philosophies and sayings.

National Thrift Week, which begins January 17, Franklin's birthday, offers an opportunity not only to honor this great American, but to profit by carrying out in a practical way his teachings in the art of living and the use of money. A growing savings account should be a part of everyone's financial arrangements. If you are not a regular saver follow Franklin's advice about living on less than you earn by opening and keeping up a savings account.

SPEND TIME AND MONEY WISELY Y.M.C.A.

(SPACE FOR ADVERTISER'S NAME)

Mats or plates are available in this seven-column form to start the Thrift Campaign

SUE FOR SOLE RIGHT TO PHOT

Mollie King, Movie Actress, Allow Use by Other Company

An interesting question on the law advertising was argued before the Cou of Appeals, Albany, N. Y., November in the action of the Fitzgerald Man facturing Company against Mollie Kin motion picture star, in private li Mrs. Kenneth D. Alexander of Woo burn, Ky. The action was based a contract by which the actress r ceived $1,000 for the exclusive use her photograph, together with her fa simile signature in connection with a advertisement of the Star Electr Vibrator, manufactured by the plainti company. The company alleged she ha broken her contract by giving the Wel & Richardson Company, Burlington, Vt permission to use her photograph on th Diamond Dye Girl Calendar for 192 also that her publicity agent, Geor Landy, had procured the use of her pic tures in many magazines with stories her activities.

The company brought the action to re cover the amount paid the actress an its expenses incident to the use of he picture and obtained judgment against he for $2,863.83 by default. She obtaine an order vacating the judgment and per mitting her to defend the action, but th appellate division reversed this decisio from which she has appealed to th higher court. Her proposed defense that no damage was shown by the use o her photographs in other publications bu that the value to the plaintiff compan was increased by publicity in other line tending to make her more widely known to the public.

largest daily circulation
in the state of Washington;

largest daily circulation
in the city of Seattle.

The Seattle Star

MEMBER A·B·C·

Over 72,000 Net Paid

Over 15,000 more daily circulation than any other Seattle paper

Gilman, Nicoll & Ruthman
National Representatives

Canadian Pacific Building
New York

Tremont Building
Boston

Tribune Building
Chicago

Monadnock Building
San Francisco

WOMEN ASSAIL COMPETENCY OF MALE NEWSPAPER EDITORS

In Convention at Columbus, Ohio, Association Asserts Right of Its Members to Any Desk in the Office—Higher Educational News, Not Technical, Demanded

By ALLENE M. SUMNER

Editorial and Feature Writer, Cleveland Plain Dealer

"WOMAN'S stuff!"

Not since that day of yester year when some heart-throbby editor coined the triple word of "human-interest-dope" has any phrase so caught hold in editorial sanctums as "woman's stuff." A skit with full apologies to Barrie entitled "What Every Free Lance Knows" might be built around this phrase. For the era of "woman's stuff" was meant a lucrative era for the free lance (thanks to whoever invented that phrase, too—it's very valuable when one doesn't want to be called "A Former Newspaper Writer Now Out of a Job."

"Woman's stuff" has been literally hurled at editors. Editorial pigeonholes have been crammed full for many a moon with the tale of the poor widow who took in washings and sent her seven lads through college, of the beautiful girl who offered herself in exchange for a college education, of the widow who made fame and fortune by making pies and cookies or hats or kid gloves, of the woman architect, the woman judge, the woman bus driver. And then we have had those avalanches of "woman's viewpoint" stories; stories of the World Series as written by a woman; of a prize fight as written by a woman; it has even been considered smart to have financial articles "from woman's viewpoint."

Considering then, this woman's-viewpoint complex of the modern editor it is rather confusing to analyze this same editor's attitude towards the woman on his staff. Oh, she's all right for society and clubs, but he's inclined to believe that all newspaper women who aren't doing those two things should be forming part of that great mob of women who are content to rule the world by using the hands that rock the cradle. He wants "woman's viewpoint stories" but he doesn't seem to think that he will get them from women themselves. He sends out his best special male writer for the w. v. story. The average editor's toast to the ladies might start out quite orthodoxly:

"The ladies—God bless 'em—but keep 'em away from me!"

Last week a state newspaper woman's convention was held in Columbus, Ohio. Nearly 200 newspaper women attended. Although Ohio has more than the average number of papers and consequently more than the average number of women workers, we believe that the gathering was sufficiently typical of such conventions held annually in every state to be of interest to His Majesty, Any American Editor.

We believe that "woman's stuff" which pertains to his own business as gleaned from this convention could be very illuminating to him. We believe that "a woman's viewpoint" story of himself and his business, would do him good. It may be that the process whereby good is done unto him will be no more pleasing than that whereby the small boy is made better with a "this hurts me worse than it does you, Johnny."

A favorite belief of the editor is that "woman's stuff" primarily interests men, too. We believe that a woman's convention gives more to men than it does to women. But no man was there "to cover" the convention for himself and other males. He wasn't there and he is never there. Maybe if he were he wouldn't listen. Maybe he won't now, anyway—here goes!

But here goes! Here's what newspaper women think of you, good and bad; what they think of your business, good and bad. What they want to do for you.

First of all, women on newspapers bitterly resent your attitude towards them. They know that you aren't very keen about hiring them. And you should hear them pull your reasons to pieces—hear them laugh at you, poor dears, with your blundering ideas! They laugh at the seriousness with which you argue that "we don't like to hire women—we can't send them every place."

"Why should we be expected to go every place?" answer these women. "Do they send their men every place? No. Their best-paid men are the specialists, authorities on sports, police court, harbor, finance, markets. They don't want men who 'can do anything.' But they demand this ability in women. As a matter of fact, if they would stack up the places where a woman has entrée and those which are open to men, the woman would come out ahead. The right sort of paper would not want to send a woman into a dive or the morgue at midnight, it is true. But whether it wanted to or not, it simply couldn't send its men to dozens of places where, as a man, he would be the conspicuous reporter, but where the woman reporter can go as a woman, unobserved.

They believe that you are overlooking a huge opportunity to grow by your refusal to put real departments into the hands of women editors. They argue that a newspaper is a home publication and that the woman of that home decides which paper shall go into it. They point out the fallacy of belief in "the woman's viewpoint" and yet the use of this viewpoint is only trivial, purely female departments of society, woman's clubs, fashions, household management, sob stories and very occasionally, motion picture criticism. Why not women sport writers, financial editors, dramatic critics, and first and foremost, a gang of women editorial writers, on every paper?

"Are men more capable of supporting maternity bills and community housekeeping than women?" asked one alert delegate, indignant over the lukewarm, inhuman editorials which men turn out on subjects upon which they have no "intuitive" knowledge.

Speaking of the average editor's placement of the women on his staff in purely feminine departments, the convention remarked that the best-known society letters in the country were written by men.

"We need the man's viewpoint on supposedly female matters and the woman's viewpoint on supposedly male matters much more than the reverse" was the general opinion.

The women on your staffs believe that you require too feeble qualifications from the members of your staff.

"It's a beautifully democratic thing to give every copy boy an opportunity to become editor-in-chief," they admitted, "but as long as the emphasis is put on quickness, superficial cleverness, slyness, knowing the town, and being able to tell anyone who tries to stop you 'to go to the devil,' the papers of this country will not stop world catastrophes.

"The newspaper business needs the best educated people in the country, both men and women. As things stand now, it demands well-educated women but slovenly educated men. If he is shrewd, quick, adaptable, a good fellow, he wins, regardless of his background. Ninety per cent of newspaper work is done by men recruited from such ranks. They are not making good. The weak influence of our papers proves it.

"We know this when we remember the manner in which our papers met the World War. I am absolutely sure that if twelve years ago the right sort of men had manned our national press, they would have been keen enough to see the coming crisis and would have warded it off."

Storms of applause greeted this speaker, followed by a heated discussion of educational needs in journalism. The convention went on record as favoring "a direct greased chute from the colleges and universities of the state into newspaper offices."

They elaborated this into a clear stand against strictly technical journalistic courses but a demand for a liberal arts educational background which would give the newspaper man or woman a world's background of history, economics, science, languages, and the arts.

"Common sense is not enough. W must have common sense made artic late."

Messrs. Editors, the women on you staffs belief that you are cowards. The laugh up their sleeves at your fear what they call bogeyman in the dar shibboleths. They declare that you se your very soul which, to a newspap man, is news, because of fear of hurtin circulation. They say that if this fea were well-based they would not blam you. But they say that you are afra of—bogies. A woman editor gives thi herself—an editor of a large and sub stantial paper:

"There is absolutely no good reaso why straight news about the Ku Klu Klan, the Jews, and Catholics should b suppressed," she said. "These grou despise the newspapers for their fear an lose confidence accordingly. They kno that news of them is suppressed. Wha reason have they for not also believin that news about other organizations suppressed, too? An average Catho man said to me not long ago:

"'Why are the papers passing up a this news about the fight between th Methodists and the Vatican? A crackin good yarn!'

"The asinine, flippant attitude of th press towards the Ku Klux Klan, futile, melodramatic, childish, but poten tially dangerous institution, illustrate this point as nothing else can. Pape know that this thing should be an nihilated. They know that anythin which stirs up religious bitterness an hatred should be. They are afra That's all."

There's much more. How about Mr. Editor? Are you still an arde champion of "woman stuff"?

First in Home Ownership

Of the twenty-five largest cities in the United States, Baltimore ranks first in home ownership, 62 per cent. of the homes in the city being owned by the families occupying them.

And into the great majority of these homes, located in every section of the city, the Sunpapers—morning, evening and Sunday—are ready to carry your message, for

Everything in Baltimore Revolves Around

THE SUN

Morning Evening Sunday

The Power of Long Established Circulation

A NEWSPAPER may be compared to a jobbing house. On the character of its salesmen, its popularity, its stability, and its reputation for integrity depends the success of the jobber to sell your merchandise. On the character of the circulation and on the public's regard for what appears in a newspaper depends the success of that newspaper to make your advertising show results.

In Detroit, The News stands paramount as the result getting medium because it has the largest circulation daily and Sunday in Detroit and Michigan, the most thorough coverage in its field of any metropolitan newspaper in the United States and the greatest quantity of long-established circulation.

News readers are people who have depended on The Detroit News for information, civic counsel and shopping news for generations. They are people who can be depended on to read your messages regularly, who can be appealed to again and again through the same medium.

Net Paid Circulation Exceeds 280,000 Daily, 240,000 Sunday.

The Detroit News

Greatest Weekday and Sunday Circulation in Michigan

"Always in the Lead"

An Avalanche of Figures, But They All Prove One Thing—

The Boston Post Is First

Here's ten months' proof that 1922 is rounding out as another overwhelmingly Boston Post year. These advertising figures are from the records of the Boston Newspapers' Statistical Bureau and represent the combined opinion of thousands of advertisers, most of whom have had years and years of experience with Boston advertising mediums.

These totals express more powerfully than words the judgment of the most important Advertising Groups—all POST-ward

Local Display Advertising

	Week-day and Sunday Combined	Week-day Editions	Sunday Editions
POST	5,237,684	3,755,492	1,482,192
Globe	4,828,309	2,652,169	2,176,140
Herald	4,168,463	3,096,607	1,071,856

National Advertising

Including ALL General Advertising, excepting Banks and Financial, most of which is really local business.

	Week-day and Sunday Combined	Week-day Editions	Sunday Editions
POST	3,127,064	2,093,209	1,033,855
Herald	2,732,927	1,998,197	734,730
Globe	1,740,876	1,246,396	494,480

Total Display Advertising

	Week-day and Sunday Combined	Week-day Editions	Sunday Editions
POST	8,617,267	6,070,093	2,547,174
Herald	7,555,791	5,723,852	1,831,939
Globe	6,768,136	4,076,162	2,691,974

Post leads Herald-Traveler by 1,061,476 lines
Post leads Globe by . . 1,849,131 lines

Latest NET PAID Circulation

Statements of papers quoted above, being the sworn returns for six months' period ending Sept. 30th, 1922

	Week-day	Sunday
Boston Post	376,240	373,945
Globe	275,794	322,705
Herald (Morning)	114,835	112,380
Traveler (Evening)	117,802

Special Representatives { Kelly-Smith Co., Marbridge Bldg., New York City.
Kelly-Smith Co., Lytton Bldg., Chicago.
R. J. Bidwell Co., Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Post Is First in Departmental Store Advertising

(Including Department Store and Men's and Women's Specialties Sold in Retail Stores)

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	2,543,186	837,342	3,380,528
Globe	1,880,372	1,498,300	3,378,672
Herald	1,808,914	649,322	2,458,236

Post Is First in Men's Clothing Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	519,100	31,299	550,399
Herald	393,292	13,864	407,156
Globe	279,115	24,040	303,155

Post Is First in Groceries and Food Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	584,665	80,679	665,344
Herald	458,846	68,784	527,630
Globe	383,586	36,498	419,084

Post Is First in Home Furnishings Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	385,886	378,647	764,533
Globe	204,477	392,892	597,369
Herald	499,877	83,654	583,531

Post Is First in Automobile Display Advertising

(Classified automobile advertising not included)

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	302,672	333,365	636,037
Herald	279,116	343,820	622,936
Globe	197,274	238,127	435,401

Post Is First in Amusement Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	181,347	140,105	321,452
Herald	123,566	118,433	241,999
Globe	119,514	118,835	238,349

Post Is First in Boot and Shoe Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	163,043	35,658	198,701
Herald	114,104	34,801	148,905
Globe	96,501	35,218	131,719

Post Is First in Talking Machine, Phonograph and Record Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	74,949	23,450	98,399
Globe	60,091	24,074	84,165
Herald	67,389	9,876	77,265

Post Is First in Jewelry Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	131,129	24,808	155,937
Herald	77,335	18,117	95,452
Globe	57,687	13,580	71,267

Post Is First in Drug Store Products Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	393,703	221,235	613,938
Herald	322,633	54,512	377,145
Globe	214,566	127,331	341,897

Post Is First in Tobacco Products Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	142,588	8,140	150,828
Herald	112,173	10,111	122,284
Globe	81,968		81,968

Post Is First in Building Materials Advertising

	Week-day	Sunday	Total
POST	38,966	113,162	152,128
Herald	31,886	93,940	125,826
Globe	20,233	11,646	31,879

FINDS NEWS PROBABLY GUILTY OF LIBEL

Judge Binds Suit by Beeckman Over for Grand Jury—Second Action Against Hennessey and Hamilton Started

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 25—Judge Gorham to-day adjudged the Hope Publishing Company, publishers of the Providence News, probably guilty of criminal libel against former Governor R. Livingston Beeckman. The company was bound over to the next term of the grand jury which convenes December 4. No surety was required. In all likelihood the grand jury will make a report on the second and third Tuesday or Wednesday next month, depending largely on the volume of business coming before it.

The action of Judge Gorham marks the close of the proceedings in the district court on the first of the several complaints brought by Mr. Beeckman and J. Henry Reuter, the former Governor's campaign manager in his recent unsuccessful fight for the senatorship from Rhode Island, arising from an article alleging Mr. Beeckman and Mr. Reuter had attempted to bribe Herve J. Lagace of Woonsocket by the payment to him of $1,500. The proceedings were brief, the hearings covering a period of two days. The decision is the extent of the Sixth District Court's jurisdiction in the matter.

The hearing on this particular complaint ended last night. In his counter argument John J. Fitzgerald, attorney for the News, declared that he believed Mr. Beeckman and Mr. Reuter had committed "as open and flagrant an act of bribery as was ever pulled off in this country." Claude Branch, attorney for the complainants, declared in his argument, "the crime of criminal libel has been more flagrantly committed in this case than ever before in Rhode Island. There has never been a more glaring example of political hypocrisy than the Providence News coming out and holding up its hands in holy terror at the improper use of money in a political campaign."

Mr. Fitzgerald in his argument stated that under the Rhode Island status a libel must be both false and defamatory, and he declared that the court must be satisfied from the testimony that "what the News said Beeckman did, he did."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 27—In the Sixth District court to-day the second trial in the preliminary proceedings of R. Livingston Beeckman and J. Henry Reuter against the Providence News began. The case coming up to-day is that of Mr. Beeckman and Mr. Reuter against John A. Hennessey, and Henry D. Hamilton for criminal libel. Mr. Reuter sues also in a civil suit for $250,000 damages. This case will be heard before the Superior court of Newport and its return day is Dec. 6.

James C. Garrison, vice president, and Luke A. Keenan, assistant secretary of the company, refused to testify in the opening of the case this morning on the ground that their answers would tend to incriminate them. Mr. Garrison, under examination by Claude R. Branch, attorney for Mr. Beeckman, declared "I refuse to answer any question you ask me." Judge Gorham upheld Mr. Garrison. Mr. Keenan took the same attitude.

The criminal libel case against Mr. Hennessey was completed at the morning session, very little testimony having been offered, and with brief arguments. The court took the case under advisement.

Later the court listened to the admission of evidence in a similar case against Henry DeWitt Hamilton, secretary and treasurer of the Hope Publishing Company. The allegations in this case, and in that against Mr. Hennessey are the same as those in the case against the Hope Publishing Company heard last week.

One of the important developments of the day was the calling to the witness stand of Senator Peter G. Gerry, who is said to have advanced $300,000 to the News on its notes. An attempt was made to have Mr. Gerry show that he had knowledge of the alleged libelous articles before they were printed, but Mr. Gerry testified he knew nothing of them until he read them in the paper. Henry D. Hamilton, secretary-treasurer of the company, called by the complainants, declined to answer on the grounds his evidence might incriminate himself. Luke A. Keenan, assistant secretary, also declined to answer questions.

Joins Collins-Kirk

John A. Kirk, for the last two years with the Chicago office of the Curtis Publishing Company, has been appointed general office manager of Collins-Kirk, Chicago advertising agency.

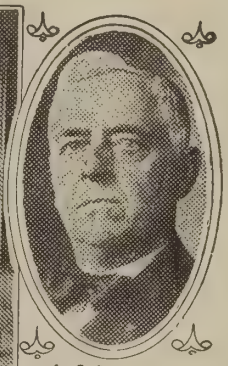
D. D. MOORE RETIRES

L. K. Nicholson Elected Manager New Orleans Times-Picayune

Leonard K. Nicholson was elec manager of the New Orleans Tim Picayune Publishing Company, at the nual meeting of stockholders held vember 27, succeeding D. D. Mo who has been the executive head of newspaper for more than twelve ye Mr. Nicholson, one of the owners directing head of the old Picayune, been prominently identified with Times-Picayune since the consolidat He has been president of the comp since the death of Ashton Phelps.

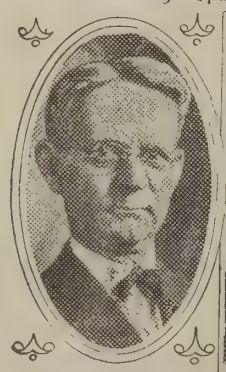
G. B. Baldwin was elected presiden succeed Mr. Nicholson. A. P. How remains vice-president, and Mr. Mo was elected secretary-treasurer. Moore will retain his financial interes the newspaper, and will advise and c sult with the new management. Moore, who himself voted for the cha in management, has been in poor he for more than a year.

The board of directors for the y elected at the meeting are: G. B. Ba win, A. P. Howard, Esmond Phelps, P. Nicholson, Frank Dameron, Mrs. M. Gilmer, H. McEnerny, Judge O'Connell and C. H. Hyams, Jr.



John Wanamaker Gravely Ill

The condition of John Wanamak who has been ill at his home in Ph delphia for several weeks, has assu a grave aspect, according to his p sicians' report on December 1.



"Sell St. Louis Thoroughly!"

City Department

A. S. Ludwig
President

O. J. Cloughly
Treasurer and General Manager

The St. Louis Wholesale Drug Co.

willingly co-operates with manufacturers in selling St. Louis thoroughly, and offers gratis the services of four trucks for the purpose of delivering window and counter displays to dealers in the city.

Advice of the St. Louis Wholesale Drug Co.

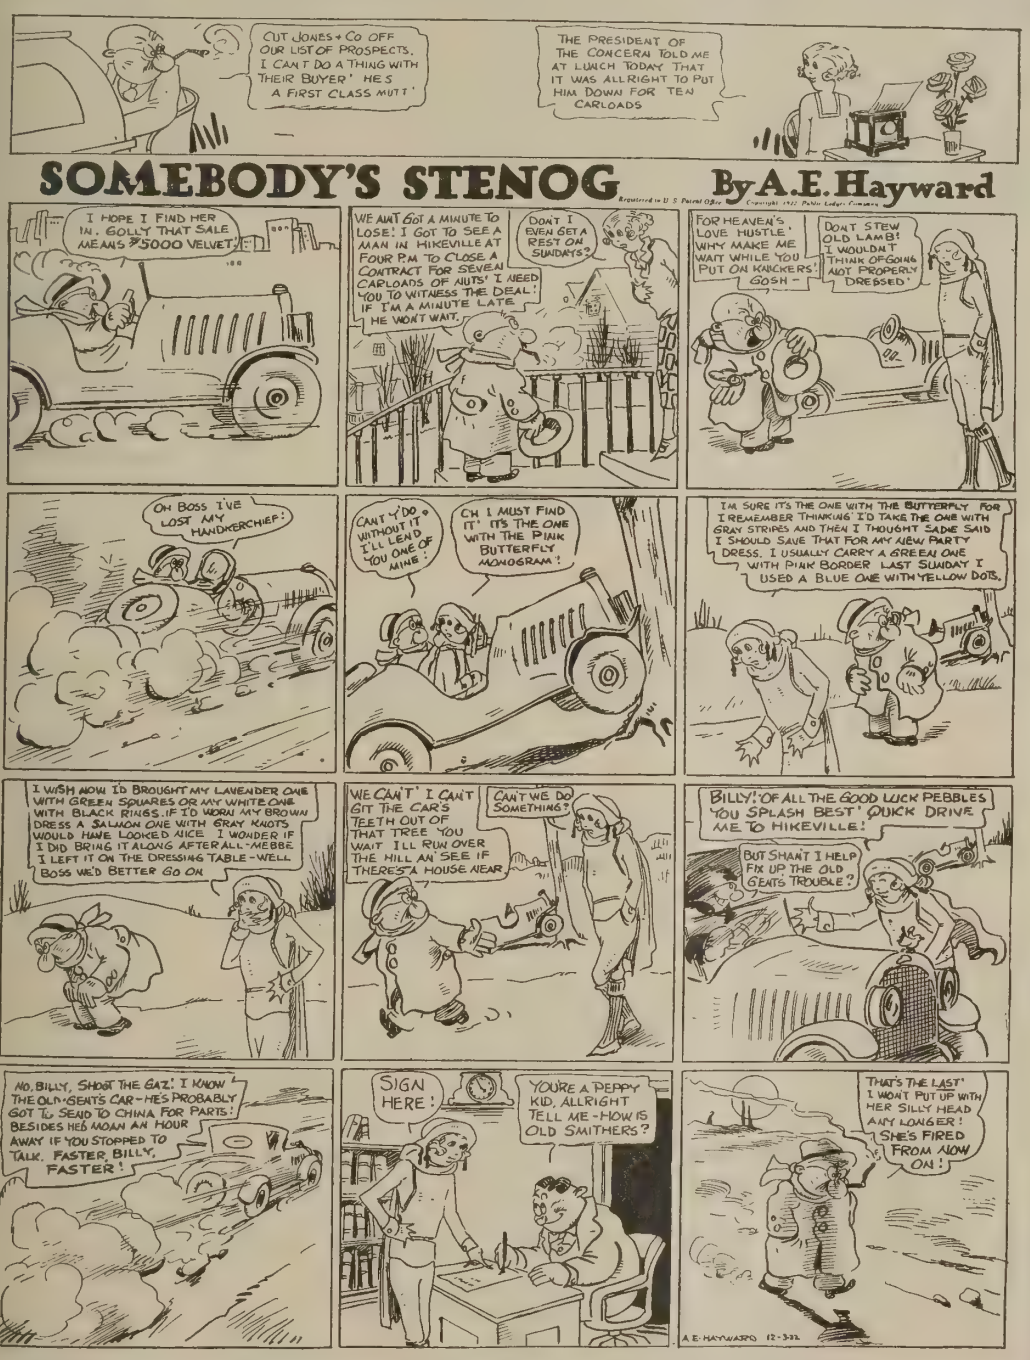
—Interesting to National Advertisers

"IT is our opinion that manufacturers of drug products and merchandise distributed by the drug trade, who desire to establish a steady demand for their brands in this market of which St. Louis is the heart, should concentrate their specialty sales work and advertising first in the city. ¶ "'Sell St. Louis thoroughly' we believe should be an objective attained before an attempt is made to cover the surrounding territory. ¶ "Our conviction in the matter has resulted from observation and knowledge of successes scored by manufacturers who pursue this policy."

St. Louis can be thoroughly covered only one way — by advertising in the leading evening newspapers having the greatest city circulations with negligible duplication. That means—

Necessarily on the List

THE ST. LOUIS STAR



National Advertising Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY
New York Chicago Philadelphia
Los Angeles San Francisco

"FIRST AMONG THE COMIC STRIPS PRINTED IN PITTSBURG" — PITTSBURGH DISPATCH
"SECOND BEST OF EIGHT COMICS WE ARE NOW USING" — ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

"SOMEBODY'S STENOG" By HAYWARD

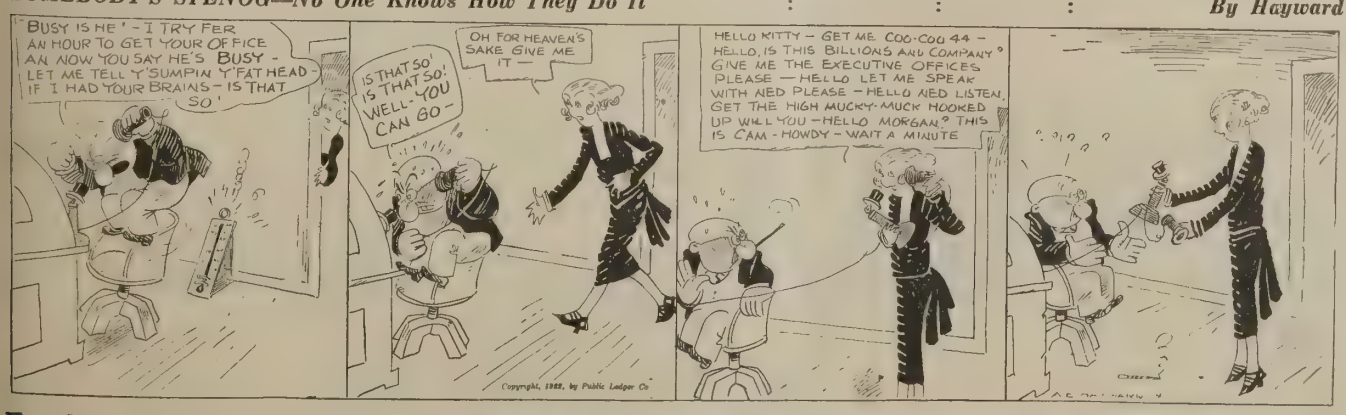
Weekly Page and Daily Strip

Reduced Sample of Weekly Page (Supplied in Colors or Black and White):



Wire Any of the Following Subscribers for An Opinion:

Philadelphia Public Ledger
New York Evening Mail
Chicago Daily News
Boston Traveler
Detroit Times
Pittsburgh Dispatch
New Orleans Item
St. Louis Times
Des Moines Register
Atlanta Constitution
Memphis News-Scimitar
Rochester Herald
Brooklyn Times
Portland (Ore.) Telegram
Portland (Me.) Press-Herald
Providence News
Schenectady Union-Star
Syracuse Journal
Tacoma Ledger
Youngstown Telegram
Oskosh Northwestern
Dayton Journal
Worcester Gazette
Berkeley Gazette
Oakland Enquirer
Bridgeport Times
Hoboken Observer
New Haven Journal-Courier
Newark Ledger
Beaumont News
Brockton Enterprise
Elizabeth Journal
Johnstown Ledger
Meriden Record
Woonsocket Call
Watertown Standard
New Brunswick Home News
Norwalk Hour
Melbourne (Australia) Sun
Wailuku (Hawaii) News

THE ONLY COMIC PULLING AS MANY WOMEN AS MEN

Reduced Sample of Six-Column Daily Strip;

SOMEBODY'S STENOG—No One Knows How They Do It : : : By Hayward

The New York Mail's Managing Editor Says:

"My idea of a good all-around cartoon. It appeals to the business man and the business woman because they meet her every day round the office. It appeals to the home folks because it is just plain funny, and if you couldn't laugh at it you ought not to be allowed to look at a cartoon page."

For Terms and Samples Wire or Write

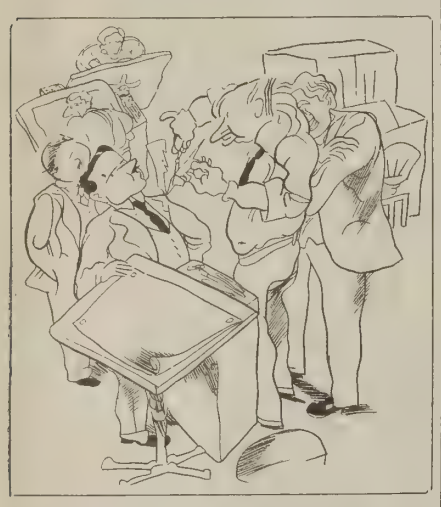
LEDGER SYNDICATE

Independence Square
Philadelphia, Pa.

JAPAN'S DAILIES LIKE AMERICAN CARTOONS

Asahi Shimbun Artist, Returned from Scouting Tour in U. S., Raves Over Speed and Results Achieved Here

By JOHN R. MORRIS



Far Eastern Editor, EDITOR & PUBLISHER

TOKYO, Nov. 1.—The cartoonist's art since it was first introduced here by Yasuji Kitazawa, the veteran cartoonist of the Jiji Shimpo has passed rapidly through the successive stages in its development and now, in a larger measure than ever before, the influence of American artists may be anticipated.

IPPEI OKAMOTO

Ippei Okamoto, leading cartoonist of the Tokyo Asahi Shimbun, has returned from a "scouting" trip in the United States, proclaiming the virtues of the American newspaper artist. He has told EDITOR & PUBLISHER's representative that all his future work will be executed according to the general principles of the art as he learned them in

They come from the ends of the earth, but Okamoto of the Asahi Shimbun and Al Frueh of the New York World understand each other. Frueh made a wicked paper alligator for the entertainment of his Tokyo visitor and Okamoto shook an equally wicked brush (see next column) in picturing the act for EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

the leading American newspaper offices. And Okamoto, though a young man, has been called not without reason the outstanding leader of the new school of cartoonists in Japan. It may be expected, then, that the results of his trip abroad will be felt in a field even broader than that covered by the Asahi.

This young Oriental artist's visits to the newspaper offices of New York gave him many a surprise, he says now, and his limited supply of English expletives soon was exhausted as revelation followed revelation and pictures appeared on the drawing boards so rapidly he could hardly believe his eyes. Japanese cartoonists do not work at the high speed common in the United States, and this difference left a deep impression on the visitor from Japan.

The equipment of the American cartoonist and the ingenuity with which he used his tools to produce in pictorial form the thought of the day all were carefully noted in Okamoto's note books, with the aid of his trusty brush-pen. These note books, with his own scribbled notes and sketches interspersed with autograph cartoons by many of the leading newspaper artists of America, are the most precious souvenirs he brought back with him from his trip. Much of the advice gathered from this artist or that has since been put to effective use in the office of the Asahi Shimbun.

When, with boyish enthusiasm, he described the efforts of his American confreres to make his trip interesting and profitable, Okamoto abandoned his attempt to express his appreciation in difficult English. In the midst of an excited flow of his native language, it was easy to see from the expression on his face that Mr. Okamoto had had "one whale of a time."

Okamoto Shook an Equally Wicked Brush

Then he brought out a souvenir of his trip that he had made himself while listening to words of wisdom from Al Frueh, chief cartoonist of the New York World. This fellow Frueh, Okamoto confided to the interviewer, had struck him first as being only a tall and skinny and rather foolish-looking specimen, whose hair seemed sadly in need of attention from a brush and comb. But when he began to draw! That was one of the revelations that struck the Japanese artist squarely between the eyes. When he was invited to make use of the American artist's drawing board, Okamoto sat down and drew a picture of himself receiving instruction from the World cartoonist.

Cartoons are filling more and more space in the leading Japanese journals lately. The Jiji, which was the first to make use of them, probably now leads in this department and on Sunday, especially, presents large displays which deal with subjects not unlike those which are taken as the themes of American cartoons.

New York Tribune Board Elects

The board of directors of the New York Tribune held its regular annual organization meeting, November 24, and elected the following officers: President, Ogden Reid; vice-president, Mrs. Helen Rogers Reid; secretary, Howard Davis, and treasurer, R. E. Maxfield.

CHINESE RUG FOR PRESS CLUB

Shanghai Journalists Grateful for Hospitality in Washington

(Special to EDITOR & PUBLISHER from its Far Eastern Bureau.)

SHANGHAI, Nov. 1.—As a mark of appreciation of the courtesies its members enjoyed at the hands of the National Press Club during the Washington Conference last Winter, the Chinese Journalists' Club of Shanghai is sending its recent hosts a beautiful rug, specially designed to decorate the main room in the National Press Club quarters in the Albee building. The rug, in which are blended the club's colors, carries the National Press Club coat-of-arms in its center, surrounded by an attractive Oriental border. It measures nine by fifteen feet.

The gift will be presented formally to the club by Alfred Sze the Chinese Minister.

The Chinese journalists who report the conference are eloquent in their praise of the manner in which they were entertained and their work facilitated while at Washington. The rug demonstrates that their appreciation has not been short-lived.

The committee charged with obtaining and dispatching the gift consisted of P. Powell, Jabin Hsu and Francis Zia.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS

should make record of our new office address.

On or about December 9th, our entire business and sales staff headquarters will be located on the 18th FLOOR of

PRINTING CRAFTS BUILDING

461 8th Ave. (Between 33d & 34th Sts.) New York City

TELEPHONE LONGACRE 4001

This change of address gives us larger space and a central location that will be convenient for publishers visiting New York.

To our hundreds of patrons (publishers of the best printed newspapers of America) we are truly grateful for the continually increasing business which made this expansion necessary.

The Ault & Wiborg Co. of New York

THE ONLY CREATORS OF

GRITLESS NEW INKS

The Way Is Paved To Milwaukee

TWELVE hundred manufacturers make Milwaukee the first city of diversified industries in the United States. The purchasing power of Milwaukeeans exceeds $9,000,000 every business day, or more than $,000,000 every hour!

Milwaukee has the money and Milwaukee buys! Milwaukee has a way of living up to predictions. Babson early predicted this would be one of the best buying cities—and it has been.

Here is a representative market for your immediate exploitation. A market of a half million buyers, it is neither too large nor too small, and is the buying and distributing center for all Wisconsin and Upper Michigan. Much of the necessary preliminary work incident to "breaking in" to this market has already been done for you by The Milwaukee Journal. The Way Is Paved!

The Journal's analysis of the Milwaukee-Wisconsin market in relation to various products is the result of study, investigation and personal contact with its needs and buying habits. Study the analysis! Concentrate your advertising in The Journal! The Journal is read daily in 4 out of every 5 English-speaking homes in Milwaukee—better than 80% direct coverage at one low cost! In addition, it penetrates into every corner of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Test Out Your Campaign in Representative Milwaukee—Everybody's Market!

Sales and advertising managers are requested to send for The Journal's analysis of the Milwaukee-Wisconsin market in relation to various products. (New issues of the Grocer's Route List ready for Distribution December 5th)

The Milwaukee JOURNAL FIRST- by Merit

報知新聞

The Hochi's Magnificent New Building Just Completed in the Heart of Tokyo

THE HOCHI SHIMBUN

Japan's Oldest Evening Newspaper
With Large Morning Edition

TOTAL PAID CIRCULATION LARGEST IN TOKYO

The Hochi Shimbun was established in 1872 by the late Marquis Okuma, and continuously since that early date has lent all its influence to the support of its great founder's lofty ideals.

In the foreign news field the Hochi has built up a service which is unexcelled, and which has earned for it many readers who are intensely interested in persons and events abroad. This interest has been found to exert considerable influence on their taste in the purchase of imported commodities and undoubtedly has increased their consumption of products from abroad.

Advertising Rates

Per line	Y	1.25
Per Column	Y	170.00
Per inch	Y	12.50
Per page	Y	2,000.00

The Hochi Shimbun

TOKYO, JAPAN

PRESSMEN WALK OUT IN NASHVILLE

Banner Editions Delayed When Publishers Decline to Increase Pay $1.50—International Union Orders Men Back to Work

NASHVILLE, Nov. 27.—A 24-hour walkout of the Nashville Banner's union pressmen Friday and Saturday, November 24 and 25, was ended by orders from international headquarters, which ruled that the pressmen had no grievance and threatened them with suspension from the union if the unauthorized strike continued. The strike, which delayed both Friday and Saturday evening editions of the Banner, was precipitated when the Banner's management declined to increase the scale $1.50 per day, despite the existing contract, which does not expire until September 19, 1923.

The Banner is already paying its pressmen 50 cents a day over the scale. The pressmen demanded that this bonus be incorporated in the scale, together with an additional $1, which represented the amount demanded over what they are now receiving.

A representative of the international union is here, and it is the opinion that the wage dispute under the present contract will be settled by local arbitration.

The Banner missed the early mail editions on Friday, but, with the assistance of employes from other departments, put its regular city edition out about two hours later than usual. The Saturday evening edition was slightly delayed, the pressmen returning to work during the afternoon in time to run it off about an hour later than usual.

FREEL AGAIN HEADS I. S. E. U.

Proposed Salary Raise Killed—Defense Fund Indorsed

President James J. Freel, Secretary-Treasurer Charles A. Sumner, Journal editor James W. White, and Martin B. Apy, molder member of the executive board, have been re-elected to office for two years from January 1, 1923, by the International Stereotypers & Electrotypers' Union. Thomas P. Reynolds replaces J. P. Fitzsimmons as vice-president, and Henry Freer succeeds L. M. Odell as finisher member of the executive board.

A proposition to raise the president's salary from $3,000 to $4,000 per year was defeated. The union endorsed propositions raising the death benefit from $100 to $200 and increasing monthly dues from 50 cents to 60 cents; providing for a defense fund of not less than $75,000 nor more than $150,000 and increasing strike benefits of married men from $10 to $15 per week, of single men from $8 to $15 per week and allowing apprentices $8 per week.

Typographical Contract in Niagara

Publishers and union compositors of Niagara Falls, N. Y., have concluded a written agreement for one year, effective September 6, 1922. Previously they had been working without a formal contract. The scale provided is: Night work—foremen, $50 per week; assistant foremen, $45; machinist-operators, $46; journeymen, $43; day work, $3 less than night scale; apprentices, $19 to $36. Prior to this contract, journeymen received the same wages as now and machinist-operators received $45 for night work. Day work was $3 less than the night scale. Apprentices received $19.50 to $35. The 48-hour week is continued.

London Compositors Accept Wage Cut

Enforcement of wage reductions agreed to by the London (England) Society of Compositors, affecting also platen minders, pressmen and type founders, has been deferred pending negotiations with other unions. The society was asked to vote on a reduction of 6 shillings a week for hand compositors and 4 shillings a week for operators, and its ballots were counted 7,941 favoring and 2,972 opposing the proposed cuts.

The third instalment in reduction of wages of the British Typographical Association went into effect last week, bringing the scale to 9 shillings a week less than it was when the new contract was made effective last July. The final instalment will be taken off next May. The scale for all grades of the association's membership were recently printed in EDITOR & PUBLISHER.

HARPER'S LEAVING OLD STAND

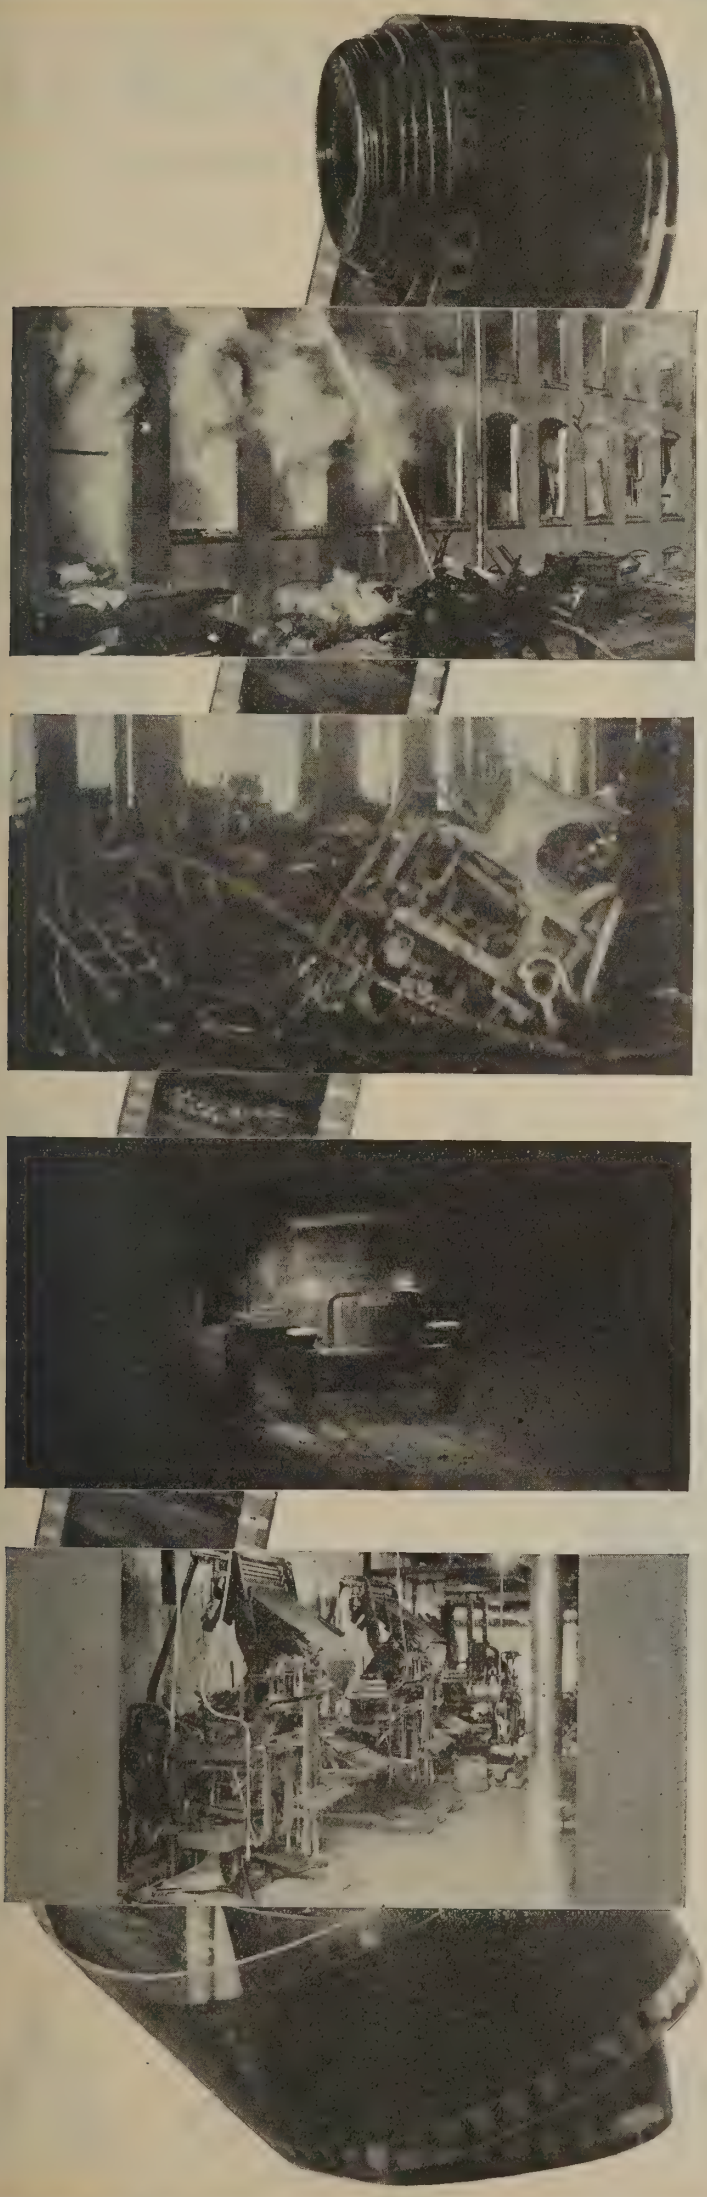
After 105 Years, Publishers Forced Uptown by Growth of City

The famous publishing house of Harper & Bros., which for the 105 years of its existence has remained in downtown New York, is about to move up to 33rd street, adjoining the Vanderbilt Hotel, where a new six-story building is being constructed. This will be the first new home the firm has had for seventy-two years, the length of time it has been in the famous old building on Franklin Square.

Many noted visitors to this country were entertained in the old directors' room downtown, and this room will be duplicated so far as is practical in the new building, where with the offices and book and magazine editorial rooms, it will occupy the top floor. The stock and shipping rooms and plate vaults will be in another building, the location of which is yet to be determined, and the firm will be enabled to keep the many original wood blocks by Howard Pyle and Frederic Remington, and the many other illustrators whose work is still of value. The new building will be completed in March.

Harper & Bros. were established in 1817 by James and John Harper, who were joined by Wesley Harper, another brother, in 1823.

In 1840 the printing, binding and publishing establishment of Harper & Bros. occupied several buildings on both sides of Cliff street. In 1850 a large structure was erected for the firm on Franklin Square, in Pearl street, running back to the Cliff street buildings. The Harpers had scarcely moved in when the fire of December, 1853 destroyed the entire establishment, involving a loss of full $1,000,000. The brothers at once set about rebuilding the establishment on a larger scale and upon the same site, the present one. This building was the first fireproof structure in New York City. Franklin square was named after it, because of the bronze statue of Benjamin Franklin upraised nearly to a level with the Third avenue elevated railway, which passes by. The establishment occupies about half an acre of ground, and is composed of two buildings, one fronting upon Pearl and Cliff streets.



Across the street from the building on Franklin Square, Mark Twain worked in a little printing shop when he first came to New York, as a boy.

WON'T REGULATE ADS

New York Aldermen Table Security League Request

Pronouncing as war hysteria a request from the National Security League the rules committee of the New York Board of Aldermen recently declined to recommend an ordinance which would have compelled all foreign language advertisements in subways, on elevated stands and in street cars to have appended an English translation of the text.

Vice-chairman William T. Collins, who heads the rules committee of the board, handed in the declination, after several weeks' consideration. In the report, which recommends the tabling of the National Security League resolution, the rules committee declares that such a request, which treats with contempt the language and customs of different nationalities, is unpatriotic, and any like legislation should be repealed.

A Movie of Linotype Service

Friday, November 17

7:30 A. M.—Fire Starts

A fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the plant of the Evening Herald of Manchester, Connecticut.

3:00 P. M.—Linotype Representative on the Job

While the ruins were still smouldering, a Linotype representative who had learned of the fire, arrived in town to offer his assistance and that of the Linotype Company.

5:30 P. M.—Specifications Phoned to Factory

As soon as the specifications for the new machines and their equipment could be made out they were phoned to the factory at Brooklyn.

11:40 P. M.—Linotypes Shipped by Motor Truck

Enough men were called back to the factory to prepare the machines for shipment and they were sent straight through to Manchester on one of the Linotype Company's trucks.

Saturday, November 18

10:55 A. M.—Linotypes Delivered

After an all-night drive the truck arrived in Manchester with the Linotypes and two machinists to erect them.

8:00 P. M.—Linotypes Ready to Operate

Thirty-six hours after the fire started the new Linotypes were ready to set type.

Mergenthaler Linotype Co.

29 Ryerson Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

SAN FRANCISCO CHICAGO NEW ORLEANS

CANADIAN LINOTYPE LIMITED, TORONTO

Composed entirely on the LINOTYPE in the Bodoni Series

Greatest News F

LLO

ARTICLE No. 1
(Released about December 9) will be His Ar

The first six articles will be weekly, balan

ture of All Time!

ARTICLES BY

D GEORGE

has contracted to write on resent World Problems

Exclusively for

UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE

NORRIS A. HUSE, General Manager

United Press Headquarters
New York City

---

er to Clemenceau

us extending over a period of 54 weeks

"LADY LUCK" IS A FICKLE FRIEND TO SALESMEN OF WANT ADS

Knowledge of Product and Selling Principles Will Get Copy and New Accounts, Where Rabbits' Feet Fail—Develop News Interest in Classified

By C. L. PERKINS

Executive Secretary, Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers

CLASSIFIED advertising salesmen fall into two groups—good and bad, successful and unsuccessful, producers and non-producers. The bad ones say that the good ones are merely lucky—the unsuccessful ones claim that the successful ones carry horse shoes—the non-producers think that the producers have a corner on four-leaf clovers.

In times of unusual prosperity, the haphazard salesman, if he is on an established result-producing medium, builds a reputation of being a producer, or he at least hypnotizes himself into such a belief. During boom times he becomes a producer by being a good "copy-chaser." During such periods the real salesmen, like athletes, sometimes "go stale"—they let down on their training, they lose their batting eye, and if not careful, the end of the boom period also finds them disciples of the god of luck.

The good salesman, the copy and account producer, who is not spoiled by prosperity, realizes that luck has no part in his success, and the non-producer can become a producer when he realizes that not an assortment of horseshoes, four leaf clovers, and rabbits' feet, but sales knowledge is fundamental to success.

The class of salesmen which makes up the poor-producing group is the one which has a lack of knowledge—knowledge of the fundamental principles of selling. They have been initiated into the fraternity of luck-worshippers. They have come to believe that the most successful salesman is the one with the greatest amount of luck in "getting the breaks." That is as far as they go in their analysis. They are the type that imagines selling revolves around the price element of a commodity. When the price element fails to make a sale, they resort to outside influence—a mutual friend, a written or verbal recommendation. Should even that fail in its purpose their last resort is to appeal to the prospect's sense of pity. If all these are to no avail they very often become impertinent or offensive in their attitude and turn a good prospect into an enemy. They place the blame on "hard luck." The real cause is this: They are not acquainted with the rules of salesmanship.

On every classified advertising sales staff there are one or two men who stand out head and shoulders above the rest in selling. This success is usually referred to by those not so successful, as luck—"rabbit foot stuff." But is it a matter of luck? Did you ever hear of a consistently successful salesman who depended upon luck for his success? One of America's most successful men once said: "The man who relies on luck for his success soon finds his business and his bank account in a deplorable condition."

Luck plays no favorites, and business "horse shoes" are boomerangs which fly back and retard substantial progress. Men who sell successfully are the ones who sell systematically, by means of sound and legitimate methods. To be a producer of classified advertising it is especially important to observe certain rules and laws governing salesmanship. There is a series of selling principles, arrived at through psychological observation, which, if used properly, insure success to the classified advertising salesman.

These laws are as clearly defined as the rules of mathematics, and as applicable. Any salesman not familiar with them can find them with little effort. There are a number of publications on salesmanship which hold a great store of practical information. They can be obtained from any public library. The rules must be studied, for "Lady Luck" is a fickle damsel.

* * *

IN these columns better copy in the classified columns has been advocated many times as a method of creating greater results for want-ad users. The following advertisement from a Pittsburgh paper may not be good copy, but it is so unusual that it was reproduced on the editorial page of the Wall Street Journal under the heading "Pepper and Salt" with the subheading "Time for Nuts":

"Live in the country where the sunlight bathes the hills with gladness and the robin, bluebird and swallow make nests at springtime, then at the end of the year is the time for nuts. On Butler Short Line and B. & O. Monthly ticket $11.29. Frame houses, large lots, slate roofs, pure water and air, where the children romp and play and eat and grow—where all the world's great men come from, the country. One house is $4,500, the other $5,000. Large lots. Phone Richland 48, ring 3, for further information. The writer of this advertisement believes in the Deity of Jesus Christ, the complete inspiration of the scriptures and the integrity of the stars and stripes. He does not believe that man descended from a baboon, gorilla or missing link."

* * *

THE Oakland Tribune, Morton J. A. McDonald, classified manager, recently printed in news form the following article on the front page of one of its sections. If more papers followed the example of the Tribune, they would find it increased reader interest which would ultimately lead to a greater volume of want-ads.

"SOCIAL LIFE, BUSINESS BAROMETER IS WANT-ADS

"Classified Advertising—the want-ads—is far more than the test of a newspaper's popularity. It is an excellent cross section of the social life, and the very safe diagnosis of the business health of the community.

"We all know that the want-ad is a ready solution of labor and employment problems, a ready reference of vacant habitations, and a quick way to dispose of worn out or unnecessary articles.

"But the careful study of the classified advertising in a metropolitan paper throws a searchlight on the everyday problems of the metropolis.

"The merchants who will observe lengthening of the employment columns and the shortening of the classifications under Situations Wanted may judge surely of the rising or falling purchasing power of the population. Further, by analyzing the kind of positions offered or the classes of workers seeking employment, he can shrewdly guess the prosperity waxing or waning in various industries and trades.

"The growth or falling away of rental advertising, apartments, rooms and houses, shows the drift, in or out of the city, of the population, and a closer scrutiny of rental locations and of rents asked in these locations, is the gauge of population movements within the city itself.

"The investor who studies the real estate columns learns actual as opposed to theoretical property values. If a stranger, he can judge from the property description and attached prices the relative values of real estate here and the city from which he came. Since property for which there is no demand is seldom advertised he can gauge by the extent of advertising in various sections the relative popularity of these sections, and the probable future drift of resident population.

"So it is with the various sales columns, particularly autos. The greater the volumes of used car advertising, the greater the general prosperity of the community. Lack of demand will destroy such advertising, and since the used car market lies amongst those of limited income, the activity of that market is one of the surest signs of a generally thriving community.

"The man who would for any real know his city intimately from day to day, should devote a part of every day to the careful scrutiny of the classified section of his leading metropolitan dai

Aberdeen Papers Win Libel Suit

The American Publishing Compa publishers of the Aberdeen (S. Morning American and Evening Ne E. P. Neill, business manager, and H. McKeever, managing editor, w exonerated of the charge of libel brou by Mrs. Loretta M. Bell in the Fed Court at Aberdeen, November 20. Bell had sued for $30,000 damages a story published in the News on J 10, 1920, of the arrest of a and woman, one found in a r of the lodging house, which she kep that time, and the other in an adja room. The jury found for the defe ants with a single vote.

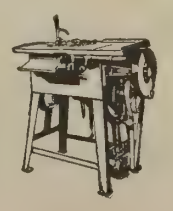
Ludlow to Australia

The Ludlow Typograph Company sold the Brisbane Newspaper Comp Ltd., Brisbane, Australia, publishers the Brisbane Courier, the Evening server, and six weekly newspapers Ludlow machine.

Reg'lar Fellers
by Gene Byrne's

The Albany Sunday Telegram is the new paper this week.

Furnished full page matrices, black alone, black and red, and black and three colors; or, as the first page of a printed comic section.



HERALD-SUN SYNDICATE, 280 B'way, New York City

The Ludlow
Escapes All Matrix Limitations

HAND setting frees Ludlow matrices from all mechanical limitations. Ludlow matrices do not have to slide through metal channels. The ears do not wear, nor do heavy matrices hit with damaging impact. This permits of greater size and weight. Bold and extended faces in big sizes are entirely practical.

Undistorted Faces in Large as Well as Small Sizes

"Keyboard composition is not adapted to big typefaces," exclaimed composing room machinist recently. "The big matrices cause mechanical difficulties. The guides, for instance, are constantly being battered by these big, heavy mats, and I can't seem to keep them in order. You don't lay bricks by keyboard."

Big matrices, 42, 48 and 60 point, are quite out of range of keyboard machines, designed for straight runs of body matter in small sizes. The Ludlow provides them, and hand setting permits their use.

Bold and Extended faces, even in the smaller sizes—24, 30 and 36 point—require heavy matrices which, on keyboard machines, cause mechanical difficulties. Ludlow matrices are composed by hand. This permits them to be as big and heavy as necessary—and they are!

Undistorted Italic—slanting letters on square bodies have worried designers, typefounders and printers since italic was first invented. Foundry types alone could approach the ideal, and then only by distorting the faces and resorting to overhanging kerns, which break off on the press.

Matrices slant with letters—Ludlow italic letters do not conform to square bodies. The matrices are cut at an angle of 17 degrees. They actually slant this much as composed in the stick. The whole line of full-kerning, close-fitting italic is then cast on one unbreakable slug.

Utmost freedom of design in typefaces is desirable for display composition. With Ludlow matrices, for hand setting freedom of design is entirely practicable. It is this freedom of design which causes a Ludlow-set advertisement to contrast favorably with all surrounding typography.

Ludlow Typograph Company
2032 Clybourn Avenue, Chicago
Eastern Office: World Building, New York City

LUDLOW QUALITY SLUG COMPOSITION ABOVE 10 PT.

Every Newspaper a Top-Notcher

IN

Pennsylvania

Every manufacturer knows the value of a Top-notcher salesman.

Every newspaper in this Pennsylvania list is a Top-notcher.

They are in a class by themselves, each covering its own particular field in its own compelling way.

The list as a whole practically covers the whole state.

Top-Notch newspapers in a Top-Notch state is an unbeatable combination.

It recognizes no boundaries, no limit to possibilities. National advertisers, national manufacturers, who would expand, open up new trade or increase the volume of trade already established will find this combination a potential force, masterful in its achievement leading steadily up to the goal of expectation.

Cultivate this market through these Top-Notch Newspapers.

A LIST THAT GETS RESULTS

		Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Allentown Call	(M)	28,009	.09	.09
Allentown Call	(S)	15,118	.09	.09
†Bethlehem Globe	(E)	8,528	.04	.04
†Bloomsburg Press	(M)	6,507	.029	.029
Chester Times & Republican	(M&E)	14,331	.065	.05
†Coatesville Record	(E)	5,369	.0214	.0214
†Connellsville Courier	(E)	6,103	.0179	.0179
Easton Express	(E)	17,241	.05	.05
*Easton Free Press	(E)	12,147	.05	.05
Erie Times	(E)	27,648	.08	.08
Harrisburg Telegraph	(E)	39,478	.095	.095
Lancaster Intelligencer and News-Journal	(M&E)	21,689	.08	.08
†Oil City Derrick	(M)	6,427	.04	.035
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(M)	54,541	.17	.15
Pittsburgh Dispatch	(S)	63,767	.22	.18
†Pottstown Ledger	(E)	1,654	.014	.014
Pottsville Republican	(E)	11,234	.055	.05
Scranton Republican	(M)	32,180	.12	.10
†Scranton Times	(E)	37,148	.12	.10
Sharon Herald	(E)	5,002	.021	.021
†Sunbury Daily Item	(E)	4,109	.021	.018
Warren Times-Mirror	(E&M)	8,056	.036	.036
Washington Observer and Reporter	(M&E)	15,553	.06	.05
†West Chester Local News	(E)	10,768	.03	.03
Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader	(E)	22,061	.08	.05
†York Dispatch	(E)	16,726	.045	.045
†York Gazette and Daily	(M)	16,452	.045	.045

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, October 1, 1922.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Statement, 3 mos. to Sept. 30, 1922.

LEADING THE LIST

In a city and nation where class circulation means everything, where American advertisers in the ordinary newspaper buy waste circulation among Japanese whose purchasing power is low, The Jiji Shimpo leads all. With a monthly subscription rate of Y1.10, The Jiji is the highest-priced newspaper in Japan.

THE JIJI SHIMPO

時事新報

Is the newspaper of prosperous, ambitious Japan—a young nation, newly-endowed with means for enjoying the goods of the West. Her most progressive sons and daughters, eager to learn more of America and all America has to give Japan, read The Jiji Shimpo. Not only on account of its superior presentation of domestic and foreign news, but because it carries the bulk of foreign advertising appearing in Japan, The Jiji is the favorite of the class the American advertiser must reach.

The Jiji's New York representative, Mr. J. P. Barry, will gladly discuss the opportunities of the Japanese market, which he has studied at close range.

New York Office:
JAPAN ADVERTISER SUITE
Equitable Bldg., 120 Broadway

THE JIJI SHIMPO

Cables: "Jiji Tokyo" Bentley Code

TOKYO, JAPAN

Morning and Evening Editions

"In Japan, the Buyers Read the Jiji"

LLOYD - GEORGE SIGNS FOR NEWS SERIES

United Features Syndicate Gets World Rights—London Chronicle Those For the British Isles—Will Run for Over a Year

David Lloyd-George November 24 signed contracts for a series of 30 articles on present-day world conditions, publication of which will begin December 9 and continue for over a year. One of these contracts gives the United Features Syndicate the rights to the former Prime Minister's articles for the World outside of the British Isles and the other gives the London Chronicle these particular rights.

Under these contracts Mr. Lloyd-George will write signed articles of from 1,500 to 2,000 words. The first six of these will be issued at rate of one a week and after that they will be written semi-monthly.

The first of the Lloyd-George articles will be a reply by him to the speeches that Clemenceau has been making in the United States. To that end about 3,000 words from the Clemenceau speeches have already been cabled to Mr. Lloyd-George in London. Later in the series he will discuss such subjects as the British War Debt to the United states, the Irish Free State Treaty, the Socialist Menace, Prohibition Relations between the United States and England and the Turkish Treaty.

EASTMENT BACK FROM ABROAD

McClure Syndicate Officer Brings Contracts With English Authors

P. C. Eastment, vice-president of the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, has just returned from a seven weeks' trip to England, bringing back contracts with prominent English authors, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Philip Gibbs, William LeQueux, John Goodwin, Ruby M. Ayres, Temple Thurston and Radcliffe Holmes.

Mr. Eastment reports that conditions in England are very nearly normal. Unemployment was much less in evidence than on his former visit, a year ago, and the British people assume, as a matter of course, that they will pay their war debts to the United States, although they probably never get a penny of their loans to France, Italy and Russia, according to Mr. Eastment. He also found keen desire on the part of the British people for the closest possible relationship with the American people both in political and commercial affairs.

CIRCULATION SHIFTS IN N. Y.

American News Company Distributes All English Language A. M. Papers

The American News Company and its subsidiaries on December 4 take over all city circulation of the New York English language morning papers, as a part of the rezoning plan of the publishers to eliminate expensive duplication of delivery. The Metropolitan News Company, which has handled the English language morning papers for a number of years in sections where this company has delivered a heavy volume of foreign language newspapers, has turned over its route lists on the English language dailies to their publishers and they have been assigned to the American News Company.

The latter will make deliveries in all parts of Manhattan, the Bronx, Queens and all of Brooklyn, except Brownsville, Ridgewood, Cypress Hills and Coney Island, outlying sections where delivery is in the hands of independent companies.

Delivery of Il Progreso, Il Popolo and the Jewish Morning Journal, it is understood, will be taken over by the Metropolitan News Company from the American News Company, and it is reported also that the number of papers added to the Metropolitan's delivery by this transfer is considerably in excess of the English-language circulation, which has been turned over to the American News Company.

DROPS N. Y. AMERICAN SECTI

Heart's Syracuse Sunday Paper S Printing Own Product

The Syracuse (N. Y.) Sunday A ican, which has been sold in combin with the New York Sunday Ame for ten cents, will appear Decem as a local Sunday paper. The ca of the various feature and news se will appear as Syracuse Sunday A ican and all of the type-setting printing will be done in the local except the colored comic part.

F. J. McCarthy, managing edit the New York Sunday American, Syracuse acting in a supervisory ca as managing editor prior to the issue of the local paper. New e ment has been ordered for handlin Syracuse Sunday American princi for the cut department, already func ing. A new press has been ordered it is expected the addition to the pr building will be started soon.

Celebration of the start of the Ev Telegram and Sunday American, beginning their third month of o tion, will be in the form of the annual banquet, December 11.

CHIVERS GOES TO ATLANT

Named General Manager of Geo and Sunday American

A. B. Chivers has gone to Atlan general manager of the Georgian Sunday American, it was learned a Hearst newspaper headquarters in York this week. No other changes been made in the Georgian organiz

Mr. Chivers has been for the past years a partner in the firm of Koppe & Co., representing South A can newspapers in New York, and h tains his interest in that business. P ously for five years he had been bus manager of the New York Globe before that he was business and adv ing manager of the Cleveland News, ness manager of the Birmingham and for ten years was advertising ager of the New Orleans Item.

N. J. Association Board Meet

The executive board of the New J Press Association met in Jersey City vember 20. Among the business t acted was the appointment of a legisl committee, a committee on the mid meeting and a committee to confer faculty of Rutgers College upon th tablishment of a school of journa Ralph E. Prugh, the Lake Hopat Breese, was elected a member.

To Give Newspaper Short Cour

The School of Journalism, Univ of Wisconsin, will give a three-day n paper short course February 1, 2 a The Wisconsin Press Association meet at the same time. It is upon request of the association that the c which will feature the weekly paper, be held.

Press Gallery Elects

The Press Gallery of Montreal Hall, at a recent meeting, elected the lowing officers: President, George rence, the Herald; vice-president, Parrott, Le Devoir; secretary, H. M Le Canada; committee, T. Lonargan Gazette; R. H. Parson, the Star Rodier, La Press, and A. H. Lefev Patrie.

British United Press Incorporat

The British United Press, Ltd., a capital of $50,000, was incorporat Montreal last week.

Gets Three Machines

The Daytona (Fla.) Morning Jo is installing a new three-magazine casting machine to its battery.

TIPS FOR AD MANAGERS

ner L. Allen, 15 East 26th street, New . Will make up lists in December for Porter Chemical Company, manufacturers ducational toys.

Wallis Armstrong, 16th and Locust ts, Philadelphia. Using 1 page for the or Talking Machine Company, Camden, .

W. Ayer & Son, 300 Chestnut street, adelphia. Will make up lists in Decem- for B. Fischer & Co., New York. Using ines copy for the Literary Digest.

uerlein, Inc., Hibernia Bank Bldg., New ns, has accounts of the Yellow Cab any, the Gulf and Southern Steamship any, the Union Indemnity Insurance any, and the Business Men's Racing ciation, all of New Orleans.

rton, Durstine & Osborn, 25 West 45th t, New York. Using 20 inches, 3 times eek, for U-Need-A-Biscuit Bread.

L. Brann, 11 East 43rd street, New . Using half page, 3 and 5 times for gomery Ward & Co.

nett-Kuhn Co., 39 South LaSalle street, go. Placing some institutional copy on Sexton Co., 5,000-line contracts in small f Metropolitan papers.

son Chesman & Co., 1127 Pine street, Louis. Making 2800 line contracts for re's Remedy. Using 28 lines, 21 times he William H. Muller Company.

drew Cone Advertising Agency, Tribune , New York. Using 2 full columns, 4 for the Empire Home Builders' Asso- n.

tinental Advertising Agency, Masonic e, Chicago. Will handle advertising for n T. Ryerson & Co., on their 80th an- ary.

chfield & Co., Brooks Bldg., Chicago. 336 lines, 6 times for Firestone Tire bber Company.

rcy Advertising Company, Interna- Life Bldg., St. Louis. Will make up in December for the Brascolite Com- St. Louis.

ge L. Dyer Company, 42 Broadway, York. Will make up lists in December he Allen A. Company, manufacturers en .A hosiery and underwear.

y-Hanly Advertising Company, 1110 avenue, Kansas City. Will make up n December for the Nonspi Company.

rt Frank Company, 332 South LaSalle Chicago. Placing 3,000-line contracts aynie Corporation, auto accessories, in metropolitan cities where they can distributors. Has account of the Per- arbon Remover Corporation, manufac- of Perfect Carbon Remover. Will use pers throughout the country in national sing campaign.

ival K. Frowert Company, 151 West treet, New York. Using full pages in avure sections for Coty Perfumerie.

les H. Fuller Company, 623 South h avenue, Chicago. Using 34 lines, for A. L. Rice.

ner-Glen Buck Company, 1627 Locust St. Louis. Making 5000 line contracts lier & Spies Milling Company.

n, Fulton, Cunningham Company, Free Bldg., Detroit. Making 2800 line con- for the Orange Crush Company.

cher Bradford Company, 829 Tribune g, Chicago. Issuing general orders and ts on George H. Mayr and Dr. New-lach Advertising Agency, 400 North n avenue, Chicago. Using Chicago on new style of copy of Encyclopedia ica.

& Emory, Graphic Arts Bldg., Port- re. Placing account for King's Food ts.

s, Farson & Walberg, Inc., Wrigley Chicago. Making up lists for Rich- iston Ring Company, Richmond, Ind., of Richmond Electrically Hammered d Joerns Company, 14 East Jackson rd, Chicago. Orders and contracts go- generally on Dr. Ritholz.

ert & Feasley, 17 East 49th street, ork. Will shortly place account for t Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, cturers of Listerine.

as F. Logan Company, 332 South n avenue, Chicago. Expect to issue al schedules for New York Central Company on the Royal Palm special.

& Thomas, 400 North Michigan avenue, Issuing orders and contracts on ck-Balke Phonograph.

kin Advertising Company, 5 South avenue, Chicago. Issuing contracts edules on Pillsbury Bran.

ngale Advertising Agency, Candler Atlanta. Sending out orders for the Institute.

Harry C. Michaels Company, 113 Lexington avenue, New York. Making up list for Devoe & Raynolds.

Mitchell-Faust & Co., 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. Reported to be copy for Armour Grain Company, Chicago.

Moser & Cotins, Paul Bldg., Utica, N. Y. Using 20 lines, 42 times in farm papers for American Separator Company.

Patterson-Andress Company, 1 Madison avenue, New York. Using 200 inches in one year for the Curtis Publishing Company.

Philip Ritter Company, 185 Madison avenue, New York. Planning spring campaign for the Ansco Camera Company. Making up list for G. & C. Merriam Company, Springfield, Mass., publishers of Webster's International Dictionary..

Roberts & MacAvinche, 30 North Dearborn street, Chicago. Orders have been sent out to various newspapers for Cluett, Peabody & Co., on Arrow Collars. Papers in metropolitan cities receiving schedules for additional space on large copy. Orders also issued to large list of newspapers for holiday advertising of the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company and orders being issued frequently for the Banner Tailoring and Park Tailoring advertising.

Snitzler Warner Company, 225 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Orders and contracts going out on the Kepec Company to Southern newspapers. Making 5,000 line contracts for R. L. Watkins.

Stevens & Wallis, Inc., 45 Western South Temple, Salt Lake City, have received a contract from the Physico-Chemical Laboratories, Inc., and will put on a newspaper and dealer display campaign in the mountain states. A little later the company will extend the campaign all over the West and finally make it national. The company's product is a health salt known as Salitone to the trade and Sal Normal to the profession.

Stewart-Davis Advertising Agency, 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Using 250 lines, once for United Profit Sharing Corporation.

Thresher Service Advertising, 136 Liberty street, New York. Putting out full page Christmas copy for Colgate & Co.

Dudley Walker & Co., Peoples Gas Bldg., Chicago. Making yearly contracts for the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

Western Advertising Agency, 506 Baker Block, Racine, Wis. Will make up lists in December for the Wisconsin Electric Company.

James T. Wetherald Advertising Agency, 142 Berkeley street, Boston. Using 1000 inches in one year for Lydia E. Pinkham.

Williams & Cunnyngham, 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago. Making contracts for Cornell Wood Products.

Zimmer-Keller, Inc., Kresge Bldg., Detroit. Will make up lists in December for the Bower Roller Bearing Company, Detroit, Mich.

WANT PERMANENT RECEIVER

Request Follows Discharge of Lansing Capital-News' Temporary Receiver

The Lansing (Mich.) Capital News may not be returned to the stockholders although Donald C. Call, temporary receiver for the paper, was discharged by Circuit Judge Leland W. Carr, sitting in Lansing on November 17, and given a week in which to prepare a report before turning the paper over to the stockholders, for on next day Gov. Albert E. Sleeper, one of the prominent stockholders, and a paper company which is one of the largest creditors, filed a petition in the Federal Court at Detroit to have a permanent receiver appointed. This petition has not as yet been heard before Judge Tuttle.

The temporary receivership was apparently successful, the revenues of the paper having exceeded the current running expenses for the period of more than two months during which Mr. Call was in charge of affairs.

Just what will become of the newspaper if it is turned back to the stockholders is problematical, as Charles N. Halsted, president and general manager of the State Journal, the rival afternoon daily, is understood to have purchased control of the stock. Other prominent local stockholders are: Alton J. Hager, William Brogan, Claude Cady, and Charles Hayden.

Made Account Executive

G. R. Allerton, who for the past two years has been in charge of the advertising of the Northern Electric Company, Ltd., has joined the staff of the Advertising Service Company, Ltd., as account executive in their Montreal office.

Rhode Island
as a market for Food Products

With a population of over 604,000 prosperous people, concentrated in an area of only 1,000 square miles, Rhode Island offers unusual opportunities to the manufacturers and producers of food products. Statistics show that 97% of the population is urban and only 3% is rural, so that practically every family procures all its food products from one of the 1,807 retail grocery or delicatessen stores in the State. These stores in turn are served by 22 wholesale grocers and 25 produce dealers, with Providence as the distributing centre.

What about YOUR brand? How does it rank in this field and what are you doing to push it? A carefully determined merchandising plan, together with a strong, consistent advertising campaign in Rhode Island's great newspapers

The Providence Journal
AND
The Evening Bulletin

will materially increase your sales in this community.

These papers have built, through rigid supervision of advertising columns as well as the high character of editorial and news pages, a reader confidence and influence that makes them valuable mediums for manufacturers who seek good company and a friendly welcome in nearly every worth while home in the state.

Providence Journal Co.
Providence, R. I.

Representatives

CHAS. H. EDDY Co.

New York Boston Chicago

R. J. BIDWELL CO.

Pacific Coast Representatives—San Francisco—Los Angeles

ROGERS' AUTOBIOGRAPHY AN ADDITION TO SPARSE LITERATURE ON CARTOONS

"A World Worth While" Is a Companion Volume to Paine's Life of Nast—Ethical Codes of Press Compiled by Prof. Myers—Smaller Books of Value Appear

By JAMES MELVIN LEE

Director, Department of Journalism, New York University.

FOR several years I have been collecting books on journalism. As I glance at my shelves, I see numerous volumes recording the lives of those newspaper workers who achieved fame through their editorials. But where are volumes that give the life history of those who composed the wordless editorials (cartoons)? The striking exception is "The Life of Thomas Nast," by Albert Bigelow Paine (Harper & Bros.). In the days when I edited Judge, the artists used to tell me that the mantle of Nast had fallen upon W. A. Rogers. Beyond the permissibility of doubt, Nast and Rogers are of the same school of cartooning.

Consequently, "A World Worth While," by W. A. Rogers (Harper & Bros.), is welcomed as a companion volume to the Nast book. By means of this volume the old-timers in the newspaper office will live over the past in a sort of Indian summer of the heart—so full are the reminiscences by Mr. Rogers. Just as we have "wordless editorials" so have we "picture interviews." Part of the charm of the volume comes from the fact that the illustrations are by the author, with the exception of the frontispiece—a drawing of W. A. Rogers by Joseph St. Amand. By way of good measure, Booth Tarkington has contributed an introduction in which he records "auld acquaintances," when he met Rogers in the pages of Harper's Young People.

Like many other newspaper workers, Rogers was born in Ohio, but he eventually came to New York, where he associated himself with the Daily Graphic, which in a practical sense conducted a school of journalism for cartoonists. Harper's Weekly at that time was the foremost illustrated journal in this country. Therefore, it is not surprising that Mr. Rogers became a member of its staff. Here he began many of those delightful friendships which are recalled so delightfully in his book of reminiscences. For many of these men like Mark Twain, George William Curtis, William Dean Howells, Edwin A. Abbey, and others, he gives us new and intimate portraits. It was, however, while Mr. Rogers was on the New York Herald that he came into his own. These days are recalled in detail.

The book shows that Mr. Rogers can write almost as well as he can draw—what more can be said by way of praise?

* * *

JOSEPH S. MYERS, director of the department of journalism at Ohio State University, has compiled an interesting pamphlet entitled "The Journalistic Code of Ethics." This booklet is a collection of codes, creeds, and suggestions for publishers of newspapers. Especially interesting are the codes or creeds of such newspapers as the Detroit News, Dayton Journal, New York Globe, Sacramento Bee, Tampa Times, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Philadelphia Public Ledger. The sins of omission in this collection are many, but the sins of commission are few.

Regardless of politics, practically every publisher "will read with interest," and in some instances, "point with pride" to the creed by President Harding. The last paragraph of his creed reads: "I want my paper (the Marion Star) to be so conducted that it can go into any home without destroying the innocence of any child." Almost as interesting is the news creed set forth by William Allen White of the Emporia Gazette.

The pamphlet may be obtained free, upon application to Mr. Myers, Department of Journalism, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

* * *

A TIP worth taking is to drop a note to the Chicago Daily News and request a copy of the pamphlet, "It's the Way It's Written," by Henry J. Smith. This booklet is a collection of notes on the literary equipment of a newspaper man. A New York journalist recently said of this excellent pamphlet that "It is the best brief ration of advise to newspaper men in all the journalistic bill of fare which the writer has tasted." He commends especially that rare piece of news writing to be found in the dispatch sent by the Associated Press correspondents in the Volga famine area of Russia. It is commended for its simplicity, its vividness, and its restraint. If space permitted it would be quoted in full, but the reader can see it for himself by sending for a copy of the booklet.

Reporters on metropolitan papers will find this booklet full of valuable suggestions in the technique of news writing. I am willing to risk all the reputation I may have as a constructive critic of the press, that this work contains more real meat and less stuffing than can be found in any other similar journalistic menu.

* * *

A CONVENIENT little booklet for editors of country weeklies and small city dailies to pass out to correspondents is "How and What to Write as News" (Porte Publishing Company, Salt Lake City, Utah), by Carl A. Jettinger. The author is quite right when he says that about all the instruction a country editor gives his correspondents is: "Get all the news you can. Send it so it reaches our office by Tuesday noon. Write only on one side of the paper." To overcome this lack of more specific instructions is the purpose of this booklet.

In the section entitled "What the More Common News Items Should Contain," is listed the various items a correspondent should be sure to put into his story. Equally important for the cub reporter is the section headed "What Is Not News."

* * *

THOSE who are interested in the historical side of American Journalism should send ten cents to the New York Public Library for a copy of the pamphlet, "John Holt, Printer and Postmaster," by Victor Hugo Paltsits, Keeper of Manuscripts. This booklet has considerable interest for editors in Virginia, New York, and Connecticut, in which states Holt at one time or another published newspapers.

Next to Benjamin Franklin, possibly John Holt was the most important figure in journalism during the Colonial period. On page 18 of the pamphlet is found an inventory of Holt's plant—worth about $1,000. Those were the good old days.

Attention was called to Holt in a series of articles which I wrote several years ago for EDITOR & PUBLISHER on "The Growth and Development of the American Newspapers."

* * *

SOME of the stories published as part of the day's work in the New York Herald, have been collected, put in pamphlet form, and given the title, "The Human Note." Copies may be obtained upon application directed to the New York Herald.

The story which opens the pamphlet, "Pure and Unwashed Alike Mourn Gertie," has already been reproduced by EDITOR & PUBLISHER. All the stories in this booklet have attracted attention either in this country or abroad—usually in both. These stories strike the human interest note but they are not what might be called, strictly speaking, "sob stuff." Every school of journalism ought to have this collection of stories in its journalism laboratory.

* * *

SOME printers overset just as some authors overwrite. Evidently Franklin P. Adams, the "colyum" conductor of "The Conning Tower," late of the New York Tribune but now of the New York World does not underwrite the stuff on the jacket of his book, "Overset." In his column he recently inserted this item:

> When Doubleday, Page & Co., blurb, on the jacket of "Overset," that "some of it is absolutely new," they lie; and when they describe the book, in an advertisement, as "prose meant for but not used in The Conning Tower," again they lie. Everything in "Overset" except the dedication has been printed before, and most of it in The Conning Tower.

"Overset" differs from other books by F. P. A. in that it is made up entirely of prose. Among the satirical items are several relating to the press. An especially timely thrust is the following:

> This is our eighteenth pre-Christmas columnar period. A gayer and a wiser man, we realize that our exhortations to an indifferent universe to shop early never aroused one person to the rath purchase. As far [illegible] are concerned, shop as late as you like [illegible] and this to prove to Upton Sinclair th[illegible] advertising department doesn't control [illegible] not at all.

I have always thought that the s[illegible] "Do your Christmas shopping early," [illegible] something of a press concession to a[illegible] tisers. But this criticism which [illegible] some grounds for justification, is the [illegible] one that Upton Sinclair never ment[illegible] in his book attacking the press.

Another item that especially hit [illegible] bull's eye whether it be in the edi[illegible] room of the newspaper or the class [illegible] of the school of journalism is:

> Brown University and the Univers[illegible] Oregon are among i.'s of l. that [illegible] banned, as the headline writers say [illegible] dancing. But the headline, as any [illegible] S. of J. student knows, should have [illegible] "Cheek to Cheek Banned from Co[illegible] Coast."

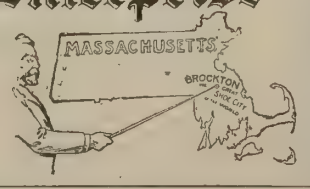
The opportunities in the news[illegible] business have received much attenti[illegible] late both in books and in magazine[illegible] cles. F. P. A. on pages 71 and 72 [illegible] an important postscript. In calling [illegible] tion to how the newspaper man in [illegible] fort at honesty loses many friend[illegible] He gives as the last line "Any f[illegible] you must consider as so much velve[illegible]

The satire on book reviewing in[illegible] volume deserves wide reading. I[illegible] paper people probably more than [illegible] other group know how to appr[illegible] satire. For them, "Overset," to u[illegible] overworked phrase, will fill a lon[illegible] want.

* * *

WALTER S. DICKEY, editor [illegible] owner of the Kansas City Jo[illegible] and the Kansas City Post, has [illegible] duced on heavy coated paper two re[illegible] able cartoons. Both are worth fr[illegible] for the walls of the editorial sa[illegible] One shows Lord Northcliffe as a cu[illegible] ing after "the great interview."

> In that land beyond the sun
> Where the noble have their count
> When the work of life is done.



In the second cartoon, there is a[illegible] distance call from this same count[illegible] Alexander Graham Bell. In my [illegible] room, I often speak of the cartoo[illegible] wordless editorial. The cartoons, [illegible] ever that I have mentioned in this [illegible] graph are wordless poems. A l[illegible] supply of these reproductions is av[illegible] for distribution to "the gentlemen [illegible] press."

Population 67,000 Trading Center for 150,000
Brockton, Massachusetts. The Great Shoe City. Brockton shoes 18,000,000 people. Paper established 1880.

Brockton Daily Enterprise

Printing 22,000 Daily

Flat Commercial Rates
6½ cts. per Line 91 cts. per Inch Afternoon Paper, Sells for 2 cents
Averages nearly 2 pages of want advertisements

THIS IS THE SCOTT
DOUBLE-SEXTUPLE
"MULTI-UNIT" PRESS

The NEWARK NEWS
NEWARK, NEW JERSEY
Eugene W. Farrell, Manager have operated this Double Sextuple Multi-Unit Press for many years and a visit to their plant which is only thirty minutes from Broadway will enable you to inspect the finest newspaper press ever built.

We Are Here To Serve You.

Patented & Manufactured By
WALTER SCOTT & COMPANY
PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, U. S. A.
CHICAGO
1441 Monadnock Block
NEW YORK
1457 Broadway, at 42d Stree

MEANS JUST WHAT IT SAYS

"OHIO FIRST"

First as a market for the goods that are First in their class.

National advertisers who have tested the State of Ohio by tryout campaigns have determined that results have been quick and sure.

Therefore, the fundament of this slogan "OHIO FIRST" is substantial.

Here annual crop and live stock values exceed $904,000,000

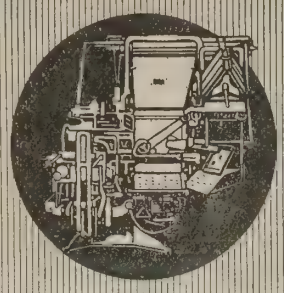
and annual manufactures

$5,100,000,000



In other words for about the minimum cost you can reach a most opulent territory with strong newspaper advertising. Ohio people are great readers of home papers, which influence them in their purchases. This list of Ohio daily newspapers hits home. They go home with home news to home people—people who have homes to maintain.

Start in this selected list:

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Akron Beacon Journal.....(E)	35,785	.10	.10
Akron Times .....(E)	21,416	.06	.06
Akron Sunday Times.....(S)	21,439	.07	.07
†Bellefontaine Examiner .....(E)	4,536	.0179	.0179
†Cincinnati Enquirer .....(M&S)	72,270	.17-.35	.17-.35
†Columbus Dispatch .....(E)	75,116	.15	.14
Columbus Dispatch .....(S)	74,654	.15	.14
Columbus, Ohio, State Journal...(M)	50,124	.12	.12
Columbus, Ohio, State Journal...(S)	29,206	.12	.12
†Conneaut News Herald.....(E)	3,103	.0179	.0179
†Dover Daily Reporter .....(E)	4,537	.02	.02
†Ironton Irontonian .....(M)	3,170	.0179	.0179
†Kenton Democrat .....(E)	2,400	.014	.014

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
*Lima News and Times-Democ't (E&S)	16,083	.07	.05
*Lima Republican-Gazette .....(M&S)	10,270	.035	.035
†Middletown Journal .....(E)	5,117	.025	.025
†Newark American-Tribune .....(E)	6,890	.025	.025
†Portsmouth Sun and Times....(M&E)	16,481	.06	.06
†Portsmouth Sun-Times.....(S)	11,140	.04	.04
†Steubenville Gazette .....(E)	4,952	.025	.025
Toledo Blade .....(E)	100,317	.27	.25
†Toronto Tribune .....(E)	1,096	.011	.011
Youngstown Vindicator .....(E)	24,787	.07	.07
Youngstown Vindicator .....(S)	24,351	.07	.07

Government Statement, April 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Publisher's Statement, October 1, 1922.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1922.

INTERTYPE
"THE BETTER MACHINE"

See Our Page
Next Week

INTERTYPE CORPORATION
805 Terminal Bldg., Brooklyn, N. Y.
548 Rand-McNally Bldg., Chicago
301 Glasiyn Bldg., Memphis
560-A Howard St., San Francisco
Canadian Agents:
Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.

THE KNICKERBOCKER PRESS
(Morning and Sunday)
and
ALBANY EVENING NEWS
COVERS
ONE BIG MARKET
Albany, Troy, Schenectady
AND
The Capitol District

NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVE
John M. Branham Co.

An Accounting and Federal Tax Service for Publishers

References on Application

CLIFFORD YEWDALL
33 West 42nd Street
New York City

THE DIRECT ROUTE Between PUBLISHERS
and BETTER EMPLOYEES
is the
EDITOR & PUBLISHER
CLASSIFIED PAGE

TREATING CARRIERS TO STATE FAIR TRIPS POPULAR IN THE WEST

Boys Who Get and Hold New Subscribers Rewarded by Four Days of Sport and a Visit to the Big Town—Service to Readers Attending Fairs Also Proved Good

By SIDNEY D. LONG

Manager of Business and Circulation, Wichita (Kan.) Daily Eagle

CIRCULATION practice, we might say, goes in circles. These circles are small at times and repeat often, while others are large and almost cover a generation or two.

SIDNEY D. LONG

A few years ago it was quite the fashion for newspapers to have tent headquarters at the county and state fairs. As the race horses, their legs all wrapped and many-colored blankets covering their bodies, were led in strings into the fair grounds, and farm exhibits were being hauled in and placed, and the lemonade stands were being pounded into shape, the ambitious office folks of the newspaper were driving stakes and putting up a tent bedecked with flags and a big sign reading "Headquarters of the Journal," etc. Tables were arranged in the tent and chairs and ink and pens and pencils, and here was where the reporters of this paper and out-of-town newspaper friends wrote-up the races and the exhibits, farm products, etc. Sometimes the more ambitious newspaper folks were putting up a large tent and inviting their readers to make the newspaper's tent their resting and meeting place while at the fair.

These tent headquarters were prevalent not only at fairs, but at old soldiers' reunions. In and around these headquarters were the old-time subscription solicitors. Special offers were presented with much force at this time. Premium offers were vigorously urged upon the farmers as they stood around the side shows and the exhibit tents.

Gradually the old-fashioned fair went into the horse-driving parks and later into the auto speedway. With the partial fading away of the fair went the newspaper headquarters on the "grounds."

Still many states maintain their fairs, while many counties are maintaining their county exhibitions and races. The farmer and his city cousins still love to gather together once a year at the old fair grounds.

I was especially attracted to this subject by the exceptional use made by some circulation managers of the fair in getting their city carrier boys and out-of-town carriers and agents to increase their orders, and giving them a trip to the fair.

W. A. Cordingly, circulation manager of the Des Moines Register-Tribune, cashes in with subscriptions and new orders by using the inherent desire of the boy to do just what his parents and grandparents used to do—"go to the fair."

"The plan works fine," says Mr. Cordingly. "It is one of those circulation trip plans that brings the increased orders right along with the fact that the carrier boy receives the trip from the newspaper."

This is one of the big circulation stunts of the year. It is looked forward to each year by the Register-Tribune boys. When the first announcement of the state fair camp comes in the early summer, every carrier boy gets on his toes to get the required number of subs to make the trip.

A sufficient number of large tents are put up in the State Fair grounds to accommodate the boys. A trained cook supplies the boys with the best of food. Good, substantial cots with mattresses, pillows and warm blankets are provided.

In order to enjoy this treat for two days, the carrier gets 25 new subscribers and raises his order 25, holding them 5 weeks. This entitles him to the round trip and two days and nights at the camp. The city carrier stays four days and carry their routes morning and evening. This year 250 out-of-town carrier boys and 75 city carriers were entertained at the camp.

One group comes for two days and as it returns home, another set fills the tents and so on until all are cared for. The boys are met at the depots by the circulation folks and accompanied to the camp and escorted to the trains as they leave.

The boys are kept together by assistants and are taken to all of the exhibits and carnivals as well as the big capitol building and the newspaper plant.

The literature sent to the boys is interesting. It portrays in pictures and descriptions the great tents and the colored cook and the many things they will enjoy. They are told just how they can get the subscriptions.

Mr. Cordingly has met with great success in his special offers to carrier boys for increases. One of the successful stunts he pulled off around July 4 was offering a lot of fireworks for six new subscriptions and an increase of six in their order.

Last year the Omaha News took its city carriers and out-of-town boys to the state fair at Lincoln and increased routes materially by the plan.

Many newspapers carrying on special or annual subscription bargain periods use the fair crowds in putting over the opening or closing of the bargain period. Special two month or six week offers opening the period are launched leading up to the regular bargain offer.

The Indianapolis News is carrying on a unique plan in entertaining readers at the fair. J. M. Schmid, circulation manager of the News, says:

"We always have a large tent so that people may stop and rest and listen to the Indianapolis News Newsboys' Band. We play the first five days of the week to unusually large crowds. People can bring their lunches and eat in our tent and we furnish barrels of ice water. Good drinking water is hard to get at places of that kind and they like to take advantage of our hospitality. It is a good advertisement and creates good will. Sometimes we give away some small advertising article on Children's Day."

The Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times gave their out-of-town and city agents and carriers a round-trip to the state fair at Oklahoma City recently.

RADIO SPEED UP TO WIRES

New Automatic Device Sends 100 Words a Minute

Vastly increased usefulness for radio for commercial purposes was seen by radio experts during the past week in the report that through the use of automatic sending and receiving machinery a message had been sent from a ship at sea at a rate of from 80 to 100 words a minute. This rate is about four times as fast as the ordinary operator can send or receive, and twice as fast as the most expert.

Heretofore radio, because of its slowness, has not been able to compete successfully with messages sent over wires, but it was believed that the new invention with its advantages of allowing more messages to be sent in a given time and of preventing listening in, because the speed is so great that the message can be taken only by an automatic machine, will greatly increase the value of wireless communication and make it a serious competitor of the telegraph.

The first message at this speed was sent November 13, by E. J. Nally, president of the Radio Corporation of America, from the Majestic, upon which he is returning from Europe. It was received by the company's station at Chatham, Mass.

WFAA, the radio broadcasting station of the Dallas (Tex.) News and Dallas Journal is now operating its new 500-watt transmitting set, and is receiving telegrams and letters daily from points all over the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Central America expressing appreciation for the music and other programs broadcast by the station.

The Wichita (Kan.) Beacon has just organized its wireless station, WBAW, and is again broadcasting news and weather reports.

NEWS SERVICE NOTES

J. A. DARROCK, formerly of the New York office of the United Press Associations, in the course of the reorganization of the Michigan service has been made Michigan manager, and Gilbert Overton, of the Chicago bureau staff, has been transferred to Lansing, Michigan bureau manager.

J. T. Miller, South American manager of the United Press Associations, will sail for Buenos Aires December 7. He returns after a leave, during which he visited the European bureaus of the service and spent some time in the United States. While in Washington he had a conference with President Harding on South American affairs.

Dr. Edward J. Bing, Central European correspondent for the United Press Associations, arrived in New York December 25, coming almost directly from Constantinople, where he covered the most recent shift in political affairs.

Oscar A. Schlaijker, formerly a Associated Press operator at Omaha, has been awarded the first freshman scholarship at Harvard.

The Associated Press has opened an office in the Salt Lake City Telegraph Building. George A. Seipel is the manager.

The Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer, afternoon newspaper, has taken the Saturday night service of the Associated Press for a Sunday morning edition.

WITH THE SPECIALS

THE George B. David Company, special New York newspaper representatives has added the Nyack (N. Y.) Journal, in both the Eastern and Western fields, to its list.

Harry A. Patterson, for two years special representative in Chicago for the Clover Leaf Weeklies, is now Minneapolis representative for the papers.

The Wilmington (Ohio) News Journal has withdrawn from the Ohio Farm List, and will hereafter be represented by A. E. Clayden, New York, and Jo Hunter, Chicago.

$50,000 Fire in News Building

The upper stories of the Springfield (Mass.) News building were damaged to the extent of about $50,000 by fire November 16. The News lost a considerable amount of newsprint and the Springfield Engraving Company, located upon the fourth floor had nearly all its equipment destroyed.

Beacon to Install Oil Burners

The Wichita (Kan.) Eagle has made plans for installing oil burners to equip its power plant with a new horsepower engine for running the newspaper presses.

The Per Capita Income of

NEW ENGLAND

exceeds that of the country as a whole.

The per capita income of the states indicates somewhat their comparative purchasing power.

In New England the per capita income is $655, while that of the country is $627.

New England has many sources of wealth. Its income mounts higher and higher. Savings swell, buying increases.

The logical probability of developing a huge business profitably through daily newspaper advertising is nowhere greater than in New England.

There are over 1,000,000 homes in New England, and you can get over 2,000,000 daily circulation in the newspapers to carry your message where population is thickest and results are quickest.

MASSACHUSETTS—Population, 3,852,356

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Attleboro Sun .....(E)	4,805	.0275	.0175
†Boston Sunday Advertiser(S)	424,104	.55	.55
†Boston Globe .....(M&E)	274,607	.45	.45
†Boston Globe .....(S)	321,871	.55	.55
Boston Telegram .....(E)	145,113	.20	.20
†Boston Transcript .....(E)	36,423	.20	.20
Fall River Herald.....(E)	13,405	.035	.035
*Fitchburg Sentinel .....(E)	10,739	.05	.035
Greenfield Recorder .....(E)	3,025	.0175	.0175
Haverhill Gazette .....(E)	15,216	.055	.04
Lynn Item .....(E)	16,132	.06	.04
*Lynn Telegram News.(E&S)	16,886	.05	.05
†Lowell Courier-Citizen and Evening Leader(M&E)	20,635	.06	.06
New Bedford Standard-Mercury .....(M&E)	31,489	.08	.08
New Bedford Sunday Standard (S)	25,006	.08	.08
†North Adams Transcript.(E)	9,334	.0375	.03
Salem News .....(E)	20,879	.09	.07
Taunton Gazette .....(E)	8,268	.04	.03
†Worcester Telegram-Gazette (M&E)	72,733	.24	.21
*Worcester Sunday Telegram (S)	42,741	.18	.15

MAINE—Population, 768,014

†Bangor Daily Commercial(E)	14,703	.05	.04
†Portland Press Herald(M&S)	22,208	.07	.06
Portland Express .....(E)	26,294	.10	.07
Portland Telegram .....(S)	28,658	.10	.07

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Population, 443,683

†Keene Sentinel .....(E)	3,316	.03	.02

RHODE ISLAND—Population 604,397

	Circulation	2,500 lines	10,000 lines
Newport Daily News....(E)	6,171	.035	.03
Pawtucket Times .....(E)	24,401	.07	.06
Providence Bulletin .....(E)	58,738	.135	.135
†Providence Journal ....(M)	32,837	.08	.08
Providence Journal .....(S)	54,568	.12	.12
Providence Tribune .....(E)	21,364	.10	.09
Westerley Sun .....(E&S)	4,561	.025	.025
†Woonsocket Call .....(E)	12,959	.04	.04

VERMONT—Population, 352,428

*Barre Times .....(E)	6,532	.03	.02
Bennington Banner .....(E)	3,021	.0125	.0125
†Brattleboro Daily Reformer. (E)	3,021	.025	.015
Burlington Daily News...(E)	7,183	.04	.04
Burlington Free Press..(M)	11,441	.05	.05
Rutland Herald .....(M)	9,437	.04	.04
†St. Johnsbury Caledonian-Record .....(E)	3,366	.0214	.015

CONNECTICUT—Population, 1,380,631

*Bridgeport Post-Telegram (E&M)	43,033	.145	.14
*Bridgeport Post .....(S)	18,395	.085	.08
*Hartford Courant ... .(D)	29,780	.08	.07
*Hartford Courant .....(S)	48,600	.10	.09
Hartford Times .....(E)	43,672	.12	.12
Meriden Record .....(M)	6,699	.045	.025
†Middletown Press .....(E)	7,561	.03	.025
†New Haven Register..(E&S)	34,427	.10	.09
New London Day.....(E)	10,687	.06	.045
†Norwich Bulletin .....(M)	11,663	.07	.05
Norwalk Hour .....(E)	4,953	.03	.03
*Stamford Advocate .....(E)	8,351	.0375	.03

Government Statement, April 1 1922.
*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Statement, October 1, 1922.
†Government Statement, October 1, 1922.

Indiana Is Among the Formost States of the Country, in Crops and Stock Raising

Indiana's first great wealth came from its farms and agriculture still plays an important part in its trade life.

Indiana's agricultural value is great, very great. Its crop value exceeds $497,000,000 and her live stock value is $261,264,188

Land values in Indiana range from ten or fifteen dollars per acre to a hundred and twenty-five or more.

This vast state is becoming more and more productive and more valuable. The density of population is increasing from year to year.

Indiana's buying power is growing rapidly. Intensified cultivation of this market will pay you handsomely. Your efforts should be concentrated in these daily newspapers.

		Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
†Decatur Democrat	(E)	3,165	.025
Evansville Courier	(M)	24,668	.06
Evansville Courier	(S)	22,571	.06
†Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(M)	23,490	.07
†Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette	(S)	26,080	.07
†Fort Wayne News-Sentinel	(E)	32,492	.08
†Gary Evening Post and Tribune	(E)	9,125	.05
*Indianapolis News	(E)	115,634	.20
†LaPorte Herald	(E)	3,768	.025
South Bend News-Times	(M) 9,702 (E) 10,669	20,371	.06
South Bend News-Times	(S)	18,464	.06
South Bend Tribune	(E&S)	16,027	.055
Terre Haute Tribune	(E&S)	22,818	.06
Vincennes Commercial	(M&S)	5,453	.03

Government Statements, April 1, 1922.
†Government Statements, October 1, 1922.
*A. B. C. Publishers' Statement, April 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Publishers' Statements, October 1, 1922.
A. B. C. Publishers' Statements, 3 mos. ending Sept. 30.

ST. PAUL CLUB IS AN AD AGENCY FOR CITY

Campaign to Advertise Minnesota City Provides Specially Organized Agency —A. J. McFaul Director—All Departments Organized

The Town Crier's Club, advertising club of St. Paul, Minn., has opened its season with renewed interest among its members and the community at large, by organizing itself into a dummy advertising agency, with a single client, the City of St. Paul. A comprehensive campaign of advertising for the city is to be planned and written, and later sold to the business men of the city. This is believed to be a unique program, combining as it does an opportunity for studying all the various phases of advertising and at the same time accomplishing something of real worth to the community. The plan was originated by President Baldwin.

DOUGLAS S. BALDWIN

Primarily the agency was founded to provide a correlated scheme of study for the club year, with a subject of interest to wholesaler and retailer, buyer and seller of advertising. But it is also hoped by the club officers that a product of real worth to the city may be evolved; a hope which should be realized, since practically all the representative advertising men of the city are included in the club membership.

The director of the agency, the plan of which was organized by President Baldwin of the club, is A. J. McFaul, business manager and advertising director of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press. He has appointed expert advertising men to head Contact, Merchandising and Survey, Art and Copy, Manufacturing and Producing, Audit and Finance Departments, and the entire club membership has been divided up into the various departments, each member being given some specific duty.

Noon meetings are given over to conferences of the various departments, while the evening meetings are "conferences" of the entire agency, at which department heads make their reports and recommendations, and are subjected to a rapid fire of questioning and discussion. The work of the early season is falling upon the Merchandising and Survey department, in planning the market to be reached and the means to be used, and in assembling data for the copy department to use.

Later the actual copy will be written, art work prepared and dummies laid out for the printer and engraver. The Finance and Audit department will prepare estimates of the probable cost of each part of the campaign.

Detail work is being done in the committee sessions, so that the evening sessions are rapid fire affairs at which the weaknesses of carefully drawn plans may be remedied and helpful suggestions received from the membership of the entire club.

The field to be reached has been divided into five parts: The citizens of St. Paul, to be acquainted with features of their city concerning which they are not familiar, or which they take for granted, without realizing their true value; merchants and individuals in the St. Paul trade territory, to be acquainted with St. Paul's advantages as a trading center; manufacturers and merchants who might establish in the city; individuals who might make St. Paul their home; and tourists and convention visitors, to be impressed with the attractions of the city so that they can spread them by word of mouth.

In reaching after merchants and manufacturers, not only will what St. P has, be listed, but what it has not t is, industries which are not properly r resented in the city and which c profitably operated there.

When the campaign of advertis completed, leading business men city will be invited to a general m at which the scheme will be presen its entirety, and the contact depar will be given an opportunity to "sel campaign to the men from who financing must come.

The scheme for combining an in ing year of study with a project o value to the community was evolv the new officers and governing bo the Town Criers' Club. Officers club are: President, Douglas K. win, assistant secretary of the Min State Fair; vice-president, J. H. advertising manager of the Golden Department Store; secretary Hal forth, of Gordon & Ferguson; and urer, E. O. Norquist, advertising ger of the American National Ban

NEWS THE THING, SAYS PI

Head of I. N. S. Speaks to Leag Ad Women

"News is what the rank and Americans thirst for—information which they may intelligently act, an is the function of the copy writer, w his product be commercial or edit said Marlen E. Pew, editor and ma of the International News Service, ing at the dinner of the New York I of Advertising Women, held Nov 21 at the Advertising Club. In the of his speech Mr. Pew stated that are two curses in the writing pro which he defined as the "bright ide "fine writing."

"The bright idea gentleman I ob because he proposes to substitut genuine common sense trick w usually a cheap expedient which f the ego of the writer, but breaks th fidence of the reader and reacts a the object sought by the advertisem news item. The advertising gra bears more tombstones with epita bright idea gentlemen than perha other source of advertising casualt

"So-called fine writing is objecti for many reasons. It presuppose general learning. The mean intel development in this country is tha 13-year-old child and advertising o written in stilted English, pompou high-sounding, Latinized and gar with subtleties is not only futile bad taste.

"The best news form is a plain ment of fact told in wholesome, clean, direct and spirited English. writing calls for clear thinking. tising failures are often caused b of knowledge on the part of the concerning the subject of his writin advertising writer should know a facts concerning the subject discuss he cannot intelligently inform his ers. You must draw a clear pict your thoughts in words. Write b Remember that our 82 million l Americans, of 10 years of age or are busy people rushing on. They want to be annoyed by any super words either in advertising or news. want you to deliver the fact into minds as quickly as possible. Tha for simplicity and brevity."

The other speakers at the dinner Edwin Bird Wilson, president of Bird Wilson, Inc., Miss Estelle Pa and Thomson Willing, president American Institute of Graphic Arts

Asks for $3,045 Judgment

Notion of motion for judgmen been filed in the United States d court at Richmond, Va., by the Bre Publications, Inc., New York, a Keeve C. Steiner, former Buffalo dealer, for the sum of $3,045. amount is alleged to be due for zines furnished the defendant. Steiner is now a resident of Virgi

IEWS OF ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

PUBLISHING

RESIDENT HARDING has been elected a member of the American iety of Newspaper Editors and has fied Casper S. Yost,, president of the ety, of his acceptance.

he Boston Post Editorial Association ed the following officers at its annual ting November 16: President, Her- L. Baldwin; vice-president, Roy At- on; secretary-treasurer, Miss Ruth Bodwell.

he New York Newspaper Women's had the first dinner of the season he Hotel Vanderbilt, November 26. rude Atherton, Mrs. Price Post and e Duer Miller were the guests of r.

he Virginia Press Association will its midwinter meeting at Lynchburg, ary 22 and 23. Emphasis will be to the subject of circulation at this ing.

he Texas Daily Press League Ad- sing Bureau was organized at as, November 22, by publishers and sentatives of small Texas daily papers. The bureau has ten dailies arter members.

e press representatives of the vari- heatrical organizations in New York at Keens' chop house, December 1 formed a permanent organization. s Hawk, formerly on the New World and now with Sam H. is offices, has been elected chairman permanent officers are selected.

e Milwaukee Press Club, by special f Congress, has been presented with 00-pound bronze bell from the U. S. er Milwaukee, wrecked off Eureka, January 13, 1917. A special atory ceremony will be held by the December 13.

National Miller, Chicago, has been d to membership in the Associated ess Papers, Inc.

Toro, publication of the Seattle Club, is out. Kenneth Gilbert is dor or managing editor. Rox lds is Matador, and Thomas Thurl- tuart Morris and Paul Fung are ors.

Long Island Press Association, ing its next meeting at the State te of Agriculture at Farmingdale ecember 11, will inspect the new of the Farmingdale Post. This has installed in its new building t press, Intertype machines and job g equipment.

Oregon Agricultural College chap- gma Delta Chi, journalism frater- ecently initiated Donald Sterling, ing editor, the Portland (Ore.) l; Ralph Cronise, editor, the Al- Ore.) Democrat; Hal Hoss, editor anager, the Oregon City Enter- and W. F. G. Thacher, instructor rtising, School of Journalism, sity of Oregon. J. E. and L. R. r, president and vice-president, re- ly, of the Portland (Ore.) Eve- elegram; William Warren, assist- editor; Ben Hur Lampman, fea- iter, the Portland Oregonian, were members of the chapter.

ADVERTISING

Omaha Ad-Sell League is taking te of its members with a view to ing weekly meetings of four sec- take up selling, advertising, pub- king and direct mail work re- ly.

Ohio-Pennsylvania Industrial Ad- s' Association, with a membership to 35, was organized at a meeting the Warner Hotel, Warren, Ohio, er 2. The following officers were J. C. Bowman, advertising man- ackard Electric Company, War- sident; A. F. N. Thomas, adver- anager, Mathews Gravity Car- mpany, Ellwood City, Pa., vice- president; E. R. Barkley, advertising manager, The Borden Company, Warren, secretary, and R. S. Gildart, advertising manager, General Fire Proofing Company, Youngstown, treasurer.

The Seventh District Conference of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, including 24 advertising clubs in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas, will be held in St. Louis February 7 and 8.

The Corsicana (Tex.) Advertising Club recently elected L. T. Dernier president to fill the unexpired term of Mit Sowell, resigned.

The Advertising Golf Association has been organized by members of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, with Collins Thompson as president; Michael Levy, vice-president; Felix W. Coste, secretary, and P. W. Fahrendorf, treasurer. Starting in May, 1923, the association plans a schedule of five tournaments, each at a different club.

The Canadian Association of Advertisnig Agencies has selected George A. Martin, recently editor of the Oshawa (Ont.) Reformer, as permanent secretary. He has had ten years' editorial experience on various Canadian daily newspapers, including the Kitchener Herald, the Stratford Herald, the Buffalo Courier, the Toronto Telegram, the Toronto Globe and Oshawa Reformer.

Constitution and by-laws of the new Detroit Advertising and Sales Association were adopted at a meeting on November 13, and a final organization meeting was held November 20. Frederick Dickinson, advertising manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, is chairman of the organization.

The Norfolk (Neb.) Advertising Club was formally organized recently. The officers are president, Franklin Rosenbaum, vice-president Henry Splicer; and secretary-treasurer, Rome Benedict, of the Norfolk News.

VOTE FOR CODE OF ETHICS

California Press Associations Hold Annual Meeting in San Francisco

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER*)*

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 26.—The California Press Association at its meeting held here November 24 and 25 with 200 delegates present approved the adoption of a code of ethics for the newspapers of California and appointed a special committee of five members who will draft the code during the year and present it at the next annual convention. The meeting also voted to go on record as against any modification of the present advertising agency system. The resolution stated that the advertising agency system "as it is operating today, is to the best interest of the advertiser, the publisher, the agency, and the general public."

The convention accomplished the work laid out for it in the first day and left Saturday free. Saturday morning the delegates were taken motoring around San Mateo County. In the afternoon they attended the Stanford-California football game at Palo Alto and in the evening they were the guests of the San Francisco Press Club.

Governor-elect Friend W. Richardson presided at the meeting on Friday. During the session J. Emmett Olmstead, editor, the Petaluma Argus; discussing the Editorial Policy declared "that a newspaper, however large or small, should never go to press without at least one full column of editorial matter."

Weekly Has $50,000 Fire

The Bradford (Vt.) United Opinion, a weekly paper owned and edited by H. E. Parker, had its plant completely destroyed by fire November 18. The loss amounted to about $50,000 partly covered by insurance.

New Montreal Corporation

The Listening Post Publishing Company, Ltd., was incorporated in Montreal recently with a capital stock of $20,000.

IOWA—

There Is No Point in Iowa That Is More Than Twelve Miles From a Railroad

In Iowa it is no problem to advertise to the rural communities, all of whom have money to spend.

Distribution is provided both for daily newspapers and commodities by more than 104,000 miles of public highways and 10,493 miles of steam and electric railroads.

The whole country side is assured daily newspapers and commodities. Advertise your goods in the daily newspapers so that the readers can order by name your merchandise.

The accompanying list of Iowa daily newspapers will properly introduce your goods to the rural communities as well as to the towns and cities—the buying habits of these people are formed largely through their daily papers.

	Circulation	Rate for 5,000 lines
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(M)	10,387	.035
Burlington Hawk-Eye .....(S)	13,163	.035
†Cedar Rapids Gazette.....(E)	21,131	.06
Council Bluffs Nonpareil.....(E&S)	15,521	.05
Davenport Democrat & Leader.. ...(E)	14,361	.06
Davenport Democrat & Leader.....(S)	17,401	.06
†Davenport Times .....(E)	23,896	.07
Des Moines Capital.....(E)	60,696	.14
Des Moines Sunday Capital.....(S)	28,858	.14
*Iowa City Press-Citizen .....(E)	6,320	.035
‡Mason City Globe Gazette.....(E)	11,096	.035
Muscatine Journal .....(E)	7,863	.035
*Ottumwa Courier .....(E)	13,186	.05
Waterloo Evening Courier.....(E)	15,080	.05

*A. B. C. Statement, April 1, 1922.

A. B. C. Statement, October 1, 1922.

†Government Statement, October 1, 1922.

EDITORIAL

THE TRUTH ABOUT TURKEY

WITH this issue EDITOR & PUBLISHER in a special supplement presents the suppressed King-Crane Report on the Near East purely as a service to American editors and writers.

At this time, when every channel of information is being flooded with propaganda and fact perversion and suppression is the common practice among all those selfish interests that are struggling for supremacy in order that they may further enrich themselves at the expense of the beggared peoples of the Near East, it is the purpose of EDITOR & PUBLISHER in presenting this document to give American editors and writers the only exhaustive study ever made of the Near East by official American investigators for Americans in the interest of justice to all.

Study of this report furnishes a background against which present claims and aggressions can the better be measured for their true worth by men and women who are called upon to guide American public opinion in the making. The American people have no selfish desires in any part of the Near East. They, however, have a great humanitarian interest and that must not be warped to aid others whose motives are carefully hidden under the blanket of time.

Dr. William T. Ellis has spent much time in the Near East, and an article by him on the King-Crane Commission at work with notes that bring many phases of their report up to date, accompanies the article. We believe it will make it of greater value in the face of present events.

It is useless to delve into what-might-have-been. That is past, but if the future actions of this Government are to be based on justice to all, we must be guided from the past that had its beginning in 1919, when the hopes of victims of selfish nationalism had reached the greatest heights.

It cannot be out of place, however, for us to draw attention to the sorrow and suffering that was brought to millions of people because this document was suppressed by the same agencies of diplomacy and the same tactics that came so close to wrecking civilization in 1914.

No sounder argument has ever been made for open diplomacy than the suppressed King-Crane Report when judged in the light of present-day developments in the Near East.

Statesmen and politicians of a certain school may have forgotten or cast aside the promises under which five years of sacrifice were made on the battlefields of Europe, but the men who fought those battles have not forgotten, of which we have testimony in the resolutions adopted by the Inter Allied Veterans' Association at their recent convention in New Orleans.

As an aid in the fulfilment of promises made and in the interest of truth in dealing with propaganda and lies, EDITOR & PUBLISHER is proud of its opportunity to present to American editors and writers a suppressed official report on the Near East by Americans for Americans.

A FINISH FIGHT NEEDED

IT is to be hoped that it is not the intention of the State of Kansas to let its prosecution of William Allen White for violation of the Kansas Industrial Court Law drift into oblivion. It must be confessed that is the usual manner of dealing with cases in which the right of free speech is involved.

Free speech actions are usually taken in time of great stress against personal rights in the interest of property rights. After the seeming crisis has passed when free speech is no longer of deep concern to anybody, it is the regular policy of officials to dispose of such actions by forgetting all about them.

Interference with the rights of free speech seldom, if ever, has stood the test in the higher courts. No better example could be found than the action of the United States Supreme Court this week in granting a writ of error in the case of Benjamin Gitlow, convicted of criminal anarchy three years ago and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. This opens the way for argument on the constitutionality of criminal anarchy statutes of thirty states that directly involve the right of free speech.

It is to be hoped that Governor Allen and all other newspaper men in Kansas will join with William Allen White in demanding that his case be brought to trial immediately.

AN AMERICAN'S CREED

COMPILED BY CHARLES W. MILLER

Vicksburg (Miss.) Herald

THERE is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments—(Mat. xix:17). But what think ye? A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work today in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not: but afterward he repented, and went. And he came to the second, and said likewise, And he answered and said, I go sir; and went not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto Him, the first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you—(Mat. xxi:28-31). If I do not the works of My Father, believe Me not. But if I do, though ye believe not Me, believe the works: that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in Me, and I in Him (St. John x:37, 38).

THE A. N. A. AND THE PRESS

THE Association of National Advertisers is the latest organization in the field served by EDITOR & PUBLISHER to see the wisdom of meeting in annual convention with doors open and reporters present. Until its sessions at Atlantic City last week this body held that its annual deliberations were sacrosanct, that reporting of discussions would be fatal to accomplishment of the association's aims, since with reporters present, members could not feel free to discuss their organization's affairs with the frankness that was necessary to the transaction of business. Nevertheless the meetings were always reported and with a surprising degree of accuracy.

No restrictions were placed upon the accredited reporters of the trade press who sat in the meeting hall last week. Not only was the utmost freedom of reporting permitted, but members placed themselves at the disposal of the correspondents to clarify any point that had not been fully brought out in the talks from the floor. There was no attempt at censorship, but the reporters are certain now that they are telling their readers exactly what transpired and not a second or third-hand opinion. The association's officers need no longer be concerned whether information that was held confidential had somehow "leaked" to the press outside the door. The results of the trial have been all that EDITOR & PUBLISHER has often said they would be.

With the representatives of the country's greatest advertisers lined up for open covenants in their own affairs, there are few newspaper or advertising organizations which adhere to the whispering methods that came into vogue when the trade press was not a body to be trusted to treat important news strictly on a news basis. With one exception, the great sectional publishers' associations admit without restriction to their regular meetings the trade press representatives. The only three outstanding national organizations which now do their business behind guarded doors are the Associated Press, American Newspaper Publishers' Association and the American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Their conventions are, of course, reported fully—sometimes more fully than they would be were reporters present and able to judge all events at their true value. But the method of reporting meetings by handouts and piecemeal corridor confidences from friends among the membership does not lend itself to accuracy or satisfaction either to the reporter or the source of the news. It is an anachronism of journalism and it is especially out of place in organizations of those who live by the written word.

"DAY-TO-DAYNESS"

WHAT will the critics demand of the n papers next! They have been denounce liars, as corrupt tools of "the interests" bootlickers of their advertising patrons, as mon of inaccuracy. They have been condemned for p ing too much news, then, by the same critics, fo printing enough. And now comes Dr. Nic Murray Butler in his report to the trustee Columbia University, finding fault with the n papers because they deal with life in "day to fashion.

President Butler holds it against the press th is the enemy of constant and continuing intere any subject," and that "it elevates superficiali the plane of an occupation." They are neat ph Their general application to the newspapers least doubtful. They are evidence that Dr. B shares with many others a gross misconceptio the scope and possibilities of the daily newspap our present civilization.

The president of Columbia University may, th we doubt it, live a life in which "day-to-day plays no part, a life in which every episode's and ramifications is seen as soon as its begin Possibly he sees world and local affairs as a with no eye for the details that arise from d day and which are present, though not dist seen, when the complete picture is unfolded. may have that vision and he may apply it to a words and acts, but if he has, he is indeed a human being. Newspapers cannot be edited wit idea that they will be read only by Nicholas M Butler and his omni-competent fellows. Every type and class of readers must be considered.

There wouldn't be any newspapers, nor any for newspapers if life could be seen that way b The Columbia University Quarterly would b premier publication of the world, seeing it st and seeing it whole. But, unfortunately fo Butler's argument, life is lived day to day. doesn't know tonight what tomorrow holds fo his family or his country. We take our exi and its news as we find it and we can't do an else.

If our newspapers give us a fairly complet accurate report of what is going on from day t they are doing more than many critics withi without the editorial circle believe they are. are doing their best under present conditions, are quite different from those which existed Dr. Butler's professor advised his students to no time on books less than a century old. papers in a day's time give news of developme civilization today that surpass the entire progr the last 5,000 years. They strive at all times, th agencies on which millions of dollars have expended, to link new events and incidents with which happened yesterday or 10 years ag editors are finite and fallible and may not reach the goal they set.

But, with few exceptions, they try to present which unfolds from day to day, keyed with wh gone before and probable developments in the understandable way.

Some, it is true, have brought superficiality plane of an occupation, but they are in the m in numbers. It is surprising that Dr. Butler familiar with their deeds and so ignorant of the press that really speaks for the country is and doing. Perhaps that explains why he is to secure a constant and continuing interest serious subject of himself oftener than once i years and then only until the Republican N Convention has cast its first ballot for Presi candidates.

SAMUEL McCREA CAVERT, writing Christian Century for November 23, plac finger on the causes of failure in church adve when he points out that "such meager efforts churches have made to secure a hearing in th press have been too selfish—too centered filling their pews or advertising conventional 'se and 'activities,' too little devoted to the task terpreting to the outside public that Christianity means as a way of life in the modern world."

PERSONALS

APT. JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON, co-owner and co-edi- of the Chicago Tribune, and John T. Cutcheon, the cartoonist, are hunting ose in New Brunswick. When they sed through Montreal J. Murray Gib-, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, e a luncheon in their honor.

Dr. W. P. Baker, editor of the Syrae (N. Y.) Post Standard, who underit an operation about a month ago, fully recovered and came back to his k last week.

Gregorio Perfecto, formerly editor La cion, Manila, P. I., has been unaniusly acquitted of the charge of defammembers of the Philippine Senate by Supreme Court of the Philippines ently.

A. M. Belding, for the past 15 years tor of the St. John (N. B.) Evening nes who underwent an operation in ston recently, has recovered and is k at his desk.

H. R. Swartz, president of the Intere Corporation, last week entertained of the company's department heads dinner at the Union League Club, w York. Mr. Swartz and Mr. Goody, chief factory inspector, spoke on ir recent trip to Europe.

Rodney R. Iredell has retired as tor of the Allentown (Pa.) Chronicle News after 20 years of continuous vice. Prior to 1919 he was business nager for several years.

E. E. Lesher, editor of the Coal Age, been asked to organize the investigadivision of the Federal Coal Comsion.

IN THE EDITORIAL ROOMS

HN E. ROBINSON, one of the oldest members of the New York Times f was taken suddenly ill at his desk vember 27 and his condition is very ical. Mr. Robinson's nearest relative a sister but none of his colleagues e been able to ascertain her address. Times is anxious to inform her of brother's illness.

Ii Simons, formerly a copy reader on Chicago Evening Post, has been made editor of the Chicago Journal of nmerce.

obb Stanton, formerly of the Chicago ly News sports department, has reed to go with a Chicago electric supcompany.

arry Dailey, formerly a member of the cago Tribune sports department, has sferred to the Chicago Herald & Exner.

Mrs. Hazel MacArthur, aged 32, of Telfer MacArthur, publisher of Park (Ill.) Oak Leaves, died rely.

en Gunther of the art department of New York Sunday American, who been temporarily in charge of the department of the Syracuse (N. Y.) gram and Sunday American, has vered from two weeks' illness and med work last Monday.

Gilford West, of the Buffalo (N. Y.) mmercial, has joined the staff of the acuse (N. Y.) Evening Telegram night city editor.

Mrs. Ramona Herdman Culiney, forly of the Rochester (N. Y.) Postress, is now in charge of the society of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald.

lbert W. Cullis, assistant city editor the Boston Post, is now secretary Richard Grozier, the associated pubr.

alen L. Stone, for many years a ner in the firm of Hayden, Stone o., Boston, and at one time financial or of a Boston daily, has retired n business to devote his time to el.

iss Frances C. Boardman, former natic editor of the St. Paul Daily s, has started a concert bureau, the n City Publicity Bureau.

John Spencer Merrill, city editor of the Great Bend (Kan.) Tribune, for several years, has resigned to go to Chicago to study.

Ora Williams, an Iowa newspaperman and for several years state document editor, has been made division chief of the internal revenue service for the division of which Des Moines is headquarters.

Rhys G. Thackwell, former foreign corespondent and local man for the Chicago Tribune, has been elected vice-president of the Evanston (Ill.) Theatre.

Miss Nellie Leach, of the Melbourne (Australia) Herald and Brisbane Mail, arrived recently in San Francisco on a six-month assignment for these papers to find out what women in other lands are doing. She will travel through the United States and Europe.

H. G. Copeland, for the past three years in magazine work in Cleveland, is now managing editor of the Marion (Ind.) Chronicle.

Walter T. Brown, for the past two years news editor of the Denison (Tex.) Daily Herald, has joined the editorial staff of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle.

A. De Bernardi, Jr., has been appointed city editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle, succeeding L. F. Kimmel, resigned.

Maurice F. Benfer, city editor of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon has been appointed secretary to Governor Henry J. Allen. J. D. Dickerson is acting city editor.

O. D. Burge has joined the reportorial staff of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle.

Jim Cummins is a new member of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle's reportorial staff.

Harry Van Ness has returned to the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle staff, after several years in the oil promotion business.

Kirk Smith, formerly on the New York Sun, has started the Ocean Beach (Cal.) Beach News, a four-page weekly.

Edward J. McSoley, formerly a reporter on the Providence Journal and Providence News, is now press agent for the E. F. Albee amusement interests in Rhode Island.

Miss Jehanne Bietry, managing editor, the Bulletin Finances et Economique of Indo-China, arrived in San Francisco recently and will deliver three lectures on Indo-China.

THE BUSINESS OFFICE

CHARLES W. PHELAN, formerly of the Boston Herald and Traveler, is now manager of the exploitation department of the Boston Telegram.

W. S. Block, formerly advertising manager of the Cuvellier publications, Minneapolis, is now the advertising manager of the Minneapolis Daily News.

Malcolm McLeod, formerly with the Aberdeen (S. D.) is now on the advertising staff of the Minneapolis News.

Julian Zack has been transferred from the advertising staff of the St. Paul Daily News to the same department of the Minneapolis Daily News.

Donald Potter has been transferred from the auditing department of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon to the displaying advertising staff.

H. D. Armstrong, who has been handling automobile advertising, as well as the food page for the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch for the last six years, will join the advertising staff of the Richmond News-Leader about January 1.

Miss Louise M. Whitehouse, for the past five years assistant to Arnold Sanchez, former credit manager and now office manager of the paper, has been made head of the credit, collections and adjusting departments.

Harry Hollenbeck, formerly with the Hugh McVey Advertising Agency, is now on the display advertising staff of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon.

J. A. Chenowith, at one time of the Southwestern Farmer advertising staff, is now on the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle advertising staff.

FOLKS WORTH KNOWING

W. L. GOLDEN, the newly elected president of the Texas Circulation Managers' Association, has been engaged in the newspaper business for 15 years, starting as a carrier on the Galveston Tribune. He is now circulation manager of that paper. Mr. Golden has been an active member in the Texas Circulation Managers' Association for a good many years and due to the fact that the regularly elected president of the Association retired from newspaper business, it was the duty of the directors to appoint someone to act in his place. Mr. Golden was appointed and filled the place so admirably, that he was elected president of the Association at the last meeting.

W. L. Golden

Miss Ethel Yetter is now of the display staff of the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle.

G. G. Klose of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon advertising department resigned December 1 and left for Shreveport, La.

C. E. Whitney of the circulation department of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon was operated on last week.

George M. Cootes, for the past year merchandise service and classified manager of the Kingston (Ont.) British Whig, will leave the paper shortly to go to the advertising staff of the Windsor (Ont.) Border Cities Star.

Lynn M. Reed, office boy on the Portland Oregonian, has received an appointment to the United States Military Academy from Representative C. N. McArthur.

James H. Terry, formerly an accountant with the Union Oil Company, New York, is now chief accountant on the Milwaukee (Wis.) News and Sunday Telegram.

MARRIED

ART STEELE, publisher of the Clatskanie (Ore.) Chief, and Miss Malvina Lewis were married November 11.

Louis F. Barry, police local man on the Providence Tribune, and Miss Mary V. Murphy were married November 16.

Paul R. Freyer, assistant sports editor on the New York Evening World, and Miss Mabel I. Seymour were married November 26.

James J. Murphy of the sports staff of the Brooklyn Eagle and Miss Mary A. Kenney were married November 30.

Ernest Mehl, sports-writer for the Kansas City Star, and Miss Nancy Cary were married recently.

Miss Olive C. Raymond, of the business office of the San Diego (Cal.) Union, and Ben B. Weimer, attached to the U. S. S. Arizona, were married November 7.

Howard Tucker, formerly an Oklahoma City newspaper man, and Miss Mell N. Smallwood were married November 11, Ivan L. Gaddis, sports editor of the Omaha (Neb.) Daily News, and Miss Etta Jane Bukacek were married November 18.

Miss Florence Whittier, graduate of the School of Journalism, the University of Missouri, and city editor of the Mexico Intelligencer, and William Tisdell, a senior in the journalism school, were married November 20.

Frederick S. Reynolds, a member of the advertising staff of the Lynn (Mass.) Telegram-News, and Miss Pauline M. Vachon were married November 26.

Miss Eva Gold, of the business office staff of the New York Times, and Harry L. Blaustein, of Brooklyn, were married November 28.

Leo A. Marsh, drama editor of the New York Morning Telegraph, and Miss Helen S. Rockwell, a writer, were married November 28.

WITH THE AD AGENCIES

JENKINS, FARSON & WALBERG, INC., is the present name of the Chicago advertising agency formerly known as Jenkins, Black & Killian.

McGinnes, Love & Normett have opened an advertising agency in Evansville, Ind., and will specialize in national newspaper advertising.

Henry Kiefer has resigned as art director of Donovan-Armstrong, Philadelphia advertising agency, and sailed during the past week for Paris where he plans to stay for an indefinite time.

Harvey G. Smith, formerly with Dale & Marx, has joined the art staff of James F. Newcomb & Co., New York.

VISITORS TO NEW YORK

L. C. PROBERT, Washington Bureau, the Associated Press.

R. W. Simpson, Washington Bureau, the Associated Press.

A. R. Malton, Toronto Globe.

The following papers have renewed their contracts for the Haskin Service:

The Binghamton Morning Sun.
The Johnstown Ledger.
The Steubenville Herald-Star.
The Uniontown Herald and Genius.
The Zanesville Times Recorder.

REPORTER FOR MEDICINE NEEDED, BUT SCIENCE FIELD IS MUCH WIDER

Discoveries in Lines Apparently Remote from Physician's Work May Change Medical Practice and Methods of Human Existence if Rightly Made Known

By WATSON DAVIS

News Editor Science Service, Washington

EVERY newspaper of any size has its sporting editor, its dramatic critic, its financial editor, its police reporter, its court reporter and its editorial writer. Usually it also has in its staff men trained in politics and economics, and occasionally other specialists in news and criticism are on the payroll.

But expert handling of science is too often left to a scientifically untrained reporter or a feature writer who plays the latest vagary of organized knowledge for what it is worth, and often more.

I suggest that the question, "Why not a critic on medicine?," asked by Palmer Smith in the Oct. 7 issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, be changed to "Why not an intelligent and careful handling of all science news by scientifically trained reporters who can write ordinary English?"

Health is a vitally important subject and the science of medicine is accomplishing advances month by month. As Mr. Smith says in his article, medical news is probably the most difficult sort to handle. This is so because it is science that must be dispensed directly and practically to the public, and there are so many advocates of "pseudo-medicine" who abuse the bodies and the pocketbooks of the public to their own advantage.

But proper reporting of advances that affect the public is broader than medicine alone. A chemical advance today may result in a new medical treatment tomorrow; a bacteriological discovery may mean the saving of acres of crops, as well as thousands of human lives. A sanitary engineer draining a ditch may stifle more malaria than a ton of quinine. There is evidence that the stars affect our climate, and we all know that the weather influences our mental and physical health.

And science that does not get translated directly into medical and public health measures is vitally necessary to our present-day civilization. Is it not important that we study the way in which the leaf turns the light of the sun into usable energy? Years of scientific research will pay for themselves many times if they only suggest a means to lessen the work of some important industrial step.

The progress of science in all its phases is news and it will be recognized as such if it is reported intelligently. Successful science reporting must combine the scientific and the journalistic points of view. The science reporter must know science, not as an expert, but as the head of a great corporation knows his business. He must know enough science to be able to judge the importance and plausibility of a story; he must know where he can obtain expert information and advice. The science reporter must be well equipped literarily since interpretation and explaining of science is a difficult task that requires all the art of writing and expression. The man to handle science must be a new breed, a cross between researcher and reporter.

The trained newspaper man seldom has the proper background or appreciation of science to handle science news; the scientific specialist, in addition to being too engrossed in his own technical work and often too poorly equipped in a broad outlook, usually lacks the ability of writing clear and simple English.

Two factors have hampered the intelligent reporting of science in the past. The newspapers have been too susceptible to fake science and have not provided trained men to get the real news and properly report it. Scientists, motivated in part by ill-handling of their work by the newspapers, have been reluctant to co-operate in the popular presentation of their work. Both of these obstacles still exist, but in many cases on both scientific and journalistic sides they are being gradually cleared away.

Certainly there should be experts of the science page who will tell us about the fly swat of Howard, the light of Michelson, the life of Loeb, and the vibrations of Langmuir. Science is just as important as amusement and art and quite as interesting if equally well written. We should have critics as well as writers of science.

Science is not so narrowly national as sports, music, drama, or even finance. It is international. The new extract for the cure of diabetes developed in Toronto makes nearly as good a story in London as in Buffalo. Science can often be handled by a national service better than by the local desk.

Within the last two years a press association operating exclusively in the field of science has been established in response to the need that Mr. Smith expressed in his article. Science Service, with headquarters in Washington, is covering the field of science in its daily science news bulletin for forty daily newspapers in this country and Canada. Operating on a commercial basis, but as a non-profitmaking corporation with the co-operation of the three most important scientific bodies in this country, Science Service aims to report day by day science news accurately and interestingly. This organization may be a reliable news source for the newspaper that cannot afford a special science editor or it will supplement science news gathered locally.

The need of competent reporters and interpreters of science news is a serious one. The ordinary process of journalistic evolution and the usual training centers of science will produce them only exceptionally. This is a problem that is worthy of joint consideration by schools of journalism, science, medicine and engineering.

Death of John G. Holme

John G. Holme, former city editor of the New York Evening Post and connected at various times with the Chicago Inter Ocean, the New York Tribune and newspapers in Minnesota and Wisconsin, died November 30 at Flushing, N. Y. He founded the Swedish-American News Bureau and at the time of his death was assistant manager of the Better Business League. Mr. Holme was 43 years old.

Murdock Heads "F. T. C."

Victor Murdock, one of the owners of the Wichita (Kan.) Daily Eagle, became chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, December 1, succeeding N. B. Gaskill of New Jersey. Mr. Murdock has been vice-chairman for the past year.

Kennebec Journal Sold

Charles F. Flynt, general manager of the Augusta (Me.) Kennebec Journal, and his three sons announced on November 29 that they had purchased the controlling stock of the paper.

I. T. U. Enters Politics

Repeal of the anti-strike and guaranteed earnings features of the Esch-Cummings act will be urged as a progressive aim by the International Typographical Union of North America at the conference in Washington today, called by Senator La Follette and Representative Dickinson. Participation in a political movement marks a departure from a long standing policy of the Typographical Union. Class privileges will not be sought by the Typographical Union, according to its officers, the sole aim being to protect the natural rights of organized labor. "Records of candidates and parties will be submitted to members of the union, but no attempt will be made to deliver the union's votes. The allied printing trades have in the past avoided participating in politics scrupulously, but it is felt that the time has arrived when protective steps must be taken," said Vice-president C. P. Howard on November 30.

CARGILL HEADS SENTINEL

Retirement of John Poppendieck Brings Reorganization in Milwaukee

(By Telegraph to EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 30.—The following reorganization of the Milwaukee Sentinel has been announced by Charles F. Pfister, owner and publisher. John Poppendieck retires as managing editor and business manager; A. B. Cargill, advertising manager, becomes general manager; Julius Liebman is promoted from assistant managing editor to managing editor; George F. Lounsbury, editor, William M. Mahoney, circulation manager and George M. May, controller, are retained.

There is no change in ownership or policy, the Sentinel remaining conservatively Republican. Mr. Poppendieck has no plans for the future.

Teachers to Meet December 28-3

The American Association of Teach of Journalism will hold its annual c vention at the Joseph Medill School Journalism, Northwestern Univers Evanston, Ill., December 28, 29 and 30

M. J. Lawrence Dead

M. J. Lawrence, former owner of Ohio Farmer, the Michigan Farmer the Pennsylvania Farmer, which he a year ago to Senator Arthur Capper Kansas, died at Washington, D. C., vember 30.

PRINTED COLOR COMI

—Full of Color Life and Color Harmony.
—Perfect in Registry.
—We Print Better Colored Comic Sections for Publishers Everywhere.

Write for Details.

EMERGENCY MA

Feature Pages That Save Time and Money.

7 or 8 COLUMNS 20" or 21"

ILLUSTRATED.

Write for Proofs —Today.

WORLD COLOR PTG. CO.
Est. 1900 St. Louis
R. S. Grable, Pres.

What of YOUR Church Copy?

Are the church advertisements in your paper following the lines which commerce discarded forty years ago?

Do they use as a headline to attract attention the name of the church?

Help the churches to a better style of copy. Your interest will bring dividends in larger space the churches eventually will take when they see that their biggest thing after all is NOT the topic of the morning sermon.

As your contribution to their education and to the development of church-going habits by the community run the 52 ads which the Church Advertising Department is offering.

This series is available at a very small price and will help all churches, regardless of creed.

Send for proofs. If you can't find a way to use them now, keep them and look at No. 15 about ten days before Christmas. Perhaps you can get a group of merchants to join in using that piece of copy for the good of the town.

Obtain proofs from Herbert H. Smith
518 Witherspoon Bldg., Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT
A. A. C. W.

Editor and Publisher contributes this space. The Presbyterian Church contributes time to prepare this copy. We use money paid for the copy to buy stamps to send proofs to other papers. Join the cooperators!

1,384,464
More Lines

FROM January 1 to October 31, 1922, The Passaic Daily News has printed 1,384,464 more lines of paid advertising than the other Passaic paper.

THE Daily News leads its competitor in classified, foreign and local advertising lineage.

Largest Quantity, and Best Quality Circulation Besides.

DAILY NEWS
Passaic, New Jersey

THESE FEATURES
DRAW READERS
Signed news articles by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

THE CHAIN, the new novel
by
Charles Hanson Towne
Serialized for release Jan. 15, 1923

Handwriting Portraits
by
William Leslie French

NEA Newspaper Service
Madison Avenue, New York City
Washington, D. C. Seattle, Wash.

NEA NEA

COMICS

enough for a full page—daily feature in the full

NEA SERVICE

WRITE FOR SAMPLE SERVICE

NEA SERVICE INC.
1200 W. 3RD STREET
CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Waterloo, Iowa
POPULATION 36,230
Waterloo Evening Courier
AND WATERLOO DAILY REPORTER
W. Peterson, General Manager
RATE 5c FLAT
Representatives
STORY, BROOKS & FINLEY

The circulation figures, totaling over 30,000, tell a wonderful story for Waterloo, and emphasize Waterloo as important and intelligent center for national advertisers. The big point in this circulation of the Waterloo Evening Courier is the fact that it is absolutely steadfast—8,000 in Waterloo and 7,000 outside. Look up the record for any previous year, and see if the Courier's circulation has ever slumped any year, or ever increased radically. It's a steady increase. Careful examination will show no trace of premiums, cut rates, or anything else that is in some measure to subscribers buying a paper which is not their real choice.

NEWS OF SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM AND ADVERTISING

"TOO many of us sporting writers become press agents for amusement enterprises instead of reporters for our own papers and for the public," said Hugh Fullerton, sports writer for the Chicago Tribune, speaking on "The Duties and Opportunities of Sporting Writers," at a recent session of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University. "There is nothing standing between the worst phases of commercialization of sport—both amateur and professional—except Judge Landis, Major Griffiths and the sporting writers, and we sporting writers must plead guilty to having failed of our duty in enlightening the public and arousing public sentiment to the dangers."

The annual scholarship award of $200 offered by the Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald to the student, above the freshman class, in the Department of Journalism, Syracuse University, writing the best news or feature story, has been won by Miss Margaret C. Williams of Jersey City, N. J., a member of the junior class. Frank E. Ganet, editor of the Rochester Times-Union and president of the New York State Publishers' Association, and the editorial staff of his paper acted as the judges. There were 13 entries for the prize, which is equal to one year's tuition. Honorable mention was given to the entries of Roscoe C. Drummond and John Fox, a nom de plume for which the real name has not been discovered.

The Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald is furnishing its complete day report from the Associated Press for laboratory use in the Department of Journalism at Syracuse University. The actual every-day news is being used by students in newspaper practice, copy reading, headline writing and front page newspaper make-up. The service was secured through the courtesy of Frederick Roy Martin, general manager of the Associated Press, who made the arrangement with Walter P. Plummer, managing editor of the Herald, at the request of Prof. J. O. Simmons of the journalism faculty. The Fairchild News service for trade and newspapers is being received for trade journal study and other services are being arranged for.

Maurice E. Votaw, formerly of the department of journalism, University of Missouri, recently left San Francisco for Shanghai, where he will organize a school of journalism at St. John's Episcopal University.

The St. Paul Dispatch-Pioneer Press gave prizes for the best paper and magazine produced by the Minnesota High School Press Association on the occasion of the convention of the association in St. Paul. The judges were R. R. Barlow, head of the department of journalism of the University of Minnesota; C. D. Johnston and Roy J. Dunlap, city editors, respectively, of the St. Paul Daily News and Pioneer Press.

More than 90 graduates of the journalism department of the University of Oregon are now engaged in active newspaper, advertising, magazine or publicity work, according to a survey which has been completed by the faculty. There are now 156 major students in the journalism school, including 16 men and women with newspaper experience who have returned to Oregon for further training. An interesting feature of the report that within a year after completing their course four graduates have become editors of Oregon newspapers. They are Carlton K. Logan, editor of the Ashland Tidings; Wilford Allen, Jr., editor of the Grant's Pass Daily Courier; Robert F. Boetticher, editor of the Lebanon Criterion, and Mrs. Victoria Case, editor of the Rose City Herald, a Portland community newspaper. The report shows that the journalism department is now well represented on the staffs of Portland dailies.

Lee S. Cole, of the senior class of De Pauw University, specializing in journalism, has been awarded the Orlando J. Smith prize of $100 for this year. This prize was recently established by Courtland Smith in memory of his father and will be awarded annually to the best major student in journalism at the university.

The University of Washington School of Journalism has an enrollment this year of 236 students. The night extension classes number 74. These extension classes meet four evenings a week at the extension offices in Seattle.

L. A. Borah, formerly a reporter and copy reader on the Spokane Chronicle and the Spokesman-Review, has joined the faculty of the University of Washington School of Journalism as an instructor in news writing and reporting, succeeding Maurice Hicklin who resigned to study for a doctor's degree.

The enrollment of the School of Journalism of the University of Oklahoma has now reached 181, which is 36 more than registered at any previous time. Men now outnumber the women at the school. The faculty has been enlarged to include five members.

RECENT SPECIAL EDITIONS

THE South Bend (Ind.) Tribune issued a Business Expansion number of 80 pages in six sections on November 12.

The Brantford (Ont.) Expositor, November 18, published a 76-page Made-m-Brantford edition in six sections.

The Huntington (Ind.) Herald issued a 36-page Farmers' edition November 24.

The Mission (Tex.) Times recently issued a special edition surveying the fruit and truck growing industries of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The Durham (N. C.) Dispatch, November 12, published a special commercial and industrial edition of 140 pages in 11 sections.

The Huntington (Ind.) Press, November 5, issued a 56-page special industrial edition.

The Centerville (Iowa) Daily Iowean published a farm bureau edition of 46 pages in six sections October 21.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

THE SMALL TOWN REPORTER

He's just a small town guy
With a pencil and a pad,
A cheery smile and "Hey, there!"
Are proverbial with this lad,
Who writes the news of Claytown for "The Blade."

He covers Hick's poolroom,
The Bee Hive and the mill;
He always stops at Cherer's,
His weekly grist to fill.
He drops in on Dad Thompkins,
Who knows "what's goin' on;"
The Mansion House is on his route,
And also Doctor John.
The Lynch cigar store, too, of course,
Is on the news man's grind,
And all the sparkling gossip there—
Ho, hum! You know the kind!
There's Ledgard's, too,—a newsy spot—
And then Policeman Kenney;
And Hopper's restaurant—wow, my boy!
A dollar's worth, if any!
The Sims-Binks wedding means a spread;
Our scribe just "eats" that stuff!
And when the Grange would like to get
A little social "puff,"
You'll find the Clayton Blade is out
With programs and the names
Of all the big committees and
The leading social dames.
And so he goes his daily rounds,
With pencil and with pad;
A circulation booster
Is this come-hearty lad!

The small town weekly news man!
Long may he walk the path
Of small town life and happenings,
And tell it all to Gath!

Acton. Carl Pickens.

Prizes for Subscriptions

The Omaha Daily News is giving an imitation leather box containing drinking cup, ruler, pencils, penholder, pen points, eraser and pencil sharpener, for two new 10 week subscriptions.

New Press for Mandan Daily

The Mandan (N. D.) Daily Pioneer has just installed a Duplex press.

In Washington
ONE COMBINATION
Two Newspapers
Morning HERALD
Evening TIMES
ONE RATE
115,000 Circulation

More circulation in Washington than there are homes.

The Washington Times
and
The Washington Herald
G. Logan Payne, Pub.

National Advertising Representatives
G. Logan Payne Co.
Chicago, Detroit,
St. Louis, and Los Angeles

Payne, Burns & Smith
New York and Boston

LOS ANGELES EVENING HERALD

LEADS ALL LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWSPAPERS IN TOTAL PAID CIRCULATION

Government statement for six months ended September 30, 1922

average 145,953 daily

New York
H. W. MOLONEY
604 Times Bldg.

Chicago
G. LOGAN PAYNE CO.
Suite 401, Tower Bldg.
6 No. Michigan Ave.

"The African World"
AND
"Cape-to-Cairo Express"

Published every Saturday in London.

WIRE
for space in the
Editor & Publisher
INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER
largest and most serviceable reference book known to publishing and advertising.

An advertising medium that works for 12 full months.

The Atlanta Journal
ATLANTA, GA.

"The face of the paper" tells a vivid story to the one who is responsible for picking the most suitable cities and the best newspaper in each city for specific advertising.

Contents of any issue of The Atlanta Journal reflect a true picture of life and business in the Southeast.

Right now the picture smiles with the cheer of brisk buying, immense building and the happiness of employed and contented workers.

Advertising in The Journal Sells the Goods.

The great
TRI-STATE DISTRICT

embracing Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia, offers the advertiser a rich market for his wares.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch is unquestionably the best medium through which to reach this market most advantageously.

Wallace G. Brooke
Brunswick Bldg., New York
The Ford-Parsons Co.
Marquette Bldg., Chicago

We can increase your business—you want it increased.

You have thought of press clippings yourself. But let us tell you how press clippings can be made a business-builder for you.

BURRELLE
145 Lafayette St., N. Y. City
Established a Quarter of a Century

New Haven Register
is New Haven's Dominant Paper

Circulation over 34,427 Average
Bought every night by More New Haven people than buy any other TWO New Haven papers COMBINED.

New Haven Register
The Julius Mathews Special Agency
Boston — New York — Detroit — Chicago

THE
NEW YORK EVENING JOURNAL
has the largest circulation of any daily newspaper in America.

Obituary

DAVID J. EDDLEMAN, aged 88, founder of the Muskekee (Okla.) Times, now the Times-Democrat, died November 15.

N. B. SANDERSON, aged 34, for past five years editor of the Freewater (Ore.) Times, died November 4.

MRS. ALICE M. GILLAM, aged 72, wife of Manley M. Gillam New York advertising agent, died November 23 at her home in Flushing, N. Y.

RICHARD E. TAYLOR, aged 54, news photographer on the San Francisco Examiner and during the war official photographer for the American Red Cross, died November 21. He had worked on many of the larger papers throughout the country.

PAUL MURRAY, former linotype operator on the Wichita (Kan.) Eagle and for 25 years connected with newspapers in Wichita, Topeka and Kansas City died recently.

HENRY GAGNIER, president and founder of H. Gagnier, Ltd., Toronto, publishers of the Saturday Night, Clothier and Haberdasher, Canadian Farmer, Trader, Optometrist, Women's Wear, Canadian Home Journal, Motor Trade, Construction, Cigar and Tobacco Journal, and the Canadian Dental Journal, died recently.

MRS. ELIZABETH GALLAGHER KELLY, aged 56, wife of William A. Kelly, a former editor of the New York World Almanac, died in Bermuda, November 24.

SAM P. WEST, for 12 years a proofreader on the Boston (Mass.) Globe, died recently.

FREDERICK W. PRINCE, former Boston newspaper man, publicity representative of the Western Electric Light Company of New York, recently was found dead in Detroit.

ERWIN EDWARDS, for 30 years editor and owner of the Greenwich (Conn.) Graphic, died on November 25. He is survived by two brothers, E. Jay Edwards and Lucien Edwards, both New York newspaper men.

MISS CLEMENTINE FLANAGAN, treasurer of the Kenton (Ohio) Democrat Publishing Company, and daughter of the late Daniel Flanagan who organized the company, died recently.

CHARLES C. LEAN, JR., aged 44, at one time a member of the Pittsburgh Post staff for 15 years, died November 20. He had been engaged in the copper mining business in New York for some years.

J. B. WILLIAMS, editor of the Dumont (Iowa) Journal died November 21.

GEORGE BRONSON HOWARD, aged 38, former newspaper man, novelist, dramatist and film writer, committed suicide at his home in Hollywood, Cal., November 20.

ARTHUR CRAWFORD, aged 55, actor and humorous writer formerly connected with Life, Puck, Judge and other humorous papers, committeed suicide in New York recently.

ALFRED HENRY MARSH, former Washington newspaper man, but more recently assistant manager of the office of the National City Company in the capital, died November 22. He was at one time connected with the Raleigh News and Observer.

ANDRE TRIDON, aged 45, newspaper man psycho-analyst of New York, died November 23 of cancer.

MRS. ANNA LATHAM HARDENBERGH, aged 82, an aunt of J. Edward Hardenbergh, manager of the New York City News Association, died recently.

FRANK ORFF, formerly a magazine publisher of St. Louis, died last week.

WHITMAN OSGOOD, aged 57, formerly of the staff of the Washington Star, and one-time city editor of the Washington Times, died in Washington, last week. For more than 20 years Osgood was a theatrical press agent in Washington.

J. ROMBRO, aged 65, better known by his pseudonym of Philip Krantz, of the editorial staff, the New York Jewish Daily Forward, died suddenly of heart disease November 28. Mr. Rombro began his newspaper career in London more than 30 years ago.

FRANK A. EGAN, aged 21, a reporter on the staff of the Newark (N. J.) Evening News, committed suicide November 28.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Ayer on Free Puffs

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: We read with interest your presentation of the discussion about the recipes and similar material about Spanish green olives which we distributed, and were impressed by its fairness.

In this connection it occurs to us that you might be interested in seeing a copy of a letter which we recently wrote the New York World, congratulating them on their stand against the usual type of automobile publicity. This letter would be of possible interest to you in that it indicates again our policy on the subject of publicity as outlined in the letter of ours which you published.

The letter follows:

GENTLEMEN: If congratulations are in order on your recent letters stating the editorial policies of the World and the Evening World on automobile news, we wish to extend ours most heartily.

What you have to say about individual publicity items printed only because they concern cars which are being advertised is in close accord with our policies on this general subject, and we are glad to see you take this stand. We hope you will be successful in maintaining it, for we do not see why the news columns of the automobile section of any newspaper should be governed by standards in any way different from those governing the news and editorial columns in other parts of the paper. And we believe that no story should appear in any of the news columns merely because its subject is being treated in the advertising columns.

Any material that we submit for consideration from the news, feature or editorial point of view is marked "Deliver to News Desk," and carries a note to the editor saying that the story in question is submitted on its own merits as a matter of general interest, and not in connection with any advertising we place. Everything of this kind that we send out stands or falls solely on its own intrinsic worth. We want the editor to decide in each case whether any story is worth printing for its interest to readers, and we are glad to abide by his judgment. This goes just as strongly for stories connected with the automobile industry as for any others.

N. W. AYER & SON.

Closing Contest Ahead of Time

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Some time ago you ran a series of articles on the contest idea. The Niles News some time ago conducted such a contest, and a feature was brought out which will interest all who may think of conducting contests, or who may have competitors who do so.

The News announced the closing date for the contest, as the postal regulations require. When the time for the contest had about one-half expired, or somewhat more, and the contest was not going to the satisfaction of the management, a change was announced in the closing date. Attention was called to this departure from the rules, and the Post Office Department notified the publisher through the postmaster here that the contest must close according to original announcement. However, this was not done, and now the solicitor of the Post Office Department states that the department has no jurisdiction over such matters, as the announcement that the contest had been extended was not put in the papers sent through the mails. Papers containing the original announcement were mailed, and it would seem that the injustice to entering contests was done then, rather in the announcements later that the time was extended. You can see that this decision will make it possible for a contest to be carried on indefinitely, simply by not sending papers with the announcement through the mails.

NILES EVENING REGISTER.

No Agency Places Tanlac

ATLANTA, Nov. 25, 1922.

TO EDITOR & PUBLISHER: Please refer to our letter May 13, with reference to incorrect information appearing in your "Tips for Ad Managers" column.

We note you continue to announce that various advertising agencies are making contracts for our account, the issue of November 18, mentioning the Sacks Company, New York.

No advertising agency has authority to make contracts of any kind for this company, all such arrangements being concluded by us direct from the home office.

INTERNATIONAL PROPRIETARIES, INC.,
E. C. HARRIS, Advertising Director.

Roy T. Sheridan Sought

Knowledge as to the whereabouts of Roy Thomas Sheridan, a compositor on the New York Journal and New York American in 1910 as well as on various papers throughout the United States for eighteen years, is sought by Capt. John F. Sheridan, 28 Beaumont street, Manhattan Beach, N. Y.

KANSAS IS A RICH, RESPONSI
FIELD—TOPEKA, ITS CAPITA A GOOD "TRY OUT" CITY
They are best covered by the

Topeka Daily Capital
TOPEKA, KANSAS
Only Kansas Daily with a Gene
Kansas Circulation

Dominates its field in circulation, classes of advertising, news, prest and reader confidence.

Supplies market data—does sur work—gives real co-operation.

Arthur Capper
PUBLISHER
MEMBER A. B. C.—A. N. P. A

The Buffalo Territory Offers Big Possibilities To National Advertise

Twelfth American City; second in N York State, Buffalo, with over hal million people and the surround trade area with three hundred th sand more, affords a rich market national advertisers. The effec medium to capture this desirable m ket is the big, popular, home ne paper—A. B. C. Net paid 105,958, of English-Speaking Homes.

The Buffalo Evening Ne
Edward H. Butler, Editor & Publi
KELLY-SMITH COMPANY
Representatives
Marbridge Bldg. New York, N. Y.
Lytton Bldg Chicago, Ill

26,000 last October—Now

150,00(

DETROIT Evening TIMES

NEW ORLEAN STATES
ADVERTISING RAT AFTER OCT. 1
12c DAILY FLAT
15c SUNDAY FLAT
Daily over 51,00(
Sunday over 63,0(
PRESENT RATE
10c D. & S. on 2,000 Lin
Represented by
S. C. Beckwith, Special Age New York
John M. Branham Co., Chic

Features by
Irvin S. Cobb
Fontaine Fox
Hugh Fullerton
Rube Goldberg
Ed Hughes
T. L. Masson
O. O. McIntyre
Frederick Palmer
Chas. Hanson Towne
H. J. Tuthill
and others
The McNaught Syndicate, Inc.
Times Building, New York

NEW

ulti-Mailer Adaptation at Installation id Maintenance Cost of 4c.-9c. a Subriber a Year.

or mail lists of 1,500-5,000. Imprints ldresses direct. Provides for daily rrection of mail list. Eliminates prentable complaints. Makes Circulation anager independent of Composing and lley Rooms. Permits use of time and or-saving methods. Gives subscribers finitely better mail delivery service. rite today for details.

The Speedaumatic Company
MANUFACTURING
THE MULTI-MAILER SYSTEM
817-825 WASHINGTON BLVD.
CHICAGO

BY every test of daily circulation The News leads — by volume, by character, by distribution, by reader interest, by proved results for advertisers.

The Indianapolis NEWS

FIRST IN PUBLIC SERVICE

The World

MORNING EDITION

The World and The Evening World have a combined circulation, daily, of 650,000 for $1.20 per agate line gross, subject to contract discounts. They carry more high class dry goods advertising; are read by more jobbers, department and chain store buyers, and by more retailers; offer more circulation per dollar and a more concentrated circulation; a reader and a dealer influence more localized than any other morning and evening combintaion.

Advertise in Newspapers by the Year

The Evening World

Pulitzer Building, New York
...er's Building, Chicago
Ford Building, Detroit

DOLLAR PULLERS

Advertising and circulation managers are always on the lookout for new ideas that will increase advertising receipts and win new circulation. Your idea for increasing advertising or circulation may not appeal to your manager, but it may be just the thing that some other manager wants. EDITOR & PUBLISHER will pay $1 for each idea printed under this head. The fact that the idea is now being used in your city does not bar it from the department. Address your communication to the DOLLAR PULLER EDITOR. When they appear clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable ideas will not be returned.

A GOOD full page ad for a few weeks before Christmas can be made on the plan of the average family, and what they buy for each other and their friends for Christmas. Make real persons of the family by naming them and giving them personality. All the stuff about the family will be twined around on the page with comparatively small ads by dealers in your town. First, take Mother Average. She is capable of putting a lot of love into her gifts by stitching and handling and careful planning, so she buys her gifts largely in material. On her day, get your merchants to advertise materials, outing flannel (she makes pajamas), pongee (she makes handkerchiefs, baby materials, crepe de chine, silk underwear, tubing, etc. There are a thousand things that you can have Mother make. Let the merchants carry their regular ads in addition to the specials on the Christmas page. Then take one of the girls. She will use photographs. Your photographer will give you a good ad on this day. She will have some pictures (water colors) framed. Your paint and picture frame men will advertise. With the combined buying of the whole family, you can get small ads from nearly every dealer in town. When the Christmas spirit gets Dad Average, it seizes him suddenly and in great gobs—he breaks out all over with it. Have him last, and let him buy Victrola, piece of furniture; let him start a bank account for some baby in the family, etc. The young man of the family buys boxes of candy and gets you an ad from the confectioners; he will buy the expensive stationery, a Japanese kimona for his fairest lady, etc. And think of the good you'll do your readers by suggesting to them what to get for gifts!—J. S.

Before long most of the retail advertisers will begin their semi-annual clean-up of broken lines of goods. There is no better way to put over an ad of this nature than the catalog style. A short introduction is needed, of course. Then follows the description of the merchandise. One large department store in the South uses the following style of make-up. Each section is set 19 ems wide, and the section is divided into four columns by one-line rules. The heading for the first column is "Quantity," for the second "Description," for the third "Regular Price," and for the fourth "Sale Price." Various groups of merchandise are set off by black headlines in the "Description" column. Especially important is the item of sizes which appear with the description in every case. The sections are divided by double rules, and when two, three or four of these sections are run alongside each other they certainly give you the idea of a catalog page. There certainly are no generalizations about this kind of advertising.—J. T.

Here's a contest which will bring your want-ads into the limelight and make them grow in volume. Award theatre tickets or other prizes to the persons sending in each week the best sentence describing the good features of your paper classified ads, taking each word of the sentence out of your paper classified ads. The sentence should be written at the top of a sheet of paper and the want ads containing the desired words clipped and pasted on the same sheet of paper, in the same order as the words in the sentence, underlining the words used. Allow only one word to be taken from any one ad. A double award may be given to any winner who uses a word taken from a cash want ad he has inserted within one week prior to the date of his answer. In this case the want ad receipt should be attached to the letter submitted.—R. B. M.

A San Antonio lumber firm has associated thirty-three other San Antonio firms with it in the construction of a model home and the thirty-four firms are using a page each Sunday in the Express to direct attention to the progress of the work. The advertising is cleverly written in a way to present prominently the work of each firm interested in building, equipping and furnishing the model home. The public is invited to inspect the progress of the work every Sunday, when some one is there to show visitors around. The model home is being financed by the lumber company and when completed and exhibited to the public for a sufficient time will be sold, and probably at enough profit to pay all the participants in its construction for what they put into it and for the advertising. Any newspaper might start the same undertaking anywhere and thus get some additional advertising.—W. H. M.

A country publisher who has had considerable success in building circulation has borrowed an idea from the magazines in selecting his agents. He selects some person in each locality who, by reason of ill health or affliction is unable to do manual labor or follow the more vigorous occupations. Then he adds an idea of his own. Instead of merely giving them a receipt book and some instructions on soliciting, he backs them up in real subscription campaigns. He has them write their own circular matter, for he feels that it will have a more personal and sincere ring than it would have if written in the newspaper office for a big group of agents. He brushes up their material, puts it into circular form, and furnishes them with stationery and envelopes. Shut in at home, as they often are, they address and send out a vast amount of mail matter over their own signatures, which, of course, has a personal appeal. The publisher does not encourage them to make what you would call a "sympathy appeal" in their letters, for he feels that the merits of the paper should not be subordinated. However, through mixed motives, a good number do subscribe in response to the letters from these agents and he feels that the letters from them simply has the effect of moving prospects to subscribe for a paper they really wanted, where a solicitation from someone else might have no enect on them. —J. T.

It is quite the thing nowadays for folks to give personalized stationery—that is, stationery with the name of the writer printed at the top of the sheet—or personalized bridge scores with name of hostess at the top of each sheet, or monogramed playing cards with the monogram of the recipient on the back of each card, as Christmas presents. Also Christmas cards printed with the signature of the giver are used more and more extensively each year. So the newspaper ought to be able to easily get up a group page of advertisements from local printers who do this sort of work and might run this a couple of times before Christmas—F. H. W.

In the various rooms in the plant of the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union-Star, posted in a conspicuous place, is this motto: "Make Another Friend For the Union-Star Today." A wonderful slogan. Imbue the spirit of real co-operative service into your employes and the result cannot help but be dollars gained by service rendered. Hold frequent get together meetings. Invite suggestions. Have the employes feel they are a part of the producing organization—not merely cogs in a machine. This is a never failing way of pulling dollars and it costs virtually nothing.—F. C. D.

The Fort Worth (Tex.) Star-Telegram is now advertising its annual "Bargain Days" on subscriptions. Thirty days are set aside as "bargain days" and yearly subscriptions at a saving of $3.55 are offered. The regular price of the paper is $10 a year, and the reduced price is $6.45. The circulation manager of this newspaper claims that they are able to net as much from this method as other newspapers adhering to the "old short time subscription basis with its accompanying high cost of securing and holding." At any rate, the Star-Telegram maintains as large a paid-in-advance list of subscribers as any newspaper in Texas, and this is the principal method used in getting this list.—J. T.

One Central Ohio country semi-weekly each Christmas time makes a specialty of printing "Letters to Santa Claus." By skillful advertising manipulation, several advertisers have been persuaded to carry special Christmas advertisements for a number of issues, placed around the letters sent in by the kiddies. There is, perhaps, no part of the country newspaper more interesting to the average family at Christmas time than the page on which the kiddies' letters are printed. Many ads not expected in the general run of newspaper business have been secured by using this feature as a talking point.—A. K. C.

Banks will mail out their annual Xmas Savings Checks the forepart of December. There are several ways of merchants and newspapers to get extra business from this money that is to be let loose. A co-operative page announcing a discount of 5% to holders of Xmas Fund Checks should be signed by stores willing to make this inducement, or each advertiser could have his individual ad on the page.—R. B. M.

CIRCULATION BUILDING SUPREMACY

Recently finished our third campaign on the World's Largest Newspaper—The Los Angeles Times. Now busy on the Indianapolis News and Baltimore American — ASK ANY OF THEM!

Employed and endorsed by the leading newspapers of the U. S. A.

HOLLISTER'S CIRCULATION ORGANIZATION
Largest in the United States
300 MERRITT BLDG., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

FIRST

In eleven months of this year The New York Times published a far greater volume of advertising than any other New York newspaper—over 22,000,000 agate lines, a gain over the corresponding period of last year of 2,500,000 lines and an excess over the second New York newspaper of more than 7,300,000 lines.

The Mount Vernon, N. Y.
DAILY ARGUS
carries more display advertising than any other newspaper in Westchester County.

This is an acknowledgement of its power that the advertiser should heed, if desirous of reaching the people of Mount Vernon.

GEO. B. DAVID & CO.
Foreign Representative
171 Madison Ave., NEW YORK

The
Pittsburg Press
Daily and Sunday
Has the Largest
CIRCULATION
IN PITTSBURG
MEMBER A. B. C.
Foreign Advertising Representatives
I. A. KLEIN
50 East 42nd St., New York
544 Fort Dearborn Bank Bldg., Chicago
A. J. NORRIS HILL, Hearst Bldg., San Francisco

Every Advertisement Lives for 12 Full Months in the
Editor & Publisher
International Year Book Number
WIRE SPACE RESERVATION
NOW

FRENCH PROMOTING WANT ADS

Petit Parisien's Columns Carry Novel Instructive Copy

By G. Langelaan
Paris Editor, Editor & Publisher

Paris, Oct. 27.—French newspapers are beginning to call the attention of their readers to the value and advantages of "smalls." The translation of the accompanying illustration reads:—"Our

Nos
Petites Annonces Classées constituent une PUBLICITÉ ultra-moderne !

Toutes les facilités sont mises à la disposition de nos Annonceurs:

Transmission des annonces par courrier, téléphone, télégraphe, agences dans Paris, la banlieue et les départements.

Parution quotidienne, 12 heures après le dépôt des PETITES ANNONCES CLASSÉES à l'un quelconque de nos nombreux guichets.

Rubriques spéciales pour chaque branche du commerce, de l'industrie et de toute l'activité sociale.

Tarifs très réduits, étant donné notre tirage de plus de
1.600.000 exemplaires

En outre, les Annonceurs qui comptent utiliser fréquemment nos PETITES ANNONCES CLASSÉES peuvent bénéficier d'avantages très importants. Sur demande de leur part, par lettre ou par téléphone (BERGÈRE 57-36), nous leur enverrons un de nos collaborateurs qui leur donnera tous éclaircissements à ce sujet.

small classified advertisements constitute ultra-modern advertising. Every facility is placed at the disposition of our advertisers: transmission of advertisements by post, telephone, telegraph, agencies in Paris, the suburbs and the provinces.

"Daily insertion, 12 hours after handing in of small classified advertisements to any one of our numerous counters.

"Special heads for each branch of commerce, industry and all social activities.

"Greatly reduced tariffs, considering that our circulation is over 1,600,000 daily.

"In addition, advertisers who make frequent use of our small classified advertisements benefit by very important advantages. On receipt of request, by letter or telephone, we will send one of our representatives who will give all information on this subject."

The foregoing appears in Le Petit Parisien, which claims to have the largest circulation of any newspaper in the world.

Name Tribune Prize Design Dec. 3

The Chicago Tribune, in accordance with the terms of competition formulated by the American Institute of Architects, had until midnight, December 2, to select the winning design for the paper's new building from the nearly 200 designs submitted by American and European architects, for which $100,000 in prizes has been offered, and it is expected that the Sunday paper of December 3 will announce which plan has been awarded the first prize. The jury of award consists of Alfred Granger, the American Institute of Architects; Robert R. McCormick, Joseph M. Patterson, Edward S. Beck and Holmes Onderdonk, all of the Tribune. The committee has spent most of the past week in session viewing the designs submitted.

NEW INCORPORATIONS

Four Companies Form for Publishing; —Two Ad Agencies

The following companies have been incorporated at the office of the Secretary of State, Albany, N. Y., to do a publishing business:

Modandred Publishing Company, Inc., New York, capital stock $200,000; directors, Albert N. Dennis, Leah Cohen and C. Mortimer Wilmerding.

Ner Tumid Publishing Company, Inc.; New York, capital stock, $50,000; directors, Fannie Raab, H. A. Shapiro and Fannie Demovitch.

The Country Editor Publishing Company, Inc., Rockville Centre, N. Y.; capital stock, $10,000; directors, Teasdale Randolph, A. F. Bush and Water Kutzleb.

Revista Commercial, Inc., of New York; capital stock, $1,000; directors, Frank E. Emery, Joseph A. Pereira and Joseph Schwartz.

The following advertising corporations have been given certificates of incorporation:

City Advertising Company, Inc., of New York; capital stock, $1,000; directors, J. J. Golden, H. S. Hartstein and J. A. Sanche.

J. A. Solonche & Co., Inc., New York; capital stock, $10,000; directors, J. H. Solonche, Louis Bernstein and Nathan Zvirin.

Copeland Publications, Inc., New York; capital stock, $50,000; directors: E. B. Copeland, R. E. Copeland, and Irving Messing. The Copeland Apparel World Corporation has also been incorporated with the same directors and with a capital stock of $50,000.

Alalaya Publishing Company, Inc., New York; capital stock, $50,000; the directors are, A. L. Charriez, Nemesio Canales, and Domingo Callazo, New York.

Giftwares Publishing Company, Inc., New York; capital stock, $5,000; the directors are, F. W. Hartop, William B. Mundy, and H. D. Eckler, 1815 Dorchester road, Brooklyn.

H. M. Minton & Co., Inc., New York; capital stock, $1,200; the directors are, H. M. Minton, William V. C. Ruxton, and Gerald Kelleher.

MAY SUE WASHINGTON POST

Governor Parker Says Papers' Klan Stories Slander Him

Action for damages against the Washington Post has been hinted by John M. Parker, governor of Louisiana, as the result of a series of articles by George Rothwell Brown of the Post staff dealing with Governor Parker's recent visit to Washington in connection with the activities of the Ku Klux Klan in his state.

Two stories by Mr. Brown, under Baton Rouge and New Orleans date lines, published in the Post immediately preceding Governor Parker's arrival in Washington and his call upon President Harding, have been made the subject of vigorous denouncement by the Louisiana executive. The first article in which Mr. Brown said the Klan had "reduced the sovereign state of Louisiana to the vassalage of the invisible empire," the Governor characterized as the "most extravagantly inaccurate observation I have ever known a newspaper man to make," and "a slander on Louisiana and on its chief executive."

"The damage done by this article," continued Governor Parker in an open letter to the Washington Post before his departure from the capital, "and the importance given it by the display with which you presented it will be made the subject of conference upon my return to Louisiana, at which time it will be decided as to the further action to be taken."

Buy Sulphur Times

Dewey H. Neal, since 1921 managing editor of the Ada (Okla.) Evening News, and W. W. Gaine, editor and publisher of the Stonewall (Okla.) News, have purchased the Sulphur Times, a weekly paper.

Troy Messenger Sold

The Troy (Ala.) Messenger has sold by S. H. Blan, whose family owned the paper for 50 years, to Hugh T. McKinnon, Charles McK and Cody Hall. Mr. Blan was re elected to the office of Secretary of t of Alabama.

Harbord Radio Head

Maj. Gen. John G. Harbord, wh tires December 29 upon his own re will become president of Radio Co tion of America.

SUPPLIES & EQUIPMENT
For Newspaper Making

Model 24
LINOTYPE
Practically new. Now in large Eastern newspaper. Fully equipped with Emerson motor, three molds and five fonts of matrices.
"As is"
FOR SALE CHEAP
Make best offer
Address Box A-646, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Plant Equipments
Established in 1912
PECKHAM MACHINERY CO.
MARBRIDGE BLDG, 34th & Bway
NEW YORK CITY

Bargain in 24-page Scott Straightline. Immediate delivery.
14 presses from large advertising plant. Big multi-color web, 2 smaller webs, No. 1 Miehle, with 2-color, perfecters, and 2-revolution presses. 44 in. cutter for $300.
Get our List No. 27—16 pages.

Take It To
POWERS
Open 24 Hours out of 24
The Fastest Engravers on the Earth
Powers Photo Engraving Co.
154 Nassau St., Tribune Bldg.
New York City

Huber's ROTOGRAVURE INKS
Are now made in our new Rotgravure factory. A better ink at the same price.
HUBER'S Colors In use since 1780
J. M. Huber
Main Office
65 W. HOUSTON ST., NEW YORK
It Pays to Huber-ize

Linotype for Sale
Model 15, in fine operating condition. low price. A-607, Editor & Publisher.

Model 24 Linotype, practically new, now in large Eastern paper. Fully equipped with Emerson three molds, five fonts of matrices. Fo cheap "as is." Make best offer. Editor & Publisher.

Linotype, Model 9, for Sale
Four-magazine machine, in excellent tion, now running in Eastern newspaper Bargain price. A-606, Editor & Publis

Model 3 Linotypes
These machines have had unusual ca are in the finest condition. Price will be attractive for quick action. A-608, Ed Publisher.

For Sale
Twelve-page Hoe "Unique" web new press, printing 7-column papers of 4, 6, or 12 pages, with stereotype equipment. press at a low price. Baker Sales Co 200 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Printers' Outfitters
Printing Plants and Business bough sold, American Typefounders' products, ers' and bookbinders' machinery of eve scription. Conner, Fendler & Co., 96 Be St., New York City.

FLEXIDEAL
A Dependable, Unifor
DRYMA
Better in performance than other, and at a LOWER pr
A trial will convince you
Unlimited Stock on Hand at all Times
The Flexideal Compa
15 William Street
NEW YORK CITY

NEWSPAPER PRESSES For Sale
Goss Straight-line Octuple with d folder. Page length 23 9/16 in Goss Straight-line Sextuple with d folder. Page length 23 9/16 in Goss Straight-line Sextuple with d folder. Page length 22¾ inches.
Goss Four-Deck Single-width Stra line Quadruple with single fo Page length 22¾ inches.
Goss Four-Deck Two-Plate Wide I with Color Cylinder. Page le 21.60 inches.
Goss High-Speed Sextuple Press Color Cylinder and double for Page length 23 9/16 inches.
For particulars apply to
R. HOE & CO.
504-520 Grand Street
New York, N. Y.
7 Water St. Boston, Mass.
827 Tribune Chicago, I

Introduction to Employer and Employee

SITUATIONS WANTED

A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order. For unemployed one insertion (adv. not to 50 words) FREE.

tising Manager executive on metropolitan paper de- connection with smaller city daily. Con- ive, all-round newspaper man. Best nces. Will invest small amount when proves satisfactory. Address A-644, & Publisher.

tising and Business Manager
20 years' experience in all departments. esent in charge of five man department per with 16,000 circulation. Able ex- e, salesman and result getter. A per- y that wins and holds friends for the Desire a broader field. Salary mini- $75. Address R. E. A., 466 Ewing Ave., Ohio.

r and Cost Accountant nical and efficient system to take care play, classified, circulation and general nd accounting. Present salary $85, but o get on a larger paper. Complete set imen forms and references upon request. eration is secondary object if prospects ght for competent man. Box A-640, & Publisher.

or Managing Editor,
ly qualified as to make-up and ex- ability, power to produce without "rag- staff. Eastern newspaper training un- best editors. Competent to take full of paper. Fifteen years' experience on nd with full knowledge of mechanical as editorial departments. Address A- litor & Publisher.

t, Capable Advertising Copywriter esman seeks connection on strictly make sis. Not seeking salary, but rather an le position where real ability is appreci- Excellent references, morally sound. A-560, Editor & Publisher.

Good Man
irteen years' experience in publishing— essarily an editor, advertising manager, n or circulation manager—wants a job "position"—on newspaper or small ublication. Principle experience in vari- torial capacities on class publication; eral utility man on newspaper. Wants e last change. Can do almost any- will go anywhere—big cities barred. salary immaterial (if sufficient for future all-important. Address A-600, & Publisher.

or Managing Editor
erman, 10 years' experience, now fea- tor of big midwest daily, wants job ging, feature editor or editorial writer. e experience in all these lines. Salary $60 weekly or better. Address Box ditor & Publisher.

hly experienced in towns up to 50,000 engagement January 1. Earlier if References. Address Box A-614, Ed- Publisher.

years' successful experience in daily er service, is anxious to connect with good field or with large printing ment. Progressive, economical, mar- ddress Box A-638, Editor & Publisher.

25% MORE NEWSPRINT

and Canadian Mill Shipments Show Big Increase

uction of news print paper in the States and Canada during the months of 1922 was 25 per cent than during the same period in ipments from the mills increased cent during the same time and on hand at the mills on October 2, were 7 per cent less than a rlier and amounted to only three alf days' maximum production. ding to present indications the oduction of news print paper in ll go somewhat beyond 2,500,000 about 120,000 tons more than he previous record-breaking year ts of news print paper from total 257,000 tons since Septem- 920, the month during which the man paper arrived. Of this total ons have come from Germany, rom Sweden, 44,000 from Fin- 000 from Norway and 7,000 tons ner European sources. The aver- the entire 25 months has thus been 10,000 tons per month, but the volume has been by no means steady. During the seven months from August, 1921, to February, 1922, the average was 14,500 tons per month, while from March to September of this year inclusive the average has been only 7,500 tons per month.

As indicated by the figures upon mill production and shipments, consumption of news print paper in 1922 has been very heavy. As a matter of fact, for the first nine months of this year, which is as far as we have complete data, the consumption of standard news print paper was 16 per cent more than during the same period in 1921 and 12 per cent more than during the first nine months of the record-breaking year of 1920.

The new machines under construction which are expected to come into operation during the next seven months will bring the capacity of the regular news print mills in the United States up to 5,110 tons daily and in Canada to 4,160 tons, making a total of 9,270 tons. It would seem, therefore, that the newspaper publishers should be able to get all the paper they will need in 1923 from North American mills without going overseas for their supply.

Newsprint Mills to Enlarge

It is reported from Montreal that Price Brothers contemplate doubling the capacity of their mills at Jonquiere and Kenogami. This work may likely start next Spring.

SITUATIONS WANTED

News or Managing Editor
Can write editorials. Fifteen years' metropolitan experience. Will make afternoon paper dominate its field anywhere in U. S. Box A-599, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Composing Room Foreman
Thoroughly trained make-up and printer; at present head make-up on 22 machine plant making three editions daily, six on Sunday. Would like to correspond with publisher needing composing room foreman. Address A-642, Editor & Publisher.

Newspaperman,
with all around experience in news departments of large and small papers, open for position January 1. Earlier if urgent. Address Box A-615, care Editor & Publisher.

Newspaper Man,
Ten years' experience in advertising and editorial departments of dailies and trade press, seeks position offering greater opportunities. Merchandising sales knowledge. Box A-639, Editor & Publisher.

Reporting or Desk Position with morning or evening daily in metropolitan territory desired by graduate of school of journalism who has made good and is ready for larger opportunity. Can furnish best of references. Address Box A-627, Editor & Publisher.

Successful Sales and Newspaper Executive
Been at it twenty years. Four years in merchandising, two years in investment banking, fourteen years with newspapers. Now on advertising and sales promotion with largest morning daily in city of 700,000. Family and I want to get back East, to position of advertising or general manager, in city of 100,000 or larger anywhere in New England or Atlantic Coast States. Experienced in and familiar with those sections. Present earnings $7,500. Available March 15. A-632, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted
Position as circulation manager by married man who can build circulation. Two years circulation manager on one of James M. Cox's papers. Also promotion manager on largest paper Scripps-McRae League. References all former employers. For complete information write E. W. Mathews, 582 E. Church St., Urbana, Ohio.

Young woman,
College graduate, publishing and teaching experience, intelligent, ambitious, unafraid of hard work, willing to start from bottom up, desires to connect with newspaper in California state. Address A-636, Editor & Publisher.

For Hire
Makeup editor. Slightly used but in perfect condition. Rare species. Gets work done well without friction with printers. Maintenance cost reasonable. Address A-647, Editor & Publisher.

HELP WANTED

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

News Editor
One of the strongest technical weeklies in the country needs a capable man to take charge of its news section. He must be thoroughly familiar with handling of business items and able to select and direct high class correspondents in the industrial centers served. Preference given to man with commercial newspaper training, although applicants with financial page experience will be considered. Give complete particulars as to education, training, experience, references, salary expected, etc. Address A. L., 61? Longacre Bldg., New York City.

Wanted
A live country circulator who can meet competition and get results. An opportunity for a young man who has had experience in handling roadmen, carrier boys, street organization and single mail. State references, experience, age, whether married or single and salary expected. Address Box A-630, Editor & Publisher.

Wanted
Business Manager for established evening newspaper within 150 miles of New York. Must be a competent executive, experienced in business management of newspaper, both advertising and circulation. This is an unusual opportunity for a man whose record will stand the most thorough investigation. Only experienced and capable applicants will be considered. In writing state age, experience and salary and if at present employed. A-633, Editor & Publisher.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

6c A WORD for advertisements under this classification. Cash with order.

For Sale
Country newspaper plant, presses, type, folders, cutters. Drawer D., Freeport, Long Island.

Wanted To Buy
Daily newspaper in town under 25,000. Reply with full particulars, competition, earnings, etc., to A. B. de Mesquita, 600 West 113th St., New York City.

WHITE CASE TO HIGH COURT

Gov. Allen Asks Attorney General Take Special Action

Henry J. Allen, Governor of Kansas and owner of the Wichita (Kan.) Beacon gave the William Allen White case a new turn November 18, when he announced that the Attorney General of Kansas has been asked to bring the case before the Kansas Supreme Court under the declaratory judgment act, passed by the 1921 legislature, instead of the criminal proceedings brought against Mr. White in the Lyons County District Court under the Kansas Industrial Court law.

The Declaratory Act makes it possible to bring action in any Court of Record in the State where there is an actual controversy, Governor Allen said, "In this case there is an actual controversy White admits all of the facts of which he is accused and the point to be decided is whether or not it was a violation of the Industrial Court Act."

The Attorney General will not be home until November 28, and the case may not be decided until after he returns.

Government Suspends Paper

The Journal Libertad, Madrid, Spain, which published the secret report of General Picasso on the Morocco disaster, was suspended for two days by the government as a result.

Intertypes in Pittsburgh

The Pittsburgh (Pa.) Chronicle-Telegraph and Gazette-Times recently installed six Intertype slug casting machines.

Warren News Sold

The Warren (N. H.) News, a weekly newspaper, has been sold by C. E. Caswell, its editor and publisher, to the Woodsville (N. H.) News. It will be published at Woodsville. Mr. Caswell has become associated with the Rumford Printing Company of Concord, N. H.

Iowa Daily Becomes a Weekly

The Iowa City Republican, until recently a daily newspaper, has been made a weekly and will be known hereafter as the Johnson County News.

Super Speed Press for Boston

The Boston Transcript will shortly install a new quadruple super-speed Hoe press.

Deland News Growing

The Deland (Fla.) Daily News has installed a Model A flat bed Duplex press.

Sales Appraisals

NEWSPAPER PROPERTIES

PALMER, DE WITT & PALMER 225 Fifth Ave., New York

Unusual Opportunities

Daily & Weekly NEWSPAPERS

TRADE PAPERS

HARWELL & CANNON

Newspaper and Magazine Properties

Times Building, New York

Established 1910

WE CONNECT THE WIRES

DO YOU NEED an assistant publisher with "initiative and understanding, bounded by common sense"? Five years business manager of eastern daily, three years assistant general manager with big western paper—auditing, purchasing, supervising production, the entire gamut of newspaper making. Under forty, getting $6,000. Wants chance to secure an interest. Our No. 1054.

FERNALD'S EXCHANGE, INC.
THIRD NAT'L. BLD'G., SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

Talented, experienced, and highly efficient men, each a specialist in his own line, ready to solve your problems.

STARR SERVICE CORPS
UPBUILDERS of NEWSPAPERS
BROKAW BLDG—42ND and BROADWAY
NEW YORK

"Once Is Enough"

A NEW

PERCY CROSBY

COMIC

A Daily One Column Panel
Which Is An Event

To be released
January 6, 1923

Write for samples

The McClure
Newspaper Syndicate

373 Fourth Avenue, New York City

This is a Sample of the portraits with the Sprightly

DIARY OF A PROFESSIONAL MOVIE FAN
By
GLADYS HALL

Now being run by such papers as

New York Evening Telegram
Chicago Daily News
Washington Star
Buffalo News
Toledo Blade
Baltimore News

METROPOLITAN NEWSPAPER SERVICE
Maximilian Elser, Jr., Gen'l Mgr.
150 NASSAU ST. NEW YORK CITY

You should not miss out on this

TANNER'S CHRISTMAS PICTURE

3, 4 and 5 column sizes

THE INTERNATIONAL SYNDICATE
213 Guilford Ave., BALTIMORE, MD.

WIRE
NEWS

For Evening and Sunday Newspapers

International News Service
21 Spruce St., New York

Few Papers — (if any) — surpass the TRENTON NEW JERSEY TIMES
AS
A Food Medium

A recent reader survey indicates that among the housewives of the city our Thursday Food Feature Department—upward of four pages devoted to food recipes and news and food advertising—is the best feature carried by the Times

Circulation 30,237 Member A. B. C.

KELLY-SMITH CO.

Marbridge Bldg. New York
Lytton Bldg. Chicago

HUNCHES

Managing editors and city editors are always on the lookout for news; and feature ideas that can be used locally. Editor & Publisher will pay $1 for each hunch published under this head. The fact that the hunch is not being worked successfully in your city does not bar it from this department. Address your contributions to the Hunch Editor. When they appear, clip them and mail them in and receive payment. Unavailable hunches will not be returned.

HOW many Christmas children are there in your city—that is, how many children of twelve years and under are there that were born on Christmas day? Offer a Christmas-birthday gift to all such children who call at your office with their parents with authenticated proof that they were born on Christmas. Make the present some inexpensive toy. Get photos of some of the more attractive of the youngsters and run them with daily stories for a week or so before Christmas and in each story run the names of the children calling that day, together with names and addresses of their parents.—F. H. W.

"Don't forget the birds," was the title of an interesting story published in a New York state paper. Bird stories always contain human interest if they are properly written. Besides, to remind your readers every so often to "thow some crumbs to the birds," you are doing a humane act.—F. C. D.

Is the first baby born in your city still living? Probably he is in most western cities. If so, start a search of the birth records and then find the subject, now grown probably to old age. A mighty good feature article should result from an interview.—R. A.

Does revenue from fines obtained through convictions for liquor law violations compare favorably with revenue from licenses in saloon days? If not, how does the city meet the difference? Does the increased burden fall on the taxpayer? Perhaps the city has opened up new sources of revenue. The city clerk could produce figures and furnish information for a story out of the usual run.—O. Q. M.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of Washington, recently said that girls should pay a share of the entertainment when they went out with boys. The London (Ont.) Free Press interviewed a couple of well known women. The next day reporters discussed the subject in letters to the editor. Other letters then started to come in and made a nice feature yarn for several days.—H. B. G.

Many of the old watches that are still in use have an interesting story connected with them. Some have been handed down from generation to generation and are valued by their possessors a great deal more than for their intrinsic value. I was in a watchmaker's shop when a man calling for his watch remarked that his wife's great uncle raised and sold onions to buy it. The old watchmaker in your city should be able to tell you offhand or direct you to owners of old timepieces who will relate to you interesting accounts of the descent of their watches.—R. B. M.

Every city has its people who have descended from famous people or who have a strain of famous blood in their veins. Find them. It has been said that not a single stick of furniture came over in the Mayflower. Hunt up the Mayflower furniture in your town for a feature story.—E. M. H., Jr.

It is remarkable how "fleeting is fame." A certain newspaper made a mirth-provoking story out of the verbatim replies made over the telephone by prominent men and women to the question: "Who was it ran for vice-president on the Democratic ticket with Cox in 1920?" The answers must be written to include all the hemming and hawing and hesitation—even the mild profanity—to get the punch. A variation of it is to ask prominent men the color of their wife's eyes and the result is about the same.—B. M.

All of the men who impersonate Santa Clauses for the stores in your city are constantly having interesting and funny experiences. Interview these men about their experiences and get up an appropriate holiday story from the information thus secured.—F. H. W.

An Oklahoma City paper has aroused statewide interest by printing "Death Ballots" and letting the public express its opinions on whether or not the death penalty shall be inflicted on criminals sentenced to death. Three boys, one a negro and two white, are under sentence in Oklahoma now. Within three days the Oklahoma Leader received nearly 2,000 ballots containing many interesting angles and viewpoints on capital punishment.—J. F. G.

City editor of small town newspaper was astonished to find his cub reporter bringing in so many personal and society items with an apparent minimum amount of work. He learned his cub had developed some real sources of news, as follows: Baggage and transfer company drivers told him whose trunks they had hauled each day, and he kept better tab on people arriving or leaving town than by meeting trains; greenhouse proprietor kept him posted on sick people, through the orders he received for flowers; the town's only ice cream factory lined him up on special gatherings because it was the custom to order ice cream for almost all parties; postoffice clerk handling forwarded addresses gave him an abundance of personals; ambulance driver for hospital kept him posted and messenger boy for telegraph company was bribed into passing out information on death messages he delivered. If you know your small town's customs, here are sources worth cultivating.—E. J. L.

The Goshen (N. Y.) Independent-Republican has been running for some time a series of historical and genealogical articles on the arly history of Orange County, New York. Most of the contributions have come from old families. Consequently much data of historical nature has been rescued and preserved. Some day the Independent-Republican's files will be eagerly sought after. Pernaps your paper may be the means of preserving the early history of your community.—G. H. D.

"The setting hen" has taken its place as a new title alongside of 'The jay walker." The former is given to the motorist who parks his car anywhere, anytime and anyhow without any regard for rules and regulations. What do police and automobile officials think about him?—J. M. M.

Many churches in small towns have relegated their church bells to the dark ages. Is there a bell ringing in your city, and if so, get the janitor of the church to tell you something of the history. The meat of the story will provide any good writer with a remarkably interesting feature, since many people do not favor the disuse of the old church bells.—A. K. C.

In order to stimulate interest in nature study the Nyessa News awarded a "degree"—Nyessa Naturalist—to any youngster who could identify ten trees, twenty-five wild flowers, ten animals, and ten birds. If the "woods spirit" is instilled in the youth, coming generations will have no wood problem. Perhaps you could run a series of brief articles on the wild life in your community and then award your own degree. You'll be surprised at the number of interested youths.—G. H. D

Every city, large or small, has its favorite men "gossip" centres, especially in cold weather. Send a live reporter, one who is a good "mixer," has a sense of humor and can write a good yarn, to some of these congregating places. Barber shops, shoe shining parlors and small corner stores offer rich material. Human interest stuff can be picked up and often a tip for a good story.—F. C. D.

There's always a lot of talk at Christmas time about the tired salespeople in retail stores. Just what makes these salespeople so tired in your city? Here could be made the basis for an interesting and rather unusual story. Find out how many people an average salesperson waits on during the course of a day at the holiday season, how many times goods are taken down from shelves and put back again, how many words a day are spoken by an average salesperson. And so on. All this could be made into an interesting yarn.—F. H. W.

"What ought to be done about it?" is a department in which club women express views on various problems, of establishing high standards of living. It appears in the women's section of the Cleveland Sunday News-Leader. As would be expected, photos accompany.—J. M. M.

Those newspapers featuring agricultural departments would doubtless find that readers would respond to the query: "What do you plan to do on your farm next year?" Farmers are making those plans right now, and I believe they would tell about them in letters to the newspaper if asked to do so.

Million Dollar
Hearst
Features

The World's Greatest Circulatio
Builders

International
Feature Service, Inc.
New York

America's Greates
Scientific Even
will be covered by SPECIAL WIRE STORIES
By Dr. Edwin E. Slosso

The American Association fo Advancement of Science Mee
at Boston, Dec. 26 to 30.
500-word wire stories for bo morning and afternoon pape will be filed each day.
Cost: $5 a story.
The leaders in American r search will be there.
Big news is sure to break.
Wire to close territory.

SCIENCE SERVICE
1115 Conn. Ave., Washington, D.

America's Best Magazine Page
Daily and Sunday

Newspaper Feature Servi
241 WEST 58TH STREET
New York City

In New Orleans it's
THE ITEM

The Pittsburgh Po

*A newspaper of charc ter, integrity and ente
prise which has earn the confidence of the pe ple of the world's greate industrial district.*

DAILY and SUNDAY

Tell Your Business Building Story In—

EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER

"It's As Necessary As Ink"

It Will Live and Work for You Every Day During 1923

This is the book that answers 50,000 questions about the Newspaper and advertising business and is therefore indispensable to the National Advertiser—Advertising Agent—Publisher—Special Representative—Editor—Equipment Manufacturer

Contents of the International Year Book Number will include:

——Names of publishers, editors, managing editors, city editors, general managers, business managers, advertising managers, circulation managers, mechanical superintendents of the daily newspapers of the United States and Canada, including more than 20,000 names, with titles.

——Circulation and advertising rates of the daily newspapers of the United States and Canada.

——and hundreds of other facts and statistics that can be found in no other single volume.

NOTE: All advertisements appearing in the regular issue of EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER (out in January) will be carried in the special extra cloth-bound edition without additional charge.

RESERVE YOUR SPACE TODAY——BY WIRE

1913

THE NEW YORK GLOBE

Member A.B.C. JASON ROGERS, Publisher Member A.B.C.

1922

THOSE advertisers who are inclined to bemoan their fate because they are asked to pay slightly more for their advertising today than they did before the war should be shocked at their good fortune and surprised at the small part of the increased cost of production that has been passed on to them.

In 1913 there were comparatively few 3-cent newspapers—The Boston Transcript, The Brooklyn Eagle, The New York Evening Post—and a few others of very limited circulation.

Today all our New York evening newspapers are sold at 3 cents a copy and circulations in total are greater than they were in 1913.

The reader is carrying more than his share of the heavy added expense for print paper and labor, while the advertiser today, in the case of The New York Globe, only pays 8 cents more per line per million of circulation.

In 1913 the average daily circulation of The New York Globe was 143,489 and the minimum foreign rate was 28 cents per line, or $1.91 per line per million circulation.

In 1922, with 166,237 daily circulation (last A.B.C. report) the minimum rate is 33 cents, or $1.99 per line per million circulation.

In 1913 it cost $1,100,000 to produce The Globe as compared with $2,800,000 for the year 1921, and probably $2,500,000 for 1922.

These are facts the advertiser should know.

Our newspapers are giving the advertiser greater efficiency and opportunity than he could produce if he were to undertake to manufacture the space he buys.

1913

LORENZEN & THOMPSON, Inc.

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVES

New York Chicago Detroit St. Louis San Francisco Los Angeles

1922

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 — The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America — 1922

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday preceding the date of publication—by the Editor & Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Branch Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.

Vol. 55. No. 27—Second Section | NEW YORK, DECEMBER 2, 1922 | By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. | Pages I to XXVIII

First Publication of

KING-CRANE REPORT ON THE NEAR EAST

A Suppressed Official Document of the United States Government

Editorial Note—Problems of the Near East again hold the attention of the peoples of the world, and as a result, all channels of information are flooded with propaganda that has as its source foreign interests, in many cases with selfish intent. Americans have but a limited knowledge of the hates and greeds that have repeatedly carried the peoples of the Near East into war and endangered the peace of the world. This report is founded upon impartial and thorough investigation by Americans for Americans and is presented at this time for the guidance of editors and writers.

...ed by International

Secret diplomacy won. Now it is collecting, and in the Near East millions are pleading for bread

PAGE INDEX TO SUPPLEMENT CONTENTS

...lap of Turkey and Asia Minor XXVI
...ntroduction ..... II, III
...he Balfour Declaration on Zionism III
...he Report Upon Syria IV
...opulation Estimates V
...ummaries of Petitions Received In Syria V
...pecific Requests of Syrian Peoples VI
...rea under British Occupation (O.E.T.A. West) VI
...rea Under French Occupation VII
...rea Under Arab Occupation VII
...ilicia and Mesopotamia VIII
General Considerations on Syrian Report VIII
Recommendation for Treatment of Syria IX
Zionism X
Single Mandate for All Syria X
The Report Upon Mesopotamia XI
The Report Upon Non-Arabic Speaking Portions of Former Ottoman Empire XI
Pertinent Action Taken by the Peace Conference XII
Dangers of Selfish Division and Exploitation of the Turkish Empire XII
Proper Division of the Turkish Empire XIII
Problem of a Separate Armenia XIV
Estimates of Population of An Armenian State .. XV
Problem of a Separate Constantinopolitan State .. XVI
Problem of a Turkish State XVI
Problem of the Greeks XVII
Summary of the Commission's Recommendations XVIII
Confidential Appendix of the Commission XX
" " " " " XXII
" " " " " XXIV
" " " " " XXVI

TURKEY — WORLD CENTER OF NEWS INTERES

The Vital Significance of the Report That Follows

FACTS are first. The world is askew today because facts have been concealed or perverted. If in 1918-1919, the world had seen the international situation, stripped of all camouflage, with every secret treaty opened and every national condition made clear, it would have insisted upon a totally different outcome of events. Today's world tragedy is an illustration of the old teaching that "Where there is no vision the people perish"; and of the later word, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

One of the great suppressed documents of the peace-making period was the comprehensive King-Crane Report upon conditions in Turkey. This was the work of the official American Commission sent from Paris when the question of mandates in Turkey was up before the "Big Four." It went out with instructions to report the facts as it found them. The text makes clear why the Report should have been rigorously concealed by a then spineless State Department. Yet if it had been published promptly, as intended, it would completely have altered the current of events in Turkey; and possibly also have changed the whole American attitude toward post-war international responsibilities. Certainly it would have freed us from a flood of unfounded propaganda; and it might easily have saved the lives of possibly a million persons, needlessly sacrificed since the war.

There would have been no need of a Lausanne Conference, or of a Graeco-Turkish war, or of a disruption of allied co-operation in the Near East, or of any of the tragic and tremendous events there which now threaten the wreck of civilization, if the King-Crane Report had been published.

Uncolored and authenticated and disseminated facts are more powerful than any of the schemes of statesmen or conclusions of conferences.

Today Editor & Publisher gives to the newspaper-makers of the world, and to the general public, as a timely and essential source-book of facts—the facts that have been most needed and least known—the full text of this long-suppressed, much-discussed King-Crane Report.

The document is one that is needed by every editorial writer in the world; every teacher or student of history; every clergyman and friend of missions and education in the Levant; every person doing business in the Near East; every member of Congress; every foreign office everywhere;—in short, everybody who, in a propaganda-ridded day, desires a body of uncolored and unquestioned facts concerning the most important present international issue.

Not all the conclusions of the report are today applicable. Alas, the consequences it predicted have come to pass in many respects. The vindication of the value of the findings lies in the calamities which have since overtaken the Near East. Nevertheless, there is a flood of light shed upon present obscurities by this document.

It tactfully but fearlessly reveals the clashing ambitions of the allies at Constantinople.

It exposes the evils of the secret treaties.

It makes clear the glaring contrast between the solemn pledges of the European nations to the peoples of the Near East and their imperialistic course.

It conservatively portrays the passion of these ancient peoples for America, and their confidence in her integrity, good will and unselfishness.

It shows plainly why America should not have taken a mandate for Armenia alone.

It boldly lays down a project for a Pan-Turkish mandate, in three groups, for America; which the allies, who wanted Turkish loot, by no means favored; and which time and events have now made impracticable.

It sets forth, so that even a wayfaring man may not err, the basic conditions of the Near East.

It pronounces the doom of Zionism.

It portrays an incredible co-operation between Moslems and Christians, in pursuit of the goal of "self-determination."

It shows, with uncanny prescience, the effect of the Smyrna massacres by the Greeks upon the reawakening of the Turks.

It proves the untenability of European claims upon Turkish territory.

Likewise it makes plain the unfitness of the old Ottoman Empire to rule or to continue to live.

It nullifies the censorship and propaganda which have veiled the facts concerning the Near East from the eyes of the world.

This report, in the highest sense, is a journalistic triumph. For it shows how a small group of American reporters, or investigators, took an assignment to find out the bed-rock facts upon one of the most clouded and intricate international situations in the world. They went about their task with all the canniness, caution and courage of good correspondents. Moreover, they not only fearlessly discovered the facts and clearly set them forth, but they also followed them to their conclusions.

Ignorance, bias and selfish interests, aided by their trusty handmaidens, censorship and propaganda, had brought the Paris Peace Conference to a standstill upon the disposition of Turkey. There was no agreement upon the fundamental facts of the case.

Thereupon President Wilson proposed that a joint allied Commission should be sent to Turkey to ascertain the true conditions, and especially the desires of the peoples concerned, respecting the nations which should become mandatories, as was the oft-expressed intent of the peacemakers. This, be it remembered, was in the days when the principle of "self-determination" and the other allied war aims still retained a degree of sanctity. So obviously right and reasonable was President Wilson's suggestion, that the other three members of the "Big Four" agreed "in principle."

"In principle" is a venerable and invaluable diplomatic phrase; in this case, as so often, it meant the opposite of "in practice." For the European nations shilly-shallied for a time and then refused to send out commissions. Apparently, the facts were the last things that were desired in some quarters. So the American Commissioners of the International Commission on Mandates in Turkey went alone, fully accredited.

It cannot too often or too strongly be said that the King-Crane Report supersedes all the views and counsel of speakers and writers who are "Near Eastern experts." Most of the latter, from entirely honorable motives, are partisans of one or more of the many sides of this question which today has the world by the throat.

America is full of propaganda that is perilous. For example, a large body of churchmen, who are apparently quite ignorant of the facts involved in re events in Anatolia, and who have ne heard of atrocities by Greeks, such are on official record, are clamoring America send an army and a navy to Mediterranean to do something or o to the Turks! This is, of course, s hysteria, which will break on the gra courage and knowledge and good sens Secretary of State Hughes; but i nevertheless an awesome spectacle of possibility of how an uninformed den racy might precipitate the gravest sequences.

There are many eloquent speakers, writers with moving pens, who are ing an extraordinary effect upon the lic opinion of America today, in pivotal matter of the Near East. S of them are pro-Turk; some are Greek; many are pro-Armenian; are pro-Zionist; a few are pro-Syr pro-Bulgarian, pro-Arab, or pro-E tian. Others, in great number, are British, pro-French, pro-Italian or German. Most of them function sincere conviction: only a few are hirelings.

It is a service of highest value Editor & Publisher does in discred and largely nullifying these by pres ing the cold, matured facts in the as fully gathered and feerlessly state a responsible, unbiased American of investigators.

If the leaders of American thought this document through carefully, and file it for future reference, the pr gandist may be silenced. And it is plain duty of the press to do ex this thing. Try as they may, newspa cannot always escape the taint of fo propaganda in news received from ab But at least they may combat pr ganda at home. The peace of the w and the safety of our country, require foreign propaganda be dealt with v ously by men whose sanity is str than their sentimentalism.

Perhaps the post-war cleavage bet the policies of the Allies and of United States, and the basis for the K Crane Commission, were never more cinctly explained than by President son's first allusion in Paris to the work of secret treaties that there revealed:

> "As the United States of Amer were not bound by any of the sec treaties in question, they are q ready to approve a settlement the basis of facts."

Secret treaties largely caused the they certainly prolonged it; and wrecked the peace. Out of secret tr has grown that international di which is probably the gravest factor world full of evil forces. Secret tr have made war-time allies presen enemies. They have begotten in Am a lack of confidence in the natio the Old World that is the real reaso this country's holding aloof from national obligations. If it were n the secret treaties, disclosed at there would have been a different k League of Nations, and the United would have been in it. There is s no measuring the harm that has done to humanity by the perpetuati this first characteristic of the ol plomacy.

Most of these secret treaties co Turkey, the choicest bit of war lo the victors. The first of the lot h do with Constantinople, and the so far as the world knows—dealt Mosul and its oil; and this treaty drawn up by the British and Fren February, 1919, a month after the conference, with its pledge of "oper enants, openly arrived at," had for opened. Any honest man may be ex for the use of strong language in c terizing this impenitent diplomacy stultified the soldier dead and the for which they died.

THE TURKISH NATIONALIST PACT

FREQUENT allusions, in dispatches from the Near East and from Lausanne, to the "Turkish Nationalist Pact," have not made clear to the American public the portentousness of Nationalist Turkey's "Declaration of Independence," adopted by the Angora Assembly in January, 1920. This is the document which the Turks declare is the irreducible minimum of their claims at Lausanne:

"The Members of the Ottoman Chamber of Deputies recognize and affirm that the independence of the State and the future of the Nation can be assured by complete respect for the following principles, which represent the maximum of sacrifice which can be undertaken in order to achieve a just and lasting peace, and that the continued existence of a stable Ottoman Sultanate and society is impossible outside of the said principles:

"First Article.—Inasmuch as it is necessary that the destinies of the portions of the Turkish Empire which are populated exclusively by an Arab majority, and which on the conclusion of the armistice of the 30th of October, 1918, were in the occupation of enemy forces, should be determined in accordance with the votes which shall be freely given by the inhabitants, the whole of those parts, whether within or outside the said armistice line, which are inhabited by an Ottoman Moslem majority, united in religion, in race and in aim, imbued with sentiments of mutual respect for each other and of sacrifice, and wholly respectful of each other's racial rights and surrounding conditions, form a whole which does not admit of division for any reason in truth or in ordinance.

"Second Article.—We accept that, in the case of the three Sanjaks which united themselves by a general vote to the mother country when they first were free, recourse should again be had, if necessary to a free popular vote.

"Third Article.—The determination of the juridical status of Western Thrace also, which has been made dependent on the Turkish peace, must be effected in accordance with the votes which shall be given by the inhabitants in complete freedom.

"Fourth Article.—The security of the city of Constantinople, which is the seat of the Caliphate of Islam, the capital of the Sultanate, and the headquarters of the Ottoman Government, and of the Sea of Marmora must be protected from every danger. Provided this principle is maintained, whatever decision may be arrived at jointly by us and all other Governments concerned, regarding the opening of the Bosphorus to the commerce and traffic of the world, is valid.

"Fifth Article.—The rights of minorities as defined in the treaties concluded between the Entente Powers and their enemies and certain of their associates shall be confirmed and assured by us—in reliance on the belief that the Moslem minorities in neighboring countries also will have the benefit of the same rights.

"Sixth Article.—It is a fundamental condition of our life and continued existence that we, like every country, should enjoy complete independence and liberty in the matter of assuring the means of our development, in order that our national and economic development should be rendered possible and that it should be possible to conduct affairs in the form of a more up-to-date regular administration.

"For this reason we are opposed to restrictions inimical to our development in political, judicial, financial, and other matters.

"The conditions of settlement of our proved debts shall likewise not be contrary to these principles.

"January 28, 1920."

Note—This document is not a part of the King-Crane Report, but is presented to bring up-to-date the information contained in this supplement.

Summarized, the principal secret treaties among the allies, or sub-divisions of the allies, are given below. They must be borne in mind if the King-Crane report is to be understood.

Ever since the days of Peter the Great, Russia had coveted Constantinople, so, in March, 1915, by a series of three notes exchanged between Russia, France and Great Britain, Constantinople was promised to Russia, after the allies had won the war. The other allies were to have compensations elsewhere in Turkey, and Britain was also to be given the "neutral zone" in Persia, with its rich petroleum perquisites. This treaty also provided for independent rule of the Moslem holy cities, and, if possible, the caliphate was to be taken away from the Turks. By it, Britain abandoned her historic policy of nursing "The Sick Man of Europe." When the Revolutionists came into power in Russia, they renounced this treaty, and made a battle-cry of the phrase, "No annexations and no contributions (indemnities)."

Most sordid and cynical and shameless of all the secret treaties, and described by Mr. Balfour at one of the Peace Conference sessions in a cynical and sardonic speech that is perhaps unmatched in the annals of friendly international negotiations, was "The Treaty of London," signed in April, 1915. This was Italy's price for entering the war. In addition to giving Italy amazing stretches of territory within the Austrian Empire, and the best port in Albania, and making the Adriatic an Italian lake, plus territorial extensions in Africa, the treaty awarded the Italians the Dodocanese Islands in the Aegean, off the shore of Turkey, and territory in Turkey equal to what Britain and France would get! Incidentally, the Italians demanded a share of the German indemnity, and a loan from Great Britain of £50,000,000.

By a later secret treaty, in April, 1917, Italy was promised a still larger zone in Anatolia, and Smyrna also, if the Russians agreed. Since revolutionary Russia was about to denounce secret treaties, never approved. Consequently, Paris had heated discussions as to Italian rights in Smyrna; and the squabble ended in the Greek expedition of May 15, 1919, to circumvent the Italians. It was this adventure, with its attendant excesses, which called into existence the Turkish nationalist movement, which has since come victorious over the Christian powers. If there had been no secret treaties there would be no Near Eastern crisis today.

As early as March, 1916, what is known as the Sazanof-Paleologue Treaty between Russia and France, gave to Russia the land lying between Persia and the Black Sea. It extended France's respective territory in Turkey over a large section of Asia Minor and Syria, down to the Tigris River.

Two months later came the famous and troublesome "Sykes-Picot Agreement," between France and Great Britain. By this secret treaty, France was to have Syria down as far as the famous Cruiser port of Acre. Great Britain was to have Haifa, potentially the best port on the coast. She was also to receive Lower Mesopotamia. The cities of Damascus, Homs and Aleppo were to go to some future "Arab State"—and already King Hussein, of the Hejaz, was on Great Britain's payroll! Explicitly, no other power—meaning Italy—was to be allowed any rights in the Arabic-speaking parts of the Ottoman Empire.

From the day of its signing until now, the agreement has been smeared with oil, and other forms of commercialism and imperialistic exploitation, as the reader of the King-Crane Report has seen. One of the strawest sessions of the plenipotentiaries at Paris was held in Lloyd George's apartment on March 20. It was part of this acrimonious discussion that there was born President Wilson's suggestion for the sending of a commission of inquiry to Turkey, which resulted in the King-Crane Report. He said:*

"The point of view of the United States was . . . indifferent to the claims and policy of Great Britain and France over Turkey, unless those peoples wanted them. One of the fundamental principles upon which the United States adhered was the consent of the governed. . . . . The present controversy . . . . broadened into a case affecting the peace of the whole world. . . . He would send it (the Commission) with carte blanche to tell the facts as they found them."

So against the old diplomacy of secret treaties and intrigues, America opposed the basic journalistic principle of the facts, fully and fearlessly stated.

Looking backward, it now seems rather guileless of President Wilson and America and the little nations to have assumed that the facts of international conditions should determine conclusions. We today understand that the secret treaties, and not the war aims that fired the hearts of the allied soldiers, and not the ascertained actualities, fixed the outcome of negotiations. The poison of those bargains and intrigues so vitiated the atmosphere at Paris that all possibility of true faith disappeared. Distrust supplanted confidence and good will.

America's ignorance of the secret treaties, which nullified all of our guiding principles in carrying on the war, was shared by the peoples of the allied nations.

THE BALFOUR DECLARATION

SELDOM in history has so brief a document been the foundation of so great a world-commotion as the Balfour Declaration upon Zionism. It is merely a single sentence of sixty-eight words, addressed by Mr. A. J. Balfour, on November 2, 1917, to Lord Rothschild. Yet the Zionists of every country acclaimed it as the charter of a new state, the assurance of a new day for universal Jewry.

The text has been continuously under a microscope, and the phrase, "a national home" is still a matter of controversy. In the bitter struggle that has raged over the Declaration, the Zionists have stressed the first half of the nicely-balanced document; while the Anti-Zionists, especially in Syria, have laid emphasis upon the latter portion. The British tax-payer and the House of Lords has laid anathema upon it all!

Here is the full text of the Declaration:—

"His Majesty's government view with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object; it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

NOTE—This document is not a part of the King-Crane Report, but is presented to bring up to date the information contained in this supplement.

Even when the Bolsheviks made public these documents which rubbed off the glamor of allied idealism, the world gave no real heed. Trustful America was least of all aware of the existence of these secret treaties: President Wilson heard of them first at Paris.

That is why the Americans thought that a Commission to find out and report the facts would be finally determinative. They could not escape from the dominance of those ideals of self-determination" or "consent of the governed" which had come down from Declaration of Independence days. With a rude jolt our people learned, or will learn after reading the King-Crane report, that the peoples released from Turkey's sway by the war got what they did not want.

This fact-finding commission heard the voice of the little peoples clamoring for American leadership and protection: such is the note that prevades the dryest section of the report like an aroma: but their cry fell on deaf ears in Paris.

Throughout the Orient, in thousands of cafes and caravansaries and conferences of neighbor with neighbor, wonderment has been expressed by Turk, Greek, Arab, Armenian, Jew, Syrian, and Druze, not to mention Europeans, as to what has become of the American Mission and its report, which they all dreamed would bring tranquillity and a new order to the troubled Near East. They know the reality of the application of the secret treaties and the strife they have caused; they do not understand the disappearance of the Great Hope which the American Commission represented.

After all, the secret treaties, applied, have had their chance, and failed. They have brought no boon to any one of the covetous European powers that its own people would not gladly now have it surrender. The apparent gains have proved to be only real losses and tragedy. Europe is hated today in the East because her old discredited way prevailed after the armistice, instead of the new way of the welfare of the peoples concerned. It needs only a strong drive by the press of America, and by the liberal press of Europe, to make secret treaties forever outlaw and anathema.

Fancy suggests that perhaps the scimitar of the Turk has severed the Gordian knot of diplomatic entanglements which could not be untied at Paris. It may be that there is anew, in a greatly limited sense, an opportunity for the application of certain of the fair, free, fact-based recommendations of the King-Crane Commission.

The Report given herewith is its findings. EDITOR & PUBLISHER presents the entire document in full, omitting only the tables of contents, substituting instead, where necessary, additional headlines that will indicate the nature of the separate sections. Footnotes are added to bring the story up to date.

In addition to the King-Crane Report, this present publication contains a Summary of the Treaty of Sevres, the Balfour Declaration upon Zionism, the Turkish Nationalist Pact, the Guarantee given the subject peoples of Turkey by Great Britain and France, and such other documents as may shed light upon the present world crisis around the eastern Mediterranean.

The report of the American Military Mission to Armenia, headed by Major General James G. Harbord, now Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army, dealing with its investigations in Turkey and the Caucasus, in the fall of 1919, cannot be published herewith, because of its length. It is available to the public at the Government Printing Office, as Senate Document No. 266, and is indispensable to everyone who would understand the Armenian situation and America's possible relation thereto. These quotations fairly show the conclusions of this Harbord report and their agreement with the findings of the King-Crane Report:

"A plebiscite fairly taken would in all probability ask for an American mandate throughout the Empire. * * * In its belief that the Armenian problem is only to be solved by a mandatory which should include also Constantinople, Anatolia, Turkish Armenia, and the Transcaucasus, the Mission has the concurrence of many Americans whose views, by reason of long residence in the Near East, are entitled to great weight. Such Americans are practically a unit in believing that the problems of Armenia, Anatolia, Constantinople and Transcaucasia must be considered as an inseparable whole.

"No duty of modern times would be undertaken under so fierce a glare of publicity. Such a mandate would hold the center of the international stage with the spotlight from every foreign office and from every church steeple in the world focussed upon it. No nation could afford to fail, or to withdraw when once committed to this most serious and difficult problem growing out of the great war. No nation incapable of united and nonpartisan action for a long period should undertake it.

"We would again point out that if America accepts a mandate for the region visited by this mission, it will undoubtedly do so from a strong sense of international duty, and at the unanimous desire—so expressed at least—of its colleagues in the League of Nations. Accepting this difficult task without previously securing the assurance of conditions, would be fatal ot success. The United States should make its own conditions as a preliminary to consideration of the subject—certainly before and not after acceptances, for there are a multitude of interests that will conflict with what any American would consider a proper administration of the country. Every possible precaution against international complications should be taken in advance. In our opinion there should be specific pledges in terms of formal agreements with France and England, and definite approval from Germany and Russia of the dispositions made of Turkey and Transcaucasia, and a pledge to respect them."

Turkey has been the acid test of the loyalty of the Allies to their plighted faith. All the world knows what tragic consequences have befallen mankind because Europe was not equal to the opportunity of the new day. At least three governments have fallen in as many separate lands, and the legitimate ambitions of no less than three oppressed nationalities have been thwarted, because, as the report makes clear, the diplomats of Europe could not rise to the level of their soldiers in France.

Whether also the wonderful new spirit and aspiration of the Eastern peoples, called into life by the Allied war aims, have been permanently dashed and deadened, only events can tell. Certainly this report was penned at the day of the opportunity of ages.

From a newspaper standpoint, the King-Crane Report may be criticised for its failure to "play up" the sensational zeal for America which it encountered everywhere. By cumulative facts and statistics it does make plain that America is first in the hearts of the people of Bible lands. Modesty and self-restraint doubtless kept it from attempting to tell a tale that is really beyond America's understanding. "They little know of America, who only America know." General Harbord puts the subject straightforwardly in the conclusion of his report:

"Without visiting the Near East, it is not possible for an American to realize even faintly, the respect, faith and affection with which our country is regarded throughout that region. Whether it is the world-wide reputation which we enjoy for fair dealing, a tribute, perhaps to the crusading spirit which carried us into the Great War, not untinged with hope that the same spirit may urge us into the solution of great problems growing out of that conflict, or whether due to unselfish and impartial missionary and educationa influence exerted for a century, it is the one faith which is held alike by Christian and Moslem, by Jew and Gentile, by prince and peasant in the Near East. It is very gratifying to the pride of Americans far from home. But it brings with it the heavy responsibility of leciding great questions with a seriousness worthy of such faith. Burdens that might be assumed on the appeal of such sentiment would have to be carried for not less than a generation under circumstances so trying that we might easily forfeit the faith of the world. If we refuse to assume it, for no matter what reasons satisfactory to ourselves, we shall be considered by many millions of people as having left unfinished the tack for which we entered the war, and as having betrayed their hopes.

Although it is likened to a great journalistic investigation, the Report differs from a newspaper story in that it masses at the beginning the apparently uninteresting detailed data. These are, however, the essential foundation for the tremendous generalizations that follow. We have omitted nothing from the Report, however "dry" it may appear to a cursory glance. Every line is as submitted, except that the tables of contents are left out, and the detailed Syrian tabulations, which are covered by the summary.

The Commission's spelling of native names is followed, although in some cases it departs from the common usage.

One further explanatory paragraph. Naturally, as is accounted for by the date of its production, this Report assumes that there would be erected by the Paris Conference an effective League of Nations, of which the United States would be a member. It all must be read in terms of what might have been; as well as for its bearing upon present conditions.

*See "The Turkish Empire as Booty," which is Chapter Four of Volume One of Ray Stannard Baker's "Woodrow Wilson and World Settlement."

REPORT OF AMERICAN SECTION OF INTER-ALLIED COMMISSION ON MANDATES IN TURKEY

An Official United States Government Report

THE American Commissioners of the projected International Commission on Mandates in Turkey, herewith submit their final report upon the Syrian portion of their task.

The Commission's conception of its mission was defined in the following statement, which was given to the press wherever the Commission went:

"The American Section of the International Commission on Mandates in Turkey, in order that their mission may be clearly understood, are furnishing to the press the following statement, which is intended to define as accurately as possible the nature of their task, as given to them by President Wilson.

"The American people—having no political ambitions in Europe or the Near East; preferring, if that were possible, to keep clear of all European, Asian, or African entanglements; but nevertheless sincerely desiring that the most permanent peace and the largest results for humanity shall come out of this war—recognize that they cannot altogether avoid responsibility for just settlements among the nations following the war, and under the League of Nations. In that spirit they approach the problems of the Near East.

"An International Commission was projected by the Council of Four of the Peace Conference to study conditions in the Turkish Empire with reference to possible mandates. The American Section of that Commission is in the Near East simply and solely to get as accurate and definite information as possible concerning the conditions, the relations, and the desires of all the peoples and classes concerned; in order that President Wilson and the American people may act with full knowledge of the facts in any policy they may be called upon hereafter to adopt concerning the problems of the Near East—whether in the Peace Conference or in the later League of Nations.

"This statement of the mission of the Commission is in complete harmony with the following paragraph from the Covenant of the League of Nations, particularly referring to portions of the former Turkish Empire:

" 'Certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a Mandatory until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the Mandatory.' "

The Commission had in its survey of Syria the assistance of Dr. Albert H. Lybyer, Dr. George R. Montgomery, and Capt. William Yale, U. S. A., as advisors; of Capt. Donald M. Brodie, U. S. A., as secretary and treasurer; of Dr. Sami Haddad, instructor in the School of Medicine of the Syrian Protestant College of Beirut, as physician and interpreter; of Mr. Laurence S. Moore as business manager; and of Sergt.-Major Paul O. Toren as stenographer. The advisors had all been previously connected as experts with the Peace Conference in Paris, and had been students of the special problems of the Near East.

The report naturally falls into three divisions: Data, General, Considerations, and Recommendations.

The Commission had already familiarized itself before leaving Paris with the full and varied reports and material coming into the office of the Western Asia Division of the experts of the American Section of the Peace Conference, and with considerable other literature bearing on the Near East. The survey of Syria was made in the light of all this previous study.

1. THE REPORT UPON SYRIA

The method of the Commission, in its inquiry in Syria, was to meet in conference individuals and delegations who should represent all the significant groups in the various communities, and so to obtain as far as possible the opinions and desires of the whole people. The process itself was inevitably a kind of political education for the people, and, besides actually bringing out the desires of the people, had at least further value in the simple consciousness that their wishes were being sought. We were not blind to the fact that there was considerable propaganda; that often much pressure was put upon individuals and groups; that sometimes delegations were prevented from reaching the Commission; and that the representative authority of many petitions was questionable. But the Commission believes that these anomalous elements in the petitions tend to cancel one another when the whole country is taken into account, and that, as in the composite photograph, certain great, common emphases are unmistakable.

The Commissioners were struck, on the other hand, with the large degree of frankness with which opinions were expressed to them, even where there was evident fear of consequences. In this respect the American Section had an evident advantage, which could not have held for a mixed Commission. Moreover, the nearly universal recognition of the fact that America sought no additional territory was favorable to a frank expression of opinion.

The direct data, furnished by the inquiry in Syria, are given in a series of tables, prepared by the Secretary of the Commission, and based immediately upon the Conferences of the Commission and the petitions there presented.

The area and towns covered by the Commission's inquiry are shown in the following itinerary for June 10 to July 21, 1919, and in the table of the towns, classified according to the different divisions of the Occupied Enemy Territory Administrations—British, French, and Arab. These tables show that the Commission visited 36 of the more important towns of Syria, scattered through all the military areas, and heard delegations from other important centers. It should be noted that the list does not include at all the names of hosts of villages in the vicinity of towns visited, which were also represented by delegations before the Commission. Our records show that there were 1,520 such villages. Cilicia was briefly included in the Syrian inquiry, because it is disputed territory claimed both by Syria and by the Turkish-speaking portion of the former Turkish Empire.

THE ITINERARY

June 10—Commission arrived in Jaffa.
11, 12—Interviews at Jaffa.
13—By auto to Tol-a-Viv, Richon-le-Sion and Jerusalem.
14—Jerusalem. Official calls.
15—(Sunday).
16—Jerusalem. Interviews.
17—To Bethlehem, Hebron and Beersheba by auto. Interviews at Bethlehem and Hebron.
18—Interviews at Beersheba, including Gaza delegations. To Jerusalem by auto.
19, 20—Jerusalem. Interviews.
21—By auto to Ramallah and Nablus. Interviews at both places.
22—By auto to Jenin and Nazareth. Interviews at Jenin.
23—Interviews at Nazareth. To Haifa (Mt. Carmel Monastery) by auto. Interviews.
24—To Acre by auto. Interviews. To Nazareth by auto.
25—To Damascus by auto via Tiberias Capernaum.
26—Damascus. Official calls.
27, 28—Damascus. Interviews.
29—(Sunday).
30—Damascus. Interviews.

July 1—To Amman and Dera by train. Interviews at both places.
2, 3—Damascus. Interviews.
4—To Baalbek by auto.
5—Baalbek. Interviews. To Beirut by auto.
6—Beirut (Alieh).
7, 8—Beirut. Interviews.
9—To Jebeil, Batrum, and Bkerke, by auto. Interviews at each place.
10—To Sidon and Tyre by auto. Interviews at both places.
11—To Ainab, Baabda, and Zahle by auto. Interviews at each place.
12—To Tripoli by yacht. Interviews.
13—To Alexandretta by yacht. Interviews.
14—To Ladikiya by yacht. Interviews. To Tripoli by yacht.
15—To Homs by auto.
16—Interviews at Homs. To Hama by auto. Interviews. To Aleppo by train.
17—Aleppo.
18, 19—Aleppo. Interviews.
20—To Adana by train.
21—Adana. Interviews. To Mersina by train, via Tarsus. Interviews at Tarsus and Mersina. Commission left Mersina on U. S. Destroyer "Hazelwood" for Constantinople.

CITIES AND VILLAGES OF SYRIA AT WHICH DELEGATIONS WERE RECEIVED BY THE AMERICAN COMMISSION

I—O. E. T. A. (South)—Under British Military Administration—Comprises Palestine west of Jordan line.
Acre.
Beersheba—(Gaza).*
Bethlehem.
Haifa.
Hebron.
Jaffa (Ludd, Ramleh).
Jenin.
Jerusalem.
Nablus.
Nazareth (Safed, Tiberias).
Ramallah.
Richon-le-Sion.
Tel-a-Viv.

II—O. E. T. A. (East)—Under Arab Military Administration—Comprises all of Syria east of Jordan line and Lebanon boundary.
Aleppo.
Amman (Es-Salt).
Baalbek.
Damascus.
Deraa.
Hama.
Homs.
Moalaka.

III—O. E. T. A. (West)—Under French Military Administration—Comprises Lebanon and Coastal Regions north to Alexandretta.
Ainab.
Alexandretta (Antioch).
Baabda.
Betrun.
Beirut.
Bkerke.
Jebeil.
Ladikiya.
Sidon.
Tripoli.
Tyre.
Zahle.

IV—O. E. T. A. (North)—Under French Military Administration—Comprises Cilicia.
Adana.
Mersina.
Tarsus.

The Secretary's Summarized Statement of Significant conclusions brought out in the Tables of Petitions, gives added information and discussion, greatly needed for a proper interpretation of the petitions and of our entire survey; and is therefore made the concluding section of the Secretary's presentation of data.

SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT CONCLUSIONS.

I. The Value of the Petitions as an Estimate of Public Opinion in Syria:

The 1863 petitions received by the American Commission in Syria and the summary tables prepared from them cannot of course be regarded as a mathematically accurate analysis of the real desires of the peoples of Syria. There are at least five unavoidable difficulties that have qualified their accuracy.

1. The number of the petitions from the different sections of Syria is not proportional to their respective populations, e. g., O. E. T. A.* South, with thirteen cities at which delegations were received is represented by only 260 petitions, while 1,157 petitions were received from O. E. T. A. East, in which but eight cities were visited. As the Commission progressed northward the petitions became more numerous, due to the increased time afforded for knowledge of the Commission's coming, for the preparation of petitions, for the activities of propaganda agents, and for the natural crystallization of public opinion.

2. The number of petitions from the different religious organizations is not proportional to the numerical strength of the religious faiths. This is especially true of the verbal requests made by delegations. In O. E. T. A. South, for instance, on account of the number of sects of the Christian faith, 53 delegations of Christians were received, and only eighteen delegations of Moslems, whereas the Moslem population is fully eight times as large as that of the Christians. This disparity does not, however, hold for the total number of petitions, verbal and written, as it was corrected in part by the large number of petitions from Moslem villages presented to the Commission at Aleppo and other northeastern points.

3. A number of petitions show clearly the influence of organized propaganda. This is sometimes evidenced in the petitions themselves by numerous similarities of phrasing, by many identical wordings, and by a few instances in which printed forms, obviously intended as models for written documents, have been signed and given to the Commission.

In addition to the internal evidence, there were also many external indications of systematic efforts to influence the character of the petitions. The same Arab agent was observed in four cities of Palestine, assisting in the preparation of petitions. Similar activities on the part of French sympathizers were observed in Beirut.

4. In addition to this general propaganda which was entirely legitimate as well as natural and inevitable, it is certain that a small number of petitions were fraudulently secured. In two cases the signatures were in the same handwriting. Three instances of "repeater" signatures were discovered. In addition, the seals of many organizations, purporting to be Trade Unions of Beirut, were discovered to have been ordered by the same propaganda agent a few days before the arrival of the Commission. All possible precautions were taken to insure authenticity of petitions and signatures, but in view of the character of the Commission's survey and the limited facilities for close checking, the genuineness of all cannot be guaranteed.

5. The value of the individual petitions varies also with the number of signatures, although mere numbers cannot be taken as the only criterion. For example, some petitions signed by only a small Municipal Council may represent a larger public opinion than a petition signed by a thousand villagers. The number of signatures is 91,079;* 26,324 for the Petitions of O. E. T. A. South, 26,884 for the Petitions of O. E. T. A. West, and 37,871 for the Petitions of O. E. T. A. East. This represents a general average of 49 signatures for each petition. The number of signatures varies widely from this average, but the totals for the different programs are fairly well equalized.

Yet despite these five qualifications, it is believed that the petitions as summarized present a fairly accurate analysis of present political opinion in Syria. The great majority of irregularities offset one another. The preponderance of Christian petitions in Palestine is balanced by the flood of Moslem appeals at Aleppo.

*Delegations were received from cities and villages named in parenthesis.

Classified list of delegates received will be found on the next page following.

*These initials stand for "Occupied Enemy Territory Administration," but are commonly used as a word, "Oeta," as "British Oeta," "French Oeta," or "Arab Oeta."

DR. HENRY CHURCHILL KING

was born at Hillsdale, Mich., in 1858. He is president of Oberlin College and one of America's best known educators as well as the author of numerous volumes on theology, education and philosophy. During 1918-1919 he was director of religious work for the Y. M. C. A. in France. In September, 1919, he was appointed to serve on the American Section of the Peace Conference Inter Allied Commission on Mandates in Turkey.

CHARLES R. CRANE

was born at Chicago, Ill., in 1858. He was engaged in the manufacturing business in that city for more than a quarter of a century. He was a member of President Wilson's Special Diplomatic Commission to Russia in 1917; was a member of the American Section of the Peace Conference Inter Allied Commission on Mandates in Turkey in 1919; American Ambassador to China from May 1920, to June 1921.

activities of French sympathizers in Tripoli probably did not influence the character of the petitions presented much more than the contrary efforts of the Independent Program representatives in Amman.

The petitions are certainly representative. As the classified list of delegations received by the Commission clearly indicates, the petitions came from a wide range of political, economic, social, and religious classes and organizations. It was generally known throughout Syria that the American Commission would receive in confidence any documents that any individual or group should care to present. In the few cities in which the military authorities sought to exert control, directly or indirectly, over the delegations, without exception the opposition parties found opportunities to present their ideas to the Commission, if not always orally, at least in writing.

*These figures indicate the magnitude of the popular interest in the Commission's work and the vast amount of material it had to handle. The reader should again be reminded that "O. E. T. A. South" was British, or Palestine; "O. E. T. A. West" was French, or Syrian; "O. E. T. A. East" was Arab, and "O. E. T. A. North" was French.

II. Definite Programs Revealed in the Petitions:

Before considering the special requests contained in the petitions, it is advisable to present the six distinct political programs that were clearly revealed in the petitions, and that in some instances were developed during the investigation of the Commission. Of the 1,863 petitions for Syria, 1,364 are exact copies of some of these programs and many others have close resemblances. They are:

1. The Independence Program. The first petitions received by the Commission, those at Jaffa on June 11, except in the case of the Zionist statements, do not give evidence of any agreed and elaborated policy for the future of Syria. The petitions varied greatly in content and wording. There were, however, four of the twenty petitions at Jaffa that contained what may be termed an Independence Program with three "planks" in its platform:

(a) The Political Unity of Syria, including Cilicia on the north, the Syrian Desert on the east, and Palestine, extending as far as Rafa on the south;

(b) Absolute Independence for Syria;

(c) Opposition to a Zionist State and Jewish Immigration.

This program became the dominant note in the petitions presented in O. E. T. A. South. At Jerusalem eight of the twenty-three petitions received contained the Independence Program, with practically identical wording. At Haifa and Nazareth, two of the last cities visited in the district, it constituted 35 and 10 respectively of the 60 and 18 petitions presented. Of the 260 petitions from O. E. T. A. South, 83, or 32 per cent, were simply the Independence Program, while many others closely resembled it. One printed form of this program was received by the Commission as a petition at Jenin, June 22, and doubtless other printed copies had been models for many of the petitions received in the last cities visited.

2. The "Damascus" Program: The original Independence Program was expanded on July 2 by the General Syrian Congress' meeting at Damascus into what came to be known as the Damascus Program. This program contained the three points of the Independence Program, modified by asking "assistance" for the Syrian State from America, or, as second choice, from Great Britain, and expanded by adding:

(a) A rejection of Art. 22 of the League Covenant;

(b) A rejection of all French claims to Syria;

(c) A protest against secret treaties and private agreements (by inference the Sykes-Picot Agreement and the Balfour Declaration);

(d) Opposition to independence for Greater Lebanon;

(e) Request for a democratic, non-centralized government under Emir Feisal; and

(f) A request for the independence and economic freedom of Mesopotamia.

Three petitions with the Damascus program in full had been received by the Commission prior to its adoption by the Syrian Congress. After that date 1,047 of the 1,473 petitions received during that period contained this program. Of that number 964 were on printed blanks, of which there were seven distinct "forms" with the program printed in full.

3. The Lebanon Programs: There are three distinct types of Lebanese Programs that appear in the petitions:

(a) The French Independent Greater Lebanon. This program asks for complete independence and separation from Syria for the Greater Lebanon, including the Valley of Bekaa and in some instances Tripoli. France is asked for as the mandatory Power. 139 of the 146 petitions received in O. E. T. A. West contain this program, with practically identical word-

POPULATION ESTIMATES

AN estimate of the population of the different districts is added at this point, for a better understanding of the tables and discussion which follow. The figures in all cases must be regarded as only approximate, but may be taken as giving a fairly accurate view of the proportions of the population.

	O. E. T. A. South	O. E. T. A. West	O. E. T. A. East	Totals
Moslems	515,000	600,000	1,250,000	2,365,000
Christians	62,500	400,000	125,000	587,500
Druses	.....	60,000	80,000	140,000
Jews	65,000	15,000	30,000	110,000
Others	5,000	20,000	20,000	45,000
Totals	647,500	1,095,009	1,505,000
Grand Total				3,247,500

CLASSIFIED LIST OF DELEGATIONS RECEIVED

THE tables showing the classes and number of delegations met by the Commission, should make clear how varied the population is, and also that no vital interest or element of the population has been omitted in the inquiry. At the same time it should be carefully borne in mind that the number of delegations is no proper index of the proportions of the population. The Christian population is divided into so many small groups that it is represented in the tables by a larger number of delegations than the Moslem majority.

	South	O. E. T. A. East	West	Total
I—Political Groups:
1. Mayors and Municipal Councils	12	9	13	34
2. Administrative Councils	2	7	6	15
3. Councils of Village Chiefs	22	20	23	65
4. Arab Sheikhs	6	22	2	30
5. Arab Societies	2	1	2	5
6. Moslem Christian Committees	3	1	0	4
Total Political Groups	47	60	46	153
II—Economic and Social Groups:
1. Professions and Trades	1	6	10	17
2. Farmers, etc.	1	4	1	6
3. Young Men's Clubs	1	5	1	7
4. Chambers of Commerce	1	0	0	1
5. Miscellaneous Groups	1	1	8	10
Total Economic and Social Groups	5	16	20	41
III—Religious Groups:
A—Christians—
1. General Christian Groups (Composite)	7	3	3	13
2. General Catholic Groups	0	0	5	5
*3. Christian Ladies	0	3	2	5
4. Protestants	9	5	7	22
5. Latins	9	2	4	15
6. Greek Orthodox	7	6	12	25
7. Greek Catholic	8	5	6	19
8. Maronites	7	2	7	16
9. Armenians (general groups)	1	0	3	4
10. Armenian Catholics	0	1	0	1
11. Armenian Orthodox	0	2	0	2
12. Syrian Catholics	1	2	1	4
13. Syrian Orthodox	0	3	0	3
14. Chaldean Catholics	1	1	0	2
15. Copts	1	0	0	1
16. Abyssinians	2	0	0	2
	53	36	50	139
B—Moslems
1. Muftis and Ulema	7	7	10	24
2. Moslem Notables	2	10	3	15
3. Moslems (Sunnites)	9	2	10	21
4. Shiites	0	0	2	2
*5. Moslem Ladies	0	2	1	3
6. Turkish Moslems	0	0	4	4
7. Ismailites	0	0	2	2
8. Dervishes	0	1	0	1
9. Circassians	0	2	0	2
	18	24	32	74
C—Other Religious Groups—
1. Jews	14	2	5	21
2. Druses	1	1	5	7
3. Samaritans	1	0	0	1
4. Persians	1	0	0	1
5. Nusairiyeh	0	0	5	5
	17	3	10	35
Total Religious Groups	88	63	97	248
Grand Totals	140	139	163	442

*The simple statement that the women of the East left their historic seclusion to appear before a Commission of American men is a revelation of the new role women are playing in the nationalistic movements in the Orient.

PETITION SUMMARIES—SYRIA COMPLETE

THE tables of summaries of petitions made to the Commission, written or oral or both, reveal the range of the discussions in the conferences, and the chief positions taken by the people. They are given by Military Districts, as well as for Syria as a whole, because the petitions vary considerably with the Districts.

Total Number of Petitions Received: 1863.	No.	Per Cent.
A—Territorial Limits:
*1. For United Syria	1500	80.4
2. For Separate Palestine	6	.32
3. For Separate Palestine under British if French have Syrian Mandate	2	.1
4. For Autonomous Palestine within Syrian State	24	1.29
5. For Independent Greater Lebanon	203	10.9
6. Against Independent Greater Lebanon	1062	57.0
7. For Autonomous Lebanon within Syrian State	33	1.76
8. For Inclusion of Bokaa with Damascus	4	.21
9. For Inclusion of Bokaa with Lebanon	11	.59
10. For Inclusion of Cilicia within Armenian State	3	.16
11. For Inclusion of Cilicia with Syrian State	2	.1
B—Independence:
1. For Absolute Independence of Syria	1370	73.5
2. For Independence of Iraq (Mesopotamia)	1278	68.5
3. For Independence of all Arab Countries	97	5.2
C—Form of Government:
1. For Democratic Kingdom	1107	59.3
2. For Emir Feisal as King	1102	59.
3. For Democratic Representative Government	34	1.82
4. For Guarding of Rights of Minorities	1023	54.9
5. Arabic to be Official Language	5	.27
6. For Abolition of Foreign Capitulations	10	53.
7. For Autonomy of all Provinces of Syria	19	1.02
D—Choice of Mandate:
1. British—
a. For British Mandate	66	3.53
b. For British Mandate if Mandate is obligatory	0
c. For British "Assistance"	4	.21
Total British First Choice	70	3.75
d. For British Mandate as Second Choice	41	2.19
†e. For British "Assistance" as Second Choice	1032	55.3
2. French—
a. For French Mandate	271	14.52
b. For French Mandate if Mandate is obligatory	1	.05
c. For French "Assistance"	2	.1
Total French First Choice	274	14.68
d. For French Mandate as Second Choice	3	.15
e. For French "Assistance" as Second Choice	0
3. American—
a. For American Mandate	57	3.05
b. For American Mandate if Mandate is obligatory	8	.4
c. For American "Assistance"	1064	57.0
Total American First Choice	1129	60.5
d. For American Mandate as Second Choice	8	.4
e. For American "Assistance" as Second Choice	3	.15
4. Choice of Mandate left to Damascus Conference	23	1.23
E—Zionist Program:
1. For Complete Zionist Program (Jewish State and Immigration)	11	.59
2. For Modified Zionist Program	8	.4
3. Against Zionist Program	1350	72.3
F—Protests and Criticisms:
1. Anti-British—
a. General Anti-British Statements	3	.15
b. Specific Criticisms of Administration	0	...
c. Protests against Interference with free access to Commission	0	...
2. Anti-French—
a. General Anti-French Statements	1129	60.5
b. Specific Criticisms of Administrations	24	1.29
c. Protests against Interference with free access to Commission	11	.59
3. Anti-Arab—
a. General Anti-Arab Statements	35	1.87
b. Specific Criticisms of Administration	4	.2
c. Protests against Interference with free access to Commission	0
‡4. Against 22d Article of League Covenant	1033	55.3
5. Against Secret Treaties, especially treaties dividing Syria	988	52.9

*"United Syria" means a Syria without Palestine treated as a separate country. In effect, it is intended as a declaration against Zionism.

†The high figures given for American and British "assistance," rather than for a mandate, are because the people ask first for complete independence.

‡The reason for opposition to Article XXII is set forth by the secretary later on in the report.

ing. Of these twenty are on three varieties of printed forms.

(b) The Independent Lebanon Program. Another distinct program asks for the same points with the exception of a French Mandate. 33 of the 36 petitions with the wording of this program are on two varieties of printed forms. In eight instances requests for a mandate are added in writing.

(c) The Autonomous Lebanon Program. This program asks for a greater Lebanon as an autonomous province within a United Syrian State. No mandate is mentioned. 49 petitions are copies of this program, three of them on a printed form.

4. The Zionist Program: Eleven petitions with varying wording favor the Zionist Program of a Jewish State and extensive Jewish immigration. These are all from Jewish delegations. Eight other petitions express approval of the Zionist colonies in Palestine without endorsement of the complete program. Four of these latter are statements by Arab peasants that they are on good terms with the Jewish colonies.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE CLAIMS

III—Specific Requests as Given in the Tables:

A—Territorial Limits:

1. The largest percentage for any one request is that of 1,500 petitions (80.4 per cent) for United Syria, including Cilicia, the Syrian Desert, and Palestine. The boundaries of this area are usually defined as "The Taurus Mountains on the north; the Euphrates and Khabur Rivers, and the line extending east of Abu Kamal to the east of Al Juf on the east; Rafa and the line running from Al Juf to the south of Akaba on the south; and the Mediterranean Sea on the West." In addition to being the first plank of the Damascus program, a United Syria received strong support from many Christians in all the O. E. T. As., as the number of petitions indicates.

2. In opposition to Syrian Unity, six of the nineteen pro-zionist petitions ask for a separate Palestine, and presumably it is implied in the others.

3. In addition, two Christian groups in Palestine asked for a separate Palestine under the British, in preference to a United Syria under the French.

4. Twenty-four petitions, chiefly from Christian sources in O. E. T. A. South, asked for an autonomous Palestine within the Syrian State. For many other delegations this was doubtless implied in the general request for independence and a non-centralized government.

5. In opposition also to a United Syria are the 203 petitions (10.9 per cent) asking for an independent Greater Lebanon. One hundred and ninety-six of these came from Lebanon and 139 are copies of the French-Lebanon program.

6. The request for a United Syria is made even more emphatic by the 1,062 protests against an Independent Greater Lebanon. These include the Damascus program petitions and some from Protestant and other Christian sources in Lebanon.

7. Thirty-three Lebanese delegations representing both Moslems and Christians, fearing the economic future of a separate Lebanon, asked for autonomy within a Syrian State. Others also regarded autonomy as implied in the request for independence and a non-centralized government.

8-9. The Valley of Bekaa is usually regarded as an integral part of Greater Lebanon. Eleven petitions, however, make especial reference to its inclusion, while eight ask that the Valley remain in the Damascus area.

10-11. Similarly, while Cilicia is definitely included in the demand for a United Syria made by 1,500 petitions, two petitions asked specifically for it, while three requested that it be given to the Armenian State.

B—Independence:

1. The second largest percentage of all, 1,370 (73.5 percent), is for "Absolute Independence," the second cardinal point of the Damascus program, supported generally by all Moslem delegations. It is certain from the oral statements that accompanied the petitions that the term "Absolute Independence" was seldom used in the sense of an entire freedom from any foreign guidance, such as that of a mandatory under the League of Nations, inasmuch as the request was frequently combined with a choice of mandate, and in all but a few cases with either a choice of mandate or a request for foreign "assistance." While a few of the Young Arab clubs certainly desired freedom from all foreign control, the great majority asked for independence and defined a mandate to mean only economic and technical assistance, because of a widespread fear that the mandatory arrangement would be used to cloak colonial annexation.

2-3. Only a slightly smaller number, 1,278 (68.5 per cent), asked for the independence of Iraq, or Mesopotamia. To these should be added 93 of the 97 petitions for the independence of all Arab countries, as in only four petitions do both requests appear, and the second includes the first. The phrasing "for all Arab countries" was first used in Palestine, and dropped for the special mention of Iraq in the Damascus program. A total of 1,371 petitions, therefore, asked for the independence and economic freedom of the Iraq regions.

C—Form of Government:

1-2. The establishment of a "democratic, non-centralized, constitutional" kingdom is one of the points of the Damascus program, as the number of petitions for it, 1,107 (59.3 per cent), indicate. All but five of these petitions, also, ask that Emir Feisal be made the king. These petitions were especially numerous in O. E. T. A. East, where 1,005 of 1,157 request both a kingdom and the Emir as king. This part of the program had apparently not been developed when the commission was in Palestine, as only five of 260 O. E. T. A. South petitions referred to a kingdom, and only two mentioned Emir Feisal.

3. A request for a democratic representative government, presumably of a republican character, came to the commission from 26 Christian groups in O. E. T. A. West, and eight groups in O. E. T. A. East, a total of 34 (1.8 per cent). This request was usually made in opposition to the Moslem idea of a Syrian kingdom under Feisal.

4. The request for proper safe-guarding of the rights of minorities included in the Damascus program was also made by many of the Christian groups in the Lebanon. The total is 1,023 (54.9 per cent). This request received a more united support from both Moslems and Christians than any other, except anti-Zionism.

5-6. Five requests for the retention of Arabic as the official language (rather than Hebrew) and ten requests for the abolition of foreign capitulations (officially annulled by the Turks, but without sanction of the Powers), came from scattered points in O. E. T. A. South.

7. Nineteen (1.02 per cent) petitions were received for the autonomy of all the provinces of Syria. This is in addition to the separate requests for autonomy of Lebanon and Palestine. Once more it should be said that many regarded a large measure of local autonomy as implicit in the general idea of a democratic, non-centralized government, but these nineteen groups made special reference to it.

D—Choice of Mandate:

With regard to choice of mandate, five classes of requests had to be distinguished, as shown in the tables. In addition to definite requests for a given nation as the mandatory power, a few groups gave their preference, "if a mandatory is obligatory," i. e., rather under protest, while the great majority asked for "assistance" rather than a mandatory, because of a misunderstanding, and the fear referred to above that a "mandate" is a convenient cloak for colonial aggression. Petitions of these three classes have therefore been grouped in the summary as "Total first choice." In addition preferences for second choice of mandate and "assistance" have been tabulated.

1. The total of the petitions asking for Great Britain as first choice is 66 (3.5 per cent). Forty-eight came from Palestine; 13 are from Greek Orthodox delegations, and four from the Druses. The second choice total is 1,073 (57.5 per cent), due to the 1,032 requests for British "assistance," if America declined, in accordance with the Damascus program.

2. The French total for first choice is 274 (14.68 per cent), all but 59 of them from the Lebanon district. The second choice total is three.

3. The 1,064 requests for American "assistance," according to the Damascus program, with 57 selections of America as mandatory power, and eight more if a mandate is obligatory, make up the first choice total of 1,129 (60.5 per cent). The second choice total is 11.

4. Twenty-three petitions received at Jenin, Haifa, and Nazareth just before the Damascus program was adopted, left the choice of mandate to the Syrian Congress. This means, therefore, an additional 23 for American first choice and British second choice total.

E—Zionism:

1-2-3. The petitions favoring the Zionist program have been analyzed above in the discussion of programs. In opposition to these are the 1,350 (72.3 per cent) petitions protesting against Zionist claims and purposes. This is the third largest number for any one point and represents a more widespread general opinion among both Moslems and Christians than any other. The anti-Zionist note was especially strong in Palestine, where 222 (85.3 per cent) of the 260 petitions declared against the Zionist program. This is the largest percentage in the district for any one point.

F—Protests and Criticisms:

Another distinct classification is that of protests and criticisms. Criticisms against nations have been divided into: (a) General statements criticising national claims, character, or policies, without making specific references; (b) specific critcisms, usually of alleged mismanagement or corruption in the local military administration; (c) protests against the interference of the local military authorities with free access to the American commission.

1. Three general anti-British statements were presented.

2. The general anti-French statements were much more numerous, 1,129 (60.5 per cent), due largely to the fact that such a protest is included in the Damascus program. There were also 24 specific critcisms of French administration in O. E. T. A. West, and 11 protests against deportation, armed guards, threats, and intimidation said to have been used by the French administrative authorities in O. E. T. A. West, to prevent individuals with anti-French views from appearing before the commission.

3. General criticism of the Arab government appeared in 35 petitions, always from Christian sources, and expressing fear as to the fate of the Christians under an independent Arab rule. In addition the administration of O. E. T. A. East is criticized in four petitions.

4. The Damascus program protest against applying Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations to Syria is included in 1,033 (55.3 per cent) petitions. This article states that "certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a state of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized, subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a mandatary, until such time as they are able to stand alone." This protest is in line with the Damascus program plea for complete independence and the fear already referred to that a mandate might impair the full freedom of Syria. It is interesting to note that this protest did not appear until after the 22nd Article had been published in a statement given by the Commissioners to all the newspapers in Damascus.

5. One more protest is a part of 988 (52.9 per cent) petitions, a protest against secret treaties, treaties dividing Syria without the consent of the Syrians, and private agreements. The Sykes-Picot agreement and the Balfour declaration are not mentioned, but it is usually understood that they are referred to. This protest is included in the Damascus program and also received support from other elements.

These statements — chiefly tabular — prepared by the secretary, of the results of the inquiry into Syrian opinion, need to be supplemented by a historical account prepared by the General Adviser, Dr. Iybyer. This account will help to put concretely the entire situation, and to give the atmosphere of our inquiry, and so complete the basic data as presented in the field.

THE STORY OF THE TOUR

The whole area visited by the commission during the 42 days from June 10 to July 21 is Occupied Enemy Territory, under the supreme authority of General Allenby. The administration is conducted under the Turkish laws, with small local modifications, in many cases continuing in office part or all of the officials left behind by the Turks. A system of military governors and officers assigned to special duties, such as financial and medical advice, liaison work, etc., parallels the civil administration. The whole area is in four portions, known respectively as O. E. T. A. (Occupied Enemy Territory Administration) South, West, East and North, and administered under the guidance respectively of English, French, Arab, and French officers. The order of description followed below is by these areas, and is nearly coincident with the itinerary of the commission, the only exception being that much of O. E. T. A. East was visited before O. E. T. A West. Fifteen days were spent in the South, ten in the West, fifteen in the East, and two in the North.

I—THE AREA UNDER BRITISH OCCUPATION (O. E. T. A. SOUTH)

1. Narrative.—Owing to changes of plan at a late date, the commission arrived in Jaffa at a time when the British authorities were not expecting it, and the program followed there was arranged mainly without their help. The endeavor was made to ascertain the opinions and desires of every important group, sect, and organization, of a few well-informed representative individuals, and of significant minorities or sub-divisions, especially in cases where there seemed to be disposition, for any reason, to suppress these. Because of the numerous sub-divisions of the Christians and particularly of the Roman Catholics, it was inevitable that from the beginning the commission would give a disproportionate number of interviews and amount of time to them. The commissioners had prepared a statement of their purposes, to be found elsewhere in this report, which was read to important groups, and given to the press in lieu of interviews. Care was taken to make it clear, in response to frequent questioning, that the policy of the United States in regard to accepting a mandate anywhere was unformed and unpredictable, and that the commission had no power of decision. Automobiles were secured from the American Committee for Relief in the Near East, in order to be as little as possible dependent upon others than Americans. Word was given out that the commission would not accept general social invitations or consent to demonstrations.

On leaving Jaffa the commission stopped at two Jewish schools and took luncheon at the Hichon-le-Sion colony, where it met the chief men of several Jewish colonies, as well as the members of the central Zionist Commission.

A week was spent in Jerusalem, with two days out for visiting Bethlehem, Hebron, and Beersheba. A limited amount of hospitality was accepted in a quiet way from the British and French officials. In order that none might be offended the heads of the various religious groups were received, although some of them, as for instanuce the Copts and Abyssinians, had little to say along the line of the inquiry.

After leaving Jerusalem, a rapid journey was made through northern Palestine, delegations being received at Ramallah, Nablus, Jenin, Nazareth, Haifa and Acre. At most of these places groups came in, not only from the surrounding country, but from other administrative centers which it was impossible to visit.

2. THE ATTITUDE OF THE OCCUPYING GOVERNMENT.—The British officials, from Major General Sir Arthur Money, who was in command of O. E. T. A. South, down to the youngest officer, were courteous, obliging, and helpful. Most of them had had Indian, Egyptian, or Soudanese experience before the Great War. As a body they gave an impression of ability, efficiency, and a serious effort to administer the country for the good of the people. It should be noted here that General Allenby detailed to accompany the commission as aid Lt. Col. J. K. Watson, who had served for years in a similar capacity with Lord Kitchener and later with the Khedive of Egypt. His thoughtfulness, kindness, and efficiency, though the circumstances of travel were often trying, were unfailing, and the comfort, good health, and success in the investigation of the commission were largely furthered by him.

3. Wishes of the People.—The Moslems constitute about four-fifths of the actual population of Palestine, according to a recent British census. Except for certain official groups, they were practically unanimous for the independence of United Syria, and were responsive to the current political influences. The organizations met at Jaffa took the position that Syria is capable of self-government without a mandatory power, but if one should be insisted upon by the Peace Conference, they preferred the United States.

At Jerusalem, however, and in all other places in Palestine, the program of independence was affirmed. For the most part, the question of a mandate was referred, either in writing, or more often in response to questions, to the approaching Syrian Congress at Damascus, at which they would have representation. Some Moslems, especially in the South, maintained emphatically that they could accept no mandate whatever. It is evident that since the Damascus Congress later declared for American assistance, with the British as second choice, and emphatic refusal of the French, this is the program to which the great majority of the Moslems of Palestine are committed. Probably most of them had it in mind when they declared for reference to Damascus.

The Christians of Palestine, who altogether constitute less than ten per cent of the population, showed more difference of opinion. Some groups in the north, as the Latin Catholics of Tiberias and Haifa and most of the Christians of Nazareth, were with the Moslems for independence and the reference to Damascus. Maronites and Greek Catholics, and usually the Latin Catholics, were for a French mandate. The Greek Orthodox everywhere, according to an agreed program, were for a British mandate, as were several scattering groups. None asked directly for the United States, though the opinion was expressed that if there were assurance that we would come if asked, most Christians would favor this solution. The Christians were in general strongly in favor of a mandatory power, which should exercise a real control.

The Jews, who constitute a little more than ten per cent of the population, were all for Zionism, under a British mandate. The Moslem and Christian population was practically unanimous against Zionism, usually expressing themselves with great emphasis. This question s closely connected with that of the unity all Syria under one Government.

4. Zionism.—The Jews of Palestine de-red themselves unanimously in favor of the onistic scheme in general, though they owed difference of opinion in regard to the tails and the process of its realization. The ments of agreement may be stated as fol-vs:

(a) Palestine, with a fairly large area, to set aside at once as a "national home" for Jews.

(b) Sooner or later the political rule of the d will become organized as a "Jewish Com-nwealth."

(c) At the start authorization will be given the free immigration of Jews from any t of the world; for the unrestricted pur-ase of land by the Jews; and for the recog-ion of Hebrew as an official language.

(d) Great Britain will be the mandatory wer over Palestine, protecting the Jews and thering the realization of the scheme.

(e) The Great Powers of the world have lared in favor of the scheme, which merely aits execution.

Differences exist especially along two lines: (a) Whether the Jewish Commonwealth uld be set up soon or after a considerable se of time.

(b) Whether the chief emphasis should be n a restoration of the ancient mode of life, ual, exclusiveness and particularism of the rs; or upon economic development in a thor-hly modern fashion, with afforestation, elec-trification of water-power, and general full uti-lization of resources.

5. The Custody of the Holy Places.—For four centuries the Turk has served as guardian of the peace between Moslems, Christians and Jews, and even between the different sects of each, in the Holy Land. Nor has his function been merely nominal: being really a foreigner and having upon himself the responsibility of government, he has on the whole well main-tained the status quo, or policed slow and deli-cate changes in one direction or another. Now that his authority is gone, a substitute must be provided, whatever be the new regime. This might be the mandatory power. If, however, any Roman Catholic power should receive the mandate, trouble would arise from the fact than at present the Catholics feel unfairly treated and claim increase of privilege at the expense of the Greek Orthodox. A Catholic power would be tempted promptly to disturb the equilibrium, especially during the eclipse of the power of Russia.

There is already a "Custodian of the Holy Places" for the Roman Catholics. Might not this idea be extended to the constitution of a permanent Commission for the Holy Places, on which might be placed this man, and repre-sentatives of Greek Orthodox Christianity, Protestant Christianity, Sunnite Islam, Shiite Islam, and Judaism? The Commission might be given authority and means to guard and care for all the places in Palestine that are sacred to the three religions, and to adjudicate all disputes about their custody. Its composi-tion should ensure conservatism and promote harmony.

II—THE AREA UNDER FRENCH OCCUPATION

. The Commission reached Beirut after ing visited Palestine and the southern half the territory occupied by the Arab forces. o days were spent in interviews in the city, visits were paid by automobile to points n Tyre to Batrun. General Allenby was d enough to place his yacht the "Maid of nor" at the disposal of the Commission, and s Tripoli, Alexandretta and Ladikiya were n. Delegations were thus heard from every t of O. E. T. A. West. Arrangements as program, demonstrations, and the like, were general maintained as in other areas. The nch officials were at great pains to arrange ably for the hearings of the Commission, to provide for its comfort and well-being. he women of the Moslem Trades School at rut had woven a rug for presentation to Peace Conference, which is interesting as g a map, patterned so as to show the area med by Syrian Nationalists for United ia.

Wishes of the People.—In general the ation was in accordance with that in Pales-and the Damascus area. With few excep-s the Moslems were for American or Brit-assistance according to the "Damascus gram"; the Druses were for an English date; the Maronites and all varieties of olics were for France. But the Greek Or-ox were divided, instead of standing for a ish Mandate as usually in Palestine and ascus. The Ismailians were mostly for ce, and the Nusairiyeh were divided. hose who stood for a French Mandate were different opinions as regards the place and ionship of Lebanon in Syria. From Tyre Tripoli they mostly followed a rigid formula h calls for a Greater Lebanon, absolutely pendent of the rest of Syria, and under ce; the supporters of this view showed no onse to the idea of Syrian national unity, apparently wish to become French citizens n early moment. hers desire the unity of Syria under the ch Mandate, preferring ordinarily that the non District should be enlarged and given gh degree of autonomy.

the Lebanon proper the majority is prob-sincerely for a French, as opposed to a sh mandate. The Commission could not ire whether those who declared for France well disposed toward an American Man-in case this were possible and a French date for any reason undesirable; but there a number of emphatic assurances that the majority of the population, including the Maronites, prefers America to any ; this is said to be based upon America's lfish part in the war, her generosity be-and after the armistice, and the personal ionships established by the large number ebanese who have gone to live for shorter nger periods in the United States and who n home loyal.

e Druses ask emphatically to be left out e Lebanon in case it be given to France. t outside the Lebanon proper, in the areas h it is proposed to include in the "Greater non," such as Tyre, Sidon, "Hollow Sy-and Tripoli, a distinct majority of the e is probably averse to French rule. This des practically all the Sunnite Moslems, of the Shiites, a part of the Greek Ortho-Christians, and the small group of Protes-. Most of these ask earnestly for Amer-with Britain as second choice; the balance for Britain with America as second choice.

In the rest of O. E. T. A. West, north of the proposed Greater Lebanon, the majority is probably against a French Mandate in any cir-cumstances. A considerable proportion of the remainder are averse to a separation from the interior of the country, and place the unity of Syria above their preference for France.

It is worthy of note that whereas the Syrian nationalists everywhere distinctly and by name rejected the assistance of France, no one who supported France declared for a specific rejec-tion of England or America. In a number of instances, however, the fear was expressed by Christians that England, if made the manda-tory power, would show more favor to Moslems than to Christians.

3. The Lebanon.—The mountainous area set off in 1861 to be under the nominal protection of six European powers, with a Christian gov-ernor, has been a particular interest of France ever since. The population is largely Maronite and Roman Catholic. As in the case of all re-gions that have been removed from the direct jurisdiction of the Porte, progress has been comparatively rapid; roads have been built, trees planted, and a large number of stone houses erected. Money earned in America has helped greatly in these improvements. The Maronite ecclesiastical and monastic organiza-tions have increased greatly in wealth in these years.

The Lebanon has been freed from the bur-den of military service, and taxes have conse-quently been light. The area has been pre-dominantly Christian and the Christians have enjoyed rather more than their proportion of the offices. Druses on the other hand have shown a tendency to emigrate to join their brethren in the Hauran, and they resent the inequalities of treatment to which they have been subjected.

The French policy of "colonization" shows its fruits in many inhabitants of this area, as well as of Beurut and other parts of Syria, who feel that they know French better than Arabic, and who are apt to hold themselves as of a distinctly higher order of civilization than the people of the interior. It is among these that the idea of a complete political sep-aration of the Lebanese area from the rest of Syria has taken root.

The propinquity of this area led the Turkish government to be lenient and favorable to Christians and others in adjacent regions, so that no very sharp line of difference of pros-perity is visible. Nevertheless the appeal of lighter taxes and military service, greater se-curity and opportunities for office-holding has an effect upon Christians in neighboring areas, so that many of them incline toward a Greater Lebanon under a permanent French mandate. But there is a considerable party, even among the pro-French, who are opposed to becoming a part of France. This is in fact the official Maronite position.

Any revision of the situation should not di-minish the security of the inhabitants of the Lebanon, but should raise the rest of Syria to a like security. This can be provided for in a United Syria by a sufficient measure of local autonomy. Care should be taken to avoid leav-ing this portion of the country in a position of perpetual special privilege, in which the common burdens would rest more heavily on other areas.

III—THE AREA UNDER ARAB OCCUPATION

1. The Commission spent nine days in Damascus, six of which were filled up with interviews, held with representatives of re-ligious and political groups, councils and boards of the Government, and prominent of-ficials and other notable persons of every grade, including even the Emir Feisal and General Allenby. More time was spent here than any-where else in Syria, because Damascus will be the capital of United Syria, if such be created, and an Arab government over O. E. T. A. East is already in operation there, showing much activity and endeavoring by accomplish-ment, display, and intrigue to prepare the way for the larger unity. During the Commission's visit, the "Syrian Congress" met, whose char-ter and program are described below. The bazars were placarded with the signs "We want absolute independence," and these were re-moved by government orders. The interview of the Commission with the Mufti, Kadi, and Ulema was published with considerable accuracy in the local newspapers (of course by no act or permission of the Commission), and this gave rise to animated discussions on the part of the people and the press. The Commission ac-cepted hospitality from the Emir Feisal on two occasions.

In the midst of the stay in Damascus a trip was taken southward to Amman and Deraa for the purpose of conferring with people from the edge of the desert. The note received from all Moslems was for complete independence without protection or a mandatory power; but recognizing that they need financial and eco-nomic advice, they proposed after the recog-nition of independence to ask advisers from America. Eloquent Arab orators appealed to America, as having freed them, to uphold their independence before the Peace Conference, say-ing that they hold our country responsible be-fore God for completing the work we have begun. The Christians, who are few in these areas, were in great fear. They desire that a strong mandatory power be appointed over Sy-ria, so that they may have full protection; they prefer that Britain be that power, and that the area be annexed to and governed with Pales-tine.

After leaving Damascus, a day was spent at Baalbek, where was encountered first the strug-gle for and against annexing "Hollow Syria" (known as the Bekaa) to the Greater Lebanon. After ten days in O. E. T. A. West, the Arab area was entered again by the road from Tripoli to Homs. Delegations were heard at Homs and Hama, after which three days were spent in Aleppo. Besides hearing delegations of all important Allepine groups and opinions, visits were paid to the centers of relief for refugee Armenians.

The claim for the independence of Mesopo-tamia was presented very vigorously in the north. Certain groups at Aleppo were much interested, however, in pushing the boundary of Syria well to the east, so as to include the Syrian desert.

2. Attitude of the Occupying Government.—The higher Arab officials include a number of men of dignity, ability, intelligence, and ap-parent honesty and patriotism. Practically all are Syrian born. Some of them, as General Haddad Pasha, chief of police and gendarmerie, and Said Pasha Zoucair, financial adviser, have been trained under British Administration in Egypt; and others, as Col. Yussef Bey, aide-de-camp of the Emir Feisal, General Jaafar Pasha, Military Governor of Aleppo, and Ihsan Allah Djabri, Mayor of Aleppo, have had their education and experience in the Turkish serv-ice. Most of the lower officials in this area (as well as in the other O. E. T. A. regions) have simply been continued from the Turkish regime, and in many cases are said to practice extortions and malversations much as under the former Government.

Every effort was made to do honor to the Commission and execute its wishes. Some-times ostentatious attempts were made to give the impression of absolute non-interference with fredom of access to an expression before the Commission.

3. Wishes of the People.—The declarations in O. E. T. A. East were much nearer to unanimity than in the South or the West, as may be seen by a glance at the Tables of "Pe-tition Summaries." The greater part of the declarations, both oral and written, conformed to the resolutions of the Syrian Congress at Damascus, which is discussed separately below. This program was reached by the action of conflicting forces, in the presence of a general feeling that it was overwhelmingly important for reasons of national safety to reach unity of expression. The pressure brought to bear by the Government and the different political parties was of undoubted weight in bringing into line opinions of a more extreme sort, such as those in favor of independence in the high-est degree and those which called for a per-petual strong mandatory control. But on the whole there can be no doubt that the main ele-ments of this program represent the popular will as nearly as that can be expressed in any country.

The people of the area declared themselves almost unanimously for United Syria, for its complete independence, and against any help from France, and against the Zionist program. The Moslems were in nearly unanimous agree-ment upon a request for American assistance. The Jews asked for autonomy for themselves, and the Zionist scheme for their brethren in Palestine. The Druses were for the Arab gov-ernment under a British mandate. The Chris-tians were divided, partly by sects and partly by geographical location. All of the few Chris-tians in the south, including Latin Catholics, were for a British mandate, with America in case for any reason Britain cannot come. So also were the Greek Orthodox of Damascus, and a portion of the Greek Orthodox farther north. The small groups of Protestants were for an Anglo-Saxon mandate, some preferring America and some Britain. The Orthodox Sy-rians were for America. All the Catholics (except at Amman and Deraa and the Ma-ronites were for France. Nearly all of the Christians were for a strong mandatory con-trol.

4. The Syrian Congress at Damascus.—From the time of reaching Jerusalem, the Com-mission began to be told of a congress that was in preparation, to be held soon at Damas-cus, which would for a large part of the popu-lation determine the question of a mandate. Sessions were held while the Commission was at Damascus, and on the last day there, a depu-tation presented to the Commission the program that had been prepared.

The Congress was not elected directly by the people, or by a fresh appeal to the people, the reason given being that time was lacking to revise the voting lists and carry through a new scheme. At the last Turkish election, before the war, electors were chosen to select depu-ties for the Turkish parliament. The survivors of these electors chose the members of the Da-mascus Congress. Criticisms were made against the plan of choice to the effect that it was unconstitutional and extra-constitutional, that the electors had mostly belonged to the Party of Union and Progress, and that the members of the Congress were not distributed in pro-portion to population. Sixty-nine members at-tended, and about 20 others from the west and north had been elected, but had not arrived. There were a number of Christians in the Con-ference, but no Jews, though some Jews among the electors were said to have given their ap-proval. Much evidence goes to show that the program prepared represents well the wishes of the people of Syria. The program is as fol-lows:

"We, the undersigned, members of the Gen-eral Syrian Congress, meeting in Damascus on Wednesday, July 2, 1919, made up of repre-sentatives from the three Zones, viz., the Southern, Eastern, and Western, provided with credentials and authorizations by the inhabi-tants of our various districts, Moslems, Chris-tians, and Jews, have agreed upon the follow-ing statement of the desires of the people of the country who have elected us to present them to the American Section of the Interna-tional Commission; the fifth article was passed by a very large majority; all the other articles were accepted unanimously.

"1. We ask absolutely complete political in-dependence for Syria within these boundaries. The Taurus System on the North; Rafeh and a line running from Al-Juf to the south of the Syrian and the Mejazian line to Akaba on the south; the Euphrates and Khabur Rivers and a line extending east of Abu Kamal to the east of Al-Juf on the east; and the Medi-terranean on the west.

"2. We ask that the Government of this Syrian country should be a democratic civil constitutional Monarchy on broad decentraliza-tion principles, safeguarding the rights of mi-norities, and that the King be the Emir Feisal, who carried on a glorious struggle in the cause of our liberation and merited our full confi-dence and entire reliance.

"3. Considering the fact that the Arabs in-habiting the Syrian area are not naturally less gifted than other more advanced races and that they are by no means less developed than the Bulgarians, Serbians, Greeks, and Roumanians at the beginning of their independence, we pro-test against Article 22 of the Covenent of the League of Nations, placing us among the na-tions in their middle stage of development which stand in need of a mandatory power.

"4. In the event of the rejection by the Peace Conference of this just protest for cer-tain considerations that we may not under-stand, we, relying on the declarations of Presi-dent Wilson that his object in waging war was to put an end to the ambition of conquest and colonization, can only regard the mandate men-tioned in the Covenant of the League of Na-tions as equivalent to the rendering of eco-nomical and technical assistance that does not prejudice our complete independence. And de-siring that our country should not fall a prey to colonization and believing that the Ameri-can Nation is farthest from any thought of colonization and has no political ambition in our country, we will seek the technical and economic assistance from the United States of America, provided that such assistance does not exceed twenty years.

"5. In the event of America not finding herself in a position to accept our desire for assistance, we will seek this assistance from Great Britain, also provided that such assistance does not infringe the complete independence and unity of our country, and that the duration of such assistance does not exceed that mentioned in the previous article.

"6. We do not acknowledge any right claimed by the French Government in any part whatever of our Syrian country and refuse that she should assist us or have a hand in our country under any circumstances and in any place.

"7. We oppose the pretentions of the Zionists to create a Jewish commonwealth in the southern part of Syria, known as Palestine, and oppose Zionist migration to any part of our country; for we do not acknowledge their title, but consider them a grave peril to our people from the national, economical, and political points of view. Our Jewish compatriots shall enjoy our common rights and assume the common responsibilities.

"8. We ask that there should be no separation of the southern part of Syria, known as Palestine, nor of the littoral western zone, which includes Lebanon, from the Syrian country. We desire that the unity of the country should be guaranteed against partition under whatever circumstances.

"9. We ask complete independence for emancipated Mesopotamia and that there should be no economical barriers between the two countries.

"10. The fundamental principles laid down by President Wilson in condemnation of secret treaties impel us to protest most emphatically against any treaty that stipulates the partition of our Syrian country and against any private engagement aiming at the establishment of Zionism in the southern part of Syria; therefore we ask the complete annulment of these conventions and agreements.

"The noble principles enunciated by President Wilson strengthen our confidence that our desires emanating from the depths of our hearts, shall be the decisive factor in determining our future; and that President Wilson and the free American people will be supporters for the realization of our hopes, thereby proving their sincerity and noble sympathy with the aspiration of the weaker nations in general and our Arab people in particular.

"We also have the fullest confidence that the Peace Conference will realize that we would not have risen against the Turks, with whom we had participated in all civil, political, and representative privileges, but for their violation of our national rights, and so will grant us our desires in full in order that our political rights may not be less after the war than they were before, since we have shed so much blood in the cause of our liberty and independence.

"We request to be allowed to send a delegation to represent us at the Peace Conference to defend our rights and secure the realization of our aspirations."

The program mostly speaks sufficiently for itself. Various points in it are commented upon elsewhere in this report. It is the most substantial document presented to the Commission, and deserves to be treated with great respect. The result of an extensive and arduous political process, it affords a basis on which the Syrians can get together, and as firm a foundation for a Syrian national organization as can be obtained. The mandatory power will possess in this program a commitment to liberal government which will be found to be very valuable in starting the new state in the right direction.

CILICIA

1. General—(a) The Commision did not endeavor to give thorough hearings in this region, feeling that it is not seriously to be considered a part of Syria, and desiring not to open up as yet the question of the Turkish-speaking portion of the former Turkish Empire.

(b) The population statistics vary considerably, but there can be no doubt of a marked Moslem majority in Cilicia before the war, now probably somewhat increased.

2. Wishes of the People—(a) The Turks here, like most of those heard previously, wish to retain Turkish unity under the house of Osman, and leave the question of what shall be the Mandatory Power, if any, to the Turkish Government at Constantinople.

(b) The Arabs (who are mainly Turkish-speaking, but are chiefly Nusairiyeh or Alouites) ask for union with Syria under a French mandate.

(c) The Armenians (who are also chiefly Turkish-speaking) ask for the union of Cilicia with Armenia under an American mandate.

(d) The other Christians, a small minority, are mostly for France, particularly the Greeks, who are working in close relation with the French in the northern regions of Turkey.

Mesopotamia

It was impossible for the Commission to visit Mesopotamia at this time. Earnest requests to make such a visit were presented at Damascus and Aleppo, accompanied by complaints that the British occupying forces are restricting freedom of speech, movement, and political action, and that they show signs of an intention to allow extensive immigration from India, to the great detriment of the rights and interests of the inhabitants of the region.

A committee at Aleppo presented a program for Mesopotamia which parallels closely the "Damascus Program" for Syria. An abstract of their claims follows:

1. Mesopotamia should be completely independent, including Diarbekir, Deir-ez-Zor, Mosul, Bagdad, and Muhammerah.

2. The Government should be a constitutional civil kingdom.

3. The king should be a son of the King of the Hejaz, either Abdullah or Zeid.

4. Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations is protested against.

5. No outside government should interfere in the country.

6. After the recognition of independence, technical and economical assistance is to be asked for from America.

7. Objection is raised to all immigration and especially to that of Hindus and Jews.

8. The complete independence of Syria is asked for.

9. It is asked that there be no interference of France in Syria.

It will be noticed that conformably to the custom of all nascent nations, wide boundaries are claimed, which would involve difficulties with adjacent areas, such as Deir-ez-Zor with Syria, Diarbekir with Armenia, and Muhammerah with Persia.

The Orthodox [Nestorian?—Ed.] Syrian Patriarch, from Der Zafran, near Mardin, met the Commission at Homs. He stated that 90,000 of his people were slain in 1915; when the British came in 1918, all were willing to submit to their rule; but emissaries came from Constantipople to stir up the Kurds and Arabs in favor of independence, and now the situation is much worse; the area occupied by his people should go with Mesopotamia, under the mandate of either America or Britain.

The entire data have been given, thus, so fully as to make it possible to test at every point the legitimacy of the inference drawn from the data, and of the final recommendations for action by the Peace Conference.

Further data from our final inference and recommendations were afforded by comprehensive reports of the entire survey, made by all three advisers. The recommendations of the Commissioners have thus been shaped, in the light of surveys made from different points of view, and taking into account a wide range of considerations—local, national, racial, and religious; considerations both of principle and of practical policy; and of the world's dire need of a peace everywhere justly and so permanently based.

II—GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS

The Commissioners have sought to make their survey of Syria, and the report upon Syria now submitted, in the spirit of the instructions given them by the Council of Four, and especially in harmony with the resolutions adopted on January 30, 1919, by the Representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, and with the Anglo-French Declaration of November 9, 1918—both quoted at length in the Commission's instructions. The second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth of the resolutions adopted on January 30th are particularly pertinent to this report, and should be here recorded. The general purpose of the Peace Conference concerning these areas in the former Turkish Empire is here clearly disclosed.

2. For similar reasons, and more particularly because of the historical mis-government by the Turks of subject peoples and the terrible massacres of Armenians and others in recent years, the Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia, Palestine and Arabia must be completely severed from the Turkish Empire. This is without prejudice to the settlement of other parts of the Turkish Empire.

3. The Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that advantage should be taken of the opportunity afforded by the necessity of disposing of these colonies and territories formerly belonging to Germany and Turkey which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, to apply to these territories the principle that the well-being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in the constitution of the League of Nations.

4. After careful study they are satisfied that the best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who, by reason of their resources, their experience or their geogrophical positions, can best undertake this responsibility, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as mandatories on behalf of the League of Nations.

5. The Allied and Associated Powers are of opinion that the character of the mandate must differ according to the stage of development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions, and other similar circumstances.

6. They consider that certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized, subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a mandatory power until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the mandatory power. . . .

In every case of mandate, the mandatory state shall render to the League of Nations an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The Anglo-French Declaration* was spread broadcast throughout Syria and Mesopotamia, and, as bearing directly upon our problem, may also well be called to mind at this point:

The aim which France and Great Britain have in view in prosecuting in the East the war let loose by German ambition is the complete and final liberation of the peoples so long oppressed by the Turks and the establishment of national governments and administrations deriving their authority from the initiative and free choice of the native population.

In order to give effect to these intentions, France and Great Britain have agreed to encourage and assist the establishment of native governments and administrations in Syria and Mesopotamia already liberated by the Allies, and in the territories which they are proceeding to liberate, and they have agreed to recognize such governments as soon as they are effectively established. So far from desiring to impose specific institutions upon the populations of these regions, their sole object is to ensure, by their support and effective assistance, that the governments and administrations adopted by these regions of their own free will shall be exercised in the normal way. The function which the two Allied Governments claim for themselves in the liberated territories is to insure impartial and equal justice for all; to facilitate the economic development of the country by encouraging local initiative; to promote the diffusion of education; and to put an end to the division too long exploited by Turkish policy.

Of this Declaration, M. Pichon very properly said in the French Chamber December 29, 1918: "Of course we admit the complete freedom of the Conference, and its right to give these agreemnts their proper conclusions, but these agreements are binding both upon England and upon us." This statement is the more significant because it is exactly these two peoples of the Allies who are immediately related to the problems in the Arabic-speaking portions of the Turkish Empire.

Our survey made it clear that this Anglo-French Declaration and similar utterances of the Peace Conference, and President Wilson's Fourteen Points, had made a deep impression upon the Syrian people and lay in the background of all their demands. The promises involved not only cannot justly be ignored by the Peace Conference, but should be faithfully fulfilled. This is particularly tru of the British-French Declaration; for i is completely in accord with the repeate statements of the aims of the Allies, an was expressly directed to the Arabic speaking portions of the Turkish Empir especially Syria and Mesopotamia.

It is noted that these resolutions of Jan uary 30, 1919, and this Declaration o November 9, 1918, clearly look to com plete separation of the Arabic-speakin areas from Turkey; propose that Syri and Mesopotamia shall not be colonie in the old sense at all; shall not be ex ploited for the benefit of the occupyin power; but shall rather be directly en couraged and assisted in developing na tional independence as quickly as possibl And the Declaration makes the promise equally binding for Syria and Mesopo tamia.

The resolutions and declaration invoke in the instructions given to our Commi sion thus form the basis of the who policy of sending a Commission, and o ascertaining the desires of the people.

The sincerity of the professed aims o the Allies in the war, therefore, is pecu liarly to be tested in the application o these aims in the treatment of the Arabi speaking portions of the former Turki Empire. For the promises here made wer specific and unmistakable. It is wort consideration, too, that the whole polic of mandataries under the League of Na tions might here be worked out wi special success, and success here wou encourage the steady extension of th policy elsewhere, and do something significant for world progress as to he to justify the immeasurable sacrifices o the war. There is also probably no r gion where the Allies are freer to deci their course in accordance with th principles they have professed.

The gravity of the Syrian problem further to be seen in certain well-know facts. The fact that the Arabic-spea ing portion of the Turkish Empire h been the birthplace of the three gre religions: Judaism, Christianity, an Islam, and that Palestine contains plac sacred to all three, makes inevitably center of interest and concern for t whole civilized world. No solution whi is merely local or has only a single pe ple in mind can avail.

As a portion of the bridge-land uniti Europe, Asia, and Africa, too—where a peculiar degree the East and the We meet—Syria has a place of such strate importance, politically and commercial and from the point of view of wo civilization, as also to make it imperati that the settlement here brought abo should be so just as to give promise permanently good results for the wh cause of the development of a righte civilization in the world. Every part the former Turkish Empire must be giv a new life and opportunity un thoroughly changed political conditions

The war and the consequent breaki up of the Turkish Empire, moreover, g a great opportunity—not likely to retu —to build now in Syria a Near East St on the modern basis of full religious l erty, deliberately including various ligious faiths, and especially guard rights of minorities. It is a matter justice to the Arabs, in the recognit of the Arab people and their desire national expression, and of deep and la ing concern to the world, that an A state along modern political lines sho be formed. While the elements are v various, the interests often divisive, a much of the population not yet fitted self-government, the conditions are nev theless as favorable as could be reas ably expected under the circumstances make the trial now. The mixed a varied populations have lived toget with a fair degree of unity under Turk domination, and in spite of the divis Turkish policy. They ought to do better under a state on modern lines a with an enlightened mandatory.

In any case, the oversight of a man tory power, and of the League of N tions, would prevent this attempt fr taking such a course as that taken by Young Turk Movement. The Arabs, w will know that this is their best opp tunity for the formation of an A ıte, and will be put on their mettle to ıieve a distinct success. The insight ı breadth of sympathy revealed by ıir Feisal make him peculiarly well ed, also, for the head-ship of a State olving both Oriental and Occidental ments. The trial at least could safely made under a sympathetic mandatary wer, and made with good promise of ccess. If the experiment finally failed, ision of territory could still follow. t to begin with division of territory ng religious lines is to invite increas- exclusiveness, misunderstanding, and ction. As Dr. W. M. Ramsay has said ıcerning certain other portions of the rkish Empire:

*This Charter of Freedom, issued a few days prior to the Armistice, is the standard by which the Near East judges the post-Armistice conduct of Europe.

'The attempt to sort our religions and tle them in different localities is wrong ı will prove fatal. The progress of tory depends upon diversity of popula- ı in each district." And there is real ıger in breaking Syria up into mean- less fragments.

Any policy adopted, therefore, for Syria ould look to "the establishment of a ional government and administration iving their authority from the initia- e and free choice of the native popula- ns," and should treat it as far as pos- le in harmony with its natural geo- aphic and economic unity. This is the ural course to be taken, if at all feas- e. It is directly in line with the ex- ssed purpose of the Peace Conference. And it is the plain object of the desires and ambitions of a large majority of the population concerned.

It is interesting, also, to find that both British and French officers in Syria seemed agreed in the belief that the unity of all Syria under one mandatary was desirable; and that there were certain to be constant friction and dangers to peace among British, French, and Arabs, if both British and French remained in the country.

On the other hand, the practical obstacles to the unity of Syria are: The apparent unwillingness of either the British or the French to withdraw from Syria—the British from Palestine, or the French from Beirut and the Lebanon; the intense opposition of the Arabs and the Christians to the Zionist Program; the common Lebanese demand for complete serapate independence; the strong feeling of the Arabs of the East against any French control; the fear on the part of many Christians of Moslem domination; and the lack of as vigorous a Syrian national feeling as could be desired. These obstacles will be discussed in the recommendations of the Commissioners.

In the light, now, of these practical obstacles to the unity of Syria, of the general considerations favoring that unity, and of the wide range of data secured by our survey, we turn to our recommendations.

III—RECOMMENDATIONS

The commissioners make to the Peace nference the following recommenda- ns for the treatment of Syria:

We recommend, as most important of and in strict harmony with our In- uctions, that whatever foreign admin- ration (whether of one or more wers) is brought into Syria, should ne in, not at all as a colonizing Power the old sense of that term, but as a ndatary under the League of Nations, h the clear consciousness that "the l-being and development" of the Syrian ple form for it a "sacred trust."

(1) To this end the mandate should e a limited term, the time of expira- ı to be determined by the League of tions, in the light of all the facts as ught out from year to year, in the ual reports of the Mandatary to the ague or in other ways.

(2) The Mandatary Administration uld have, however, a period and power ficient to ensure the success of the y state; and especially to make pos- e carrying through important educa- ıal and economic undertakings, essen- to secure founding of the State.

(3) The Mandatary Administration uld be characterized from the begin- g by a strong and vital educational phasis, in clear recognition of the im- ative necessity of education for the zens of a democratic state, and for the elopment of a sound national spirit. is systematic cultivation of national it is particularly required in a coun- like Syria, which has only recently ıe to self-consciousness.

(4) The Mandatary should definitely , from the beginning of its trustee- , to train the Syrian people to in- endent self-government as rapidly as ditions allow, by setting up all the in- utions of a democratic state, and by ring with them increasingly the work administration, and so forming gradu- an intelligent citizenship, interested elfishly in the progress of the coun- and forming at the same time a large up of disciplined civil servants.

(5) The period of "tutelage" should be unduly prolonged, but independent -government should be granted as n as it can safely be done; remem- ng that the primary business of gov- ments is not the accomplishment of ain things, but the development of zens.

(6) It is peculiarly the duty of the ndatary in a country like Syria, and his modern age, to see that complete gious liberty is ensured, both in the constitution and in the practice of the state, and that a jealous care is exercised for the rights of all minorities. Nothing is more vital than this for the enduring success of the new Arab State.

(7) In the economic development of Syria, a dangerous amount of indebtedness on the part of the new state should be avoided, as well as any entanglements financially with the affairs of the Mandatary Power. On the other hand the legitimate established privileges of foreigners, such as rights to maintain schools, commercial concessions, etc., should be preserved, but subject to review and modification under the authority of the League of Nations in the interest of Syria. The Mandatary Power should not take advantage of its position to force a monopolistic control at any point to the detriment either of Syria or of other nations; but it should seek to bring the new State as rapidly as possible to economic independence as well as to political independence.

Whatever is done concerning the further recommendations of the Commission, the fulfillment of at least the conditions now named should be assured, if the Peace Conference and the League of Nations are true to the policy of mandataries already embodied in "The Covenant of the League of Nations." This should effectively guard the most essential interests of Syria, however the machinery of administration is finally organized. The Damascus Congress betrayed in many ways their intense fear that their country would become, though under some other name, simply a colonial possession of some other Power. That fear must be completely allayed.

B. We recommend, in the second place that the unity of Syria be preserved, in accordance with the earnest petition of the great majority of the people of Syria.

(1) The territory concerned is too limited, the population too small, and the economic, geographic, racial and language unity too manifest, to make the setting up of independent states within its boundaries desirable, if such division can possibly be avoided. The country is very largely Arab in language, culture, traditions, and customs.

(2) This recommendation is in line with important "general considerations" already urged, and with the principles of the League of Nations, as well as in answer to the desires of the majority of the population concerned.

(3) The precise boundaries of Syria should be determined by a special commission on boundaries, after the Syrian territory has been in general allotted. The Commissioners believe, however, that the claim of the Damascus Conference to include Cilicia in Syria is not justified, either historically or by commercial or language relations. The line between the Arabic-speaking and the Turkish-speaking populations would quite certainly class Cilicia with Asia Minor, rather than with Syria. Syria, too, has no such need of further seacoast as the large interior sections of Asia Minor.

(4) In standing thus for the recognition of the unity of Syria, the natural desires of regions like the Lebanon, which have already had a measure of independence, should not be forgotten. It will make for real unity, undoubtedly, to give a large measure of local autonomy, and especially in the case of strongly unified groups. Even the "Damascus Program" which presses so earnestly the unity of Syria, itself urges a government "on broad decentralization principles."

Lebanon has achieved a considerable degree of prosperity and autonomy within the Turkish Empire. She certainly should not find her legitimate aspirations less possible within a Syrian national State. On the contrary, it may be confidently expected that both her economic and political relations with the rest of Syria would be better if she were a constituent member of the State, rather than entirely independent of it.

As a predominantly Christian country, too, Lebanon naturally fears Moslem domination in a unified Syria. But against such domination she would have a fourfold safeguard; her own large autonomy: the presence of a strong mandatary for the considerable period in which the constitution and practice of the new State would be forming; the oversight of the League of Nations, with its insistence upon religious liberty and the rights of minorities; and the certainty that the Arab Government would feel the necessity of such a state, if it were to commend itself to the League of Nations. Moreover, there would be less danger of a reactionary Moslem attitude, if Christians were present in the state in considerable numbers, rather than largely segregated outside the state, as experience of the relations of different religious faiths in India suggests.

As to predominantly Christian country, it is also to be noted that Lebanon would be in a position to exert a stronger and more helpful influence if she were within the Syrian state, feeling its problems and needs, and sharing all its life, instead of outside it, absorbed simply in her own narrow concerns. For the sake of the larger interests, both of Lebanon and of Syria, then, the unity of Syria is to be urged. It is certain that many of the more thoughtful Lebanese themselves hold this view. A similar statement might be made for Palestine; though, as "the Holy Land" for Jews and Christians and Moslems alike, its situation is unique, and might more readily justify unique treatment, if such treatment were justified anywhere. This will be discussed more particularly in connection with the recommendation concerning Zionism.

C. We recommend, in the third place, that Syria be placed under one Mandatary Power, as the natural way to secure real and efficient unity.

(1) To divide the administration of the provinces of Syria among several mandataries, even if existing national unity were recognized; or to attempt a joint mandatary of the whole on the commission plan:—neither of these courses would be naturally suggested as the best way to secure and promote the unity of the new State, or even the general unity of the whole people. It is conceivable that circumstances might drive the Peace Conference to some such form of divided mandate; but it is not a solution to be voluntarily chosen, from the point of view of the larger interests of the people, as considerations already urged indicate.

(2) It is not to be forgotten, either, that, however they are handled politically, the people of Syria are there, forced to get on together in some fashion. They are obliged to live with one another—the Arabs of the East and the people of the coast, the Moslems and the Christians. Will they be helped or hindered, in establishing tolerable and finally cordial relations, by a single mandatary? No doubt the quick mechanical solution of the problem of difficult relations is to split the people up into little independent fragments. And sometimes, undoubtedly, as in the case of the Turks and Armenians, the relations are so intolerable as to make some division imperative and inevitable. But in general, to attempt complete separation only accentuates the differences and increases the antagonism. The whole lesson of the modern social consciousness points to the necessity of understanding "the other half," as it can be understood only by close and living relations. Granting reasonable local autonomy to reduce friction among groups, a single mandatary ought to form a constant and increasingly effective help to unity of feeling throughout the state, and ought to steadily improve group relations.

The people of Syria, in our hearings, have themselves often insisted that, so far as unpleasant relations have hitherto prevailed among various groups, it has been very largely due to the direct instigation of the Turkish Government. When justice is done impartially to all; when it becomes plain that the aim of the common government is the service of all classes alike, not their exploitation, decent human relations to be secured—a foundation which could not be obtained by dividing men off from one another in antagonistic groups.

The Commissioners urge, therefore, for the largest future good of all groups and regions alike, the placing of the whole of Syria under a single mandate.

D. We recommend, in the fourth place, that Emir Feisal be made head of the new united Syrian State.

(1) This is expressly and unanimously asked for by the representative Damascus Congress in the name of the Syrian people, and there seems to be no reason to doubt that the great majority of the population of Syria sincerely desire to have Emir Feisal as ruler.

(2) A constitutional monarchy along democratic lines, seems naturally adapted to the Arabs, with their long training under tribal conditions, and with their traditional respect for their chiefs. They seem to need, more than most people, a king as the personal symbol of the power of the State.

(3) Emir Feisal has come, too, naturally into his present place of power, and there is no one else who could well replace him. He had the great advantage of being the son of the Sherif of Mecca, and as such honored throughout the Moslem world. He was one of the prominent Arab leaders who assumed responsibility for the Arab uprising against the Turks, and so shared in the complete deliverance of the Arab-speaking portions of the Turkish Empire. He was consequently hailed by the "Damascus Congress" as having "merited their full confidence and entire reliance." He was taken up and supported by the British as the most promising candidate for the headship of the new Arab State—an Arab of the Arabs, but with a position of wide appeal through his Shefifian connection, and through his broad sympathies with the best in the Occident. His relations with the Arabs to the east of Syria are friendly, and his kingdom would not be threatened from that side. He undoubtedly does not make so strong an appeal to the Christians of the West Coast, as to the Arabs of the East; but no man can be named who would have a stronger general appeal. He is tolerant and wise, skillful in dealing with men, winning in manner, a man of sincerity, insight, and power. Whether he has the full strength needed for his difficult task it is too early to say; but certainly no other Arab leader combines so many elements of power as he, and he will have invaluable help throughout the mandatary period.

The Peace Conference may take genuine satisfaction in the fact that an Arab of such qualities is available for the headship of this new state in the Near East.

ZIONISM

E. We recommend, in the fifth place, serious modification of the extreme Zionist program for Palestine of unlimited immigration of Jews, looking finally to making Palestine distinctly a Jewish State.

(1) The Commissioners began their study of Zionism with minds predisposed in its favor, but the actual facts in Palestine, coupled with the force of the general principles proclaimed by the Allies and accepted by the Syrians have driven them to the recommendation here made.

(2) The commission was abundantly supplied with literature on the Zionist program by the Zionist Commission to Palestine; heard in conferences much concerning the Zionist colonies and their claims; and personally saw something of what had been accomplished. They found much to approve in the aspirations and plans of the Zionists, and had warm appreciation for the devotion of many of the colonists, and for their success, by modern methods, in overcoming great natural obstacles.

(3) The Commission recognized also that definite encouragement had been given to the Zionists by the Allies in Mr. Balfour's often quoted statement,* in its approval by other representatives of the Allies. If, however, the strict terms of the Balfour Statement are adhered to —favoring "the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people," "it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights existing in non-Jewish communities in Palestine"—it can hardly be doubted that the extreme Zionist Program must be greatly modified.

For "a national home for the Jewish people" is not equivalent to making Palestine into a Jewish State; nor can the erection of such a Jewish State be accomplished without the gravest trespass upon the "civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine." The fact came out repeatedly in the Commission's conference with Jewish representatives, that the Zionists looked forward to a practically complete dispossession of the present non-Jewish inhabitants of Palestine, by various forms of purchase.

In his address of July 4, 1918, President Wilson laid down the following principle as one of the four great "ends for which the associated peoples of the world were fighting"; "The settlement of every question, whether of territory, of sovereignty, of economic arrangement, or of political relationship upon the basis of the free acceptance of that settlement by the people immediately concerned, and not upon the basis of the material interest or advantage of any other nation or people which may desire a different settlement for the sake of its own exterior influence or mastery." If that principle is to rule, and so the wishes of Palestine's population are to be decisive as to what is to be done with Palestine, then it is to be remembered that the non-Jewish population of Palestine—nearly nine-tenths of the whole—are emphatically against the entire Zionist program. The tables show that there was no one thing upon which the population of Palestine were more agreed than upon this. To subject a people so minded to unlimited Jewish immigration, and to steady financial and social pressure to surrender the land, would be a gross violation of the principle just quoted, and of the people's rights, though it kept within the forms of law.

It is to be noted also that the feeling against the Zionist program is not confined to Palestine, but shared very generally by the people throughout Syria, as our conferences clearly showed. More than 72 per cent—1,350 in all—of all the petitions in the whole of Syria were directed against the Zionist program. Only two requests—those for a united Syria and for independence—had a larger support. This general feeling was only voiced by the "General Syrian Congress," in the seventh, eighth and tenth resolutions of the statement. (Already quoted in the Report.)

The Peace Conference should not shut its eyes to the fact that the anti-Zionist feeling in Palestine and Syria is intense and not lightly to be flouted. No British officer, consulted by the Commissioners, believed that the Zionist program could be carried out except by force of arms. The officers generally thought that a force of not less than 50,000 soldiers would be required even to initiate the program. That of itself is evidence of a strong sense of the injustice of the Zionist program, on the part of the non-Jewish populations of Palestine and Syria. Decisions, requiring armies to carry out, are sometimes necessary, but they are surely not gratuitously to be taken in the interests of a serious injustice. For the initial claim, often submitted by Zionist representatives, that they have a "right" to Palestine, based on an occupation of 2,000 years ago, can hardly be seriously considered.

There is a further consideration that cannot justly be ignored, if the world is to look forward to Palestine becoming a definitely Jewish state, however gradually that may take place. That consideration grows out of the fact that Palestine is "the Holy Land" for Jews, Christians, and Moslems alike. Millions of Christians and Moslems all over the world are quite as much concerned as the Jews with conditions in Palestine, especially with those conditions which touch upon religious feeling and rights. The relations in these matters in Palestine are most delicate and difficult. With the best possible intentions, it may be doubted whether the Jews could possibly seem to either Christians or Moslems proper guardians of the holy places, or custodians of the Holy Land as a whole.

The reason is this: The places which are most sacred to Christians—those having to do with Jesus—and which are also sacred to Moslems, are not only not sacred to Jews, but abhorrent to them. It is simply impossible, under those circumstances, for Moslems and Christians to feel satisfied to have these places in Jewish hands, or under the custody of Jews. There are still other places about which Moslems must have the same feeling. In fact, from this point of view, the Moslems, just because the sacred places of all three religions are sacred to them, have made very naturally much more satisfactory custodians of the holy places than the Jews could be. It must be believed that the precise meaning, in this respect, of the complete Jewish occupation of Palestine has not been fully sensed by those who urge the extreme Zionist program. For it would intensify, with a certainty like fate, the anti-Jewish feeling both in Palestine and in all other portions of the world which look to Palestine as "the Holy Land."

In view of all these considerations, and with a deep sense of sympathy for the Jewish cause, the Commissioners feel bound to recommend that only a greatly reduced Zionist program be attempted by the Peace Conference, and even that, only very gradually initiated. This would have to mean that Jewish immigration should be definitely limited, and that the project for making Palestine distinctly a Jewish commonwealth should be given up.

There would then be no reason why Palestine could not be included in a united Syrian State, just as other portions of the country, the holy places being cared for by an International and Inter-religious Commission, somewhat as at present, under the oversight and approval of the Mandatary and of the League of Nations. The Jews, of course, would have representation upon this Commission.

The recommendations now made lead naturally to the necessity of recommending what power shall undertake the single Mandate for all Syria.

(1) The considerations already dealt with suggest the qualifications, ideally to be desired in this Mandatary Power: First of all it should be freely desired by the people. It should be willing to enter heartily into the spirit of the mandatary system, and its possible gift to the world, and so be willing to withdraw after a reasonable period, and not seek selfishly to exploit the country. It should have a passion for democracy, for the education of the common people and for the development of national spirit. It needs unlimited sympathy and patience in what is practically certain to be a rather thankless task; for no Power can go in, honestly to face actual conditions (like land-ownership, for example) and seek to correct these conditions, without making many enemies. It should have experience in dealing with less developed peoples, and abundant resources in men and money.

(2) Probably no Power combines all these qualifications, certainly not in equal degree. But there is hardly one of these qualifications that has not been more or less definitely indicated in our conferences with the Syrian people and they certainly suggest a new stage in the development of the self-sacrificing spirit in the relations of peoples to one another. The Power that undertakes the single mandate for all Syria, in the spirit of these qualifications, will have the possibility of greatly serving not only Syria but the world, and of exalting at the same time its own national life. For it would be working in direct line with the high aims of the Allies in the war, and give proof that those high aims had not been abandoned. And that would mean very much just now, in enabling the nations to keep their faith in one another and in their own highest ideals.

(3) The Resolutions of the Peace Conference of January 30, 1919, quoted in our instructions, expressly state for regions to be "completely severed from the Turkish Empire," that "the wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the Mandatory Power." Our survey left no room for doubt of the choice of the majority of the Syrian people. Although it was not known whether America would take a mandate at all; and although the Commission could not only give no assurances upon that point, but had rather to discourage expectation; nevertheless, upon the face of the returns, America was the first choice of 1,152 of the petitions presented—more than 60 per cent—while no other Power had as much as 15 per cent for first choice.

And the conferences showed that the people knew the grounds upon which they registered their choice for America. They declared that their choice was due to knowledge of America's record; the unselfish aims with which she had come into the war; the faith in her felt by multitudes of Syrians who had been in America; the spirit revealed in American educational institutions in Syria, especially the College in Beirut, with its well known and constant encouragement of Syrian national sentiment; their belief that America had no territorial or colonial ambitions, and would willingly withdraw when the Syrian state was well established as her treatment both of Cuba and the Philippines seemed to them to illustrate; her genuinely democratic spirit; and her ample resources.

From the point of view of the desires of the "people concerned," the Mandate should clearly go to America.

(4) From the point of view of qualifications, too, already stated as needed in the Mandatary for Syria, America, as first choice of the people, probably need not fear careful testing, point by point, by the standard involved in our discussion of qualifications; though she has much less experience in such work than Great Britain, and is likely to show less patience; and though her definite connections with Syria have been less numerous and close than those of France. She would have at least the great qualification of fervent belief in the new mandatary system of the League of Nations, as indicating the proper relations which a strong nation should take toward a weaker one. And, though she would undertake the mandate with reluctance, she could probably brought to see, how logically the taki of such responsibility follows from t purposes with which she entered the wa and from her advocacy of the League Nations.

(5) There is the further considerati that America could probably come in the Syrian situation, in the beginning least, with less friction than any oth Power. The great majority of Syri people, as has been seen, favor her cor ing, rather than that of any other powe
Both the British and the French wou find it easier to yield their respecti claims to America than to each othe
She would have no rival imperial i terests to press. She would have abu dant resources for the development the sound prosperity of Syria; and th would inevitably benefit in a seconda way the nations which have had close connection with Syria, and so help keep relations among the Allies cordi
No other Power probably would be mo welcome, as a neighbor, to the Britis with their large interests in Egypt, Arab and Mesopotamia; or to the Arabs a Syrians in these regions; or to the Fren with their long-established and ma sided interests in Beirut and the Lebanc

(6) The objections to recommendi at once a single American Mandate for Syria are: first of all, that it is not ce tain that the American people would willing to take the Mandate; that it not certain that the British or Fren would be willing to withdraw, and wou cordially welcome America's coming, situation which might prove steadily ha assing to an American administratio that the vague but large encouragem given to the Zionist aims might pro particularly embarrassing to America, account of her large influential Jewi population; and that, if America were take any mandate at all, and were to ta but one mandate, it is probable that Asia Minor Mandate would be m natural and important. For there is task there of such peculiar and wor wide significance as to appeal to the b in America, and demand the utmost fr her, and as certainly to justify her breaking with her established policy c cerning mixing in the affairs of the Ea ern hemisphere. The Commissioners lieve, moreover, that no other Pow could come into Asia Minor, with har so free to give impartial justice to the peoples concerned.

To these objections as a whole, it to be said, that they are all of such kind that they may resolve themselv and that they only form the sort of stacles that must be expected, in so la and significant an undertaking. In a case they do not relieve the Comm sioners from the duty of recommendi the course which, in their honest ju ment, is the best course, and the one which the whole situation calls.

The Commissioners, therefore, reco mend, as involved in the logic of the fa that the United States of America asked to undertake the single Mandate all Syria.

If for any reason the mandate
Syria is not given to America, then Commissioners recommend, in harm with the express request of the major of the Syrian people, that the mandate given to Great Britain. The tables sh that there were 1,073 petitions in all Sy for Great Britain as Mandatary, if Am ica did not take the mandate. This very greatly in excess of any similar pression for the French.

On the contrary—for whatever rea —more than 60 per cent of all the p tions, presented to the Commission, rectly and strongly protested against French Mandate. Without going int discussion of the reasons for this sit tion, the Commissioners are reluctan compelled to believe that this situat itself makes it impossible to recommen single French mandate for all Syria.

The feeling of the Arabs of the E is particularly strong against the Fren
And there is grave reason to believe t
the attempt to enforce a French Mand would precipitate war between the Ar and the French, and force upon Gr

*Given in full at the end of this report.

itain a dangerous alternative. The mmissioners may perhaps be allowed to that this conclusion is contrary to ir own earlier hope, that—because of ance's long and intimate relations with ria, because of her unprecedented sacri- s in the war, and because the British pire seemed certain to receive far ater accessions of territory from the r—it might seem possible to recom- nd that France be given the entire ndate for Syria. But the longer the mmission remained in Syria, the more ar it became that that course could be taken.

The Commissioners recommend, there- e, that if America cannot take the ndate for all Syria, that it be given to eat Britain; because of the choice of people concerned; because she is al- dy on the ground and with much of the essary work in hand; because of her ined administrators; because of her g and generally successful experience dealing with less developed peoples; because she has so many of the quali- tions needed in a Mandatary Power, we have already considered them.

We should hardly be doing justice, wever, to our sense of responsibility he Syrian people, if we did not frankly some at least of the reasons and mis- ings, variously expressed and implied our conferences, which led to the pre- nce for an American mandate over a tish mandate. The people repeatedly wed honest fear that in British hands mandatary power would become simp- a colonizing power of the old kind; t Great Britain would find it difficult give up the colonial theory, especially case of a people thought inferior; that would favor a civil service and pen- budget too expensive for a poor ple; that the interests of Syria would subordinated to the supposed needs of the Empire; that there would be, after all, too much exploitation of the country for Britain's benefit; that she would never be ready to withdraw and give the country real independence; that she did not really believe in universal education, and would not provide adequately for it; and that she already had more territory in her possession—in spite of her fine colonial record—than was good either for herself or for the world.

These misgivings of the Syrian people unquestionably largely explain their demand for "absolute independence," for a period of "assistance" of only twenty years, their protest against Article 22 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, etc. They all mean that whatever Power the Peace Conference shall send into Syria, should go in as a true mandatary under the League of Nations, and for a limited term. Anything else would be a betrayal of the Syrian people.

It needs to be emphasized, too, that under a true mandatary for Syria, all the legitimate interests of all the nations in Syria would be safeguarded. In particular, there is no reason why any tie that France has had with Syria in the past should be severed or even weakened under the control of another mandatary power, or in an independent Syria.

There remains only to be added, that if France feels so intensely concerning her present claims in Syria, as to threaten all cordial relations among the Allies, it is of course possible to give her a mandate over the Lebanon (not enlarged), separated from the rest of Syria, as is desired by considerable groups in that region. For reasons already given, the Commissioners cannot recommend this course, but it is a possible arrangement.

Respectfully submitted,

CHARLES R. CRANE,
HENRY C. KING.

II—THE REPORT UPON MESOPOTAMIA

view of the Resolutions, passed by he Peace Conference on January 30, 9, and of the Anglo-French Declara- of November 9, 1918—on the eve of Armistice—both of which documents s Syria and Mesopotamia together to treated in the same way, and make them the same promises and assur- es, the Commissioners recommend that Peace Conference, adopt for Mesopo- ia a policy in general parallel to that ommended for Syria, in order that the glo-French Declaration may not be e another "scrap of paper."

We accordingly recommend, as most ortant of all, and in strict harmony h our instructions, that whatever for- administration is brought into Mes- tamia, should come into Mesopotamia, at all as a colonizing power in the sense of that term, but as a manda- under the League of Nations, with r consciousness that "the well-being development" of the Mesopotamian ple form for it a sacred trust. To this the Mandate should have a limited n, the time of expiration to be deter- ed by the League of Nations, in the t of all the facts as brought out from to year, whether in the annual re- s of the Mandatary to the League or ther ways.

he entire text of the first recommenda- for Syria, with its subordinate rec- nendations, applies point by point to opotamia as truly as to Syria.

the Peace Conference, the League of ions, and the appointed Mandatary ver loyally carry out the policy of dataries embodied in the Covenant of League of Nations, the most essential rests of Mesopotamia would be fully guarded—but only so.

We recommend, in the second place, the unity of Mesopotamia be pre- ed: the precise boundaries to be de- nined by a special commission on ndaries, after the mandate has been gned. It should probably include at t the Vilayets of Basra, Bagdad, and Mosul. And the Southern Kurds and Assyrians might well be linked up with Mesopotamia. The wisdom of a united country needs no argument in the case of Mesopotamia.

3. We recommend, in the third place, that Mesopotamia be placed under one Mandatary Power, as the natural way to secure real and efficient unity. The economic, political, social and educational development of the people all call for such a unified mandate. Only waste, confusion, friction, and injury to the people's interests could come from attempting a division and "spheres of influence" on the part of several nations. But this implies that the Mandatary Power shall not itself be an exploiting power, but shall sacredly guard the people's rights.

4. Since it is plainly desirable that there be general harmony in the political and economic institutions and arrangements of Mesopotamia and Syria; and since the people themselves should have chief voice in determining the form of government under which they shall live, we recommend that the Government of Mesopotamia, in harmony with the apparent desires of its people, be a Constitutional Monarchy, such as is proposed for Syria; and that the people of Mesopotamia be given opportunity to indicate their choice of Monarch, the choice to be reviewed and confirmed by the League of Nations. It may be fairly assumed that the 1,278 petitions from Syrians for the independence of Mesopotamia—68.5 per cent of the total number received—reflects the feeling in Mesopotamia itself; and such contact as we have been able to secure with Mesopotamians confirms the assumption, and leads to the belief that the program, presented at Aleppo by representative Mesopotamians, headed by Jaafar Pasha, Military Governor of the Aleppo District, and practically parallel to the Damascus Program, would be generally supported by the Mesopotamian people. Whether this support extends to each item in the program alike, and so to the naming of a King from the sons of the King of the Hedjaz, we have not sufficient data to determine, and so have recommended that a plebiscite be taken upon that point; although there is British evidence that many Mesopotamians have expressed themselves in favor of one of the sons of the King of the Hedjaz as Emir.

5. The Mesopotamian Program expresses its choice of America as Mandatary, and with no second choice. Undoubtedly there has been a good deal of feeling in Mesopotamia against Great Britain, and the petitions specifically charge the British authorities in Mesopotamia with considerable interference with freedom of opinion, of expression, and of travel,—much of which might be justified in time of military occupation. But feeling so stirred might naturally breed unwillingness to express desire for Great Britain as Mandatary.

On the other hand, the material in the pamphlet called "Copies and Translations of Declarations and other Documents relating to Self-Determination in Iraq" (Mesopotamia) was called out by an attempt on the part of the British Government in Mesopotamia to secure the opinions of leading men of all groups concerning "self-determination." This material, just because reported directly to British officials, is doubtless somewhat more favorable to the British than it would otherwise be; but it gives unquestionably good evidence of much opinion likely to choose a British mandate. And after all, the range of choice of a mandatary, of sufficient power and experience and of essential justice, is decidedly limited, and itis by no means improbable that if the Mesopotamians were confronted by a refusal of America to take a mandate for Mesopotamia, they would make Great Britain at least second choice, as the majority of the Syrians did. There is supplementary evidence also upon this point.

Now it seems so unlikely that America could or would take a mandate for Mesopotamia, in addition to the possible consideration of Syria and Asia Minor, that the Commissioners recommend that the Peace Conference assign the mandate for Mesopotamia to Great Britain: because of the general reasons already given for recommending her as mandatary in Syria, if America does not go in there; because she is probably best of all fitted for the particular task involved, in view of her long relations with the Arabs; in recognition of the sacrifices made by her in delivering Mesopotamia from the Turks, though with no acknowledgement of right of conquest, as her own statements expressly disclaim; because of the special interests she naturally has in Mesopotamia on account of its nearness to India and its close connections with Arabia; and because of work already done in the territory.

These reasons make it probable that the largest interests of the people of Mesopotamia as a whole will be best served by a British Mandate, in spite of the fact that from the point of view of world-interests, in the prevention of jealousy, suspicion, and fear of domination by a single Power, it were better for both Britain and the world that no further territory anywhere be added to the British Empire. A British mandate, however, will have the decided advantage of tending to promote economic and educational unity throughout Mesopotamia and Syria whether Syria be under Great Britain or America—and so will reflect more fully than ever before, the close relations in language, customs, and trade between these parts of the former Turkish Empire.

In a country so rich as Mesopotamia in agricultural possibilities, in oil, and in other resources, with the best intentions, there will inevitably be danger of exploitation and monopolistic control by the Mandatary Power, through making British interests supreme, and especially through large Indian immigration. This danger will need increasingly and most honestly to be guarded against. The Mesopotamians feel very strongly the menace particularly of Indian immigration, even though that immigration should be confined to Moslems. They dread the admixture of another people of entirely different race and customs, as threatening their Arabic civilization.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY C. KING,
CHARLES R. CRANE.

III—REPORT UPON NON-ARABIC SPEAKING PORTIONS OF FORMER OTTOMAN EMPIRE

THE method of inquiry, in making our survey of the Asia Minor portion of our task, has necessarily differed from that followed in the study of Syria. For our ultimate duty, according to our instructions, is "to form an opinion * * * of the divisions of territory and assignment of mandates which will be most likely to promote the order, peace, and development" of the peoples concerned.

Now we faced in Turkey a unique situation as to mandates. In Syria we were in a region already virtually separated from the Turkish Empire, a region whose boundaries were in general clear, and a region recognized as under a temporary government. In such a territory, it was entirely feasible to go from community to community to seek the desires of the peoples concerning a mandate. None of these conditions held for Asia Minor.

For in the case of the proposed State of Armenia, for example, the territory was not yet set off, nor its boundaries even approximately known; the Armenians were were not largely present in any of the territory to be assigned; the wishes of the Armenians themselves as to mandates were already known; and the wishes of the rest of the population could not be taken primarily into account, since the establishment of the Armenian State would be in a sense penal for the Turkish people, and naturally to be accepted only as a necessity.

If a Constantinopolitan State were to be set off similar difficulties, in getting the wishes of the people upon a mandate, would be encountered. For the primary interest in such a State is a world interest, rather than a local one; the population would be likely to shift considerably with so new a policy, and so the choice of the present population, especially in such troublous times, would not be particularly significant; and the fact that a large element of the population belongs to the official class would make an unbiased opinion hardly possible.

Even in the portions of Asia Minor sure to be left with the Empire, an inquiry for choice of mandate, like that conducted in Syria, was not practicable. For the Peace Conference had not declared—at least up to the present—that Turkey must have a mandatory power over her, and consequently it was largely within her own choice whether she should have any mandatory at all. She had also long been an independent country, so that the mandate would be inevitably somewhat modified and adjusted through agreement with the mandatary.

Moreover, even if an inquiry for choice of mandatary were feasible, it would be most difficult to get trustworthy results. For it is perfectly clear that opinion in Constantinople is not free to express itself. The Government pressure in various forms upon individuals and groups, and the partisan censorship of the press; are both manifest. In the case of an American mandate, too, it was not known whether America would take it at all; so that there was fear of punishment from some other power, if declarations were made for America and she did not actually accept the mandate. Like conditions held in the interior, and there is even less understanding there of the political situation; so that it was felt that there would not be much gain from further inquiry in other parts of the Empire, in addition to the frequent reports by various investigators to which we already had access.

The plainly imperative need of the whole country for as prompt a settlement as possible of its fate also led the Commission to give up visits to various parts of the Empire, in order not to defer its report and so possibly delay action by the Peace Conference. The Commissioners have had the less hesitancy hastening their report, because it was believed that the essential facts upon which recommendations must be based were already in hand.

In this situation, the method for our inquiry in Asia Minor has been: To build, first of all, on our two months' study in Paris of the Turkish problems in the course of which we used the reports and other material of the Western Asia division of the American experts, and had many conferences with experts there, and with able authorities coming direct from Turkey; to take full advantage of all the general work done in the survey of Syria, as part of the former Turkish Empire, with its fundamentally similar problems and its incidental side-lights; especially to see as many representative groups and individuals as possible in Constantinople, and so to get reports on all phases of our inquiry, and from all parts of Asia Minor; to supplement the information so received with reports, for recent months, of the American Embassy and Consular Offices (through the kind co-operation of Admiral Bristol and Commissioner Ravndal); and to supplement still further with reports of personal investigations by American Missionaries, knowing the country thoroughly, and by representatives of the American Commission on Relief in the Near East, and of American business corporations.

In this way a large mass of valuable material has been brought together and studied by all three advisers—Dr. Albert H. Lybyer, Dr. George R. Montgomery and Capt. William Yale, U. S. A.—who summarized their inferences from it, and reported on special phases of the common problem. To test our conclusions, expert advice at all possible points was also sought from American and other leaders—many of them personally known by members of the Commission. The report of the Commissioners is based on the whole of the resulting evidence.

Our report falls naturally into five divisions; Pertinent action already taken by the Peace Conference; dangers from a selfish division and exploitation of the Turkish Empire; considerations looking to a proper division of Turkey; resulting problems; and the Commission's recommendations.

I—PERTINENT ACTION ALREADY TAKEN BY THE PEACE CONFERENCE

To begin with, the action creating the Commission, of which the Commissioners now reporting make the American Section, was taken by the Council of Four. Our instructions were called: "Instructions for Commissioners from the Peace Conference to make inquiry in certain portions of the Turkish Empire which are to be permanently separated from Turkey and put under the guidance of governments acting as mandatories under the League of Nations." The Instructions then go on to say: "It is the purpose of the Conference to separate from the Turkish Empire certain areas comprising, for example, Palestine, Syria, the Arab countries to the east of Palestine and Syria, Mesopotamia, Armenia, Cilicia, and perhaps additional areas in Asia Minor, and to put their development under the guidance of governments which are to act as mandatories of the League of Nations."

So far as concerns Asia Minor, this commits the Conference to two courses of action: Permanent separation from the Turkish Empire of "Armenia, Cilicia, and perhaps additional areas in Asia Minor"; and dealing with these territories under the mandatory, not colonial system.

That this is the deliberate purpose of the Council is further shown by the added statement: "It is expected that this will be done in accordance with the following resolutions, adopted by the representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan at a conference held at the Quai d'Orsay on January 30, 1919."

1. Having regard to the record of the German administration in the colonies formerly part of the German Empire, and to the menace which the possession by Germany of submarine bases in many parts of the world would necessarily constitute to the freedom and security of all nations, the Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that in no circumstances should any of the German Colonies be restored to Germany.

2. For similar reasons, and more particularly because of the historical mis-government by the Turks of subject peoples and the terrible massacres of Armenians and others in recent years, the Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia, Palestine and Arabia must be completely severed from the Turkish Empire. This is without prejudice to the settlement of other parts of the Turkish Empire.

3. The Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that advantage should be taken of the opportunity afforded by the necessity of disposing of these colonies and territories formerly belonging to Germany and Turkey which are inhabited by peoples not yet able to stand by themselves under the strenuous conditions of the modern world, to apply to these territories the principles that the well-being and development of such peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in the constitution of the League of Nations.

4. After careful study they are satisfied that the best method of giving practical effect to this principle is that the tutelage of such peoples should be entrusted to advanced nations who, by reason of their resources, their experience or their geographical positions, can best undertake this responsibility, and that this tutelage should be exercised by them as mandatories on behalf of the League of Nations.

5. The Allied and Associated Powers are of opinion that the character of the mandate must differ according to the stage of development of the people, the geographical situation of the territory, its economic conditions, and other similar circumstances.

6. They consider that certain communities formerly belonging to the Turkish Empire have reached a stage of development where their existence as independent nations can be provisionally recognized, subject to the rendering of administrative advice and assistance by a mandatory power until such time as they are able to stand alone. The wishes of these communities must be a principal consideration in the selection of the mandatory power . . .

In every case of mandate, the mandatory state shall render to the League of Nations an annual report in reference to the territory committed to its charge.

The resolutions clearly assert several things:

(1) That in settling the issues of the Turkish Empire, account may rightfully be taken of any "menace" to "the freedom and security of all nations";

(2) That "the historical misgovernment by the Turks of subject peoples and the terrible massacres of Armenians and others in recent years" constitute a special reason for separation of territory, but "without prejudice to the settlement of other parts of the Turkish Empire";

(3) That this separation of territory should be taken as a special opportunity to apply "the principle that the well-being and development of subject peoples form a sacred trust of civilization and that securities for the performance of this trust should be embodied in the constitution of the League of Nations";

(4) That this principle should be carried out through the mandatory system, which the remaining resolutions carefully define.

The instructions of the Commission then continue: "And it is agreed that the administration of these mandates shall be in the spirit of the following document, which was formally presented to the President of the United States on behalf of the Governments of Great Britain and France":

The aim which France and Great Britain have in view in prosecuting in the East the war let loose by German ambition is the complete and final liberation of the peoples so long oppressed by the Turks and the establishment of national governments and administrations deriving their authority from the initiative and free choice of the native populations.

In order to give effect to these intentions, France and Great Britain have agreed to encourage and assist the establishment of native governments and administrations in Syria and Mesopotamia already liberated by the Allies, and in the territories which they are proceeding to liberate, and they have agreed to recognize such governments as soon as they are effectively established. So far from desiring to impose specific institutions upon the populations of these regions, their sole object is to ensure, by their support and effective assistance, that the governments and administrations adopted by these regions of their own free will shall be exercised in the normal way. The function which the two Allied Governments claim for themselves in the liberated territories is to ensure impartial and equal justice for all; to facilitate the economic development of the country by encouraging local initiative; to promote the diffusion of education; and to put an end to the divisions too long exploited by Turkish policy.

This is as admirable a statement of the spirit in which mandates should be administered as could be asked, and reflects honor on the two great Allies from whom it originally came.

Taken as a whole, the action of the Peace Conference, in which all the Allies have shared, reflected in the forming of the Commission on Mandates and embodied in the Instructions to the Commission, form a solid basis for the policy to be adopted in Asia Minor. It is not a sentimental program; but it is just on the one hand, and considerate on the other. If the Conference proceeds, in its further dealings with Turkey, honestly and strongly and consistently to build on the foundations so prepared, essential justice will be done to all the peoples concerned, rankling wrongs will be set right, and the purposes of the Allies will be justified far vindicated.

And the Peace Conference should not shut its eyes to the fact that vindication is greatly needed just now. For there are set directly over against such a procedure as that now outlined and to which the Peace Conference is in principle and in an honesty committed, the still active policies of the old diplomacy of secret treaties and understandings and of division of spoils among victors. The direct consequences of such selfish and ultimately self-destructive policies are to be seen in all the world today. It is to be feared that some of the highest aims of the Allies in the war have already been well nigh lost because of these policies creeping in, in all manner of "settlements." It concerns the Peace Conference to decide whether the same fateful method is to be followed in Turkey.

II—THE DANGERS OF A SELFISH DIVISION AND EXPLOITATION OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE

In considering recommendations concerning the future administration of large parts of the former Turkish Empire, involving millions of people, it is imperative that the Peace Conference should make clear to itself from the beginning the serious dangers involved in the selfish and divisive national and corporate policies into which the Allies have been drifting in their treatment of the Turkish Empire, and should squarely challenge that drift at once.

No doubt this policy of selfish exploitation in Turkey is in its entirety not the deliberate aim of any Power. Much confusion has unavoidably prevailed. The demands upon the Allies and upon the Peace Conference have been beyond human power wholly to meet. Under the pressure of immediate necessity for some kind of action, many steps have been taken in good faith, which have later proved temptations to selfish advantage, and provocations to jealousy and suspicion. The situation, too, has been most complex, by reason of previous engagements, and of countless inter-relations of interest—private, party, national and international. This complexity has often made it honestly difficult to disentangle exactly the right course.

But, however the drift toward selfish exploitation of the Turkish Empire has come about, there should be no mistake about the fact or its dangers. It needs to be said and heeded that Constantinople is once again a nest of selfish, suspicious, hateful intrigue, reaching out over the whole Empire, if not the world. What will it mean if this policy is allowed to prevail? In definitely raising this question, the Commissioners are not for an instant supposing that there is any easy and inexpensive solution of the Turkish problem. The justest solution at best will not be wholly welcome to Turkey, and will encounter her opposition. But in such a solution the Allies could at least know that their sacrifices were being made for the establishment of progressively righteous relations among men, not for sowing the seeds of endless and bitter discord.

In seeking, then, a practical plan for the righteous treatment of the Turkish Empire, the Allies should bear clearly in mind that their fidelity to their announced aims in the war is here peculiarly to be tested; and that, in the proportion in which the division of the Turkish Empire by the Allies is made a division of spoils by victors, and is primarily determined by the selfish national and corporate interests of the Allies, in just that proportion will grave dangers arise.

(1) Such a division, in the first place, would have to be forced upon the people concerned—not chosen by them. Even separate occupation of territory would be resented, and felt to be a constant injustice. The feeling of the Turkish people concerning the occupation of the Smyrna region by the Greeks is illustrative. They cannot be convinced that such seizure of territory can be harmonized with the professed principles of the Allies in the war. In such a case there is no possibility of laying the foundations of truly cordial relations with the Turkish people.

(2) In the second place, just because these occupations of territory have to be forced upon the Turks, a large number of troops would be required to establish and maintain each occupation. With the intolerable burdens which the war has brought upon all the nations, and with the insistent demands for the demobilization of troops, this would be certain to prove an increasingly serious situation. The number of troops required for the occupation looked upon as temporary and for police purposes, is no measure of the forces required to maintain an aggressive and permanent seizure of territory, as the Turks themselves proved to their sorrow both in Macedonia in 1903-06 and in Yemen through a series of years. The selfishly divisive policy will go far toward turning Turkey into an armed camp, and breeding a constant state of brigandage.

(3) It should not be forgotten, either in the third place, that this selfishly divisive policy would naturally provoke violent retaliation, as in the whole region of Smyrna. Such retaliation, too, is likely to be visited not only upon the immediate aggressors, but also upon the Christian populations generally. For a selfish division and exploitation of territory may easily induce in the Turks the attitude that, since the worst from outside is probably to come upon them in any case, they may as well take the occasion to rid themselves entirely of those whom they look upon as internal enemies. In this case, the Allies would have to share the guilt of the Turks.

(4) Such selfish exploitation of Turkey, also, would not only certainly call out the resentment of the most solid portion of the American people, as emphatically not illustrating the ends for which America came into the war; but would also tend to alienate the best sentiment among all the Allies. To eliminate from the cause of the Allies this weight oral judgment would involve a loss of fluence in the world—already greatly minished—not lightly to be faced.

(5) Such exploitation would mean, o, the deliberate sowing of dissension the gravest kind among the Allies emselves, threatening the moral unity of eir cause and entailing serious world nsequences. This situation has already me to pass in no small degree. Only oral blindness can deny it. Suspicion d distrust are rife, and the meanest nd of intrigue against one another has en seen in not a few situations.

It may be doubted if the moral unity the Allies is more than a fraction of hat it was in the war or in the early ys of the Armistice. Now that is a lamity well nigh immeasurable, and it n be cured by no mechanics. Are the llies to go on increasing this moral ssension among the world's leaders, and liberately inviting the moral shipwreck the world by their policies in Turkey?

(6) Coupled with similar decisions al-ady reached, selfish division and ex-oitation in Turkey would also go far convince men of independent moral dgment all over the world—including any previously ardent upholders of the use of the Allies—that the aims of the llies had become as selfish and ruthless those of the Germans had been. That ould carry with it its own fateful con-quences.

For example, no thoughtful man who d the opportunity of watching in rance the stream of American officers d soldiers and of able men enlisted for rious forms of service to the soldiers, they came and went, could fail to see nong those men, as the Armistice went , the spread, like a contagion, of de-ression and disillusionment as to the gnificance of the war aims, because of e selfish wrangling of the nations.

The fact should be squarely faced that thousands of Americans who served in the war have gone home disillusioned, greatly fearing, if not convinced, that the Allies had not been true to their asserted war aims, and have been consequently driven to an almost cynical view of the entire conflict—cynicism that made them feel like withdrawing all further American help, and henceforth washing their hands of the whole European imbroglio. This attitude has been reflected in many other American citizens who had been devoted supporters of the Allied cause. Now that is not a good result for America, for the Allied Powers or for the world.

But that situation, and similar situations among the best in all the Allies, can be changed only by some clear demonstration that somewhere and on a large and impressive scale, the often asserted high and unselfish aims of the Allies have been honestly carried out. That would come like an invigorating breeze out of the North, bringing new faith in men and in the genuineness of human ideals and endeavor. That opportunity is offered, in a peculiar degree, in the righteous settlement of the problems of the Turkish Empire.

No namby-pamby, sickly sentimental treatment is called for here. There are great and lasting wrongs in Turkey which must be set right. And there are world relations and interests honestly to be recognized and permanently to be satisfied. For the sake of justice to Turkey herself and to all her subject peoples; for the sake of the honor of the Allies and the renewed confidence of men in them; for the stemming of the tide of cynicism and selfish strife; for a fresh and powerful demonstration of moral soundness in the race; the Allies should recognize the grave danger of all selfish exploitation of Turkey, and turn their backs on every last vestige of it.

III—CONSIDERATION LOOKING TO A PROPER DIVISION OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE

But if a selfishly exploiting division the Turkish Empire is not justified may be asked: Why is it necessary to vide Asia Minor, at least, at all? For ch a division there are at least two eat reasons: First, the hideous mis-overnment and massacres of the Turkish le; and second, Turkey's utter inade-uacy to the strategic world position in hich she is placed.

I. In the first place, there cannot be ft out of account the hideous mis-gov-nment of Turkey for centuries, even r citizens of the Turkish race.

(1) One may recognize fully the agree-le and attractive personal qualities of e Turks that commonly make them the st liked, probably, of all the peoples of e Empire, and that almost unconscious-turn most foreigners who stay long the country into pro-Turks. One may cognize, too, that there has long been the Turkish Government a kind of gative, indolent tolerance of other peo-es, that allowed them much of the time go on in their own ways, though con-antly despised, robbed, oppressed. It ay be granted, also, that the Turks have en successful in keeping, through long riods, widely scattered areas together d giving them a sort of unity, by the ethod of "divide and rule," of leaving gional governments pretty largely to emselves so long as the Turkish reve-ues were obtained; and of using other ces very largely as officials. It is only ir, also, to remember the very con-derable amount of demoralization caused the perpetual intriguing of European wers in Turkish affairs.

(2) But while all this may be freely lmitted, it must still be clearly seen, at the Government of the Turkish mpire has been for the most part a retched failure, in spite of generally od laws. For that Government has en characterized by incessant corrup-on, plunder, and bribery. It might al-ost be called a government of simple xploitation. So that Ramsay, who dges the Turk leniently, feels obliged to say: "The Turk is not naturally a good officer or a good official. . . . Bribery is the universal rule." And he speaks of the deep-seated mingled hatred and fear on the part even of the Turkish peasantry for government officials. In fact it is hardly too much to say that Turkish history shows gross neglect of the most ordinary and essential duties of a government in the Empire as a whole.

(3) And the treatment of the other subject races has been still worse than that of the Turks. For them nothing has been secure—whether property, lives, wives, or children. To all this have been added the horrible massacres of the Armenians, especially since Ab-dul-Hamil's time, and somewhat similar deportations of the Greeks. Both races have proved themselves abler, more industrious, enterprising, and prosperous than the Turks, and so have made themselves feared and hated, doubtless not altogether without some provocation on their part in certain cases. And these massacres have been due to deliberate and direct government action, in which the Turkish people themselves have been too willing to share. They have not been crimes of the passion of the moment. And they have involved cruelties horrible beyond description.

For it must not be forgotten that this thing was not done in a corner. The evidence for few events in history has been more carefully gathered, sifted and ordered. The Bryce report upon "The Treatment of Armenians in the Ottoman Empire 1915-16," leaves no room for doubt of the essential facts. It is idle to attempt to deny it, or appreciably to mitigate its force.

Lord Bryce, himself a trained historian, says of the report: "Nothing has been admitted the substantial truth of which seems open to reasonable doubt." And in estimating the value of the evidence, he calls attention to these facts: (1) "Nearly all of it comes from eye witnesses"; (2) "the main facts rest upon evidence coming from different and independent sources"; (3) "facts of the same, or of a very similar nature, occurring in different places, are deposed to by different and independent witnesses," —including Danish and German witnesses; (4) "the volume of this concurrent evidence from different quarters is so large as to establish the main facts beyond all question"; (5) "in particular it is to be noted that many of the most shocking and horrible accounts are those for which there is the most abundant testimony from the most trustworthy neutral witnesses. None of these cruelties rest on native evidence alone." And he adds: "A recollection of previous massacres will show that such crimes are a part of a long settled and often repeated policy of Turkish rulers. . . . The attempts made to find excuses for wholesale slaughter and for the removal of a whole people from its homes leaves no room for doubt as to the slaughter and the removal. The main facts are established by the confession of the criminals themselves. . . . The disproval of palliations which the Turks have put forward is as complete as the proof for the atrocities themselves."

Mr. Moorfield Storey, ex-president of the American Bar Association, records the natural verdict of one skilled in the weighing of evidence, when he writes to Lord Bryce: "In my opinion, the evidence which you print is as reliable as that upon which rests our belief in many of the universally admitted facts of history, and I think it establishes beyond all reasonable doubt the deliberate purpose of the Turkish authorities practically to exterminate the Armenians, and their responsibility for the hideous atrocities which have been perpetrated upon that unhappy people."

It is not pleasant to call these dark facts to mind, but unfortunately there is only the slightest evidence that the Turkish Government of people as a whole have recognized or repudiated the crime of the Armenian massacres, or done anything appreciable to set them right. Some small groups of Turks have characterized these crimes aright, but there is almost nothing to show repentance or the fruits of repentence on the part of the great majority of the people or of their leaders, or to give reasonable hope that the massacres might not be repeated; though there is doubtless some excuse for the comparative indifference with which these massacres have been regarded by the Turks, because of a certain amount of revolutionary activity on the part of Armenians in some cases, and because of the widespread wretchedness and want and sufferings of the whole Turkish population in ten years of war and disorder.

Now these crimes—black as anything in human history—cannot be simply forgotten and left out of account in seeking a righteous solution of the Turkish problem. If the rankest conceivable wrongs are not to be passed over in silence, it is inevitable that any just solution of the Turkish problem must contain that small measure of justice which it is now possible to render in this case.

It is strange that Lord Bryce in reviewing all the evidence concerning the Armenian massacres of 1915-16 should feel compelled to say: "The record of the rulers of Turkey for the last two of three centuries, from the Sultan on his throne to the district Mutessarif, is, taken as a whole, an almost unbroken record of corruption, of justice, of an oppression which often rises into hideous cruelty. . . . Can anyone still continue to hope that the evils of such a government are curable? Or does the evidence contained in this volume furnish most terrible and convincing proof that it cannot longer be permitted to rule over subjects of a different faith?"

Is it strange that he should be unable to shake off the conviction that these facts are inevitably knit up with a proper solution of the problem of Turkey? "It is evidently desirable," he writes, "that the public opinion of the belligerent nations—and, I may add, of neutral peoples also—should be enabled by knowledge of what has happened in Asia Minor and Armenia, to exercise its judgment on the course proper to be followed when, at the end of the present war, a political re-settlement of the Nearer East has to be undertaken."

Surely the Peace Conference was justified in its resolution: "more particularly because of the historical mis-government by the Turks of subject peoples and the terrible massacres of Armenians and others in recent years, the Allied and Associated Powers are agreed that Armenia . . . must be completely severed from the Turkish Empire."

That the formation of a separate Armenian State is the deliberate intention of the Peace Conference seems further indicated in the later actions of the Conference concerning Armenia, like the appointment of Colonel Haskell as High Commissioner in Armenia on behalf of the four Great Powers, and the appointment of Major General Harbord by President Wilson to investigate conditions in Armenia. Many incidental things also indicate the general expectation on the part of the Allies that an Armenian State will be formed.

(4) The great and primary reason for this decision by the Peace Conference, is undoubtedly to be found in the Armenian massacres which have just been reviewed. But it might still be asked whether the situation created by the massacres could be met only by the formation of a separate Armenia. For such a separation, it must be admitted, involves very difficult problems. Why, then, is it necessary to set off an Armenian State? What are the reasons?

The only possible substitute for a separated Armenia is a general mandate by one of the Great Powers over all Asia Minor, which should ensure equal rights to all elements of the population—to all races, and to all religions. If such a mandate were honestly carried out, we should certainly hope for a far better government on modern lines. But under the proposed mandatory system of the League of Nations, it is intended that the mandate shall be for a limited period. Even if that period were considerably prolonged, what would happen when the Mandatary withdrew? It is impossible to be sure, if the Turks still constituted the majority, that the state would not slump back into many of its old evils, including oppression of other races. The history of the Turks, unfortunately, gives all too small reason to hope for more.

The reasons for a separate Armenia, then, may be said to be because of the demonstrated unfitness of the Turks to rule over others, or even over themselves; because of the adoption of repeated massacres as a deliberate policy of State; because of almost complete lack of penitence for the massacres, or repudiation of the crime—they rather seek to excuse them; because practically nothing has been done by the Turks in the way of repatriation of Armenians or of reparations to them—a condition not naturally suggesting a repetition of the experiment of Turkish rule; because, on the contrary, there is evidence of intense feeling still existing against the Armenians, and implicit threatening of massacre; because there has been sufficient proof that the two races cannot live peaceably and decently together, so that it is better for both that they have separate states; because of complete failure of the strong clauses of the Treaty of 1878 to protect the Armenians; because the most elementary justice suggests that there must be at least some region in Turkey where Armenians can go and not have to live under Turkish rule; because nothing less than that could give to the Armenians any adequate guarantee of safety, consequently, nothing less will satisfy the conscience of the world upon this point; because in this day of opportunity for small nations under the League of Nations, the Armenians have surely earned the right, by their sufferings, their endurance, their loyalty to principles, their unbroken spirit and ambition, and their demonstrated industry, ability and self-reliance, to look forward to a national life of their own; because such a separate state would probably make more certain decent treatment of Armenians in other parts of Turkey; and because there is no adequate substitute for such a state. In the interests of the Armenians, of the Turks, and of the peace of the world alike, the formation of a separate Armenian State is to be urged.

II. But the reasons for some righteous division of Turkey do not lie simply in that "historical mis-government," which justly challenges her rule over any other people; but also in her utter unfitness for the strategic world position in which she is placed. The very fact of her age-long misrule, coupled with her occupation of territory of critical significance to the world, constitutes her a "menace to the freedom and security of all nations," and makes unusual restriction in her case necessary, for the greater good of the world and of her own subject peoples.

(1) For Turkey is held, as Dominian has said, by "a people whose incompetence to convert nature's gifts into use or profit is historically patent."* But, striking as has been their economic failure, the failure of the Turks has been far more than merely external or material. She has acted rather as a kind of blight upon all the peoples she has conquered. As Ramsey—possibly too strongly—puts it: "The action of the Turks in every department of life has simply been to ruin, never to rebuild. . . . They destroyed the intellectual and moral institutions of a nation; they broke up and dissolved almost the entire social fabric; they undermined every educating and civilizing influence in the land, and they brought back a great part of the country to the primitive simplicity of nomadic life. . . . There is hardly a social institution in Asia Minor, showing any degree of social constructiveness, that is not an older Anatolian creation, Moslemized in outward form, and usually desecrated in the process."†

(2) Now the evil of this blighting influence of Turkish rule is vastly increased because of the critical significance of the territory which she occupies. First of all, in the words of another, "Turkey is before everything else a roadway—a bridge-land. . . . No solution of the political problem involved can be attained without full consideration of its geographic aspects. . . . Turkey has been a highway of commerce and civilization between Europe on the one hand and Asia and Africa on the other. . . . The through roads converging into the Turkish territory are probably the oldest commercial routes of the world. At any rate they connote the sites on which the most ancient civilization rose."

By position, then, Turkey lies "at the junction of three continents, and therefore on the main field of history," and is "the site of convergence of the main avenues of continental travel"; and becomes, thus, in a peculiar degree, "the meeting place of races which are generally associated with the three continents which the country unites. Aryan, Tatar, and Semitic peoples therefore are strongly represented in the land."

With this advantage of position her remarkable topography combined to "create Turkey's relation with the world beyond its borders." "This relation was facilitated by the admirable set of natural routes which lead in and out of the country"; by the Mediterranean Sea, Aegean Sea, Turkish Straits, and the Black Sea, "the shores of which are closely dotted with the terminals of great avenues from northeastern Europe as well as all of northern and central Asia . . . and by 'the rift Valley of Syria.'" Hence "the Eastern question is as old as the history of civilization on this particular spot of the inhabited world"—always "this momentous international problem of determining which people or nation shall control the Straits between Europe and Asia, who shall get toll from the enormous transit trade of the region."‡

Now under the new conception of a League of Nations, and of mandatory powers who are to think of the "well-being and development" of peoples temporarily placed under their care as a "sacred trust of civilization," it is proposed to change this age-old Eastern question from one of a selfish scramble among the nations to one of recognizing here a great and distinctly international or world interest; to make definite provision for this world interest, and yet not only with full justice to the Turkish people more immediately concerned, but to their greater advantage. For, except for a practically all-powerful nation, a position like that of Turkey, makes the land inevitably a perpetual prey of warring powers, so that Dominian could say quite truthfully of Turkey: "The land staggers under the load of misfortune which its central position in the Eastern Hemisphere has heaped upon it." The situation has been inevitably one of exceeding difficulty for Turkey.

Is it not high time, then, in this crisis of the world's history, and after the immeasurable sacrifices of the Great War, that intelligent men should recognize the stupid futility of the old method of incessant political and commercial national strife, and face this age-long Eastern question in a totally new spirit?

(3) But because Turkey has been so markedly a "bridge-land," it became also "the debatable land"; so that Ramsey can say that at the present day the central movement in Asia is, what it always has been, a conflict between the Eastern and Western spirit. "About 1070, most of Asia Minor became Oriental in language and in Government." "For nearly eight centuries the Oriental element reigned supreme, in Asia Minor and swept far into Europe. . . . But step by step Asia has been driven back, and in Asia Minor the old struggle has recommenced." "On the west coast of Asia Minor the Greek element has increased enormously in strength while the Turkish element has grown weaker." The Oriental element "dies out in these parts by a slow but sure decay." "A revival of Orientalism" was planned and directed by Abd-ul-Hamid and by the later Young Turk movement." "But even in the Eastern part of Asia Minor, the Oriental spirit is doomed." "Orientalism is ebbing and dying in the country."*

Ramsey's analysis is probably correct and important. But is there not something far greater to be looked for, than that gradual driving out of the "Oriental spirit" in Turkey? In one sense, doubtless, that spirit is doomed and must go. We are to be done with Oriental domination in Turkey, it may be hoped, when we get states which know in their citizens no privileged and unprivileged classes, but only equals before the law. But are we not also to be freed from Occidental domination? Was it not one of the greatest of the convictions of the Allies in the war, that no nation, no "Kultur," however great and fine it might be, was good enough to blot out all others?

Are there not priceless Oriental values, gratefully to be recognized and sedulously to be preserved? And may not Turkey, just because she has been, through the ages, "bridge-land" and "debatable land," become in some rich and high sense mediating-land as well between the Occident and the Orient, teaching the nations how to combine the quietism of the East, and the pragmatism of the West; the religious dependence of the East, and the scientific mastery of natural forces of the West; the mental and spiritual fellowship of the East, and the mental and spiritual independence of the West?

As illustrative of the spiritual values still resident in Islam, for example, may be mentioned the remarkable and inspiring achievements of the Senussi sect, in establishing a vast state in a most barren, unpromising land, and in up-lifting, organizing, and harmonizing a most backward and degenerated population in the heart of Africa within a comparatively few years, and under influences purely Moslem. Such a state should not be needlessly encroached upon. It rather affords ample warrant for expecting that under new democratic processes and in due time the Moslems will prove themselves able to build up and manage their own states in the Arabian and Anatolian peninsulas. If the Entente powers are sincere in their declarations not further to harass the Moslem world and so give excuse for a pan-Islamic movement, they should also at once definitely and publicly renounce all further political encroachments on that world, and outline a clear policy of uplifting the Moslems, already subject to their control, by enlarged opportunities both in education and in public service.

(4) With the vision of such larger possible goals for this "bridge-land" and "debatable land" of the Eastern Hemisphere, one approaches the problem of the control of Constantinople and the Straits in a different spirit. The situation is so unique, the relations so complex and far-reaching, the responsibilities so heavy, and the possibilities so enthralling, that no one nation can be equal to the task,—least of all a nation with Turkey's superlatively bad record of misrule. No situation in the world demands so compellingly international rule—not only to put an end here to the selfish scramble and perpetual intrigue of the nations, but also, above all, to rise to the possibilities of this strategic opportunity, for the benefit of all the race.

This calls for a Constantinopolitan State, directly and permanently vested in the League of Nations, but best managed probably through a single mandatary as trustee, steadily responsible to the League and removable by the League.

Such a solution, at first sight, will undoubtedly be unwelcome to most Turks. But Turkey is simply not conceivably equal to a great world responsibility; and the larger world interests must prevail. Moreover, it is certainly better for Turkey herself to be delivered from this intolerable responsibility, and to have her own government taken out of the midst of what has been, through the centuries, a center of boundless intrigue. The common people of Turkey would lead a much happier life in a state freed from outreaching imperialism, and at liberty to devote itself to the welfare of its own citizens.

III. If one turns aside now for a moment from the immediate problem of Asia Minor to that of the former Turkish Empire as a whole, other reasons for division of the Turkish Empire may be suggested.

(1) For one thing, there would be real danger, even under a mandate, in keeping intact the Turkish Empire as a whole—the danger of a later revival of the Turkish Empire and a repetition of its past history, on account of the often revived jealousies of the Powers. That danger is not to be lightly regarded.

(2) The Turkish Empire, too, as it has existed, is not truly a unit from any point of view,—certainly not the Arabic and the non-Arabic-speaking portions. Its interests—except those of good government—are not one. It is hardly too much to say that however much the land has been a single unit with reference to intercontinental travel and trade, the fact remains that it has been clearly subdivided within itself. There would probably be distinct gain, consequently, in similarly dividing its problems, and seeking separate solutions for them. Syria, Mesopotamia, and Arabia, for example, each has a kind of unity of its own.

It was natural, therefore, that the Peace Conference should have resolved that Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and Arabia should be completely severed from the Turkish Empire. The first three have already been dealt with in the preceding reports of this Commission. It may be briefly pointed out here, however, that these areas are naturally cut off from Turkey, because of their different language, customs, and civilization; that the people do not wish further connection with Turkey, but were rather greatly rejoiced to be freed forever from the Turkish yoke; and that there is opportunity in the Arabic-speaking portions of the former Turkish Empire for at least two strong national states—Syria, including Palestine, and Mesopotamia, in accordance with the hopes of the Peace Conference and the desires of the people themselves. Both Syria and Mesopotamia should be, of course, under mandatories for a time.

IV. The considerations now dealt with looking to a righteous division of the Turkish portion of the former Ottoman Empire, clearly involve the setting off of an Arabian State, and of a Constantinopolitan State; but as clearly imply the continuance of a distinctly Turkish State, with guarantees of justice to all its constituent peoples. The resulting problems, now to be considered, therefore, naturally become: The problem of a separate Armenia; the problem of an international Constantinopolitan State; the problem of a continued Turkish State; the problem of the Greeks; and of other minority races.

I—THE PROBLEM OF A SEPARATE ARMENIA

(1) The reasons why it is necessary that a separate Armenian State should be set up, have already been fully given. They need not be restated.

(2) The conception of such a State. It is well to have in mind the exact nature of the State proposed in this report, in order to prevent misunderstandings on any side.

It is not proposed in such a state to establish the rule of a minority of Armenians over a majority of other peoples. That would inevitably seem to the Turks to be very unjust, and would at once excite resentment and unremitting opposition. Moreover, such an arrangement would be unfair to the Armenians as well. For it would place them from the start in a false and untenable position. It would put them, too, under great temptation to abuse of power. And it would be no fair trial of a truly Armenian State. It would of course, also make any mandate mean little or nothing, if not make it entirely impossible.

But such a separated State should furnish a definite area into which Armenians could go with the complete assurance that there they would never be put under the rule of the Turks. It should be also a region in which Armenians could gradually concentrate, and from which the Turkish population might tend increasingly to withdraw; though no compulsion should be put on any people.

All this necessitates a strong Mandatory Power. The State could not even start without such help. This separate State should be therefore a state definitely under the rule of a Mandatory Government, organized on modern lines to do justice to all elements of the population and a state from which the Mandatory should not withdraw, until the Armenians constituted an actual majority of the entire population, or at least until the Turks were fewer than the Armenians. This would necessarily mean that full Armenian self-government would be long delayed. And that fact should be definitely faced as inevitable. The conditions are such that there is no defensible alternative.

(3) The term of the Mandate is practically involved in the conception of the State, which is forced upon us. It can not be a short-term mandate, not because of any reluctance to withdraw on the part of the Mandatory, but because under the peculiar circumstances, a true Armenian State cannot be established in a brief period of time, however ardent the desires of both the Armenians and the Mandatory Power. For the Armenians cannot safely undertake the government independently, until they constitute an actual majority. There is also the added consideration of the natural need of considerable time for the amalgamation and consolidation of the Armenian people, against some tendency to split up into fragments. The mandate must be long enough, too, to make the people thorough-

* (Dominian, "Frontiers of Language and Nationality in Europe," p. 236.)
† (Ramsey, "Impressions of Turkey," pp. 264.
‡ (See Dominian, pp. 248, 222, 228, 230, 231.)

* (Ramsey, "Impressions of Turkey," pp. 127, 129, 131, 157, 158.)

ready for both self-government and -protection, through an increasing use Armenians in the government even n the beginning.

4) An American Mandate Desired.
eems universally recognized that the ienians themselves desire an Ameri-Mandate. And this choice is ap-ntly generally approved by Amer-Allies. The Turks, too, though not ing any separate Armenian State, ld probably favor an American Man-for Armenia, if there must be an enia at all.

) The conditions upon which Amer-would be justified in taking the man-for Armenia may be said to be:
genuine desire of the Armenians;
cordial moral support of the Allies rrying out the mandate; willingness e part of the Armenians to bear with etty long mandatory term, for the ns already stated, and to give up all lutionary committees; that Armenia ld have territory enough to ensure a ssful development; and that the iarly difficult mandate for Armenia d not be the only mandate given rica in Turkey. None of these con-is, perhaps, call for comment, ex-the last, which will come up for consideration.

) The Extent and Boundaries of the nian State. The General Adviser, Lybyer, has expressed so exactly the tions of the Commissioners concern-ne extent and boundaries of the Arn State, that his statement may well e any other discussion of this ques-

The Armenians should be provided with nite territory, and organized as soon as able into a self-governing independent Otherwise the questions of their safety their ceasing to be a center of world-ance cannot be answered.

This area should be taken from both h and Russian territory. The wars of neteenth century divided the proper Ar-land between these two empires.

The Armenians are entitled to an amount rkish territory which takes into account sses by the massacres of 1894-6, 1908-9, 915-16. These losses may be estimated million.*

They should not be given an excessive of Turkish territory, if their state be practicable.

The Turks, Kurds, and other races not be left with a just grievance, since ould solidify their traditional hostility, nbitter them against the League of t has been questioned, even by many mselves, whether the Armenians are for self-government at present; ceran imperial rule by them over other should not be thought of for the pres-the future.

is too much to ask of the League ons or a mandatory power that they ke to hold down and perhaps squeeze large majority, in order that a small may have time to multiply and fill here is a limit beyond which the of ever producing an Armenian mas actually not feasible; that is to say,

Armenians are assigned too large an ey will never be able to occupy and he idea has been suggested that Armenia e developed as a wall of separation or state between the two Moslem areas by Turks and Arabs. This might be a compact, homogeneous state with able population and resources, but it rden which the Armenian state cannot ted to bear within a conceivable time.

e proposed large Armeania, to extend e Black Sea to the Mediterranean, is impossible of realization, and thereuld not be planned for. It encounters bjections previously mentioned.

1914 and before 1894 the Armenians a small minority in such an area, never exceeding twenty-five per cent.
should be given the control, the ma-pulations would be injured, in viola-all "Wilsonian principles" and war
Vith allowance for the estimated mil-perished, and assuming that all these ve been gathered into the territory, enians would still now number only e-third of the total population.

ere never was an Armenia which this territory. The real Armenia, and records show, was a highland which at one time reached the Cas-which came near to the Black Sea reaching it, and which never came to the Mediterranean Sea. The Lesser Armenia of the Middle Ages in the Cilician region was the result of the expulsion and flight of Armenians from further east,—a process which scattered them over a large area, in which they have ever since been in a minority almost everywhere. The demand for both areas is therefore an imperialistic claim, based historically upon an overstrained interpretation of facts.

c. The Armenians are reduced, allowing for the return of survivors, to about ten per cent of the population in the large area proposed. Assuming an optimistic amount of migration of other Armenians into, and of Turks and Kurds out of the land, the Armenians still would constitute only about one-fourth of the population. (See appended table of estimates of population.) The situation of mandatory power would be extremely difficult in defending this minority, which would as future owners and rulers of the land, be much more obnoxious to the majority than at present.

d. No European power will undertake so difficult a task, and it must therefore be left to the United States. If the American people should be induced to begin the process, and this should turn out to be fundamentaly unjust, they would modify their intention. The chances are considerable that the large Armenia would never become an Armenian state at all, but a mixed state, composed of minorities of Armenians, Turks, Kurds, etc., which would not maintain internal order or security against external aggression without the support of a strong mandatory power. This would disappoint both the Armenians, who could never control the government, and the mandatory power, which could never leave the country.

6. On the contrary, an Armenia reduced to the Armenian highlands in both Turkey and Russia, with an outlet on the Black Sea, would have a good chance of establishment and continuance. The Turkish area which the Russians held in 1917 may be taken approximately as the Turkish portion of this "small Armenia," and the present territory of Russian Armenia as the remainder. Engineers could overcome the physical obstacles to internal and external communication.

a. The Turks and Kurds could not rightfully complain of such an area, because it is the historical Armenia, and because if the million dead Armenians could be restored and brought into the land, the Armenians would have about one-half the population (see table). Migration of Turks and Kurds from this area can be more easily accomplished than from the larger land, inasmuch as a considerable proportion of them fled before the Russians, and thus are in a dislocated condition.

b. The Armenians might become the majority of the actual population within a few years, and with that in view, and with the smaller area, they could be given a larger share in the administration from the start, and trained more rapidly to self-government.

c. The duration of the mandate would be materially shortened, with a solider ethnical foundation and a more compact area. The mandatory would need far fewer troops, and would be put to much less expense.

d. The doubts as to the possibility of erecting an Armenian state in the larger area are reduced for the smaller land. The mandatory power could with a prospect of success, keep in mind the giving of control to the Armenians, since they would after a time not be a minority, causing trouble by incessant pushing for special privileges of an economic and political nature, but a majority with a just right to a larger place.

e. This land having secure frontiers, as was tried out thoroughly during the great war, gives promise of self-defensibility. A state reaching to the Mediterranean is a far more difficult matter, with its long frontiers, containing each a number of vulnerable spots, and its permanent difficulties of internal communication, due to the broken configuration of the land. Its very existence might moreover be regarded by the Turks and Arabs as a provocation.

f. The economic opportunity of an Armenia on this basis would be ample; all essentials for food, fuel, and shelter can be obtained locally, and surpluses are easily to be produced which can be exchanged for other wares.

i. In Turkish Armenia the Armenians were able to live and often to prosper, and yet they paid considerable taxes and were subject to frequent robbery.

ii. In Russian Armenia the Armenians have thriven greatly, under only moderately favorable conditions.

iii. This area is crossed by commercial routes of immemorial importance, notably through Erzingan and Erzerum between Anatolia and Persia and Trans-Caucasia, and through Trebizond toward the Persian Gulf. This guarantees the importance of several towns at nodal points, such as Kars, Erivan, Erzerum, Mush, and Van, and suggests valuable possibilities in the direction of transportation, trade, and manufacture for export.

7. All this is argued with the best interests of the Armenians in mind, on the basis of genuine friendliness toward them, and of concern to give them a real and not an illusory opportunity. They are in genuine danger of grasping at too much and losing all.

If they establish themselves securely in the more restricted area, and if Anatolia fails to develop as a well knit and successful state, there is no reason why the question should not be resumed later of connecting Cilicia with Armenia.

* This estimate of Armenian losses by mandate in the past thirty years is especially valuable in the light of conflicting statements.

ESTIMATES OF THE POPULATION OF AN ARMENIAN STATE

The appended tables are the result of an effort to compare the population of Armenian areas to two plans. That which includes a "Larger Turkish Armenia" was worked out by the American Division of Western Asia at the Peace Conference, and can be examined more fully in the records of the Conference. It represents probably, subject to minor alterations, the best possible arrangement on the basis of giving an outlet on both the Black and Mediterranean Seas; the frontiers follow natural features, and the connection with Cilicia is made as narrow as practicable. The "Smaller Turkish Armenia" suggested in the text cuts off for Armenia in Turkey substantially that portion of the Armenian plateau which was held by Russia in her period of advance during the great war. The phrase "Differential Area" was chosen to represent what is left after subtracting "Smaller Turkish Armenia" from "Larger Turkish Armenia," and extends from Mersina to Kharput and north to the Black Sea.

A. Before 1914. This table is estimated from the statistics prepared by Drs. Magie and Westermann. Percentages are attached. The Moslems are not separated into groups; they include about 400,000 Lazes on the Black Sea coast between Trebizond and Batum; about one half are Turks; most of the remainder are Kurds, some of whom are Shiite or Kizilbash, and the remainder Sunnite. Dr. Magie's figures may under-estimate the Armenians in some areas. Certainty will never be attained as to the numbers of the different elements in Turkey until a scientific ethnological survey has been made under disinterested control.

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Larger Turkish Armenia.	71	3,073,000	21½	933,000	6½	289,000	1	34,000	4,329,000
Differential area	73	1,697,000	20	461,000	6	136,000	1	18,000	2,312,000
Smaller Turkish Armenia	68	1,376,000	23½	472,000	7½	153,000	1	16,000	2,017,000

B. In 1920. It may be assumed that in 1920 order will be restored so that all survivors can return, of the Armenians who were deported or who fled into Russia, and of the Turks and Kurds who fled from the territory occupied or threatened by Russia. An estimate follows, in which it is guessed that in the "Smaller Turkish Armenia" 50 per cent of the Armenians and Syrian Christians have perished, and 20 per cent of the Greeks and Moslems. The Armenians of the "Differential Area" had not the same opportunity to escape into Russia, and it is guessed that 75 per cent of these have perished.

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Larger Turkish Armenia.	80	2,459,000	11	351,000	8	232,000	1	17,000	3,059,000
Differential area	85	1,358,000	7	115,000	7	110,000	1	9,000	1,592,000
Smaller Turkish Armenia	75	1,101,000	16	236,000	8	122,000	1	8,000	1,467,000
Estimated losses in whole area		615,000		582,000		57,000		17,000	12,270,000

C. In order to give the Armenians the benefit of their entire losses in Turkey during the war, one million may be added to the numbers of Armenians according to each plan. This of course has no relation to the practicability of established an Armenian State, but it displays the justice, on the basis of majority, of assigning them the "Smaller Turkish Armenia."

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Larger Turkish Armenia.	60	2,459,000	33⅓	1,351,000	6	232,000	½	17,000	4,059,000
Smaller Turkish Armenia	45	1,101,000	50	1,236,000	5	122,000		8,000	2,467,000

D. In 1925.—It may be assumed that on either plan, changes will take place between 1920 and 1925 in the following manner: 20 per cent of the Moslems will leave, and 300,000 Armenians will come from other parts of Turkey and the world. No account is taken of natural increase, but this would act against the percentage of the Armenians, because they lost men in far greater proportion than women, and because they are less numerous than the Moslems, particularly when the larger area is considered. It appears that in normal times before the war Armenians increased more rapidly than Moslems, because of differences in social systems and military service; conditions will probably reduce these differences in the future.

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Larger Armenia	60½	1,967,000	23	651,000	8	232,000	½	17,000	2,867,000
Differential area		1,086,000		115,000		110,000		9,000
Smaller Armenia	57	881,000	35	536,000	8	122,000	½	8,000	1,547,000

E. It remains to add Russian Armenia to the Turkish areas considered. The assumption has been made that Russian Armenia will contain in 1920, after the Turkish Armenians have gone home, a population of about one and one-half times as great as that estimated by Mr. Lynch, in his "Armenia," Vol. 1, p. 451. His actual figures, as of about 1890, for the Russian part of the Armenian plateau, are: Armenians 519,238, Moslems 459,580, Greeks, 47,763, others 69,129, total 1,095,710.

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Russian Armenia	40	600,000	50	750,000	3	50,000	7	100,000	1,500,000
Larger Turkish Armenia with Russian Armenia	67	3,059,000	24	1,101,000	6	282,000	3	117,000	4,559,000
Smaller Turkish Armenia with Russian Armenia	57	1,701,000	33	986,000	6	172,000	4	108,000	2,967,000

F. Finally it may be assumed between 1920 and 1925, 250,000 Armenians from the remainder of Russia and from other parts of the world, and that a like number of Moslems will emigrate. Again no account is taken of natural increase, which might make a small addition to the Armenian percentage.

Area	%	Moslems	%	Armenians	%	Greeks	%	Others	Total
Russian Armenia	23	350,000	67	1,000,000	3	50,000	7	100,000	1,500,000
Larger Turkish Armenia with Russian Armenia	53	2,317,000	38	1,651,000	6½	282,000	2½	117,000	4,367,000
Smaller Turkish Armenia with Russian Armenia	40	1,231,000	50	1,536,000	6	172,000	4	108,000	3,047,000

The whole calculation then shows a possibility under favorable conditions that by 1925 the Armenians can be in a small majority in an Armenia erected on the smaller basis. They would constitute about two-thirds of the population in the Russian portion, and a little over one-third in the Turkish portion.

In an Armenia on the larger basis they would not exceed 40 per cent for the whole area in 1925, and would then constitute about two-thirds of the population in the Russian portion, and not over one-fourth in the Turkish portion.

II—THE PROBLEM OF A SEPARATE CONSTANTINOPOLITAN STATE

(1) The Conception of such a State. In facing the problem of a separate Constantinopolitan State, there should be, first of all, a clear understanding of the nature of the state proposed.

The definite plan for a League of Nations with its mandatory system, it should be noted, gives new help in the solution of this difficult question. It is proposed that the Constantinopolitan State, as a great international interest, should be directly in charge of the League of Nations for the good of all the nations; in the sure conviction that even "national interests are often promoted better by international cooperation than by international competition."

The State would be administered through a mandatory for the League—a Mandatory appointed by the League, responsible to the League, and removable at the will of the League, but held permanent except for cause; for it is plain that there should not be any unnecessary shifting in the administrative power.

The Mandatory, moreover, should be a real mandatory for the League, a trustee for international interests, not a power using its position to advance its own national interests. To this end, the Mandatory should be territorially and strategically disinterested.

The Constantinopolitan State could be administered by an International Commission,* like the notably successful Commission on the Danube; but the problem here is more complex, and the single Mandatory would seem to have some decided advantages over the Commission plan. In the case of the Constantinopolitan State, for example, there would be actual governmental functions to be exercised, as there are not in the same sense in the control of traffic on the Danube. These could be better handled by a regularly organized government. The Mandatory, too, as directly controlled by the League of Nations, would be even more truly international than an international commission of the old kind. And, practically, a single mandatory would naturally be better able to avoid friction, wrangling, and divided counsels, and so to prevent exasperating and dangerous delays. It would also have more immediate power behind it.

Such a State should include Constantinople, and have charge of its administration. This is the more demanded, for Constantinople is a markedly cosmopolitan city, where the Turks are probably not even in the majority. This state should also have a reasonable territory on either side of the Straits. All fortifications should be abolished. This international territory would of course be open to all people for any legitimate purposes. Like the District of Columbia in America, it would be a natural place for great educational and religious foundations, so that such Moslem institutions could remain and be further built up. The Turkish population, equally of course, would be free to stay. But Constantinople would not longer be the capital of Turkey. In the administration of the State, however, all possible consideration should be given to Moslem sentiment, and reasonable practical adjustments arranged. The Sultan might even conceivably continue to reside at Constantinople if that were desired under the conditions named.

(2) The Reasons for such a State. What are the reasons which make the establishment of an international Constantinopolitan State, as now conceived, imperative, in the final settlement of this war?

(i) President Wilson himself, in the twelfth of his Fourteen Points, made much of by the Turks, points at least in this direction, when he writes: "The Dardanelles should be permanently opened as a free passage to the ships and commerce of all nations under international guarantees." It would seem that that end could be accomplished in no way so surely and so permanently, as by an International State under the League of Nations. The need at least, of some such internationalization is manifest, when it is remembered that the Straits have been closed almost continuously since 1911.

(ii) Woolf hardly overstates the need of drastic action in this matter, when he says: "Constantinople and the narrow straits upon which it stands have occasioned the world more trouble, have cost humanity more in blood and suffering during the last five hundred years, than any other single spot upon the earth. Certainly during the last hundred years it has been the chief European center of international unrest. From it, and about it, have radiated continually international rivalries and hatreds and suspicions. It was the direct origin and cause of a large number of the wars fought in the nineteenth century. It is not improbable that when Europe in her last ditch has fought the last battle of the Great War, we shall find that what we have again been fighting about is really Constantinople." Now, this perpetual centre of intrigue and endless cause of trouble must be done away with.

(iii) The close of this greatest of wars, with its many new adjustments, and particularly with the break-up of the old Turkish Empire, gives an unrivaled opportunity to clear up, in a permanent way, once and for all this great plague-spot of the world. If this opportunity is now neglected, or grasped only in nerveless vacillating and selfish fashion, we shall have again the old intolerable situation. We are confronted by a great challenge. Timid counsels should not prevail. As Woolf puts it: "Constantinople is the test of the Great War's result. If it can be, and is, given to any one State, it means the rule of the world by war; if . . . it be administered by all for all, Constantinople means the rule of the world by peace."

(iv) The responsibility for so fateful and strategic a world-center is also too heavy for any single power, however great, to carry; least of all Turkey with her terrible record of mis-government and massacre. It would be hard to choose out of any list of leading nations, a nation less fitted for this world task than she. She has completely forfeited any claim to such a responsibility.

(v) Moreover, as we have already seen, it would be to the distinct advantage of Turkey's own new democratic government to be definitely withdrawn from this center of intrigue. Thoughtful Turkish leaders already realize the evils which have come from this intrigue, and might well welcome—even though with natural reluctance—the kind of surgery which should sever their State from such a seat of infection. At the same time, the Turks remaining within the boundaries of the International State, under a competent mandatory, would certainly have the best government they have ever had.

(vi) The situation, furthermore, cannot be dealt with adequately or with any final satisfaction, except internationally and through an international state. And the League of Nations and the Mandatory System, as planned by the Peace Conference, would seem to suggest both a new and stable method for establishing and administering such a state, and a method growing directly out of the Covenant of the League of Nations. Until such an International State is definitely established, there will be endless intrigues on the part of various Powers to possess or control the Straits. So long as a state as weak as Turkey has any kind of hold upon this critically significant territory, intrigues will be encouraged. The Greeks, for example, have already declared their ambition to have Constantinople in their hands, and are conducting a campaign of propaganda to that end. That is typical of what may be expected to go on, until a thorough-going and permanent solution of the problem of the Straits is adopted, in an International State.

(vii) It deserves to be especially emphasized that the reason for the establishment of an International Constantinopolitan State, is not to humiliate Turkey or any Moslem interest; but simply to face squarely and honestly a situation which is a constant menace both to the peace of Turkey and to the peace of the world; and, deceiving ourselves no longer with vain makeshifts, to determine upon the only fundamental solution. No such fundamental readjustment can be made, doubtless, without some disturbance and sacrifices; but it can be counted certain that all related interests—economic, political, social and religious—will in the end gain from a permanent solution of this vexing world-question.

(3) Extent and Boundaries: The discussion of the extent and boundaries of the Constantinopolitan State is by the General Adviser, Dr. Lybyer, and puts clearly the elements of that problem, anticipating a completer study on the ground by the special Boundaries Commission later recommended.

1. The primary reason for the setting off of a separate area at Constantinople, to be forever under a special regime controlled by the League of Nations, is that the straits between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean, being a concern of many nations, who cannot remain satisfied with the ownership of any one power, should be permanently and freely open.

2. Inasmuch as the Sea of Marmora is small, and in a sense may be regarded as simply an enlargement of the Straits, a minimum boundary must include not only the whole of both sides of the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, but also the entire shore of the Sea of Marmora. The American experts in International Law at Paris pronounced that serious complications might arise if an independent state should reach these waters at any point.

3. Constantinople is also the place where railways make the crossing between Europe and Western Asia; arrangements for the stations and yards of these need to be taken into account.

4. On account of the ready access by water and rail the economic support of the city does not need to be provided for completely within the boundaries of the state, except as regards the water supply. It would be convenient, of course, to have room for dairy and vegetable farming, in view of the trouble of crossing frontiers.

5. Inasmuch as the population has always been greatly mixed,—a condition which will undoubtedly continue, and since it may be assumed that the League of Nations will provide for the security of all elements without privilege or favor, there is no need to adjust the boundary to racial groups.

6. On the European side, it is better, all things considered, to leave with Constantinople the present remnant of Turkey in Europe, accepting the Turco-Bulgarian frontier of 1915 subject to minor modifications. The Constantinople area needs no more land than is included in an adjustment of the Enos-Midia line, as shown on the accompanying map; but the question of disposing of the remainder of "Turkish Thrace" is so acute, that the best solution is to leave this also with Constantino

i. This area was ceded to the Balkan Al early in 1913, and assigned to Bulgaria, it was recovered by Turkey after the sec Balkan war. If Bulgaria continues to be k out of her rightful lands in Macedonia, she some ground for claiming Turkish Thrace a region for the settlement of refugees. As gards Turkish and Bulgarian Thrace, there been a considerable exchange of population si 1915, so that few Bulgarians remain in area, while the number of Turks has l increased.

ii. Greece has claimed the territory, statistics submitted by the Greeks do not mate that before 1912 the Greek populatio the territory between the Enos-Midia line the present Bulgarian frontier was more t 147,000, or 42 per cent of the whole. T own statements show that a large proportio this number migrated between 1912 and Great War. They do not state the recipr fact that an approximately equal numbe Turks migrated from territory acquired Greece in 1913 and settled here, so that was not a mere expulsion of Greeks, b fair exchange of population. The Greek po tion was then probably not over 25 per ce the whole in 1914. It is less at present, changes during the Great War should ha be taken into account. The claim of Gree this area cannot be justified.

iii. On the basis of population, Tu Thrace was really Turkish in 1914, the pr tion reaching at least 60 per cent.

iv. There is no prospect that, without vi changes, any other element than the Tu will become a majority of the population w a considerable time. In case this should mately happen, in such a way as to make ations of boundaries desirable, the Leagu Nations could transfer a portion of Thrac of the Constantinople area.

7. On the Asiatic side, the frontier ginning on the Black Sea coast a short dis east of the mouth of the Sakaria River run east of the river to Ak Sofu Dagh, to Geuk Dagh, pass southwestward to ridge between Isnik and Yeni Shehir, proceed westward along the heights sou Mudania, and Panderma as far as the bou of the Sanjak of Bigha, which it might to the sea south of Mt. Ida.

i. The line between the Black Sea Ismid is located east of the Sakaria, incl the marshy area near the river's mout order to facilitate engineering problem drainage, and provide an area suitabl dairy farming within the reach and cont Constantinople.

ii. Brusa would better be left to the because it has no relation to the defen the Straits; because the local populati predominantly Turkish; and because the are sentimentally attached to this as th Ottoman capital. To take from them all capitals, Constantinople, Adrianople, and would be very severe.

iii. The Troad Peninsula, while predon ly Turkish, constitutes such a separate pl area that it cannot well be divided. The for the defense of the Dardanelles, it all go with the Straits.

8. The total population of this area be at the outset about two millions, of about 60 per cent would be Turks, 25 pe Greeks, and 10 per cent Armenians. Th portion of Turks would be likely in t decrease, and that of Greeks and W Europeans to increase, especially in Co nople and the smaller cities of the area.

*This plan has proved a war-breeding failure since the Armistice.

III—THE PROBLEM OF A TURKISH STATE

We have now frankly recognized the necessity, in bare justice to the Armenians, for an Armenia separated from Turkey, and the equal necessity for a separated Constantinopolitan State, in response to a just and imperative world interest.

Turkey is thus called upon to surrender her sovereignty over certain modest portions of Asia Minor, but in no way treated as her own conquerors treated territories won in war.

(1) General Extent. But in pursuance of this different spirit shown in conquest, if the principles of national unity and of self-determination are to be truly applied to the Turkish people, Anatolia, the bulk of Asia Minor remaining, with ample outlets to the sea, should be left for a Turkish State, but under such conditions as may sacredly guard the rights of all minorities, whether racial or religious. This would give to Turkey a comparatively very large area—larger than France,—having a population one-fourth that of France—of approximately ten millions, of whom some eight millions are Moslems (about seven m Turks) and one and one-half m Greeks. This should assure to th Turkey an ample opportunity of opment. In the interests of a reas self-determination for some of the s racial groups, it may be also nec to allow their transfer, if they so to Syria or Mesopotamia, or to them at least local autonomy.

(2) Reasons for a Mandate f Turkish State. It seems to be ge recognized by the Turkish people selves, that the surest and speedies out of their present evil condition way of a mandate under the Lea Nations, and so shifting from perialistic state to a democratic on from every point of view that desirable. Indeed, it seems imp to expect any satisfactory change government of Turkey by any method. And if the Turks had no selves suggested a mandatory, the Conference might well have felt to require one.

This general statement, indeed,

d to include the specific reasons why rkey should have a mandate; to secure uinely good government, without opssion, bribery, or corruption, for the rks themselves; to guarantee the rights all minorities, racial or religious; to ver Turkey from the demoralization incessant intrigue from outside; to ire, without selfish exploitation by Mandatory or any other outside ver, Turkey's economic development economic independence, for there is the slightest doubt that she has been ng far below her material possibili-
; in line with the Allied settlement n Germany, to disband the most of Turkish Army and do away with all tary conscription, depending upon a l organized gendarmerie for the larger ce duties of the State,—all this for better good of the common people and break the power of intriguing im-alists over them; to put beneath all kish life a national system of univer-education that should lift her entire ple; to train the various peoples of State steadily into self-government; word, to make of Turkey a state of gh order on a modern basis of equal ts to all before the law, and of full gious liberty. This would inevitably lt in a state not purely (though pre-inantly) Turkish in race and in con-a cosmopolitan state in which vari-racial stocks were contained and in se government all representatively
ed.

) Turkey's Desire for An Ameri-Mandate. For the reasons given in arlier section of the report—especially the Peace Conference had not ded that Turkey must herself have a date, and because a free expression not allowed—it has been very diffi-to get clearly decisive evidence of the es of the people of Turkey upon hoice of mandate. But many indica-tend to confirm the opinion that the t majority of thoughtful Turkish rs sincerely desire an American date.

hat a nation so long independent ld seek a mandate, in any sense of erm, is sufficiently remarkable, and ds to confirm the opinion of a trusthy and university-trained Turkish alist, who wrote: "The Turks have so hardly tried by the events in the that most of them are ready to sub-themselves to some regular schoolnstead of making any hazardous exents with new, ignorant leaders."
he thus sums up Turkish public on concerning a mandate for Turfollowing divisions can be noticed:

the large majority which realizes that ountry has only the choice between an can mandate and an eternal chaos, coupled oreign occupation and the loss of national
(2) a minority which does not like to s any settlement which implies a theoreti-striction of sovereignty; (3) a minority porters of an English solution.

giving an idea of the strength of merican majority, he calls attention he elements which make it up":

National Congress, a body formed in ntinople several months ago by the dele-of fifty-three different Turkish societies rganizations, is one of the chief sup-of the American mandate. As all the h intellectual organizations are reprein the Congress, it may almost be con-as representative of the educated classes eral. The National League, containing forty of the most respected citizens and rs is also for the American mandate.
neans at the same time, the majority Senate. The "Nationalist" Party in a in general are in favor o fthe Ameri-andate. The professors of different s of the university favor the American
e. So do most of the lawyers, teachers, ians, and merchants. At present, most papers with large circulations are taking e view of things. This state of things surprising, because there is, on the nd, a very active propaganda for the mandate; on the other hand the Amerinot make any propaganda.

ther journalist gave detailed cor-tive evidence looking in the same on. For example, he said that he en carrying on a campaign in his ntinople paper for three months
American Mandate, and that this gn had called out only two letters test, while, on the contrary, many words of approval had come from men of all parties.

The delegations who have met the Commission, when the question of mandate was taken up, have generally favored an American Mandate. A delegation representing the intellectual leaders among the women, including presidents of educational institutions and of national and provincial educational associations, were especially emphatic in declaring for an American Mandate. The general judgment of the most trustworthy observers whom the Commission were able to consult confirmed these results. The delegates of a Congress held a few months ago at Smyrna, and representing 1,800,000 people, have declared for an American Mandate. The Congress at Sivas held on the 20th of August, probably the most representative recent gathering of the Turkish people, is expected by those in closest touch with the movement for which it stands, to declare for an American Mandate.

On the whole, it is highly probable that a large majority of the Turkish people, wishing a mandate at all, would favor the American Mandate.

(4) Territorial Conditions in Anatolia. To complete the survey of the problems involved in a reconstitution of the Turkish State in Anatolia, a general discussion, in brief summary, of territorial conditions in Anatolia—touching also upon various subject races—seems called for. This is also furnished by the General Adviser.

1. After setting off definitely from the Turkish Empire as it was in 1914 all the Arabic-speaking areas, Armenia, and the Constantinopolitan State, there remains a large mass of territory, in which the greatest single element of population is Turkish (this word being limited to those persons whose mother-tongue is Turkish and who profess the Mohammedan religion). Claims have been advanced toward setting off portions of this remaining area, by Kurds for "Kurdistan;" by Greeks for "Pontus,"—an area along the Black Sea coast from Sinope to Batum; by Syrians for Cilicia; by Italians for Adalia and the whole southwest; and by Greeks for Smyrna, and the west. The only one of these portions that is advisable, in the opinion of the Commission, actually to handle separately at present, is "Kurdistan." All will be discussed briefly in the order named.

II. Kurdistan. The Kurds claim a very large area, on the basis of their distribution, but since they are greatly mixed with Armenians, Turks, and others, and divided among themselves into Kizilbash, Shiite and Sunnites, it seems best to limit them to the natural geographical area which lies between the proposed Armenia on the north and Mesopotamia on the south, with the divide between the Euphrates and the Tigris as the western boundary, and the Persian frontier as the eastern boundary. A measure of autonomy can be allowed them under close mandatory rule, with the object of preparing them for ultimate independence or for federation with neighboring areas in a larger self-governing union. It is possible to shift most of the comparatively small numbers of both Turks and Armenians out of this area by voluntary exchange of population and thus obtain a province containing about a million and a half people, nearly all Kurds. Full security must needs be provided for the Syrian, Chaldean and Nestorian Christians who dwell in the area. This plan would probably provide for all of the Sunnite Kurds in Turkey, and the Kizilbash group lies almost wholly to the west. The area contemplated looks more to the south than the west and lies wholly about the upper waters of the Tigris and its tributaries. It would seem better, therefore, unless the population itself strongly prefers the other plan, to place it under the control of the power which cares for Mesopotamia, than to connect it with Armenia across the mountains at the north, or with Anatolia with which it would have only narrow contact at the west.

III. "Pontus." About one-half of the area asked for by the Greeks of "Pontus" should be included in the Armenian State, in order to give it access to the sea. The remainder is needed by Anatolia for the same reason. There were approximately 200,000 Greeks in each of these portions in 1914. This would seem to be too small a minority in both Armenia and Anatolia to be erected into an autonomous province. The rights of these Greeks can in each state be provided for fully by general laws, enforced in each case by the mandatory power until such time as the states are ready for self-government with adequate protection of minorities.

IV. Cilicia. Cilicia is claimed by both Armenians and Syrians, in each case by a minority which did not exceed 25 per cent in 1914. Reasons are stated above for not giving it to the former. It is unimportant to Syria as an outlet, since that area has many ports. But it is very valuable to the areas both at the northeast and the north. It should not be separated economically from Anatolia at present, and if at any future time the Armenians should receive it, provisions would have to be made for the use of its ports by the interior regions of Anatolia from Kaisariyeh to Konia.

The region between Cilicia and Armenia, containing Albistan, Malatia and Kharput is claimed by the Armenians, but should also be left with Anatolia. It contained in 1914 a mixture of Turks, Kizilbash, Armenians, Sunnite Kurds and others, proportioned apparently in the order named. Strong mandatory control would be difficult because of the distance from the coast across rough mountainous country, but it would be very necessary, lest the region become a hunting ground for Turkish, Kurdish, and Armenian bands, each anxious to acquire the territory for its people.

V. Adalia and the Southwest. Italy's claim to the southwest of Asia Minor rests upon nothing that is compatible with the principles of the Commission's instructions. There are no Italians native to the country, and no evidence exists that the population desires Italy as a mandatory over them. In this region the Moslems are to the Greek Orthodox Christians as ten to one. None of this area should be separated from Anatolia.

VI. Smyrna and the West. The problem of the west coast is a difficult one, not because of the intrinsic situation, but because of the persistency of the Greek Government in demanding an area there, and of the fact that a Greek army is in occupation.

Nowhere except perhaps in the Sanjak of Smyrna and certain coastal Kazas is the Greek Orthodox population in a majority, and the complete proof that it is in majority there awaits an impartial census. If any question existed previously as to the unwillingness of the majority of the population in the area now occupied by the Greeks to be annexed to Greece, or to have Greece as a mandatory, the question has been answered by the circumstances of the occupation.* The question has also been answered as to whether the Balkan State of modern Greece has reached such a degree of civilization that it can be entrusted with mandatory rule over a people of different faith and hostile feeling.

The Greek army and all authority of the Greek Government ought to be withdrawn from an area where better order was kept by twelve British officers than can be maintained by one hundred thousand Greek troops. There can be no settled peace until either a Greek conquest has swept far to the interior, with great destruction of property and life, or until the Greek power is wholly removed. In the latter case the question would still remain: Should an area in Western Asia Minor be set off as a special Greek region and placed under a separate mandate? The answer is in the negative for the following reasons:

(1) The character of the country is such that no good natural boundary can be found except high up in the hills. If such a boundary be traced, the population within it would be so markedly Moslem (about three to one) that the area could have no special Greek character.

(2) If, on the other hand, a more or less arbitrary line be drawn farther west, it would not constitute a good barrier for defense against smugglers or brigand bands.

(3) Any line drawn now would be regarded, more or less, as an economic barrier, cutting off Smyrna and other coast cities from some of the trade with the interior, to mutual disadvantage.

(4) Neither Greeks nor Turks in Western Asia Minor would believe anything except that it is the intention of the League of Nations to permit Greece later to annex the territory set off, and perhaps to extend her holdings further. The elements would therefore be present for a Macedonian system of sustained brigand warfare, which could be kept down only by more military effort and expenditure than any mandatory power cares to assume.

Shall any measures be taken then to develop a special Gree karea in Asia Minor? The maximum that would seem to be advisable at the present would be that a strong mandatory power should be entrusted with a single mandate for all Anatolia, and should take special pains to protect Greeks and Turks alike and preserve order in the west, with the possibility of a limited locally autonomous Greek area. The question of a future separated Greek area could then be left in abeyance, to be brought up again if circumstances justify.

VII. A Mandate for Anatolia. While the instructions of this Commission do not directly mention the assignment by the League of Nations of a mandatory nation to assist the Turks, many of the Turks themselves have suggested such a plan, and some have presented urgent requests for America as the mandatory power. The need of supervision over finance, public works, education, internal order, and all the processes of government is hardly less for the Turks, despite their centuries of political experience, than for the Armenians, Syrians, and Mesopotamians. It is in fact impossible to discern any other method of setting Western Asia in order. The Turks if left to themselves in a condition of poverty, ignorance, and general exhaustion, with a feeling that they had been unjustly treated and then abandoned by all the world, could not fail to be a source of trouble and disturbance until another crisis, with perhaps another great war, would necessitate some such solution as is now suggested, but under conditions less favorable to success.

VIII. The Desirability of a Single Mandatory for Armenia, Anatolia, and Constantinople. While it is desirable that Armenia, Anatolia, and Constantinople should be placed under separate mandates, and governed by separated administrations, it is also desirable that the three mandates should be held by one great power.

(1) Those areas have been held together for several centuries, and have a great number of close ties of all sorts, the delicate adjustment of which can be best accomplished under one power.

(2) Unity of economic control, with similar commercial laws, coinage, weights, and measures, and language of business is advantageous to all concerned.

(3) Problems of repatriation and exchange of populations, can be arranged more justly and promptly under one mandatory.

(4) The adjustment of the public debt will be easier.

(5) The building of railroads and the improvement of routes of travel can be better arranged.

(6) Police control and repression of brigandage will be far simpler. On the contrary, the holding of the three areas by separate powers permits the taking of refuge by bandits and criminals across the borders.

(7) Unity is urged by many well-informed foreigners, looking from various points of view. Many of these favor not merely a single mandatory power, but a single mandate. Practically all the benefits can be obtained by the first plan that could be obtained by the second, and many serious difficulties can be avoided, such as arise from persecution of Armenians, interference with navigation, and complications of intrigue.

(8) Friction which might arise between three mandatories, and which might conceivably lead to a great war, could be eliminated.

(9) The transition would be more easily acceptable by the Turkish people, than if two or three powers should take control of the three areas. The fact that the mandatory would probably establish a central control in Constantinople would aid the transition still further.

In the foregoing discussion of Territorial Conditions in Anatolia, various minority people have been briefly studied. It seems necessary to consider further, at this point, only the rather pressing problems of the Greeks.

* This is an allusion to the massacres of Moslems by Greeks, and subsequent atrocities, upon the occasion of the landing at Smyrna May 15, 1915. An official Inter-Allied inquiry has confirmed the fact of the atrocities.

IV—THE PROBLEM OF THE GREEKS

(1) The situation of the Greeks is not that of the Armenians. The Greeks have suffered much in deportations by the Turks, but there have been no such extensive massacres of the Greeks as of the Armenians. The Greeks, too, in the adjacent Greek Islands, have a possible congenial refuge within former Turkish territory, such as the Armenians do not have. The Greeks also have, in territories recently acquired by Greece, opportunities for settlement on Greek soil, for which there is no parallel for the Armenians. The general situation of the Greeks, too, in diminished numbers, is much less desperate than that of the Armenians. Moreover, the Greeks are more widely scattered in small groups through Turkey than the Armenians. The drastic remedy of establishing a state for the Greeks completely separated from Turkey, seems, therefore, both less possible and very much less desirable.

(2) The Results of the Greek Occupation of Smyrna do not seem to indicate that the Greeks of Turkey should now be given rule over others or be granted their own full independence. Local autonomy in a territory strictly confined to a district in which they were in a decided majority would seem the most that could be recommended at present.

(3) The ability of the Greeks is not in question, nor their enthusiasm for education. On the contrary, both factors make it the more probable that they could continue to hold their own within the Turkish State. Indeed, the special gifts of the Greeks generally make them particularly successful as colonists. The probability is that they would lose on the whole, rather than gain, in being completely set off from Turkey. In spite of the violent antagonisms of recent years, Ramsey may well be right in saying: "The Turks and the Greeks will united make a happier country than either race could by itself." The two races supplement each other.

(4) There is to be added, that the apparent purpose of the Turks to ask for a mandate, and of the Peace Conference to appoint such a mandate, gives promise of a new Turkey, in which the rights of the Greeks would be fully guarded at least for the terms of the mandate.

A trial certainly should be made by the Greeks of life in the Turkish State under the new conditions, before further independence should be sought. The constitution of a new Turkey on modern lines, the steady watchers and influence of the Mandatory, and the supervision of the League of Nations and the right of appeal to it—all combine to give the Greeks every assurance of fair treatment and equality of opportunity, at least during the term of the mandate. It will be the business, too, of the Mandatory to do all possible to develop the whole people into capacity for self-government. The help of a national system of education, too, would do much to assure that the abuses of the old time would not return; and the term of the mandate would naturally continue until there was good promise of Turkey's success as a modern state. Even after the mandate had expired, the League of Nations could still act, upon necessity, to prevent all gross invasions of the rights of minorities.

In the light of all these considerations it would seem best not to set off any independent Greek territory for the present, in the belief that in the long run the better good both of the Greeks and of the Turks is to be found in their union in one cosmopolitan state.

V—RECOMMENDATIONS

What follows is the meat of the whole report. It assigns America a role that few persons in the United States ever contemplated. And it denies to other powers, small or great, the fulfilment of their ambitions.—EDITOR.

The recommendations, dealing with mandates in the Asia Minor portion of the former Ottoman Empire, follow naturally upon the preceding discussions of pertinent action already taken by the Peace Conference; of dangers arising from a selfish division and exploitation of Turkey; of considerations looking to a proper division of Turkey; and of problems naturally resulting. For the recommendations built directly on foundations already laid by the Peace Conference. They aim to prevent a selfish exploitation and division of Turkey. They intend not less surely to ground such division of Turkey as is recommended solely upon considerations of justice and the good of all men. And in this spirit they endeavor honestly to face the grave problem arising, and to seek their solution in the light of the full discussion which precedes. That discussion has been so full, that the Recommendations of the Commissioners need do little more than summarize conclusions, except upon two points—the reasons for a general American Mandate, and the conditions upon which such a mandate might be taken by America.

The Commissioners Recommend:

1. The formation, under a Mandatory, of an Armenian State, completely separated from Turkey, as defined in the preceding section of the report, for reasons already fully given.

It is consequently recommended that Cilicia should not be separated from Anatolia at present.

2. The similar formation, under a Mandatory, of an International Constantinopolitan State, completely separated from Turkey, as defined in the preceding section, also for reasons already fully given.

3. The appointment of a Mandatory for the continued Turkish State, in line with the apparent wishes of the majority of the Turkish people; the major terms of the Mandate to be defined by the Peace Conference or the League of Nations, and further adjustments to be arranged between the Mandatory and Turkey. The reasons for the Mandate and its necessary scope have been already fully given.

4. That, for the reasons already stated, no independent territory be set off for the Greeks; though local autonomy be granted to that portion of the Sanjak of Smyrna which has a decided majority of Greeks, but under the general mandate for Turkey.

5. That a commission or commissions on boundaries in Asia Minor be appointed to study on the ground and to exactly define the boundaries of the states named in the first three recommendations, and the precise limits of any locally autonomous area in Smyrna. The definition of the boundaries of the Turkish State would require the study and definition of the northern boundaries of Syria and Mesopotamia as well, with special reference to allowing to the Kurds a measure of autonomy under close mandatory rule, possibly in connection with Mesopotamia, and with the clear understanding that the rights of the Syrian, Chaldean, and Nestorian Christian minorities in this whole region shall be carefully guarded.

6. A general single mandate for the whole of Asia Minor (not assigned to Mesopotamia or Syria) to include under it the mandate for Armenia, the mandate for the Constantinopolitan State, and the mandate for the continued Turkish State, each with a governor of its own to insure full attention to its particular interests, besides a governor-general over the whole. The various interrelations and common concerns of the constituent states would thus be studied and cared for, as well as their individual needs. The reasons for such a general mandate have been fully given and need not be repeated here.

7. That the United States of America be asked to take this general single mandate, together with its inclusive mandates for the Armenian State, the Constantinopolitan State, and the continued Turkish State. This recommendation is made for the following reasons which need to be developed in full:

(1) As already pointed out, it seems to be generally desired that America should take the mandate for Armenia. In this, both the Armenians and the Allies seem agreed—and even the Turks, if there must be an Armenian State at all. Nevertheless, America cannot wisely take this mandate without at the same time taking a mandate for the rest of Asia Minor as well.

For, in the first place, this Armenian mandate would be in many respects the most difficult of all: because it would begin in relations of bitter hostility; because the State would have to built from the bottom under most peculiar circumstances; and because the mandate would have to be prolonged against the impatience of the Armenians. And these difficulties would all be accentuated, if the surrounding conditions could not be determined. It concerns the world that this Armenian State should clearly succeed. its mandatory should not be needlessly handicapped.

In the second place, the problems of the different States in Asia Minor are too closely related to be wisely entrusted to entirely different Powers, with different ideals and methods. That situation would inevitably tend to produce friction, waste, and bad feeling, and unsatisfactory conditions in one state would naturally spread to other states also.

In the third place, if the rest of Turkey, outside of a modest Armenian State, were divided into spheres of influence and exploitation areas, the direct hindrance to the working out of a truly conceived mandate in Armenia would be well nigh insuperable.

The American mandate for Armenia, thus, calls for a general mandate over all of Asia Minor.

(2) America is also the most natural Power to take the mandate for the International Constantinopolitan State, as well as for Armenia; for the simple reason that she is the only Great Power territorially and strategically disinterested. The mandatory for this international state should be herself strong, to discourage any further intrigue for control of the Straits; disinterested, to command the confidence of all the nations concerned; and in unmistakably earnest sympathy with the aim of such a state, and with those international means by which this aim is to be achieved,—the League of Nations and its mandatory system. These needed qualifications are best met by America. Now the full fruits of such an international state cannot be secured, unless the rest of Asia Minor is made a fit environment for such a state, practically embodying the same great principles.

The mandate for the Constantinopolitan State also calls for a general mandate over all Asia Minor.

(3) It is to be added that America is also the most natural Power for the mandate over the New Turkish State, because the Turkish people want her, and generally trust her, as the evidence previously given indicates; and because America is peculiarly prepared to meet the needs of the Turkish people in this crisis in their history, as the reasons to be given for a general American mandate will later bring out.

The desired American mandate for the new Turkish State, then, calls also for a general mandate over all Asia Minor.

(4) The best solution for mandates in Asia Minor would seem then to be, to combine all three mandates in a composite mandate, which would be put in the hands of America as the single mandatory.

The general reasons for a single mandatory for all Asia Minor, already given, are not to be lightly regarded. They give solid grounds for a composite supervisory mandate.

The further direct reasons for making America that single mandatory should now be considered. To begin with, there is the recognized fact that all the other Great Allies are already heavily loaded with colonial responsibilities, which of itself suggests a special obligation here for America. But the positive reasons—if there are any—lie necessarily in some special fitness of America for the particular task in hand—a fitness growing naturally out of her experience as a great growing democracy, largely freed hitherto from European entanglements. Those reasons, that is, lie inevitably in certain dominant national convictions of America; in a certain idealistic international faith; in her record in these international relations; and in the indications of her duty at this critical point in human history. All of these considerations concern the Turkish situation.

In the first place, we have found both the Syrian and Turkish peoples recognizing that at the foundation of the common life of America were to be found certain great dominant convictions. They saw that she had a passion for peace and for the possibility of its attainment, in spite of all sordid manifestations to the contrary, and that to bring such a righteous peace nearer, she entered this war. They saw that she had a passion for democracy, for the common man everywhere, in spite of inconsistencies at home and abroad, and could treat men of all races with a genuine respect born of some insight into their own individual gifts. They felt sure that she would not into any situation simply to domina and to stamp American customs on people. They knew that, because s really believed in democracy, she had al a passion for universal education, as po sible for the rank and file of every n tion, and as absolutely essential to a mocracy. They believed, therefore, th as a mandatary she would gird hers to help a people fulfill its own high possibilities. They believed, indeed, th she had a passion for the development a national spirit in every people, not narrow conceit, but as faith in a div individuality, to which the people must true, if they were to be significant me bers of that larger fellowship of natio for which the world longs. They stinctively felt, thus, that she combin in a way fairly unique, educational e phasis with respect for the values of other people. They knew, too, that w a high religious idealism, America son how combined belief in the principle the separation of Church and State governmental administration, for highest good both of religion and of state, and was thus especially fitted render help to a state like Turkey at peculiarly critical a point in her tra tion from an imperialistic to a democra state on modern lines and with compl religious liberty.

In the second place, with these mast ing convictions, the Syrians and Turk people believed that America combi a certain idealistic international faith her stubborn belief in the League of tions and in the possibilities of its m datory system, when honestly carried She was naturally prepared, theref they believed, to throw herself into responsibilities of a mandate; steadfa to seek to train the people entrusted her care into self-government and economic independence; and promptl withdraw when that task was compl for she would measure the success of stewardship by both the complete and the promptness with which her was accomplished.

In the third place, both the Syrian the Turkish people, in expressing t desire for an American mandate, l laid steady emphasis upon the assur which came from America's recor dealing with other peoples. They lieved in her unselfish aims in the and that she was now seeking for share in the spoils of the war. T believed that she had no territoria imperialistic ambitions. They beli in her high and unselfish aims in de with Cuba and the Philippines. The lieved that she was not involved in joint plan for an exploiting div of either Syria or Turkey. They beli in the high quality of her relief se and especially of her educational se in both countries—a service so fine, so competent and impartial an obse as Ramsey can say: "I firmly be that Robert College has done mor render possible a safe solution of 'Eastern Question' in Turkey than al ambassadors of all the European Po have succeeded in doing to render solution difficult." They believed so far was America from schemin obtain a mandate in Asia, she was estly reluctant to undertake such a date of any kind.

In the fourth place, America is liarly fitted to be the single Mand Power for all Asia Minor, not onl cause of her national convictions, he ternational faith, and her record, but because the course of duty for her w seem to lie in this direction.

It is no part of the task of the missioners to determine whether A ica is now willing to accept the ge single mandate for Turkey, with its involved subordinate mandates. their business to point out where, in honest judgment, that mandate be (if proper canditions can be fulfi and so given an opportunity to the Conference to put the resulting oblig squarely up to the American peop

Can America deny all obligation i matter of a mandate for Turkey? has believed perhaps more than any people, in the high possibilities o League of Nations; but, if the Leag

(Continued on page XX)

The governments of France and England received their first clear statement of Turkish policy after the destruction of the Greek army in an exclusive interview by John Clayton, Chicago Tribune staff correspondent, with Mustapha Kemal Pasha.

"... the only truthful information that comes to this country is through The Chicago Tribune. All other news items that reach the American public are of British manufacture and unreliable. . ."

Rear Admiral C. M. Chester.

AT ENORMOUS expense The Chicago Tribune maintains its own reporters at all important sources of world news. The following letter, voluntarily written by Rear Admiral C. M. Chester of the United States Navy, proves how well justified is this policy of The Chicago Tribune:

Editor of The Tribune,
Chicago, Illinois.

Having recently returned from an extended visit to Constantinople, where I was able to see much of the methods prevailing in Turkey for the collection and dissemination of news reports, I have come to learn that the only truthful information that comes to this country is through The Chicago Tribune. All other news items that reach the American public are of British manufacture and unreliable. Your correspondents in Turkey, I know, have had a hard time to collect correct information, and their bravery is commendable.

Very truly yours,
C. M. CHESTER,
1736 K Street N. W., Washington, D. C.

THE FOREIGN NEWS SERVICE of The Chicago Tribune is a vital constructive force working for American welfare. It furnishes truthful reports of world events on which the American people can formulate sound decisions.

Compare our situation with that of European countries which, because of the intrigues of their diplomats or the lack of energy and initiative of their newspapers, are given only hand picked news designed to leave the public in ignorance or to mislead. People so misinformed can be, and are, led blindly into all sorts of international complications and errors which they could avoid if they knew the truth.

It is difficult enough, even with accurate knowledge, to find one's way through the complications of European and Asiatic racial and nationalistic intrigues. It is impossible without accurate knowledge. The Chicago Tribune gives such information. The Tribune may be called pro-Turkish, anti-Russian, pro-British, or pro-German, or anti or pro anything else. That is incidental. The facts speak for themselves.

The Tribune does not make them. The Tribune reports them. The Tribune's reporters face privation, hardship, and occasionally persecution to get these facts.

The Chicago Tribune is proud of the many scoops achieved by its men, but their work is most valuable because of the daily routine reporting of unvarnished TRUTH.

The reports of the Foreign News Service of The Chicago Tribune are printed in its New York newspaper—The Daily News—and in many other papers which maintain leased wires into the office of The Chicago Tribune to secure this news. These papers include the following, with a circulation of more than 5,000,000:

New York Times
Buffalo Express
Rochester Democrat and Chronicle
Syracuse Post Standard
Boston Post
Philadelphia Public Ledger
Pittsburgh Post
Memphis Commercial Appeal
Nashville Banner
Fort Worth Star Telegram
Los Angeles Times
San Francisco Chronicle
Fresno Republican
Little Rock Gazette
The Denver Post
Washington Post
Sioux City Journal
Baltimore Sun
Kansas City Star
Detroit Free Press
Minneapolis Journal
Omaha Daily Bee
Portland Oregonian
Salt Lake Tribune
Seattle Times
St. Louis Times
Montreal Star
Toronto Globe
Vancouver Sun

In Europe the reports of this great news gathering organization are printed by The European Edition of The Chicago Tribune—issued in Paris seven days every week since 1917—and also by the following European newspapers:

Le Matin, Paris
London Daily Telegraph
Liverpool Daily Post
Glasgow Daily Record
Cork Examiner
La Libre Belgique
Amaroc News, Coblenz
Dantziger Zeitung
Berlin Morgenpost Vossische Zeitung, Berlin
B. Z. Am. Mittag, Berlin
Neue Freie Presse, Vienna

The story of how The European Edition of The Chicago Tribune was born in war time and developed into the militant representative of Americanism in Europe—the triumphs of The Foreign News Service of The Chicago Tribune—these are chapters in a new book entitled "The W G N."

"The W G N" is sold at $2.00 per copy by the following book stores:

NEW YORK
Scribner
Putnam
Brentano

PHILADELPHIA
Wanamaker
Strawbridge & Clothier

WASHINGTON
Brentano

BOSTON
Old Corner Book Store

CHICAGO
A. Kroch
Fanny Butcher
A. C. McClurg
Paine
Follett
Geo. M. Chandler
Covici-McGee
Silbermann-Sayers
Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.

Mailed on receipt of $2.00 by The Business Survey of The Chicago Tribune.

The Chicago Tribune
The World's Greatest Newspaper

(Continued from page XVIII)

Nations is not to be a sham and a delusion, all nations must be willing to bear their share in the resulting responsibilities. America, certainly, cannot be an exception. She came into the war, too, with the ardent faith and hope that a more democratic world might result. Is she willing to carry those war purposes through to the end? Here in Turkey is an unrivaled opportunity to try these purposes out, for the good not only of a single people, but of the entire world; for here in Turkey has been through centuries a center of intrigue and strife that has engulfed all nations in its consequences. Moreover, America's intervention in the war went far to determine the war's issue. Was that intervention justified? America must still do her utmost to complete the proof.

But America's obligation goes still deeper, in this despate hour of human need. Men still need peace—long deferred. They need far better provision for bodily wants. They need simple, homely happiness. But beneath all this, they need renewed faith in one another and in one another's honest purposes of good.

The war destroyed that faith between the hostile forces, the settlements of the war, it is to be feared, have gone far to destroy that faith among the Allies themselves. It is not roseate dreaming, but practical politics of the most imperative sort, to do something to bring back men's faith in men. If we can see the radical necessity of such faith, to prevent or break a financial panic, are we to see less clearly in times like these, of a moral world panic? Cynicism and disillusionment, as we have seen, are rife. Can they be conquered? Only by indisputable examples to the contrary. It may be doubtful, then, if America could do anything so significant for the human race today, as to prove that she had not forgotten her own ideals and purposes in the war, but was willing to give a new and even greater proof of them in undertaking unselfishly a difficult and distasteful, but highly important and far-reaching task—by taking on the general mandate for Turkey (as well as for Syria, if the Peace Conference thought best). In fidelity to herself does not America owe that demonstration to the world? It is hard to estimate the immense effect of so important a mandate under the League of Nations being carried through with absolutely honest unselfishness. It would make a reality of the League of Nations; it would make a reality of the mandatory system. It would set a new standard in international relations. It would renew men's faith in one another. It would help to save America herself from a disastrous reaction from her genuinely high aims in the war.

Nothing has been said of America's ment of Turkey's large resources; though it is not suggested that the financial relations of Turkey to America should be finally other than those of self-respecting independence. Turkey's present condition, however, is so necessitous in a thousand ways, that very large amounts of capital would be initially required, and returns at first would be small and slow. But before the mandate ended a fair return on capital, put into direly needed public improvements and the development of natural resources, might properly be expected, at the same time that Turkey's own interests were guarded against selfish and monopolistic exploitation. ample means for the economic develop- America should not come into the Turkish Mandate with the expectation of large financial profits. But if even so favorable a result as that indicated proved quite impossible, America might well spend millions to insure relations of peace and good will among nations, rather than the billions required for another war, sure to come if the present cynical national selfishness and lack of good will are not checked.

As against the considerations now presented, it might be urged that the very suggestion of so large and significant a mandate for America is itself proof that America too is grasping imperialistic power. The answer is, that America's idea of a mandate is emphatically that a mandate is for limited term (so that even if a mandate for Syria were added to the mandate for Turkey the whole would mean no long retention of power by America, except as the League of Nations should continue her as mandatory over the Constantinopolitan State; that she literally does not want this mandate, except to meet her fair share of responsibility in the world today; that she would have to be persuaded by a campaign of education to take it on; and that she ought not to take it at all, if certain i portant conditions cannot be fulfilled.

(5) Considerations on which Amer would be justified in taking a compos general mandate for Asia Minor. Th conditions are: That she is really wan by the Turkish people; that Turk should give evidence that she is ready do justice to the Armenians, not only the allotment of the territory within borders, recommended for the Armen State, but also by encouraging the patriation of Armenians, and by see that all possible just reparation is m to them as they return to their hom that Turkey should also give evide that she is ready to become a mod constitutional state, and to abolish itary conscription; that Russia should ready to renounce all claims upon R sian Armenia; that the Allies sho cordially welcome America's help in difficult situation in Turkey; and pecially that all plans for cutting Turkey, for the benefit of outside peo into spheres of influence and exploita areas should be abandoned.

These conditions are necessary t successful solution of the Turkish p lem. Unless they are fulfilled, Ame ought not to take the mandate for Minor. And the Commissioners do recommend that the mandate be give America if these conditions cannot essentially met.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY C. KING,
CHARLES R. CRAN

CONFIDENTIAL APPENDIX — PREPARED BY THE COMMISSION FOR USE OF AMERICANS ONLY

SINCE the Commission was the American Section of a projected international Commission on Mandates in the Turkish Empire, it has seemed best to prepare the report in such form that copies could be furnished to representatives of all the Allied Powers, if that were desired. The body of the report, therefore, though trying squarely to face all the facts, has been written with that possibility in mind.

At the same time there was material involving criticism of our Allies, that ought not to come into a report to be put into their hands, and yet that the American Delegation to the Peace Conference and our own State Department ought to have, as involved in a complete statement of the case. That material prepared by Dr. Lybyer has been gathered into this Confidential Appendix.

The opportunity has also been taken to bring in some supplementary discussions that treat with a little more detail certain important aspects of our inquiry and so throw light on the broader bearings of our report.

I. The Interference of the Occupying Governments with the Commission's Inquiry

1. O. E. T. A. South—the British. In each area the policy of the occupying government had a special effect upon the course of the inquiry.

At Jerusalem and Jaffa the British military governors were consulted in the preparation of the Commission's programs. At the other places they prepared the entire program themselves. No attempt was discerned to hinder any groups which desired to meet the Commission, although there were a few complaints as to restricting the size of the delegations. In one or two cases it was necessary to request a governor to leave the room, since it was the uniform rule to allow no officials (nor indeed anyone besides the Commission, a delegation, and perhaps an interpreter chosen by the delegation) to be present during interviews.

There was some evidence that attempts had been made to influence opinion in favor of a British mandate, though with no great amount of success. The "Moslem-Christian Committee" and the officials of Jaffa, the Kadi of Jenin, and some groups of Acre, were said to have been chosen by the occupying government and were declared not to represent the people. Two or three military governors seemed to have taken some action to procure votes for Britain. Orders had been issued at Jaffa against declaring for complete independence.

Evidence appeared of some French activity in this area, likewise with little success. There was much enterprise on the part of members of the Arab Government at Damascus. Such persons were not hindered by the British authorities from moving about freely, distributing printed forms and giving instruction according to definite programs.

It may be remarked that a number of British officials, including some at Jerusalem, were proceeding as though expecting that Britain will remain permanently in control of Palestine. For instance, they were planning for the growth of cities, the building of roads and railways, and the construction of harbors. On the other hand, some expressed a desire that America should come as mandatory power. There was a general agreement that France could come to the control of all Syria only with a great show of force, and the probability of considerable fighting.

2. O. E. T. A. West—the French. It was too evident that in all O. E. T. A. West, the French military governors had worked with varying energy and success to obtain the reality or at least the appearance of a desire of a French mandate. Their propaganda, some of which they carried on directly, and some through native officials and agents, took many forms.

The Commission saw inspired articles in the newspapers, attempts at browbeating and espionage, the hindrance by French soldiers of the attempts of individuals and groups to reach the Commission, and the ushering in of officials, manifestly unsuited to their positions, freshly appointed in the room of others who had been removed because they had declined to support a French mandate.

Authentic information came to hand of threats and bribes and even imprisonment and banishment for the same purpose. The management of the sessions at Tyre, Baabda, and Tripoli was so bad as to be insulting to the intelligence and almost to the dignity of the Commission, and was saved from this at other places only by the greater intelligence and natural politeness of some French officers who kept their methods out of sight.

Agents of Prince Feisal were also working in a limited way in O. E. T. A. West, in support of the program of the Syrian Congress at Damascus. There was no evidence of direct action by the British in this territory. Perhaps there was an ulterior motive in the special and somewhat conspicuous kindnesses which they showed the Commission during these days.

3. O. E. T. A. East—the Arabs. In O. E. T. A. East there were evidences of considerable pressure exerted by the Government to secure the union of all elements upon one program. This took the form for the more intelligent groups of the declaration of the Syrian Congress at Damascus. For others, as the Circassians and Bedouins, who appeared at Amman, a selection of simpler and more easily comprehensible points from this program was emphasized.

In that area in particular government agents tried hard to persuade, cajole, or threaten all, Christians and Moslems alike, into subscribing. No good evidence appeared anywhere of actual violence, imprisonment, or banishment with a view to influencing declarations before the Commission. The Emir Feisal had concluded agreements with the Druses and the Greek Orthodox Christians, as represented by their patriarch, in which these agreed to support his government in return for a measure of autonomy and promises of proper treatment. It is noteworthy that these agreements involved a request for a British mandate, which the Druses and the Greek Orthodox stood by, while the Congress went over to asking for an American mandate by preference.

Some British officers showed signs of disappointment at the declaration in favor of the Americans as first choice. One of them in consequence recommended to his government to decline a mandate over Syria, and the Commission was informed that Mr. Balfour sent a message to this effect, which General Allenby conveyed to the Emir Feisal.

Evidence was presented that the Emir had tried immediately before the arrival of the Commission in Damascus to secure the support of certain councils for a request for a British mandate, and that he had failed. While he stated personally to the Commission that America and England are equally satisfactory to it may be that because of the benefi has received and continues to re from England, and because of the b prospect of a speedy larger Arab if Syria and Mesopotamia and areas are under the same supervisio prefers in his inmost heart the ma of Britain.

II. Summaries of Arguments Pres to the Commission

1. For and Against Zionism

The arguments in favor of Zi as presented by its supporters have been stated and need not now be sented in detail. The chief element that Palestine belonged once to the and they were driven out by force two thousand years they have been ing and praying to come back; whi Jews of the world are now far to merous to be collected in Palestine are entitled to have somewhere a which can be a refuge to the opp among them, and an expression of continuance and unity; despite pro at Paris there is persecution of the in Poland at the present moment, is a prospect of a disintegration Jews in western civilization and coalescence with the nations where reside; they should have an oppor to restore their ancient language an ture and preserve them in the o vironment; there is no need of di ing the present population, for wi afforestation, modern methods of a ture, utilization of water-powe clamation of waste lands, scientifi gation and the like, the land can several times its present number habitants; if some of the present p tion desire to sell their lands the receive a good price and there is of room for them in other Arab tries; the Jewish colonies have great benefit to the native Ara teaching methods of agriculture, i ing sanitation and the like; the un of the Zionistic plan would bring prosperity to all in the land, both population and immigrants.

The native Arabs and Christian so unitedly oppose Zionism, urg following principal considerations land is owned and occupied by Arabs were there before the Jews

(Continued on page XXII)

Twenty-Six Years of Circulation Building

From "A Study of The New York Times" by John F. Sweeney, of The Sweeney & James Co., advertising agents, Cleveland, O.

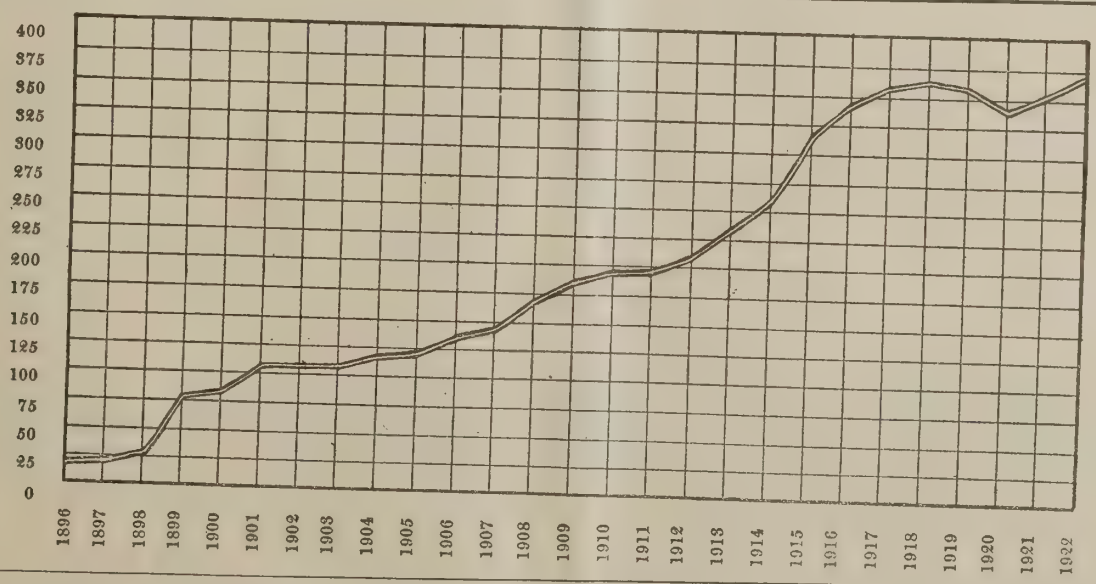
AT no time in all of its long history has The New York Times relied upon anything but its merit as a newspaper in building circulation. It has a widespread distribution in this country and throughout the world. It is purchased in 8,000 cities, towns and villages of the United States. In 86 foreign countries it is rereceived in 2,000 more communities, making a total of 10,000 in which readers of The Times reside.

The Times has never conducted contests. It has never offered premiums nor has it joined in "Club Subscriptions" with any other newspaper or periodical. The circulation is not subject to violent fluctuations. It declines but little in Summer and advances steadily year after year.

The Times has no "Predated Editions" and issues no extras. Its California subscribers receive the newspaper of the same date that New Yorkers read. Whether its readers live in Maine, Louisiana or Europe, they get the edition printed in the early morning of the date it bears.

The graph at the bottom of the page illustrates the growth of The Times for twenty-six years.

Net Paid Circulation 1922



The New York Times in the Autumn of 1922 had an average net paid daily sale exceeding 350,000 copies. On Sundays the net paid circulation was more than 550,000. The average net paid circulation, daily and Sunday, as reported to the Post Office Department for six months ended September 30, 1922, was 356,671. The general distribution was as follows:

Daily Only:	City	186,014
	Suburban.	70,714
	Country ..	74,249
	Total	330,977
Sunday Only:	City	193,940
	Suburban..	97,072
	Country ..	217,989
	Total	510,835

Widespread Distribution

Twenty-five or more copies of the daily and Sunday editions of The New York Times are regularly distributed in each of nearly 1,100 cities and towns throughout the United States, outside of Greater New York. The total exceeds 104,000 for the daily edition and 270,000 for the Sunday edition. In towns where less than twenty-five copies are sold the total is more than 30,000 copies for the daily edition and in excess of 40,000 for the Sunday edition. The Times is purchased in every State, in every one of the possessions of the United States, in each of the Canadian Provinces and in eighty-six foreign countries.

A recent tabulation of subscription and newsdealer sales showed that the daily or Sunday edition of The Times is read regularly in 2,107 of the 3,007 counties in the continental United States, including Alaska.

Note how interest in the World War, beginning in 1914, based upon satisfaction with The Times's full cable news service and confidence in its accuracy, increased The Times's circulation to its peak in 1918-1919. In 1920, the period of depression, readjustment, and industrial unrest, little of this circulation, gained through recognition of dependability and completeness, was lost. News of the present European economic conflicts, conducted in international conferences, has solidly regained that margin for The Times and built a new circulation.

(Continued from page XX)

the Jews were immigrants, who treated the former inhabitants with the greatest cruelty,* and who remained a comparatively short time; they were unable to maintain control over the whole land or even union among themselves; they were expelled by the Romans and formed permanent residence elsewhere 2,000 years ago; the Arabs conquered the land 1,300 years ago, and have remained ever since; it is their actual home, and not merely a residence of long ago; as Christians and Moslems, they can honor all the holy places, whereas the Jews can honor only their own; the Jews are a religion and not a nation; they will, if given control, forbid the use of the Arabic language, the measure which caused the break between the Young Turks and the Arabs; the Jewish colonies have shown no benevolence to the Arabs in their neighborhood; it is denied that their activities have influenced the Arabs toward progress; the Jews have much money, education and shrewdness, and will soon buy out and manoeuvre away the present inhabitants; the Arabs are friendly toward the Jews long resident in the land who use the Arabic language; they will resist to the uttermost the immigration of foreign Jews and the establishment of a Jewish government.

2. Arab Feeling Toward the French

While the Commission was prepared beforehand for some disinclination toward France in Syria, the strength, universality and persistency of anti-French feeling among practically all Moslems and non-Catholic Christians (except a division of the Greek Orthodox), came as a distinct surprise.

Friends of the French affirmed that it is due to German and Turkish, succeeded by Arab and British propaganda, and that it is not deep-seated. The Commission went to great pains in testing these affirmations by questioning. Germans and Turks did conduct a vigorous propaganda during the war against the French, and against the other Allies as well. There was no evidence found of direct propaganda by the British against the French, and frequent denials were made that the Arabs had worked thus.

It was said several times that the French had themselves conducted an anti-French propaganda by their actions since the Armistice. On the other hand, it was charged that some Arabs were working against the French, and also against the British and all foreigners. Friends of France say that the Moslems of Syria resent the just punishment which the French gave them in 1860, and their disposition to treat the native Christians as fully equal to the Moslems, an attitude which the British do not take in Egypt and India.

Apart from the questions of process and recency, the anti-French feeling does seem to be deep-rooted in a large proportion of the Syrian population. This appears in an examination of the principal reasons given by the Syrians for their opposition to all French interference in their affairs. They say:

i. The French are enemies of religion, having none at home, and supporting Roman Catholics abroad for purely political motives.

ii. They disapprove of the French attitude toward women.

iii. The French education is superficial and inferior in character-building to the Anglo-Saxon. It leads to familiarity with that kind of French literature which is irreligious and immoral. The Moslems recognize that the time has come for the education of their women, and they say that those who receive French education tend to become uncontrollable.

iv. The French have not treated the natives as equals in Algeria and Tunisia, but have imposed differences in office holding and in various civil rights. This argument was presented very often and developed in some detail.

v. The French have shown a marked tendency to give an undue proportion of offices, concessions, and the like, to the Christians of Syria. Non-Catholics complain that the same discrimination is shown in favor of Catholics and Maronites.

vi. By this discrimination, and by various intrigues since the occupation, the French have increased the religious divisions in Syria, which had been reduced greatly during the war. They thus endanger the possibility of Syrian nationalism on a non-religious basis.

vii. The French are inclined to a policy of colonization, by which they wish to substitute the use of the French language for native tongues, and make the people into Frenchmen. The Syrians wish to preserve the use of the Arabic language, and to retain their separateness. Furthermore, it is inherent in this policy that the French would never leave Syria.

viii. The French have lost so many men in the war that they are unable to give needful protection or adequate administration. This is illustrated by the few soldiers and the inferior type of French officers and officials now in Syria. (Friends of the French deny that France lacks good officials, and blame the French foreign office for choosing badly those who are sent out. Again, while for the English the Eastern service is a career and draws the best of the young men (for the French it seems a kind of exile and the best prefer to remain at home). It was affirmed that bribery and intrigue are worse in the French area now than under the Turks.

ix. The French have suffered financially in the war to such an extent that they have not the means to restore France itself or to develop what possessions they have already. They cannot therefore give Syria the financial and economic support she needs.

x. The French are inclined toward financial exploitation of subject areas, and would govern Syria not for its own development, but for the profit of Frenchmen.

It is not necessary here to try to estimate the measure of truth that lies behind these statements. It is sufficient to note that most of the Syrians believe substantially the whole of this, and are therefore very strongly against French control of the country.

Much feeling persists in connection with the execution of Arabs by Jemal Pasha, and this acts against the French. Despite the fact that France was intriguing with the Arabs against the Turks before the Great War, the knowledge that M. Picot, upon leaving his position as Consul in 1914, failed to secure his correspondence, so that fatal evidence fell into Turkish hands, has played into position so that France is held responsible for the hangings. Every reference to the "Arab Martyrs," by subscriptions for their orphans, exhibitions of these children, meetings of the relatives—the "Unfortunate Syrians," now not only strengthens the sentiment for Arab independence, but stirs feeling against France.

3. The Request for an American Mandate

Four possibilities were seriously contemplated by the supporters of a United Syria: Absolute independence, the mandate of Britain, the mandate of France, and the mandate of America. The only considerable groups that favored division were those who supported a separate Palestine for Zionism under Britain, and a separate Lebanon, whether or not enlarged, under France in case the rest of Syria is under another mandatary.

Only Jews supported the Zionistic scheme, except that a few Christians were willing to entrust the question to the mandatory power. The Jews are distinctly for Britain as mandatory power, because of the Balfour declaration, though many think if the scheme goes ahead, American Jews will become its chief promoters. France is felt to be against it, and America indifferent.

As regards the Lebanon, the official Maronites and Catholics who support a separation scheme are undoubtedly sincere. Not only have they many sentimental ties toward France, but they realize that no other Power than France will support them in their privileged situation.

Many of their followers, especially those who have personal ties with the United States, would rather have the United States than France. Those outside the Lebanon area who are undoubtedly for France as a mandatory power are comparatively few. They include most of the Catholics of every description, and a section of the Greek Orthodox who would have been for a Russian mandate had Russia not collapsed. The latter group prefer France to Britain, but there was evidence that many of them would prefer America to France, if there were a certainty of acceptance.

In all Syria surprising few, aside from the Druses, declared for Britain as first choice—not nearly so many as for France. The fact is that Britain and America were classed together, with a distinct preference for America, but both were greatly preferred to France. The Jews and the majority of the Greek Orthodox, and some of the Protestants, were for Britain. The great majority of the Moslems were for Britain as second choice. Most of those who made Britain their first choice were for America as second choice. Practically no one was for America or England as first choice and France as second choice.

Practically all of the Moslems, who number about four-fifths of the population of Syria, are for America as their first choice. It is true that there was little direct expression of this in Palestine, since after their first declarations at Jaffa, the question of choice of mandate was held up and referred to Damascus. Possibly this was done under instructions from the Emir Feisal, who may have been trying to hold the field for Britain. If so, the evidence of sincere declaration for America is all the stronger, since the Congress reached unanimity for America.

As for the Christians, while comparatively few declared directly for America as first choice—only a part of the Protestants and Syrian Orthodox and Armenians—they were bound by old ties and recent agreements to declare for Britain or France, but a large proportion mentioned America as second choice, and stated that they would welcome her, while there were abundant assurances that an American mandate would be satisfactory to practically all.

The members of the Commission can entertain no doubt of the genuineness of the desire for the United States as mandatory power, in view of the countless earnest appeals, both by individuals and groups, and of the manifest enthusiasm shown on many occasions, in spite of the Commission's discouragement of demonstrations and avoidance of every form of ostentation. It was furthermore always possible to ask why a group or individual objected to France or England, but not to ask why a group failed to declare for the United States. It is, of course, also a fact that France, and only less openly England, were making bids for the mandate, while the United States was not.

The principal reasons advanced for desiring an American mandate were as follows:

i. Confidence in President Wilson as mainly responsible for the freedom of Syria, and as championing the rights of small and oppressed peoples.

ii. Gratitude to America for relief of the starving and naked. Thanks to President Wilson and America was expressed in a thousand forms and with the greatest emotion, independently of the desire as regards a mandate.

iii. The feeling that America came into the war for no selfish reason, and could be trusted to take care of a small people in an unselfish way.

iv. The knowledge that America is not a colonizing power, seeking to govern for the advantage of its own people, and to exploit the governed. The examples of Cuba and the Philippines were frequently cited.

v. The feeling that America can be relied upon to withdraw from the cou when her work is done, which is the with no other power. The experienc Cuba was contrasted with that of E and Algeria.

vi. The feeling that America is and abundantly able to advance the m for the desirable speedy developmen the country economically.

vii. A hearty approval of and d for the extension of American educ in the country. England has done educationally for Syria. While Fr has done much, she seeks to denati ize the native peoples and make Fre men of them. America, espec through the Syrian Protestant Col has taught Syrian nationalism. American training and the Anglo-S literature and civilization, are rega as morally superior to the French.

viii. A conviction that America be absolutely fair and just as betwee different religions and sects. Fr would be expected to favor Christ especially Roman Catholics, and En to favor Moslems.

ix. America is abundantly sup with trained men, from whom ex can be supplied in "various branch science, industry, administration, above all, education."

x. The Americans are "lovers o manity."

Many British officials, not exce General Allenby, think the best sol to be an American mandate ove whole of Syria. England might be glad to get out of the difficulties o situation in this way. As for Fr she cannot desire to take the who Syria, when so much of it is u averse to her. She also may ultim conclude that the best way out is plete withdrawal. This would, pe not hurt her pride seriously if a same time England were to with and if her special pre-war relatio be scrupulously continued.

III. Special Discussions

1. French Feeling Toward British*

It is evident that the French fe sentment toward the British as not ing played a fair game in the S area. Without going into historic tails, the Sykes-Picot agreement pr that France should have ownersh influence in a large area, includin mascus and Cilicia, and extendi Sivas and Harpoot, while En should be in a similar position t the former Turkish area southeast o At the present moment, France is t ened with the loss of all her sphere, England complacently holds all tha then assigned to her, and extend influence toward much of the rest.

America, by showing interest i menia, and even by the sending Commission on Mandates to Syria, to the French to be an accompli England in despoiling France. French feel that the English too vantage of their dire necessity, by of which they were obliged to keep tically all of their men in France, cupy more than a due share of and to seduce the affection of the

They also resent the payment English to the Emir Feisal of a monthly subsidy, which they claim ers a multitude of bribes, and e the British to stand off and show hands while Arab agents do dirty in their interest. They feel that i ing the Arabs the British are working against the French. They further that the British are more directly responsible for the unde strong anti-French feeling show practically all the Moslem and Catholic Christian elements of They feel that Britain has been to resist the desire to connect Egyp Mesopotamia under one control as

* This alludes to the wars by the Children of Israel when they "possessed" the Land of Promise.

* It should not be overlooked that t serious rift in Anglo-French relations s war occurred over Syria. It has since to a chasm that threatens to engulf peace; but the beginning was in the Nea

(Continued on page XXIV)

WORLD WIDE SERVICE

United Press men cover the news all around the world all around the clock.

Every hour of every day dispatches "By United Press" are reaching the world's greatest newspapers by cable, wireless, telegraph and telephone.

UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS

(Continued from page XXII)

wark of India, and as a new field for profitable commercial exploitation.

It cannot be denied that some of the French contentions are difficult of refutation, and that the whole situation is such that British honor would seem cleaner if Britain were to withdraw wholly from Syria. Yet the aversion of the people to France, however it may have arisen, is so great and deep-seated that England cannot leave Syria to France without seeming to abandon her friends to their enemies, a process which would probably react strongly in Egypt and elsewhere in the Moslem world. There is good reason for the position of many Englishmen, who are strongly desirous that America should take the whole situation off their hands, including with the French and Arab entanglements the promises to Zionism.

2. French "Rights"

The denial in the "Damascus Program" that the French have "rights" anywhere in Syria leads to an inquiry into the bases on which such rights might be claimed.* In brief, there have been in Syria Roman Catholic missionary workers, using principally the French language, for several centuries. These have developed an extensive system of churches, schools and monasteries. France has had commercial relations and small groups of resident citizens since the Middle Ages. French has long been the principal western language used in Syria. France has taken a special interest in the Maronites, and intervened on their behalf in the Lebanon in 1860.

None of these relationships, however, give the least "right" to claim territory or mandatory control. Otherwise, it could be held that America, through her missionary work and business relationships, had acquired a measure of political rights in India, China, South America and Syria itself. France herself could claim all of Turkey with nearly the same justification.

It would compromise all the missionary work in the world if the doctrine were admitted that such work established political claims. No doubt the French have acquired many personal relationships and sentimental attachments. But there is no reason why any tie that France has had with Syria in the past should be severed or even weakened under the control of another mandatory power, or in an independent Syria.

3. The "Greater Lebanon"

The latest policy pushed by the French in the Lebanon region contemplates complete separation of the country from Tyre to Tripoli, as far inland as the crest of the Anti-Lebanon, to be given to France in case the remainder of Syria should go to another mandatory power. Such a plan is objectionable for many reasons:

i. It is apparently contrary to the wish of the majority of the people in the area itself.

ii. The Syrians outside the area are so opposed to the plan as to be inclined to make war rather than accept it.

iii. If put into effect by overwhelming force a state of settled equilibrium could probably never be attained, because of such questions as the just control of "Hollow Syria," where the Christians by their own figures own 65 per cent of the property, but have only 40 per cent of the population; the water supply of Homs, which comes from territory claimed for the "Greater Lebanon"; the commercial access to the sea of the regions of Damascus and Aleppo. In short, the land is too small, and too intimately connected, to be capable of satisfactory division.

iv. The separation off of the Greater Lebanon, especially if accompanied by a separation off of Palestine, would intensify the religious differences in Syria, which it is most desirable to diminish in favor of the growth of national feeling. The tendency would be for Christian Syrians to concentrate in the Lebanon, Jews in Palestine, and Moslem Syrians in the remainder of the country.

v. The government in each area would countenance and probably conduct intrigue in the other regions.

vi. The three areas would be implicitly hostile, and must either carry heavy burdens of armament against each other, or be protected at great expense by the mandatory powers.

vii. The mandatory powers would themselves be in danger of hostility over the questions which would inevitably arise between the portions of a country and a people thus unnaturally severed.

A plan which would add to the Greater Lebanon the remainder of O. E. T. A. West, extending from Tripoli to Alexandretta, and give the whole to France, and at the same time give the interior to Britain, would intensify all the above difficulties, and would besides cut off Aleppo and western Mesopotamia from access to the sea.

4. The Emir Feisal's Position

Unless the attempt be made to rule Syria as a conquered country, or unless the experiment of republican government be tried in the old land, the obvious plan is that the Emir Feisal should be head of the State, Third son of the Sheriff of Mecca, Hussein, who was recognized during the war as King of the Hejaz, the Emir Feisal led the Arabs in co-operation with the Allies against the Turks, and entered Damascus in triumph. He spent several months in Paris, and returned a few weeks before the arrival of the Commission. He had agreed with Clemenceau to labor at allaying the Arab feeling against the French, but believing after a time that the French were playing false with him, he ceased his efforts. Shortly before the arrival of the Commission in Damascus, he endeavored to obtain declarations in favor of a British mandate. He assured the Commission that he will be pleased with either Britain or America as mandatory power.

The British Government has been advancing money to his government for a long time, and at present allows it $750,000 per month (£150,000). Of this Feisal draws about $200,000 per month for his personal expenses, staff, propaganda agents, etc. The balance is spent on the administration and the army of 7,000 and gendarmerie of 4,500, in supplement to the inadequate receips from taxation.

The estimate was made that the Prince could manage under settled conditions with a salary of $125,000 per year, and that after a few years the country could carry itself by taxation, maintaining a very small army. This does not allow for carrying a portion of the Ottoman debt, nor for large expenditure on needed public improvements.

The present attachment of the population to Prince Feisal varies in the different regions. Not many Christians declared themselves positively in favor of him. Some others said he is a good man, with bad advisers. Others fear him because of his membership in a powerful Moslem family. The Moslems of Palestine made almost no declarations in his favor. It was said that if he would come to Palestine, all Arabs would be enthusiastically for him. In all the O. E. T. A. East, and among the Moslems of the West, he was asked for, often with enthusiasm. An exception was found in some Moslems of the North, who said they do not know him.

Emir Feisal gave the impression of being kindly, gentle, and wise. Whatever be the case previously, he has had during the past two years in the desert and at Damascus and Paris an excellent political education. He desires the friendly co-operation of the Moslems and Christians of Syria, and wishes to promote the education of Moslem women. Some say that he is not as strong as the men around him, but he gave the impression of being able to maintain his leadership. He promises well as a constitutional monarch, who could work amicably in coordination with a mandatory power.

It should be provided in case he remain the head of the Syrian state, that he renounce all rights of inheritance of the crown of the Hejaz; otherwise serious complications might arise in the future.

5. The "Rights of Minorities"

One clause in the Damascus program promises full recognition of the "rights of minorities" in the Syrian constitution.

On account of the evident fears of many Christians, based on the policy of massacre that has been employed so often in Turkey, the Commissioners took pains to inquire of many Moslem groups what they propose to do to ensure the rights of the smaller sections of the population. The answer was sometimes given, logically enough, that there would be no minorities, since all would be absolutely equal in the new state. But ordinarily, the promise was made of constitutional guarantees.

There was discussion in the Damascus Congress of a proposal to grant Moslems one-half of the seats in the future legislative assembly while the other half would be distributed among the rest of the population. What method might be used in apportioning seats to different groups and sects, as the Druses, Maronites, Shiites, Nusairiyeh, Ismailians, Turks, Jews, Greek Orthodox, Greek Catholics, etc., was not discussed; the mere enumeration suggests the difficulty of the problem.

Mention has been made already of the agreements made by Prince Feisal with the Druses and the Greek Orthodox. He promised in return for the Greek Orthodox support that he would govern under seven conditions:

(1) He would rule in the fear of God without despotism.
(2) He would establish constitutional government.
(3) He would respect all religions.
(4) Equal rights should be enjoyed by all.
(5) Public security should be guaranteed for all; the private carrying of rifles should be prevented.
(6) Public instruction should be equal; Greek Orthodox schools should be on the same basis as Moslem schools.
(7) No one should hold office because of family or influence, but only because fitted for the place.

These conditions are superior in form from the standpoint of a modern state to the Turkish system of recognizing a certain measure of autonomy and self-government in various religious groups, thus perpetuating differences and making concessions which later become privileges and the source of friction. It would be better to aim at one system of education, wherein certain hours each week should be set aside for religious instruction under special teachers for each group, than to have several state-supported school systems. But these are details for future adjustment. Suffice it to say that great readiness was shown by the majority group to provide adequately for the protection and rights of the other groups, and it remains only to bring this purpose into action.

It is desirable to bear in mind that the Moslem and Druse minority in the Lebanon is also in need of protection, and that in the event of a Jewish majority in Palestine, Moslems and Christians would need protection there. A former governor of the Lebanon stated that a large part of his work was given to watching lest the Maronites and other Christians infringe the rights of the Moslems and Druses.

6. "Complete Independence"

One item in the Damascus program deserves special attention, as going below the problem of a mandate, namely, the request for "complete independence." The protest against the application to Syria of Article 22 of the Covenant is closely related to this. The feeling that the Syrians are in at least as advanced a condition as were the different Balkan States when their independence was arranged for was present in the first Moslems whom the Commission met in Syria, and the same note was sounded everywhere by some of the delegations.

The groups which were inclined to support this view in an extreme form were Bedouins, villagers of the south and east, and some of the younger Moslem men. The Syrian Union Party declared in this direction, and the few but prominen and women related to the "Arab Ma —the men who were executed by Pasha for intrigues against the Tu government—were very emphatic a any form of relationship to anothe tion; the Syrian Union Party ash the League of Nations guarantee t dependence and the Constitution of The declaration was made that Syrians now abroad return, there w a sufficiency of educated and traine to govern the country well.

On the other hand, a large prop of the learned men and of others the older and wiser among the Mo recognized fully that some form of datory control is necessary, sinc Syrians have long been in subj few of them are educated, and the try is poor and backward in its de ment. The Christians, and most non-Moslem groups, are unanimous belief that a strong mandate is sary for a considerable time, b they do not feel confidence in an government, which in a country fifths Moslem might be too favor the majority.

The nations in forming the have pronounced in the Covenar Syria should be under mandatory The Commission did not find rea recommend modification of this d but abundant cause for holding i just. The failure of the Young T attempt to conduct a self-governin in which Moslems and Christians be equal makes it especially de that the new Syrian state should first years be watched closely, s has the additional difficulty to b come of emergence from subjectio

The 4th Article of the "Damascu gram" provides for the possibilit mandate, defining it "as equivalen rendering of economical and techn sistance that does not prejudice o plete independence." Here also striction may be too great. The tory power should have a real over the administration, so as t nate as far as possible corruption inertia, serious errors of judgmen

In spite of all that was said i of complete independence, it is alt probable that either America or would be allowed without resist much control as the Council League of Nations judges to be w fact, assurance was given on ve authority that the demand for independence is to an extent a being in part motivated by the f French mandate, and in part by hension of the conversion of m control into permanent possess adequate assurances be had agai these possibilities, the objectors t date, limited so as to secure its in the interests of Syria, will be to a small and impotent group. when all things are ready, a t lasting "complete independence" awarded by the League of Natic

7. Syrian Nationalism, Pan-A and Pan-Islamism

The programs presented to t mission by all the Moslems ar two-thirds of the Christians were nationalistic; that is to s called for a United Syria under cratic constitution, making no tions on the basis of religion. sponse to repeated questions places, it was steadily affirmed Moslems that they had no desi ever for Moslem privilege in the ment, nor for political union Arabs of the Hejaz, whom they in another state of civilizatio asked regularly for the indepen Mesopotamia, and a few of the for some form of political union area. A few asked for the inde of all Arab countries.

The Commissioners often a question of Moslems, whether sidered the Caliphate to be at or at Mecca. With very few e they replied that it belongs now Hussein in Mecca. One or that it belongs still to the Tur tan, and cannot be changed exc

(Continued on page XXI

* France was given, and now holds, a mandate over Syria, including Damascus. She held Cilicia for a time, but surrendered it to the Nationalist Turks.

Books to Own and to Give

FICTION

HER UNWELCOME HUSBAND

By W. L. George

"Perhaps the best characterization of the modern woman, who subordinates emotion to intelligence, whose watchword is courage." The St. Louis Globe-Democrat. * * * "A fascinating tale, sardonic in humor, intensely human." Philadelphia Record. $2.00

THE MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH

By Gilbert K. Chesterton

The most thrilling detective stories since Sherlock Holmes and Craig Kennedy—a criminal hunter in high circles who always got his quarry but never brought them to justice because "he knew too much." $2.00

SOME DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

By Harvey O'Higgins

"This venture into the subconscious is a welcome departure from fiction dealing only with conscious, obvious motives; in the hands of sincere, capable men like Mr. O'Higgins, it results in illuminating portraits of human character." New York Post. $2.00

THE VEHEMENT FLAME

By Margaret Deland

The most discussed novel of the year. * * * "These people live. The springs that animate them are not explained psychologically, but revealed emotionally. We feel them." St. Paul Daily News. $2.00

NON-FICTION

THE MIND IN THE MAKING

By James Harvey Robinson

H. G. Wells said that after reading this book he had "the sense of having crossed a ridge and come into a new land of understanding. This is a cardinal book." It is on all lists of best sellers. The Mind in the Making offers you a chance to control your reasoning faculties with the force of understanding. $2.50

THE KAISER'S MEMOIRS

"Will be read with absorbed interest all over the world, even to its remotest corners, commented upon lavishly, used as fuel for hot controversy lasting far into the years that follow." T. R. Ybarra, translator of the Kaiser's Memoirs. $3.50

FROM SEVEN TO SEVENTY

By Edward Simmons

These intimate and anecdotal reminiscences of a great American painter run the gamut of experience and acquaintance at home and abroad from the literary circle of "Cousin Waldo" Emerson to buying beers for Verlaine. $4.00

NIGHTS AND DAYS ON THE GYPSY TRAIL

By Irving Brown

"As a picture of the Gypsy dancers, singers and bull-fighters of Spain, and as a portrayal of Gypsy character, it will find a place among the few really good books depicting Gypsy life." T. W. Thompson, Hon. Sec. The Gypsy Lore Society, England. $3.00

NAPOLEON: From the Tuileries to St. Helena

By Louis Etienne St. Denis, Known as Ali

The closest personal attendant of Napoleon was Ali, who gives an hitherto unpublished intimate and picturesque account of the Emperor with side lights on the Imperial regime. $3.00

AMERICANS BY CHOICE

By John P. Gavit

The eighth volume in the Carnegie Corporation Americanization Studies. "A fresh and wholly original contribution to an understanding of the factors in the making of Americans." Editorial in New York Times. $2.50

HISTORY OF ART

By Elie Faure

In four volumes, profusely illustrated, the complete history of art from the earliest times to the present day. Thomas Jewell Craven in the Dial calls it: "The most interesting and seductive history of the subject that has yet appeared. * * * He converts archaeology into impassioned imagery, and his narrative gifts are remarkable." Volume I, "Ancient Art," $6.00; Volume II, "Mediaeval Art," $7.50. In preparation Volume III, "Renaissance Art," and Volume IV, "Modern Art."

HARPER & BROTHERS Est. 1817 New York

ANSWERS TO 50,000 QUESTIONS

That come up every day in the newspaper and advertising business can be found only in

Editor and Publisher International Year Book Number

"It's as Necessary as Ink"

Contents Include:

——Names of publishers, editors, managing editors, city editors, general managers, business managers, advertising managers, circulation managers, mechanical superintendents of the daily newspapers of the United States, totalling more than 20,000 names with titles.

——Circulations and advertising rates of daily newspapers of United States.

——Names of publishers, editors, managing editors, city editors, general managers, business managers, advertising managers, circulation managers, mechanical superintendents of daily newspapers of Canada, totalling more than 1,000 names with titles.

——Circulations and advertising rates of daily newspapers of Canada.

——Literary market of America, including names of purchasing editors and their wants.

——Directory of newspapers of United States and Canada which issue gravure sections.

——Directory of leading advertising agencies of the world.

——Complete list of newspapers of England, with advertising rates, subscription prices and page sizes.

——Complete list of newspapers of Ireland, with advertising rates, subscription prices and page sizes.

——Complete list of newspapers of Scotland, with advertising rates, subscription prices and page sizes.

——Complete list of newspapers of Wales, with advertising rates, subscription prices.

——Complete list of schools of journalism in United States.

——Personnel of Press Gallery at League of Nations.

——Personnel of Press Gallery of United States Senate.

——Personnel of Press Gallery of Parliament, Canada.

——Complete list of merchandising papers issued by daily newspapers of United States and Canada, with names of editors.

This is only a partial list of the indexed contents. You will also find the things you want to know about the newspaper and advertising business of France, Mexico, Cuba, Japan and other countries.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER is the dominant journal of the newspaper publishing world. The annual subscription (52 issues) is $4.00 in the United States; $4.50 in Canada; $5.00 in foreign countries.

THE INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER is issued every January and the paper-bound edition goes to all subscribers. Extra copies bound in cloth are on sale at leading newsstands and direct at $2.00 the copy.

Be sure of your copy of this important reference book for 1923 by filing coupon and mailing it with your check today.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER,
1116 World Building,
New York, N. Y., U. S. A.

Enclosed find my check or money order for $4.00 ($4.50 Canada; $5.00 foreign) in payment for one annual subscription of EDITOR & PUBLISHER, to include a paper-bound copy of EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER; or $2.00 for one cloth-bound copy of the EDITOR & PUBLISHER INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK NUMBER.

Name .....

Address .....

(Continued from page XXIV)

agreement of all the Moslems in the world. All affirmed that King Hussein is in no sense their political head, but only their religious head. Prayers are said in his name, and certain seals for public documents bear his name.

Certain Christians, on the other hand, affirmed that the sentiment of Syrian Nationalism is new and feeble, and that the expressions of it made before the Commission gave a false impression. They claimed that the Christians who adhere to this view do so as making a desperate effort to live on good terms with the Moslem majority, and that the Moslems much prefer a pan-Arabic or Pan-Islamic scheme, and would quickly abandon Syrian nationalism if they saw a chance for the success of either of these ideas. It would seem safe to assume that those who speak for themselves strike nearer the truth than others who assume to speak for them. Nevertheless, it is worth while to give consideration to the criticism.

Pan-Arabism* in a narrower sense would unite under one independent government the Arab-speaking portions of the former Turkish Empire. This would not necessarily be a theoretic Moslem state, though the large majority would belong to the different Moslem sects. It is hard to see how such a federated state, with its territory largely desert and lacking a center and speedy communications, could be more of a danger to the world than the Turkey of which it formed a part.

In a larger sense Pan-Arabism would wish to add also the Arab-speaking belt across North Africa. Since this is held by three great powers, each of whom has a larger population and infinitely greater resources than the Pan-Arab area contains, its accomplishment against their will is a mere dream.

Pan-Islamism in a narrow sense would re-establish one government in the former Turkish Empire by agreement of the two Moslem groups of north and south, the Turks and the Arabs. The Commission found no sign of a desire for the re-establishment of the rule of Turkey over the Arabs. One former deputy in the Turkish Parliament did indeed suggest that an Ottoman prince might be chosen as king of Syria, but this was an individual opinion. On the other hand, there were many expressions of joy and thankfulness because of the end of Turkish rule. If there is any thought of a federation of Arabs with Turks, or of a political union of any sort, the Commission saw no trace of it. Still less was there any sign of movement toward the realization of a larger Pan-Islamic idea. The Turks had some thought of this early in the war, but it disappeared in favor of a Pan-Turanian idea on a racial or linguistic rather than a religious basis, from the time when Jemal Pasha hanged the leaders of the Syrian Arabs.

One may conjure up the picture of an attempt at restoring the Saracen Empire, by the stages of Syrian, Arabian and Mesopotamian independence, followed by federal union in a strong conquering state, which would then become imperialistic in the directions of Persia, Armenia, Turkey and North Africa; but the Commission discerned no trace of such a notion, nor is it practically conceivable under present world conditions.

If the European civilization has sufficient wisdom to avoid further extensive self-destruction, it can with the greatest ease control the Moslem world; it is not necessary for those who labor to establish the League of Nations to contemplate the opposite possibility.

The fundamental question in this connection, and, indeed, in several other great immediate problems, is the basal attitude of the Christians toward the Moslem world: Shall this be friendly or hostile? In the war now ending, Christian governments gave their Moslem allies promises of fair treatment and full rights. Now the Moslems of Syria offer their hands to their non-Moslem fellow-citizens with the promise of putting religious separation out of sight. Shall they be taken at their word? Or shall they be told: We do not believe what you say; we do not trust you; we think it best to break our word with you, so that you may not have the opportunity to break your word with us?

The western world is already committed to the attempt to live in peace and friendship with the Moslem peoples, and to manage governments in such a way as to separate politics from religion. Syria offers an excellent opportunity to establish a state where members of the three great monotheistic religions can live together in harmony; because it is a country of one language which has long had freedom of movement and of business relations through being unified under the Turkish rule. Since now the majority declare for nationalism, independent of religion, it is necessary only to hold them to this view through mandatory control until they shall have established method and practice of it. Dangers readily arise from unwise and unfair dealings with this people, but the great hope of peace and progress if be handled frankly and loyally.

* This is the portentous programme set forth in the Turkish Nationalist Pact. It would apparently eliminate both France and Great Britain from the confines of the former Ottoman Empire.

EXTRA COPIES OF THIS SUPPLEMENT
CAN BE PURCHASED

while the limited supply o hand lasts by immediate a plication to

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
1115 World Building,
New York City, U. S. A

All applications for add tional copies will be filled the order received until t supply is exhausted.

DISPUTED LANDS OF NEAR EAST THAT HOLD WORLD ATTENTION TODAY

Reproduced by permission of The Literary Digest Atlas

THE WORLD NEWS SERVICE

Is Serving Some of the Leading Newspapers of America with a Foreign News Report Which Does Two Things:

FIRST: It Gives All the World News of Importance While It Is News

SECOND: It Tells This News Understandingly, Simplifying World Political and Economic Problems to the Point Where Any Newspaper Reader Can Understand Them

The Correspondents who make the World Foreign News Service supreme include:

J. M. Tuohy, J. W. Grigg — LONDON

P. J. Kelly, — DUBLIN

Ferdinand Tuohy, Alfred Murray, M. W. Biggs — PARIS

Arno Dosch-Fleurot, Axel Faber, William J. Margreve — BERLIN

Samuel Spewack, — MOSCOW

Beatrice Baskerville, — ROME

Clare Sheridan, Col. Charles Sweeney — NEAR EAST

For particulars, write or wire

The World

NEW YORK

Service to Merchants

Every dealer knows that it is the advertised goods that move most quickly from his shelves: that minimize sales efforts, speed up turnovers and increase profits.

Every Chicago dealer knows that The Chicago Daily News is the most effective medium for accomplishing these results. With its yearly daily-average circulation of 401,698 copies—about 1,200,000 daily readers—The Daily News is the outstanding "Buyers' Directory" of practically all the financially competent households of Chicago. It is carefully scanned in every household it enters, not only for its news and editorial features, but for its valuable and reliable advertising information. This reader interest and confidence is the fruit of more than forty-six years' efficient service to both reader and advertiser.

The Daily News enjoys, and appreciates, the confidence of its readers and of the dealers to whose advertising appeal its readers so confidently respond. In excluding from its columns all advertising of questionable character, it serves dealers and readers alike—and advertisers who tie up with The Daily News' advertising campaigns know they are assured generous and profitable business returns.

THE DAILY NEWS

First in Chicago

THIS ISSUE: PRESS SERVING NATION WITH POISONED CUP

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1884 The Oldest Publishers' and Advertisers' Journal in America 1922

Original second class entry—The Journalist, March 24, 1884; The Editor & Publisher, December 7, 1901; The Editor & Publisher and Journalist, October 30, 1909; Revised entry Editor & Publisher, May 11, 1916—at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Published every Saturday.

[Copyright, 1922, by The Editor & Publisher Company, James Wright Brown, president and editor.]

. 55. No. 28 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 9, 1922 By Mail in Advance $4, U. S. A.; $4.50, Can.; $5 For. 10c Per Copy

Your Prospects are Limited by the Number You Ignore

SELL It to Sweeney!

Selling Rickenbackers On Bleecker Street

ERNEST works in our mailing room. He is short, rather dark, foreign born; his family lives on Bleecker Street, and the family name is not Sweeney. Ernest is quiet, efficient, unprepossessing. He gets a good salary, but his job and his social status do not require him to dress well. A few weeks ago, word passed around our plant that Ernest had bought a Rickenbacker sedan. We asked the Circulation Manager how he did it.

"Well, in addition to his job here, Ernest has a newsstand that brings in about three hundred a week. Then he has a contract as a sub-distributor of papers uptown—for about two hundred a week. Ernest can afford a car."

"Five hundred bucks a week! Why, the darn pike! Why didn't he get a Rolls-Royce?"

"Give him time," said the C. M., "he probably will—when he learns about 'em."

Ask your agency space buyer to try this on his dope sheets. Selling Rickenbackers on Bleecker Street! Exception, you say? Perhaps, but in a population of six million people, exceptions repeat themselves into rules.

* * * *

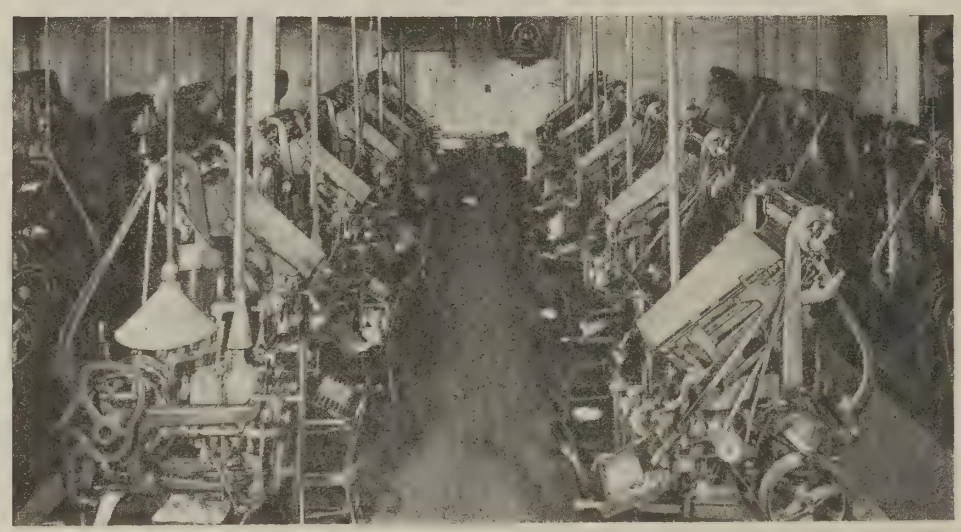
YOU never think of folks like Ernest as prospects for class advertising, do you? But they are. Year after year, advertisers crowd the beaten paths, all angling for the type of people who ought to buy their products in the media that such people ought to read—and neglecting the general mass market that wants everything and buys everything.

What is the answer? Tell it and sell it to Sweeney—the average man, the average woman, the average family. If you sell anything that almost everybody in New York can use—whether it is wheat flour, cough drops, railroad transportation, or investment advice, tell your story to as many people as possible at one time in The News.

* * * *

REACH every third buyer of morning newspapers in New York City through New York's Picture Newspaper. The paper has appeal—or it could not have more than a half million buyers each week day morning in the fourth year of its life. It costs less on a line per thousand basis. The small size of the tabloid page and the limited amount of advertising that this tabloid paper can carry, gives News advertising higher attention value to the largest morning circulation in New York. And the concentrated circulation—92% in New York City and suburbs—insures your message going where you want it. Start to sell it to Sweeney, now, in The News. For more information, inquire of us or of your advertising agent.

THE NEWS



New York's Picture Newspaper

25 Park Place, New York Tribune Building, Chicago

NOTE:—

The Sweeney Series have been copyrighted, and must not be used without permission of the publisher. The advertisements are being reproduced in individual folders. A request will put you on our mailing list for this series.

Cincinnati Enquirer Orders 11 More Intertypes

Part of the Cincinnati Enquirer's Battery of 37 Intertypes

The Enquirer purchased one of the first Intertypes built—nine years ago.

To-day they have 37 machines purchased from the Intertype Corporation.

INTERTYPE CORPORATION

General Offices, 805 Terminal Building, Brooklyn, N. Y.

548 Rand McNally Building, Chicago
301 Glaslyn Building, Memphis
560-A Howard Street, San Francisco
Canadian Agents, Toronto Type Foundry Co., Ltd.

British Branch: Intertype Limited, 15 Britannia Street, Kings Cross, London, W. C. I.

The Press Carries More Advertising than any Other Cleveland Daily Newspaper

Year after year The Press continues to carry more total advertising, every week day, including all classifications, than either of its contemporaries.

Here then is conclusive and substantiative proof of The Press as the leading advertising medium of Cleveland.

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS, Incorporated

PUBLISHERS DIRECT REPRESENTATIVES

New York Chicago Cleveland
Cincinnati St. Louis Atlanta San Francisco

MEMBER OF AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATION

The Member of Scripps McRae League of Newspapers

CLEVELAND PRESS

DOMINATES GREATER CLEVELAND

Philadelphia

is a big market

Count on it in making up your 1923 schedule

Philadelphia's 800,000 male and female workers are busy —earning good salaries and wages.

They buy the things they need and want—foodstuffs, clothing, shoes, furniture, carpets, musical instruments, toilet articles, and other things.

Philadelphians will buy your products next year, if you teach them to ask for your goods by name or trademark.

The Philadelphia Bulletin will carry your advertising message into almost every home in and around Philadelphia and Camden—the third largest market in the United States.

Dominate Philadelphia

Create maximum impression at one cost by concentrating the newspaper "nearly everybody" reads—

"In Philadelphia nearly everybody reads The Bulletin"

The Bulletin

The circulation of The Philadelphia Bulletin is larger than that of any other daily or Sunday newspaper published in Pennsylvania, and is one of the largest in America.

U. S. Post Office and A. B. C. reports of net paid daily average circulation for six months ending September 30, 1922—485,145 copies a day.

NEW YORK
Dan A. Carroll,
150 Nassau Street.

CHICAGO
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
28 East Jackson Blvd.

DETROIT
C. L. Weaver,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
117 Lafayette Blvd.

SAN FRANCISCO
Allen Hofmann,
Verree & Conklin, Inc.
681 Market Street.

LONDON
M. Bryans,
125 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

PARIS
Ray A. Washburn
5 rue Lamartine (9)

(Copyright 1922, Bulletin Company)

Total Circulation of This Issue: 6,400

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

Issued every Saturday—forms closing at ten P. M. on the Thursday proceding the date of publication—by the Editor & Publisher Co., Suite 1117, New York World Building, 63 Park Row, New York City. Private Telephone Exchange, Beekman 4330. Charter Member Audit Bureau of Circulations.

l. 55 NEW YORK, DECEMBER 9, 1922 No. 28

'RESS IS SERVING NATION WITH A POISONED CUP

ditorial Opinion on Fundamental Topics Is Based Not on Independent Impartial Investigation by Newspapers' Own Staff but on Propaganda Supplied by Interested Factions, It Is Charged

By IRVING BRANT

Editorial Note—Mr. Brant is editor of the editorial page of the St. Louis Star, and has contributed a number of important articles on the subject of propaganda to these columns.

BOY," calls the editor of the Times-News, "go into the morgue l get me the clips on the shopmen's ike."

As the Times-News is a conservative vspaper, the editor soon finds himself ing all of his "facts" and most of his uments from the copious propaganda nished him by W. W. Atterbury, of Pennsylvania Railroad.

While this is going on, his more liberal al, the editor of the New Times, is sorbing "facts" and arguments fur- hed with equal copiousness from the inial laboratory of W. Jett Lauck, sta- ician for the railroad brotherhoods.

'Boy," calls the editor of the Podunk ternational Review, "go into the library d bring me everything on the recogni- n of Mexico."

In a few minutes, the editor has at elbow a thick volume entitled "The uth About Mexico," a thicker volume lled 'The Real Truth About Mexico," d a thickest volume called "The Truth- l Reality About Mexico," all of them itten for and published at the expense the "Oil-American Association for reservation from Mexican Inde- ndence." The editor also has for idance a voluminous report on the cessity for American intervention in exico, written by a senator who "owns" ndry thousands of acres of Mexican nd recently expropriated by the revo- tion and given to the peons. He also s a confidential letter of mimeographed vice from the American owner of a exican silver mine. To balance all ese, he has a series of beautiful tributes the character, patriotism and ability whatever Mexican happened to be esident, written by whatever American ess agents happened to be in Mexico ity when the various presidents marched

"Boy," says the editor of the Hambone quare Dealer, "bring me the clips on eneral Crowder in Cuba."

The editor is given a clipping, datelined avana—one which his newspaper had ought for $1 and forgotten to pay for -in which the most cogent reasons were dvanced why Gen. Crowder should pend the rest of his life in Cuba, and which it was pointed out that his resence there meant a wonderful future or the altruistic American business men ho were turning Cuba into a sugary aradise. Practically the only informa- on lacking is the identity of the Cuban- merican business interests who paid the riter of the article whatever he received excess of the $1 that might or might ot be sent by the newspapers using it. With this authoritative news source at his sposal, the editor of the Hambone quare Dealer thrills his subscribers with is intimate knowledge of American eemosynary work in the West Indies.

"Boy," calls the editor of the Sym- athetic Review and Overseas Tear- ropper, "go to the morgue and get the ips on the national aspirations of the acial minorities in Europe and Asia Minor."

But the boy returns empty-handed. That material, he tells the editor, has een stored in a ten-story warehouse and annot be obtained until the strike of ruck drivers is settled.

"Increasing pressure," the editor of the Statesman-Independent reads in his morning paper, "is being brought upon Gen. Alonzo Squash to yield to the demand that he enter the race for either the Republican or Democratic presidential nominations, but it remains doubtful as to whether he will enter the realm of politics." (Sic.)

"Ah," says the editor of the Statesman-Independent, "I must get posted on the qualifications of Gen. Alonzo Squash." At this moment a copy boy dumps a batch of mail on the editor's desk. One of the items proves to be a book, just off the presses, "The Public Career of Gen. Alonzo Squash." Sub-title, "Up from the Farm." It bears the imprint of a well-known publishing house. Its author is J. Lackwitz Turnemout, "who through long association with Gen. Squash is peculiarly fitted to introduce the American public to the inner character of a man destined to be increasingly in the public eye, and now conspicuously discussed for president of these United States."

As the editor takes the copy of his brilliantly written editorial on the presidential prospects of Gen. Alonzo Squash to the composing room, he notices that a copy of Mr. Turnemout's timely book lies also on the managing editor's desk, and beside it is an identical book package addressed to the literary editor.

Now let us pass a typical five minutes in the busy private office of the great financial authority, self-made literary avocationist, and rising statesman, Senator-Elect Dubius Skeems. Senator Skeems is looking over his mail.

"Charley," he says to his secretary, "telephone to Wm. A. Jones, in the office of the Agricultural Ruralist, and ask him to write me a 3,000 word article on 'Why the Farmer Needs a Six Months' Loan.' Pay him $75 for it—damned robber. When he brings it in, send it to the Cornbelt Financial Review, and order copies delivered to all of the dailies in the state."

"Yes, sir," replies Charley. "That chap from Chicago, the one who is writing your autobiography, will be here this morning——"

"Ask him to write his questions out. You answer what you can and refer the rest to me."

Senator Skeems is called into a conference at the golf club just as a reporter for the Daily Herald enters the office, and he really can't change his plans, but if the reporter will indicate what subject he wants covered, the senator-elect will be pleased to dictate his views and send them over to the Herald office at his earliest convenience —$25 more for Wm. A. Jones.

Do the newspapers of the United States really resent the propaganda with which they are insidiously or openly deluged? Frankly, have they not come to rely on the inspiration of the publicity agent, whether he be the hired hack of some thick-skulled politician or the elaborately supported representative of a national government?

Is it not a fact that the newspapers of the United States have to a great extent surrendered their initiative and become leaners on the propaganda staffs of great organizations? Would they not feel lost and injured if the propaganda they look to should be suddenly withdrawn?

The easy-going, dependent attitude of newspapers is illustrated by a thoughtless statement contained in a Labor Day editorial by one of the great newspapers of America, a newspaper which bears at its masthead the adjuration of its owner and builder, upon his retirement, that it should "always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent." That editorial statement follows:

"Recent events have emphasized the relation between organized labor and the public. . . . A campaign of publicity prior to the shopmen's strike to show wherein the railroads had defied the Railroad Labor Board and violated its orders would have enlisted public sympathy where threats of a general strike merely stiffen resistance."

Perhaps no better answer can be made to this than was contained in a replying letter written by one of the paper's subscribers, who said:

"Do you admit that you never heard of the 100 violations of the law by the railroads before the strike? How much did you tell the public about them and where are your editorials on the same?"

The merits and demerits of the shopmen's strike have no place in this discussion. I am calling attention only to the theory that the refusal of railroads to obey the orders of the Railroad Labor Board should be placed before the public through a "campaign of publicity" by the rail unions, instead of being brought out by the newspapers as a part of their service to the public.

Undoubtedly, the statement quoted above was a "slip." No newspaper would deliberately set forth such a guiding policy, and the particular newspaper from which the quotation is made ranks far higher than the average in news zeal and independence. But the fact that such a slip can be made at all discloses the paralyzing effect of propaganda. There is no longer an instinctive reaction

(Continued on page 26)

OUR TURKEY SUPPLEMENT

PERMIT me to congratulate you on obtaining the historical King-Crane document, which is an excellent contribution on this Near East situation.

JACKSON S. ELLIOTT,
Assistant General Manager, Associated Press.

We are indebted to you for your kindness in giving us the proofs of the King-Crane report which is an impressive contribution to the literature of the Near Eastern question.

LOUIS WILEY,
Business Manager, New York Times.

Your publication of the King-Crane report on the Near East for the use of newspaper editors generally, involving the printing of a 28-page section, was a stunt unequalled as far as I know in trade journalism.

It was a big, unselfish thing for you to do and should be appreciated more generally than it will be.

The fact that the New York Times picked up the full story with credit to the Editor & Publisher is a big feather in your cap.

The episode once again proves the accuracy of my statement that the Times is the greatest *news*paper that has ever been built up.

There are those who will attempt to prove an alibi by saying there is nothing new in it, but you clearly indicated your purpose and the republication of the report in The Times may be instrumental in world-wide results.

Accept my heartiest congratulations.

JASON ROGERS,
Publisher, New York Globe.

(Continued on Page 6)

DEEP INTEREST BUT LITTLE COMMENT AT CAPITAL ON KING-CRANE REPORT

White House Glad U. S. Is Not Involved in the Near East—State Department Reiterates Policies Given in Oct. 31 Aide-Memoire—Press Corps Found It Helpful

By SAM BELL

(Washington Correspondent EDITOR & PUBLISHER)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — The King-Crane report on the Near East, which had remained a secret government from the days of the Paris Peace Conference until last week when it was given publication by EDITOR & PUBLISHER, attracted no little attention in Washington, but was productive of little open comment.

Actuated apparently by the delicacy of the present situation in the Near East and mindful of the rather uncertain role of the United States at Lausanne, State Department officials and Congressmen alike preferred not to discuss the report, at least until they had time to digest its voluminous details. They gave the impression that they realized the situation in Turkey remained unchanged since the days when Charles R. Crane and Dr. Henry C. King, inveighed against exploitation of the Turkish Empire by the allied powers and suggested an American mandate for Asia Minor as the real solution. For that reason alone, if not for lack of full knowledge of the situation, they showed a disinclination to talk.

The frankest expression came from the White House. In response to a direct inquiry as to what was thought of the report, the White House authorized the statement the President believed there was general congratulation in this country over the policy of the Republican party and the administration which has declined to permit the United States to be drawn into acceptance of a Turkish or any other Near Eastern mandate.

It was officialy stated also that the country need not have apprehension that the United States will accept any foreign mandate during the life of the present administration, nor become involved in any of the purely political settlements growing out of the Lausanne Conference. President Harding is convinced everyone recognizes that it is not the role of the United States to shoulder the responsibility of running the affairs of Europe or Asia. The President let it be known that America's interest in the situation is being fully exercised at Lausanne, and while the part the United States is playing will not be made the subject of a White House announcement at this time, there is every indication he is satisfied with the measure of participation this government has undertaken.

Secretary Hughes would not comment upon the report beyond intimating that he was familiar with its details. For America's attitude on the Near East situation, Mr. Hughes invariably referred his questioners to the State Department's Aide-Memoire of October 31, in which the interest of the United States is summarized as follows:

FIRST, The maintenance of capitulations which may be essential to the appriate safeguarding of non-Moslem interests.

SECOND, The protection, under proper guarantees, of philanthropic, educational and religious institutions.

THIRD, Appropriate undertakings in regard to the freedom of opportunity, without discrimination or special privilege for commercial enterprises.

FOURTH, Indemnity for losses suffered by Americans in Turkey as the result of arbitrary and illegal act.

FIFTH, Suitable provisions for the protection of minorities.

SIXTH, Assurances touching the freedom of the Straits.

SEVENTH, Reasonable opportunity for archeological research and study.

M. Georges Clemenceau, former premier of France, who spent the week in Washington, pleading for American participation in European affairs, would not discuss the report, but gave the impression that he would subscribe to most any kind of an arrangement if he could first obtain the pledge of the United States and Great Britain to come to the aid of France in the event of German aggression.

Newspapermen found the report a source of information on the Near East situation, and those of them who had been more or less familiar with the general phases of the recommendations were interested in the detailed account of the investigations which led Messrs. King and Crane to reach their conclusions.

PRESS SERVES NATION WITH POISONED CUP

(Continued from page 5)

against it. The newspapers are slipping into it, deeper and deeper. They take it as a matter of course, resisting or repudiating it only when the form is obnoxious.

All of this is apart from the fact that the "press agent" is in ill repute around a newspaper office. In its minor, unimportant aspects, the publicity game is losing out. But when worked on a large scale it prospers. The bigger it is, the more it tends to usurp the whole field of news, and from that vantage point to dominate editorial policies and fashion public opinion. If the editorial writer sees nothing but propaganda dressed as the whole truth, how can he frame judgments independently?

Dependence upon propaganda, by killing newspaper initiative, causes news fields to lie fallow if they are not worked by interests with an ulterior motive. In too many cases, where there is no propaganda there is no news. To cite a few instances:

What did the newspapers of America do to ascertain the facts about the American occupation of Haiti and San Domingo?

What investigation did they make of the charges affecting Gov. Reily of Porto Rico?

How many of the conclusions of the Interchurch World Movement on the causes of the steel strike were based on information that had at any time been secured by the newspapers?

What information have the newspapers given the people about the revolutionary change in the English courts, to study which Chief Justice Taft went to England? (As an indication of what might be disclosed, consider the fact that there are only 29 judges in all of England and Wales, while there are over 3,000 in the United States.)

The lack of initiative displayed by the newspapers of the United States may be either the cause or effect of propaganda. Probably it is a little of both. Certainly the two work together and interact upon each other, with initiative constantly decreasing and propaganda growing.

If the tendency persists, what will we have? Discredited journalism, or a national propagocracy!

Sometimes it seems as if the United States is today a propagocracy, but there is a healthy strain in the people which causes them to get "fed up" on propaganda and rebel against it. The newspapers, at bottom, are therefore discrediting themselves.

It seems to me that there are two immediate causes of the lowering of newspaper standards before the onslaught of propaganda.

One is the lack of devotion to the truth on the part of the newspapers themselves.

The other is the rule of newspapers from the business office.

It costs money to seek out facts. Propaganda having the semblance of facts comes right in at the door. Our newspapers are run more and more according to business office standards, and they favor the propagandist, not always out of sympathy for what he is offering, but because his product is free and investigation is expensive.

Suppose the newspapers of America should unite in creating a great fact-finding body, to conduct investigations which lie outside the scope of the press associations. If it did its work thoroughly and impartially, would its findings be welcomed? I doubt it. "The truth" varies according to one's ideas of the truth. A centralized fact-finding body would speedily find that newspapers were combing reports, to pick out information whi coincided with their ideas of what t facts ought to be. Of course, barri a general "brain storm," there would enough different minds to use all of t material, and thus get it before the pu lic. But is there any assurance th genuine service by such a body wou not result in its dissolution because the hostility of newspapers whi thought that too much of the truth w of the wrong variety?

If we merely grant that all newsp pers would not welcome all of the i partially stated facts, the basis is fu nished for an explanation of propagand It grows because the soil is congenial a it receives skillful cultivation.

$50 FOR A CHRISTMAS STORY

EDITOR & PUBLISHER wants a Christmas feature story for its issue of December 23. The winning story must meet the following conditions:

Must be told within 2,500 words.

Must be of a human interest nature built around a Christmas event concerning a newspaper or advertising man or woman, a newspaper or advertising office, an act of Christmas spirit, or the like.

It may be a story of fact or fiction.

Manuscripts must be in hand by December 18.

$50 will be paid the writer of the story that is published; non-winning stories will be returned, provided postage is enclosed.

Address at once: CHRISTMAS STORY EDITOR.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER

1115 World Building New York City

OUR TURKEY SUPPLEMENT

(Continued from page 5)

Publishing the King-Crane report EDITOR & PUBLISHER was a significa piece of enterprise worthy of the pr gressive management of one of America most competent trade journals. Ever body in the newspaper business enjo a beat, and EDITOR & PUBLISHER is e titled to the credit of landing a good on

Anything that EDITOR & PUBLISHE will do to stir the dry bones of journa ism and give us all zest for our respons bility to the reading public is good wor

MARLEN E. PEW,
Editor and General Manager, INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

However many may write you, want you to know that the newspap press in general most heartily congrat lates you upon your signal achieveme in obtaining and publishing the Cran King report on the Near East.

Last night I was up-state at the inv tation of E. J. Ottaway, president of t Port Huron Times-Herald, and togeth we went over the supplement, which h just arrived. Later I was with thr other newspaper publishers who al joined in praise of your enterprise.

It is such splendid journalistic strok as this which are making EDITOR & PU LISHER an indispensable aid to forwar looking newspaper folk.

LEE A. WHITE,
DETROIT NEWS.

Please accept our congratulations o your enterprise in publishing the Kin Crane report. This was a very real pu lic service, possibly outside the realm activities that you are accustomed to fo low, but all the more to be appreciate on account of that fact. I have be pleased to observe that several of t newspapers have published digests of t report and given you credit.

V. V. McNITT,
President, MCNAUGHT SYNDICATE, IN

This Ought to Kill Secret Diplomac

(Detroit News)

The long-hidden Crane-King report on t Near East, now made public by EDITOR PUBLISHER, through the direct instrumentali of Woodrow Wilson, will give the final blo if the public takes time to peruse it, to secr diplomacy.

The report itself is a remarkable one; r markable for its thoroughness, by its i sistent application to the many questions the near East of those principles now recogniz generally as American, which means princip based in the best good of the peoples studie It serves, also, to throw up somewhat hid ously the vast propaganda with which it h been sought, and now is sought, to mo American public opinion to action in fav of one or another interest. Pro-Turk, pr Greek, pro-Armenian, pro-Syrian, pro-Ara pro-Bulgarian, pro-Egyptian and not lea among them, pro-British, pro-French and pr Italian; these are chief among the prop ganda agencies desiring passionately to co jure American participation in their especia and not always unselfish, purposes.

The report covers too many importa things to be discussed at any one time; n does it follow that all the commission's co clusions and recommendations are acceptab without debate. What is clear, however, that the report stood absolutely no chanc whatsoever of any fate except obscurity i the presence of the multitude of secret treati

(Continued on page 24)

ART YOUR XMAS ADVERTISING EARLY IN THE LOCAL NEWSPAPERS

onal Advertisers Have Campaigns Under Way in November, Some of Them Striking, Too, but Little Local Copy Appears Before Dec. 1

By HAMMOND EDWARD FRANKLIN

TH Christmas just around the corner, newspaper advertising copy eeking to make the most of ır interest in gift-giving. Conition of how advertisers in various of the country are injecting a naking Yule-tide angle into their igns at this season contains a n of suggestions for the copy man is interested in making "winged " bring action.

Gillette Company always has a habit ing to bat with something new, daringly d, in advertising concentrated almost y in newspapers covering the country vely.

ong the seasonal copy foremost in st stands that of the United States ing Board, Washington, which a United States government travel cate in space five columns wide unhe heading, "The gift of gifts," a reproduction of a travel certifiand a line drawing of a vessel g afar.

s out-of-the-ordinary kind of a pictured as follows:

you have planned to give some one a trip abroad, let it be known ıristmas Day. Give the happiness ticipation in the shape of a United Government Travel Certificate. in the information blank today—and learn about this greatest of all tmas gifts.

ıe United States Government l Certificate is the Gift Supreme, se it combines the happiness of anion, the happiness of realization, ıe happiness of glowing memories. delights of an ocean voyage, the of travel—crowded days of seeing, g, living, whether amid the fansplendor of the Orient, the ers of South America, the glories rope, the trapic beauties of Hawaii these are bound up with this unique onderful gift."

copy gives the names of the lines operate the ships owned by the . The gift certificate is described ail. The facts that the trip may be any time within two years and that esentation does not necessarily inany present expense are brought The advertising is huge and ating.

n though it should not sell large ers of gift certificates, as it probwill, this style of advertising ts the idea of travel from a fresh which is certain to make impreson large numbers of people.

some reason, despite the fact that facturers and retailers alike are in calling for early Christmas ing, few campaigns of a Christmas were started in the newspapers in November. At that time, however, the magazines, weeks ahead of the newspapers, were filled with fascinating specimens of holiday appeals to the purse.

Must newspaper advertisers necessarily put off their Christmas copy until after Thanksgiving? Isn't the Christmas "rush" due in part to their own failure to rouse the public in a big way earlier? EDITOR & PUBLISHER believes that next year newspapers and agencies should make a concerted effort to get Christmas advertising going by the middle of November at the latest. This should mean more advertising and more business for advertisers.

The "Find the Christmas face" contest being conducted by the Gillette Safety Razor Company, one of the comparatively few Christmas appeal campaigns which went under way early, has several features of particular interest to all advertising men. E. D. Copeland, advertising manager of the company, for many months has had under consideration some form of contest. His plans in this direction were outlined, in confidence, to EDITOR & PUBLISHER last Spring, but at that time had not been perfected.

The contest idea is one which has to be "handled with gloves." A contest, wrongly handled, can have numerous kick-backs, which offset its benefits (as numerous advertising men and newspaper publishers can testify). A contest also is apt to take attention away from the merchandise to center it on the competition.

The emphasis in this Gillette contest is strongly on the product. Drawings of Christmas faces appear at frequent intervals in the company's advertising. For actual photographs most closely resembling these Christmas faces, 156 prizes are offered. The newspaper reader is urged to ask his dealer for a Gillette prize book with full particulars. Enough is told in the advertisements to stimulate the curiosity and get over the value of Gillette razors as gifts.

After talking about its contest, the Gillette company in one advertisement says:

"Bringing a smile on Christmas morning that will be reflected every morning for many a year—

"The New Improved Gillette—for every lucky fellow on your Christmas list.

"A lifetime of service—and every day a grateful remembrance of you."

The Gillette Company, about the time when it would be thought its market is reaching the mythical "saturation point" and that the company has used about every merchandising idea possible, has a habit of coming to bat with something new and daringly handled in advertising concentrated almost entirely in newspapers, covering the country intensively.

The Hurley Machine Company, of Chicago, in a seven-column strong display piece of copy queries, "Will she have this year's present next year?"

It then points out:

"Of course you will get her something she will treasure for herself. But why not get her a Thor as well—a gift that will mean a lifetime of happiness—that will lighten her greatest household task and give her many more hours of freedom through the years?"

With this contact, the advertisement proceeds to outline the selling points of the Thor washing machine which, it says, is used in 750,000 homes.

Under the Christmas mistletoe in a single column advertisement, Hubby is shown kissing Friend Wife, who has a Hoover Suction Sweeper. The copy suggests giving a check for $7.50 and the balance in a few monthly payments to make this domestic bliss scene possible.

As would be expected, the co-operative newspaper campaign on behalf of vacuum cleaners turns to the gift appeal as the most fitting for the holidays. A store window with an electric cleaner being operated by a woman is reproduced above the heading, "That's what I'll give her!" A present-laden man is shown looking into the window.

The copy suggests:

"What better gift could you give her than freedom from youth-destroying drudgery of house-cleaning—more hours for relaxation and play? What gift would better fit the present-day spirit of useful giving?

"What would gladden her heart like an electric vacuum cleaner, which will mean more time for pleasurable pursuits, the saving of prized household possessions from the ravages of dirt and dust, and greater health and happiness in her home?

"Why not give her a useful, practical present this year—a tireless electrical servant that works at the cost of a few cents a week—and is always ready!

"Why not insure her a spick-span house without muss and fuss and back-breaking toil of eternally sweeping, beating and dusting?

"You can do it with the electric vacuum cleaner. Any dealer or your lighting company will demonstrate this indispensable household labor-saver to you. Furthermore, if you telephone or call in person immediately, they'll put your purchase aside for Christmas delivery.

"Buy it now! Have it for her Christmas morning!

"It is the gift of a lifetime—for a lifetime."

The H. Mueller Manufacturing Company, Decatur, Ill., urges the presentation of the Mueller Combination Sink Faucet, which delivers hot, warm or cold water from either nozzle or movable spray as a gift to be bought from plumbers.

The fountain pen firms are engaged in a battle royal for holiday trade. The Parker Duofold, which has done much to raise the average price the public is willing to pay for a pen, has been using space in strategic centers along with some magazine copy. The L. E. Waterman Company is featuring the phrase, "The daddy of them all," in describing its numbers. The other pen and pencil manufacturers are actively in the race for business.

"Start a stamp collection for your boy," the Scott Stamp & Coin Company,

(Continued on page 36)

The manufacturer of the Eveready Flashlight was one of the earliest in the field with well-planned copy.

This style of copy presents the idea of travel from a fresh angle. The advertising is huge and dominating.

COFFEE AD CAMPAIGN WILL CONTINUE

Brazil Government and Coffee Roasters' Association Cooperating—$1,000,000 Spent Since 1918—$371,823.63 with the Newspapers

The national coffee advertising campaign, in which the Brazilian government is co-operating with the National Coffee Rosters' Association, is to be continued.

The government of Brazil had already voted to continue its contribution, and the Coffee Roasters' Association, at the convention just held in New Orleans, took similar action.

This campaign has totalled $1,000,000 since April, 1919.

According to Ross W. Weir of New York, who presented the advertising report at the New Orleans convention, $704,098.31 has been spent as follows:

Newspapers	$371,832.63
National Magazines	293,326.11
Medical Papers	15,102.80
Trade Papers	23,836.77

"To give you some idea of what this advertising means, I asked our agents, N. W. Ayer & Son, to prepare a list of the total numbers of advertising insertions. They tell me that newspaper advertisements have appeared 788,514,633 times; in the magazines, 132,608,670 times; in the medical papers, 3,601,060 times, and trade papers, 3,406,626 times. A total of almost one billion individual advertisements."

The balance of this advertising fund which, according to Mr. Weir, has increased the consumption of coffee from 20 to 30 per cent, has been spent for other advertising including $25,000 for a house organ, the Coffee Club.

ROADS PLAN NATIONAL ADS

To Quicken Country's Interest in Pacific Northwest

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy; the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroad systems are planning an advertising campaign which will be national in its scope. It will commence next Spring and its object will be to quicken national interest in the Pacific northwest,—Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. The story of the part of the country will be told together with its history, its development, its economic position and its industrial and economic possibilities.

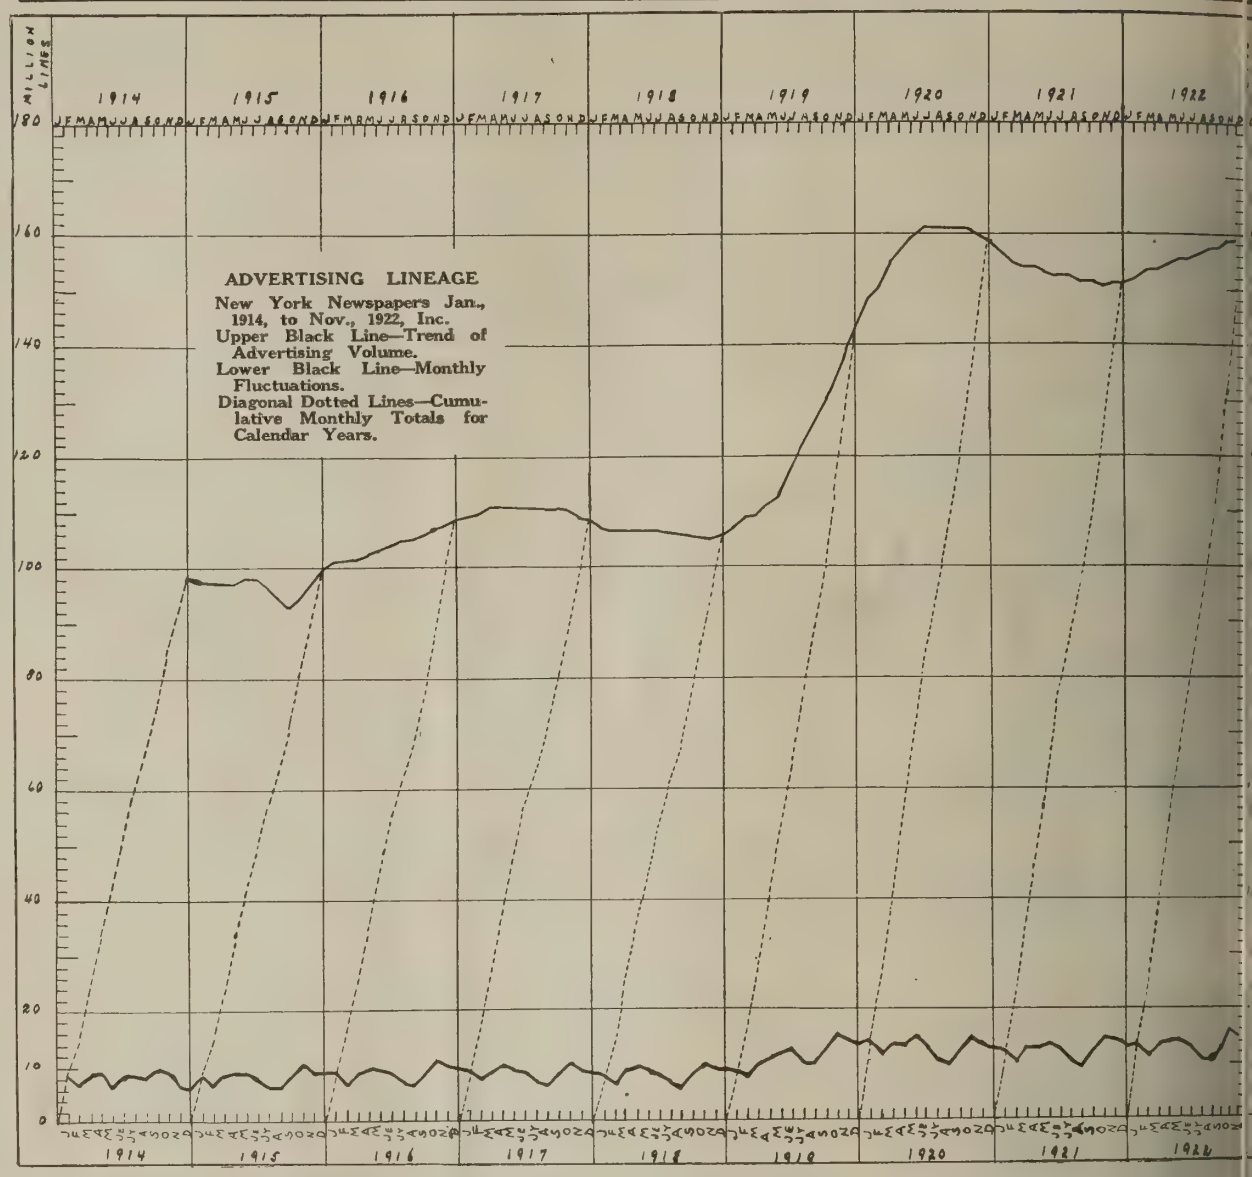
The railroads have already sent out Carl McQuinn and Harlan Smith to gather material for this campaign. They are making a general study of the industrial and natural resources which will be supplemented by data already in the hands of the railroads and used as a basis for the campaign copy.

Indiana A. M. Papers Organize

FT. WAYNE, Ind., Dec. 6.—Morning newspaper publishers of Indiana met in Indianapolis Tuesday, at Claypool Hotel, with every morning paper of the state represented. A. Schaefer, chairman, president, E. J. Treaffinger, Richmond Item, was appointed president of the Indiana Morning Publishers' Association, which was permanently organized.

Appeal to Reason Ceases

The Appeal to Reason, generally considered the original of the modern radical publications, has ceased and has been replaced by the Haldeman Julius Weekly.



Observer Adds Sunday Edition

The Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer has discontinued its Saturday night paper and added a Sunday edition.

Cary with Pittston Gazette

C. W. Cary has been appointed advertising service manager of the Pittston (Pa.) Gazette.

NOVEMBER LINEAGE GAINED 4 PER CENT, PAGES 9 PER CENT IN N. Y.

NOVEMBER set a new record for itself in the lineage of Greater New York newspapers, the volume for the month in 1922 being 14,738,884 lines against the previous record of 14,588,298 lines made in 1919. Last year's lineage was 14,204,838 lines, 536,046 lines, or about 4 per cent below this year's mark. Gains were made over last November by nine papers, eight showing losses. With a 4 per cent increase in lineage the number of total pages was 14,224 against 13,010 last year, an increase of 9.4 per cent.

As shown in the chart above, the total advertising for the 11 months of 1922 is almost equal to the total business for the entire year of 1921 and is almost a million lines in excess of the total for the eleven months of 1920. The January 1-November 30 total for this year is 146,157,662 lines. The total lineage for 1921 was 151,204,173 lines and the total for eleven months in 1920 was 145,305,392 lines. These are shown graphically by the dotted lines for each year in the above drawing.

The heavy line at the bottom of the chart, showing the monthly fluctuations of New York lineage, takes its characteristic November drop from the October peak, which this year was the highest ever reached. With the exception of the mark of 16,104,500 lines that October recorded the lineage in November was the highest point reached since October, 1921, whose total was about 10,000 lines above that for last month.

No signs of flattening are yet to be seen in the upper curve in the chart which depicts the trend of the business. November's lineage kept the course of the line upward, though not at the steep angle caused by the October record. This curve has been climbing gradually and will probably continue to do so for several months before the normal reaction sets in. It is probable that the total lineage for 1922 will set a new mark of 159,000,000 lines or slightly more. The chart gives no indication as yet as to when the present rise in lineage may be expected to end, seasonal slumps a Tables showing the total lineage November, 1922 and 1921, and for month from 1922 to 1916, as compile the New York Evening Post Stati Department follow:

COMPARATIVE LINEAGE NOV. 1922-1921

Pages 1922,	Pages 1921,		Percentage of total space	1922	1921	Gain
1,198	982	American	6.8	1,002,522	968,394	34,128
1,132	1,030	Brooklyn Eagle	9.0	1,321,854	1,221,926	99,928
522	482	Brooklyn Times	2.1	313,846	331,976	.....
374	390	*Commercial	1.4	206,072	232,162	.....
1,130	824	*Evening Journal	8.1	1,186,856	1,121,864	64,992
520	524	*Evening Mail	4.0	585,270	641,506	.....
488	524	*Evening Post	2.2	325,102	418,804	.....
690	604	*Sun	6.5	958,828	780,034	178,794
560	568	Evening Telegram	3.9	581,016	612,856	.....
744	648	*Evening World	5.5	817,812	843,010	.....
594	564	*Globe	5.0	1,063,996	1,088,108	.....
1,004	994	Herald	7.2	732,286	727,674	4,612
900	884	News (Tabloid)	2.4	347,526	344,150	3,376
650	620	Standard Union	4.9	717,656	647,224	70,432
1,514	1,378	Times	14.5	2,137,720	2,005,594	132,126
930	914	Tribune	5.8	862,068	885,408	.....
1,274	1,080	World	10.7	1,578,454	1,334,148	244,306
14,224	13,010	Totals		14,738,884	14,204,838	534,046 Net Gain

*No Sunday edition.

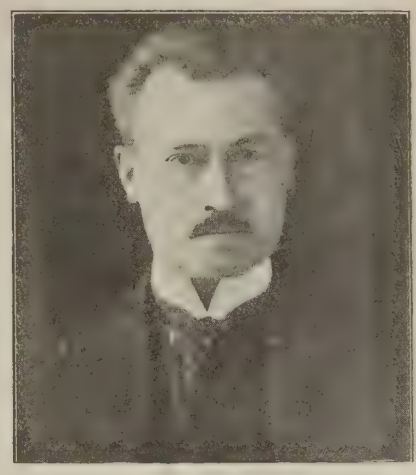
COMPARATIVE LINEAGE, NOV. 1922-1916

	1922	1921	1920	1919	1918	1917
American	1,002,522	968,394	872,092	1,112,508	702,237	843,251
Brooklyn Eagle	1,321,854	1,221,926	1,068,584	1,072,922	720,335	708,056
Brooklyn Times	313,846	331,976	304,394	†	†	†	†
Commercial	206,072	232,162	276,604	256,356	138,666	136,401
Evening Journal	1,186,856	1,121,864	1,024,194	879,560	728,270	788,909
Evening Mail	585,270	641,506	584,836	534,126	348,779	499,539
Evening Post	325,102	418,804	584,592	390,580	316,087	308,809
Evening Sun	958,828	780,034	811,874	860,166	571,763	530,683
Evening Telegram	581,016	612,856	532,542	801,444	659,622	702,112
Evening World	817,812	843,010	970,990	861,334	503,735	597,906
Globe	732,286	727,674	694,150	802,636	551,056	532,960
Herald	1,063,996	1,088,108	1,086,622	965,828	552,162	573,098
News (Tabloid)	347,526	344,150	192,280	.....	.....	.....
Standard Union	717,656	645,596	700,844	692,100	504,039	484,612
Sun	‡	‡	‡	714,368	324,415	364,038
Times	2,137,720	2,005,594	1,953,910	2,053,252	1,232,240	1,149,134	1,
Tribune	862,068	885,408	880,660	891,484	413,980	408,609
World	1,578,454	1,334,148	1,356,962	1,699,634	1,266,658	1,125,588	1,
Totals	14,738,884	14,204,838	13,896,130	14,588,298	9,534,044	9,748,675	9,

† Figures not recorded.
‡ Sun and Herald combined into Sun-Herald Feb. 1, 1920; name changed to Herald Oct. 1

THEY ARE ALL IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Probably debating what show they are going to take in. This is a street scene in Berlin (above) but not a common one. Left to right we have: Karl A. Bickel, vice-president and general manager of the United Press; Gus Oehm; Carl D. Groat, Berlin manager of the U. P., and Ferdinand John.



e World

Cesare—Oscar E. (left)—cartoonist, is back home after spending almost a year in England, France, Belgium, Germany, Austria and Russia. He sketched Lenin but not his physician, by Soviet Government orders.

Associated Advertising Clubs of Texas recently held a convention in Houston. Louis E. Holland, president of the A. A. C. W., was one of the honored guests and judging from his smile (below), which seems to be the broadest, enjoyed it.

